shall shine, &c.] See Mat.13.43. and Chap.17.2. Judg.5.31. The glory of heaven is here laid out in shining terms: a taste whereof Daniel felt in the glory of the Angel Gabriel, that was before him now; and in that glorious vision, Chap.10. See 1 Cor.15.41.

that turn away, &c.] Heb. and they that justifie the many; that is, that by their teaching the truth, bring the excellent Ones, or Elect of God, to true life, but to which only justifieth and sanctifies in newnesse of life. See 1 Tim.4.16. James 5.19,20. And yet these words point still more specially to those, Chap.11.33,35. There are degrees of glory in heaven.

many] The article affixed shewes some reference to those many, Chap.9.27. and Chap.11.39. where this article is prefixed likewise.

V. 4. But thou, O Daniel, shut up, &c.] The use and clear understanding of this prophecie is, not for this present time, or age, but for that time which is ordained by God, for the fulfilling and accomplishing thereof. See Chap.8.26. and the Annotations there. In that prophecie, Elam, and Madai, and Javan were named. Here they are so plainly described, that any learned Heathen would tell rightly what kingdomes must be meant; See also the Annotations on chap 8.1. These secrets then of heaven which are concealed to Daniels trust in this divine prophecie, he must write them in a book; he must keep them as a most precious treasure. Shut and seal them up for the use, and benefit, and comfort of Gods people in those after ages, and needful times, 300 years yet to come, to the time of Antiochus Epiphanes, and hide them from others, for whose sakes they were not revealed, and who would make no good use of them, but abuse them rather. See Mat. 7.6. See Apoc.10.4. John is bid not to seal up his prophecie, Apoc. 22.10. because some part thereof was presently to take place.

even to the time of the end] The time appointed of God for the fulfilling of those Prophecies; when God shall prove by the event, that he hath not foreshewed these things in vain.

many shall run to and, &c.] That is, though there be few now that are careful, as thou art, of the future state of the Church, and therefore will little mind these Prophecies for the present, and are unworthy to whom they should be revealed; yet the time will come, when many will run after this knowledge, and seek to and fro up and down for it, and will increase and abound therein. So that Daniel should not grieve for the present shutting and sealing up of such Divine and profitable prophecies; for when the matters shall break out, even in the time of Antiochus Epiphanes, yet then the Church should remain in the midst of that bloody persecution, and horrible devastation; and many then should run, read, search with all diligence after these things; as appears they did in the books of the Maccabees. And in the event and issue, they will gain by Gods Spirit, full knowledge of these things which are obscurely foretold. See Esay 29.18. Jer.23.20.

V. 5. there stood other two] Other two Angels; besides Gabriel, Chap.8.16. & 9.21.& 10,10. who hitherto hath revealed all these prophecies to Daniel, being sent to that end: and besides him also that was cloathed in linnen, who sent Gabriel, Chap.10.5,11. that is, Christ our Saviour. So as, the greatnesse of these matters is here set forth by the attendance of the angels, who desire to look into them; as 1 Pet.1.11. and also the certainty of them, by the number of witnesses that do testifie them, Deut 17.6. and Chap.19.15.

How long, &c.] See 1 Pet.1.12. Exod.25.20. Ephes. 3.10. So Chap.8.13. See Apoc.6.10. The Angels understanding of these future miseries of the Church, in a sympathy and fellow-feeling of them, do desire to know the end and termination of them. Much more should we take thus to heart the miseries, and the state of the Church, Psal.137. and 122. and 87.7.

these wonders!] Of these admirable predictions, and strange accidents which shall befall the Church. The angels admire them; though they cannot comprehend the Reasons of them.

V. 7. And I heard] Daniel heard both the Question and the Answer. Both were made chiefly for Daniels sake, and the Churches behoof.

See Gen. 14.22. Deu.32.40. Here both hands are lifted up, held towards heaven; it may be, because of the two angels, one on each side of him.

and when he, &c.] When God shall scatter the power of Antiochus, that infests the holy people, the Jewes. Others thus, When Antiochus Epiphanes shall have brought the Jews to extremity, then God shall miraculously relieve them, Chap.11.34.

all these things shall be finished] The grievous calamity and persecution ended; and the deliverance of the Church afforded.

V. 8. I understood not] Daniel ingenuously confesseth, that he heard the Answer; but understood not the secret of these times, distinguished in this manner; what they were, and when they should begin. He heard it in general terms; but understood it not, so particularly, and plainly, so distinctly, and fully, as he fain would, and desired to do. And indeed, these matters were to be spoken in such sort, as that until the age of their execution, the particulars should not be more evident. The trial of the faithful required that; who else for that time would have withdrawn themselves.

O, my Lord,] He inquires of Christ, as the angel did and not of them.

what shall be the end of these things?] His ignorance makes him renew and repeat the Question. Such was his holy desire after these things. So 1 Pet.1. 10,11. He a little varies the Question, yet in words, rather then in substance, asking not when and how long, but, what shall be the end of these things? what kind of end those wondrous troubles, and this deliverance should have?

V. 9. And he said] Christ said; the man clothed in linnen, ver.6,7.

Go thy way, Daniel] Surcease, forbear, be contented with this Revelation, with that answer, it is enough; inquire no further, demand no more concerning these things, the further knowledge whereof is reserved to its proper time, and belongs neither to thee, nor to the age wherein thou livest, ver.13. See Act.1.6,7. Knowledge, and the Revelation of it, hath its several steps, measures, and gradations. And we must not be over-curious, to be wise above what is written; but wise to sobriety, 2 Cor.4.6. Rom.12.3.

till the time of the end] Till that time be come which is prefixed by God, for the ending, fulfilling, and accomplishing of these things. The Event is the cleerest Interpreter of Prophecies. Then are they fully, and clearly, certainly, and perfectly known.

V. 10. Many shall be purified, &c.] Chap.11.35. See the Annotations there. This is a Recapitulation of that Prophecie concerning the calamities of that Persecution by Antiochus Epiphanes. And here is the good end and use of it to Gods children, thrice told.

but the wicked shall do wickedly] The wicked Jews, like reprobate silver, shall not be bettered in the furnace of those afflictions, but the worse by them, as Jer.6.28,29,30. They shall yeeld to those fiery trials and temptations, and be overcome by them. Yea, and many out of the height of their wickednesse shall willingly comply with Antiochus Epiphanes in all his wicked and Idolatrous abominations. See Chap.11.32,34. 1 Mac.1.11——16. and Ver.43, and 52. 2 Macc.4.9——16, See Mat.22.11.

and none of the wicked shall understand] The prophane apostates will not understand Gods work in those times of persecution, nor attend to these Prophecies, nor draw any benefit of instruction or consolation from them. See Psal.28.5. & 92.5,6,7. They shall understand nothing because they are blinded.

but the wise shall understand] Those, ver.3. and Chap.11.33. They shall mark, observe, and understand well Gods Work in those times, and these Prophecies and predictions fulfilled in them; neither shall they be drawn away with the errour of the wicked. See Hos.14.9. Psal.107.43.

V. 11. And from the time] In the close here, Christ doth favourably condescend to some further designation of the time, so vourably condescend to some further designation of the time, so much insisted upon; and to parcel out, and particularize the same more then formerly he did. So that Daniels desire and enquiry is in part satisfied, and not altogether repulsed; as that repulse, Act.1.7.

8.13. See the Annotations there. This time was the 145 yeare, 9 moneth, 15 day of the Kingdom of the Greeks, 1 Mac. 1. 54. & 4. 52. That abomination, Chap. 9. 27. is another.

there [shall be] 1290 dayes] That is, three yeares, six moneths, and fifteen dayes, from the time formerly mentioned in this verse; which extend to six moneths, and five dayes, after the re-building of Gods altar, and restoring of his true worship and service in, verſ. 7. At this period of time, likely, some notable mercy was afforded them, not mentioned in Scripture. But the books of Maccabees do declare many singular victories afforded the Jewes after the re-building of Gods altar; over all their neighbouring enemies. See 1 Mac. 5. Chapter throughout: and as some relate, a singular victory over Antiochus himselfe: as also Antiochus his kind of Repentance for his wrongs done to the Jewes; together with a vow of his own Conversion to Judaism; and of granting them the free exercise of Gods true worship, and of honouring them, the Temple, and their Religion, sundry wayes; as we may read at large, 2 Mac. 9. 13——28. See 2 Mac. 11. and it seemes at the end of this time, Judas Maccabeus had prosperous succes's against the Ammonites, with their Captain Timotheus.

V. 12. Blessed is he] Much happier shall his condition be.

that commeth to the 1335 dayes] That is, 45 dayes after the former. For then Antiochus Ephanes died, 1 Mac. 6 16. 2 Mac. 9. 28. though the very moneth and day of his death be not expressed in that history. And so the Jews were fully freed from the feare of him.

His last vowes and promises, if they had been known to them, yet they could not have confided in the words of such a man. But his death made all sure. Nor after did his race, and succes'sors get dominion over them. Thus we have four termes set concerning the perse'cution of Antiochus, 1 1300 dayes, Chap. 8. 14. which maketh 6 yeares, 3 moneths, and 20 dayes. This ends before the Sanctuary was defiled. 2 a time, two times, and a part of times, Chap. 7. 25. & 12. 7. that is, three years, and ten dayes, during the which, the daily Sacrifice was discontinued. 3 Here is one time of 1290 dayes, which ended at such time as Religion was fully restored after the purgation of the Temple. 4 1335. which ended at the death of Antiochus.

V. 13. But go thou thy way] Go on in the way and course of thy life that yet remaineth, content with this my Revelation: look for no more Visions, but rest in this. That which God had yet further to reveal for the comfort of his Church, he would reserve for other times. As Ezra, Zachary, Haggie, Malachy, were raised up afterwards. God would adorn his Temple at the re-edifying thereof with some Prophetical Visions.

till the end be] The end of thy life: prepare for it, to end it comfortably. It cannot be far off, thou are now so old.

and thou shalt rest] In peace; free from these calamities, and from the miseries of this life, Apoc. 14. 13.

and stand in thy lot at the end of the dayes] That is, stand still in that lot of prosperity and honour, mentioned, Chap. 6. 28. till, end at the end of thy dayes. Others thus; Thou shalt rest, in thy grave, and stand up, at the general Resurrection of the dead, in thy lot, of Celestial Inheritances, and heavenly glory; prepared and allotted to thee and other Prophets, at the end of the world, for the dayes of eternity. See Psal. 1. 5. 2 Tim. 4. 8. Every one then hath his lot; not all the same measure of glory.

ANNOTATIONS on the Book of the Prophet HOSEA.

THE ARGUMENT.

IMmediately after King Solomons Death, the Jewish Nation was divided into two Kingdomes, under Rehoboam, and Jeroboam. Rehoboam, Solomons sonne, reigned over two Tribes, Judah, and Benjamin. And that Kingdome was called the Kingdome of Judah; because the Tribe of Judah was the Principal part of. And this continued in Rehoboam, and his Successors; twenty in all, counting in himselfe and Athaliah, until the time of the Babylonish Captivity. The other Kingdome, over which Jeroboam first reigned, was called the Kingdome of Israel; as containing all the other ten Tribes of Israel. And this continued also in twenty Successions, until the time of the Assyrian Captivity, in the dayes of King Hoshea, when Hezekiah reigned over Judah. And so this Kingdome ended 133 years before that of Judah. What caused that miserable Division, appeareth, 1 King. 12. As Israel fell from Judah; so did they fall from the pure Service of God, worshipping him after their own phantasies, and Traditions of men, giving themselves to vile Idolatries. Jeroboam set up two Calves, erected Altars, ordained Feasts, Priests, and Sacrifices of his own invention. Yet the Lord from time to time sent to them Extraordinary Prophets; and more in number then he did to the Kingdome of Judah. By them to supply the defect of the Ordinary Ministry of Priests & Levites; to call them back to Repentance, to keep his Elect in the profession of his Covenant, and enjoyment of his Grace; to reprove and condemn the wicked, by denunciation of Gods judgements; That so some form of a Church, and Gods Right might be preserved in that Nation, which through his Patience did yet beare his Name and Badge. Among others, Hoshea the Prophet was raised up: And at the same time with him, Esay, Amos, Joel, Jonah, and Micah, Extraordinary Prophets all, lived and prophesied. A rare age of Prophets. Hoshea faithfully executed his Office very many years. Yet how many, is not so easily, and certainly collected. The reckonings of the years of the Kings of Judah, and of the Kings of Israel linked in with them, in whose reignes this Prophet prophesied, being so intricate and perplexed. Hoshea is sent, chiefly to Israel; yet hath and useth a word of Prophecie for Judah also. Summarily he tells Israel, Their Mother is an Adulteresse; Themselves, the Children of Whoredomes; Exhorts them to leave their manifold Sins, and Idolatries; and to return to the Lord, upon his Promises of Mercy: Else, Threatens them with grievous Judgements; and tells them God will take away their Kingdome, and give them up for Captives to the Assyrians: which accordingly came to passe. Intermixing yet some Consolatory Promises, of their Conversion, and Gods gracious Acceptation, at the last. Somewhat more distinctly, and particularly, thus;

Hoshea is commanded to prophecie, In

- Termes plain and expresse. And so; He Chargeth them with Sinnes; Threatneth Judgements; Exhorts to Repentance; and Promiseth Mercies. And all these are intermingled, and gone over again, and again; in all the residue of the Prophecie: We may some way help to distinguish them, thus.

3 Israel, and Ephraim, do yet continue on in their Sins: And Return not; but deceitfully, Chap. 7.

- Threatens His fierce wrath, and Their desolation, for their Idolatry still persisted in, notwithstanding His favours again mentioned, both past, and to come, Chap. 13.
- Concludes, with an excellent Exhortation to Israel, to Return, and Repent, prescribing the very forms of it; with Promises annexed, of Grace for Conversion at the last; and of abundant Blessings, set forth by many Similies, to be freely vouchsafed to them, Chap. 14.

CHAP. I.

Verſ. 1. THe word] God in this Chapter commands Hoshea, in a Vision, to take a Wife of Whoredomes, and Children of Whoredomes. By that Type to convince Israel of their whorish impiety against the Lord. And by the naming of his Children, Jezreel, Lo-ruhamah, and Lo-ammi, he doth declare and denounce his most severe Judgements, speedily to come upon the then reigning house of Jehu, for his sins; and also upon all Israel: as likewise his denying them any mercy; and renouncing them from being his people; and the taking them away by the Assyrian. With promises, annexed of more mercy to the house of Judah; and of mercy to both Israel and Judah, at the last, in their Union, Conversion, and Reception again, to be his people.

of the Lord, &c.] So again, verſ. 2. Not mans word; nor the Prophets; but Gods, by him. He is the Lords mouth in speaking it, the Lords hand in writing it, 2 Tim. 3. 16. 2 Pet. 1. 21. Hereupon Matthew alledgeth him, Chap. 2. 15. and Paul cites his speaking it, Rom. 9. 25, 26. 1 Cor. 15. 54. and our Saviour himselfe likewise, Mat. 9. 13. & 12. 7.

that came unto Hoshea] As the Lords ambassador, sent by him, with these words, instructions, mandates, messages to be delivered to his people. Hoshea, no false prophet that comes unsent, and brings his own words and dreams. But he that heareth Hoshea, heareth the Lord, Luk. 10. 16.

in the dayes of Uzziah, &c.] Called also Ozias, Mat. 1. 8. and Azzariah, 2 King. 14. 21. Of him, read 2 King. 15. 1——6. 2 Chr. 26. In which year of his reign, Hoshea began to prophesie, is not specified. And the beginning, and the end of his reign, are also, both subject to various opinions among Interpreters, and Chronologers. Some, make him to begin at the seventeenth of his father Amazia, and second of Jeroboam. Others, twelve years after, at the death of Amaziah; and so in the fourteenth of Jeroboam. Others, twelve or thirteen years, after the death of Amaziah; supposing a space of regency, or interregnum, during that time: and so in the twenty seventh of Jeroboam. And for the end of the reigne of Uzziah, some make to be at the time of his Leprosie; and vary also about that time. Others, at the time of his death.

Jotham] Began in the second year of Pekah: and reigned sixteen years, 2 King. 15. 32, 33. And this, after the death of his father Uzziah. See 2 King. 15. 5. 2 Chr. 26. 21. Jotham judged the people of the land, in the time of his fathers Leprosie: and then he is 25 years old, 2 King. 15. 33. and 27. at the beginning of his own reign. That twentieth year of Jotham, mentioned, 2 King. 15. 30. appears plainly, to be the twentieth since Jotham began to reign; and was indeed, and properly the fourth of Ahaz. See Annotations on that place.

Ahaz] Aged 20. Some say, when himselfe: Others, when his father Jotham began to reign. Ahaz is called King of Israel, 2 Chron. 28. 19. Haply, as being more like them in Idolatries, and fitter for them in all manner of abominations, then to be any King of Judah, verſ. 22. Ahaz begins in the seventeenth of Pekah, 2 King. 16. 1, 2. and Pekah reigning 20 years, 2 King. 15. 27. This evinceth Hoshea the Successor of Pekah to begin his reign in the 4th. of Ahaz. Ahaz reigned 16 years.

Hezekiah] Aged 25. and therefore begotten in the eleventh year of the age of Ahaz, if Ahaz was 20 years old when he himselfe began to reign; and not his Father, which may well be; considering the time wherein Judah the son of Jacob, and his sons, begat their children, before their going into Egypt, Gen. 46. 12. At that age of 25. Hezekiah begins to reigne. And that beginning must needs be in the 12 of Hoshea, reckoning, as was shewed from the fourth of Ahaz. Which twelfth is the third year of Hoshea, 2 King. 18. 1, 2. That is, since he became Tributary to Salmenesar.

Kings of Judah] Judah and Benjamin; and that Kingdom was called the kingdome of Judah; because the Tribe of Judah was the chief part of it: and this continued in 20 Successions, till the Babylonish Captivity; as hath been said.

Jeroboam] Amos 1. 1. & Chap. 7. 9, 10, 11. 2 King. 14. 27. Distinguished here from Jeroboam the son of Nebat. He begins to reign in the fifteenth year of Amaziah king of Judah; reigns 41 years: dies in the reign of Uzziah, some say in the 14, some in the 27, and some in the 38 year of Uzziah's reign; according to the various opinions of the beginning of Uzziah's reigne, formerly mentioned. Hoshea prophecying till the time of Hezekiah, it must needs follow, that he prophecied also in the dayes of Zachariah, Shallum, Menahem, Pekahiah, Pekah, and Hoshea, six other kings of Israel. And yet for all this, the time how long Hosea prophecyed, doth still remain uncertain; though we should begin the accompt in the last year of Jeroboam, and end it in the first of Hezekiah; and all because the last of Jeroboam is so greatly doubted in what yeare of Uzziah it doth take its period and determination. Those who will have Jeroboams last year to be in the 14 of Uzziah, do not only allow the whole 29 years to Amaziah, but also are forced to admit of an interregnum of 13 years in the kingdom of Judah after the death of Amaziah, before Uzziah began to reign. And withal, finding undeniably, that Zechariah the son of Jeroboam did begin to reign in the 38 of Uzziah, they are forced again to admit of an interregnum of 24 years between Jeroboam & Zacharias, in the kingdom of Israel. Or either of which interregnums, there is not the least intimation in the Scripture. Those who end Jeroboams reign in the 27 of Uzziah, are forced to admit of an interregnum of 11 yeare between his death, and the beginning of the reign of his son Zachariah, 2 King. 15. 8. Those who make Jeroboam's last to fall in with the 38 of Uzziah, do take for their ground that undeniable truth, That Uzziah's death, and end of his reign, falls in with the first year of Pekah king of Israel, 2 King. 15. 27. And counting backward 52 years, the time of the reign of Uzziah, it brings us to the second or third year of Jeroboams reign, and 17 or 18 of Amaziah, or first of Uzziah: and this makes Jeroboams death to fall in the 38 year of Uzziah; and so cuts of any interregnum, either in Judah, or Israel; and makes a perfect concordance between the times of the reigns of the kings of Judah, and of the kings of Israel, as the Scripture doth record them; thus, Joash, or Jehoahh of Judah, and Jehoahaz of Israel, dye in the same yeare, 2 King. 12. 1. compared with Chap. 13. 1. Thence, in Nor after did his race, and successors get dominion over them. Thus we have four termes set concerning the persecution of Antiochus, 1 2300 dayes, Chap. 8. 14. which maketh 6 yeares, 3 moneths, and 10 dayes. This ends before the Sanctuary was defiled. 2 a time, two times, and a part of times, Chap. 7. 25. & 12. 7. that is, three years, and ten dayes, during the which, the daily Sacrifice was discontinued. 3 Here is one time of 1290 dayes, which ended at such time as Religion was fully restored after the purgation of the Temple. 4 1335. which ended at the death of Antiochus.

V. 13. But go thou thy way] Go on in the way and course of thy life that yet remaineth, content with this my Revelation: look for no more Visions, but rest in this. That which God had yet further to reveal for the comfort of his Church, he would reserve for other times. As Ezra, Zachary, Haggie, Malachy, were raised up afterwards. God would adorn his Temple at the re-edifying thereof with some Prophetical Visions.

till the end be] The end of thy life: prepare for it, to end it comfortably. It cannot be far off, thou art now so old.

and thou shalt rest] In peace; free from these calamities, and from the miseries of this life, Apoc. 14. 13.

and stand in thy lot at the end of the dayes] That is, stand still in that lot of prosperity and honour, mentioned, Chap. 6. 28. till, and at the end of thy dayes, Others thus; Thou shalt rest, in thy grave; and stand up, at the general Resurrection of the dead, in thy lot, of Celestial Inheritances, and heavenly glory; prepared and allotted to thee and other Prophets, at the end of the world, for the dayes of eternity. See Psal. 1. 5. 2 Tim. 4. 8. Every one then hath his lot; not all the same measure of glory.

ANNOTATIONS on the Book of the Prophet HOSEA.

THE ARGUMENT.

I Mmediately after King Solomons Death, the Jewish Nation was divided into two Kingdomes, under Rehoboam, and Jeroboam. Rehoboam, Solomons sonne, reigned over two Tribes, Judah, and Benjamin. And that Kingdome was called the Kingdome of Judah; because the Tribe of Judah was the Principal part of. And this continued in Rehoboam, and his Successors; twenty in all, counting in himselfe and Athaliah, until the time of the Babylonish Captivity. The other Kingdome, over which Jeroboam first reigned, was called the Kingdome of Israel; as containing all the other ten Tribes of Israel. And this continued also in twenty Successions, until the time of the Assyrian Captivity, in the dayes of King Hoshea, when Hezekiah reigned over Judah. And so this Kingdome ended 133 years before that of Judah. What caused that miserable Division, appeareth, 1 King. 12. As Israel fell from Judah; so did they fall from the pure Service of God, worshipping him after their own phantasies, and Traditions of men, giving themselves to vile Idolatries. Jeroboam set up two Calves, erected Altars, ordained Feasts, Priests, and Sacrifices of his own invention. Yet the Lord from time to time sent to them Extraordinary Prophets; and more in number then he did to the Kingdome of Judah. By them to supply the defect of the Ordinary Ministry of Priests & Levites; to call them back to Repentance, to keep his Elect in the profession of his Covenant, and enjoyment of his Grace; to reprove and condemn the wicked, by denunciation of Gods judgements; That so some form of a Church, and Gods Right might be preserved in that Nation, which through his Patience did yet beare his Name and Badge. Among others, Hosea the Prophet was raised up: And at the same time with him, Esay, Amos, Joel, Jonah, and Micah, Extraordinary Prophets all, lived and prophesied. A rare age of Prophets. Hosea faithfully executed his Office very many years. Yet how many, is not so easily, and certainly collected. The reckonings of the years of the Kings of Judah, and of the Kings of Israel linked in with them, in whose reignes this Prophet prophesied, being so intricate and perplexed. Hosea is sent, chiefly to Israel; yet hath and useth a word of Prophecie for Judah also. Summarily he tells Israel, Their Mother is an Adulteresse; Themselves, the Children of Whoredomes; Exhorts them to leave their manifold Sins, and Idolatries; and to return to the Lord, upon his Promises of Mercy: Else, Threatens them with grievous Judgements; and tells them God will take away their Kingdome, and give them up for Captives to the Assyrians: which accordingly came to passe. Intermixing yet some Consolatory Promises, of their Conversion, and Gods gracious Acceptation, at the last. Somewhat more distinctly, and particularly, thus;

CHAP. I.

Vers. 1.  He word] God in this Chapter commands Hosea, in a Vision, to take a Wife of Whoredomes, and Children of Whoredomes. By that Type to convince Israel of their whorish impiety against the Lord. And by the naming of his Children, Jezreel, Lo-ruhamiah, and Lo-ammi, he doth declare and denounce his most severe Judgements, speedily to come upon the then reigning house of Jehu, for his sins; and also upon all Israel: as likewise his denying them any mercy; and renouncing them from being his people; and the taking them away by the Assyrian. With promises, annexed of more mercy to the house of Judah; and of mercy to both Israel and Judah, at the last, in their Union, Conversion, and Reception again, to be his people.

of the Lord, &c.] So again, ver. 2. Not mans word; nor the Prophets; but Gods, by him. He is the Lords mouth in speaking it, the Lords hand in writing it, 2 Tim. 3. 16. 2 Pet. 1. 21. Hereupon Matthew alledgeth him, Chap. 2. 15. and Paul cites his authority, Rom. 9. 25, 26. 1 Cor. 15. 54. and our Saviour himselfe likewise, Mat. 9. 13. & 12. 7.

that came unto Hosea] As the Lords ambassador, sent by him, with these words, instructions, mandates, messages to be delivered to his people. Hosea, no false prophet that comes unsent, and brings his own words and dreams. But he that heareth Hosea, heareth the Lord, Luk. 10. 16.

in the dayes of Uzziah, &c.] Called also Ozias, Mat. 1. 8. and Azzariah, 2 King. 14. 21. Of him, read 2 King. 15. 1——6. 2 Chr. 26. In which year of his reign, Hosea began to prophesie, is not specified. And the beginning, and the end of his reign, are also, both subject to various opinions among Interpreters, and Chronologers. Some, make him to begin at the seventeenth of his father Amazia, and second of Jeroboam. Others, twelve years after, at the death of Amaziah; and so in the fourteenth of Jeroboam. Others, twelve or thirteen years, after the death of Amaziah; supposing a space of regency, or interregnum, during that time: and so in the twenty seventh of Jeroboam. And for the end of the reigne of Uzziah, some make to be at the time of his Leprosie; and vary also about that time. Others, at the time of his death.

Jotham] Began in the second year of Pekah: and reigned sixteen years, 2 King. 15. 32, 33. And this, after the death of his father Uzziah. See 2 King. 15. 5. 2 Chr. 26. 21. Jotham judged the people of the land, in the time of his fathers Leprosie: and then he is 25 years old, 2 King. 15. 33. and 27. at the beginning of his own reign. That twentieth year of Jotham, mentioned, 2 King. 15. 30. appears plainly, to be the twentieth time Jotham began to reign; and was indeed, and properly the fourth of Ahaz. See Annotations on that place.

Ahaz] Aged 20. Some say, when himselfe: Others, when his father Jotham began to reign, Ahaz is called King of Israel, 2 Chron. 28. 19. Haply, as being more like them in Idolatries, and fitter for them in all manner of abominations, then to be any King of Judah, vers. 22. Ahaz begins in the seventeenth of Pekah, 2 King. 16. 1, 2. and Pekah reigning 20 years, 2 King. 15. 27. This evinceth Hoshea the Successor of Pekah to begin his reign in the 4th. of Ahaz. Ahaz reigned 16 years.

Hezekiah] Aged 25. and therefore begotten in the eleventh year of the age of Ahaz. If Ahaz was 20 yeare old when he himselfe began to reign; and not his Father, which may well be; considering the time wherein Judah the son of Jacob, and his sons, begat their children, before their going into Egypt, Gen. 46. 12. At that age of 25. Hezekiah begins to reigne. And that beginning must needs be in the 12 of Hoshea, reckoning, as was shewed from the fourth of Ahaz. Which twelfth is the third year of Hoshea, 2 King. 18. 1, 2. That is, since he became Tributary to Salmenesar.

Kings of Judah] Judah and Benjamin; and that Kingdom was called the kingdome of Judah; because the Tribe of Judah was the chief part of it: and this continued in 20 Successions, till the Babylonish Captivity; as hath been said.

Jeroboam] Amos 1. 1. & Chap. 7. 9, 10, 11. 2 King. 14. 27. Distinguished here from Jeroboam the son of Nebat. He begins to reign in the fifteenth year of Amaziah king of Judah; reigns 41 years: dies in the reign of Uzziah, some say in the 14, some in the 27, and some in the 38 year of Uzziah's reign; according to the various opinions of the beginning of Uzziah's reigne, formerly mentioned. Hosea prophecying till the time of Hezekiah, it must needs follow, that he prophecied also in the dayes of Zachariah, Shallum, Menahem, Pekahiah, Pekah, and Hoshea, six other kings of Israel. And yet for all this, the time how long Hosea prophecyed, doth still remain uncertain; though we should begin the accompt in the last year of Jeroboam, and end it in the first of Hezekiah; and all because the last of Jeroboam is so greatly doubted in what yeare of Uzziah it doth take its period and determination. Those who will have Jeroboams last year to be in the 14 of Uzziah, do not only allow the whole 29 years to Amaziah, but also are forced to admit of an interregnum of 13 years in the kingdom of Judah after the death of Amaziah, before Uzziah began to reign. And withal, finding undeniably, that Zechariah the son of Jeroboam did begin to reign in the 38 of Uzziah, they are forced again to admit of an interregnum of 24 years between Jeroboam & Zachariah, in the kingdom of Israel. Of either of which interregnums, there is not the least intimation in the Scripture. Those who end Jeroboams reign in the 27 of Uzziah, are forced to admit of an interregnum of 11 years between his death, and the beginning of the reign of his son Zacharias, 2 King. 15. 8. Those who make Jeroboam's last to fall in with the 38 of Uzziah, do take for their ground that undeniable truth, That Uzziah's death, and end of his reign, falls in with the first year of Pekah king of Israel, 2 King. 15. 27. And counting backward 52 years, the time of the reign of Uzziah, it brings us to the second or third year of Jeroboams reign, and 17 or 18 of Amaziah, or first of Uzziah: and this makes Jeroboams death to fall in the 38 year of Uzziah; and so cuts of any interregnum, either in Judah, or Israel; and makes a perfect concordance between the times of the reigns of the kings of Judah, and of the kings of Israel, as the Scripture doth record them; thus, Joash, or Jehoath of Judah, and Jehoahaz of Israel, dye in the same yeare, 2 King. 12. 1. compared with Chap. 13. 1. Thence, in

1 of { Jeroboam, Zachariah, Shallum, & Menahem, Pekahiah, Pekah, Hoshea } falls in with the { 15. of Amaziah, 2 King. 14. 23. / 38. of Uzziah, 2 King. 15. 8. / 39. of Uzziah, 2 King. 15. 13. 17. / 50. of Uzziah, 2 King. 15. 23. / 52. of Uzziah, 2 King. 15. 27. / 4. of Ahaz, or 20 years since Jotham began to reign, 2 King. 15. 30.

12. of Hoshea, or third year of his Tributary Reign, falls in with the first of Hezekiah, 2 King. 18. 1.

And now thus reckoning from the last of Jeroboam, in the 38 year of Uzziah, to the first of Ezekiah, our Prophet Hosea prophecied at least 47 years, Others, that place Jeroboams death in the 27 year of Uzziah, make him prophecie 58 years. And they that place Jeroboams death in the 14 year of Uzziah, make him prophecie 69 years. How long Hosea prophecied in the dayes of Jeroboam; and how long in the dayes of Hezekiah, is not set down in Scripture.

In all this Chronology of times aforesaid, we leave the Reader to his own judgment; and do not prejudge the different opinions of learned men. Onely we think good for the better clearing and understanding of that Text, 2 King. 15. 1. to signifie, That it is not to be understood, That Azariah, or Uzziah began to reign in the 27 of Jeroboam; for so should Jeroboam dye in the 14 year of Uzziah: which inforceth that inconvenience of a double Interregnum: formerly mentioned. The word began is not in that Text, Onely this is, that Uzziah was reigning then in that 27 yeare of Jeroboam, being the most likely the 24 or 25 of his own reign. And most likely; that in that 27 of Jeroboam, Uzziah was stricken with Leprosie; as it follows, verſ. 5. of that Chapter. This long continuance of Hosea in Prophecying sheweth, his constancy and fidelity in his office; Gods great patience; the Peoples invincible obstinacy in their sins, and the justnesse of Gods Judgements upon them in the end. The Book seems, to contain the sums of his Sermons, or the main heads of such matters as he usually preached upon.

King of Israel] As containing all the other ten Tribes of Israel. Under this second Jeroboam, the Kingdom of Israel was most prosperous and flourishing: and yet even then this Prophet denounceth threatnings of devastation and ruine for their sinnes; when it seemed to them a thing incredible; and accordingly over-speedily it came so to passe.

V. 2. The beginning of the word of the Lord by Hoseá] Heb. The beginning of Jehovahs speech in Hosea, 2 Cor. 13. 3. Heb. 1. 1. Mat. 10. 20. To signifie the inward Prophetical revelation, Numb. 12. 6. 2 Sam. 23. 2. Most truly may that of the Poet be applyed here, Est Deus in nobis agitante calescimus illo. The former verse contains a general Inscription of the whole Prophecy. This most specially declares with what God first began; and is the Inscription of this Chapter. Joshua brought them into the land, Numb. 13. 9. Deut. 1. 38. In the reign of King Hoshea, they were carried captives out of the land, 2 King. 17. Hosea the Prophet doth taxe their undutifulnesse, and unthankfulnesse for the one; and foretel their fearful deserved calamity in the other. Hosea, and Joshua differ little in name, and signification, from Jesus.

The Lord said to Hoseá] He begins roughly. As an Herauld he bids open war to Israel in Gods name. He doth not speak placentia; but thunders against them, because their sins were as diseases incurable and desperate; and had so long continued from the dayes of the first Jeroboam. And he speaks nothing out of his own brain; but is the Lords organ and instrument: God instructs and directs him. The Prophets deliver what they receive from the Lord. And hereupon depends their authority; and the Peoples duty of attention, belief, and obedience.

Go, take] It is likely that all this was commanded, and seemed to the Prophet to be performed in vision, which being related to the people, they might in the looking-glasse of this allegory, perceive their duty toward God, and their rebellion and disloyalty, and the punishment which God would inflict upon them for it. See Chap. 3. 1. Some thus. That God commanded him onely to speak all this to the people, as a parable or figure; that by this meanes, in his person, as in a lively picture, they might see the representation of their own whorish estate and condition; and the like is that, Esay 28. 23. Jer. 13. 4. Ezek. 3. & 4. Chap. and 8. 3, 8. yet some will needs understand all literally, and seek to justifie it by the authority of God commanding it, for the special use following; and parallel it with that, 1 King. 20. 37. & Gen. 22. 2. and Exod. 13. 2. with Chap. 13. 36. And these understand the forenamed places of Esay, and Ezekiel; as also that Jer. 2. 10, 13. all literally: and that this was done, the more thereby to affect and work upon the hearts of the people.

of whoredomes] A notorious infamous whore, as a man of bloods, and of sorrows, signifies men notorious in these kinds. Though some say, that she had been such, before the Prophet took her; not so afterwards. Others, that she was not such at first; but that after he took her, she turned whore.

and children of whoredomes] Some conceive them taken with the mother; and so born in whoredomes before the Prophet tooke her; and so not those begotten of her by the Prophet, and mentioned hereafter in this Chapter, which nothing agrees with the Text. Others, understand those children hereafter named, and that they were born by unlawful copulation, though the Prophet did bear the name, or that he should say so of her, and them, to the people, and give it out so, and traduce them as such. Others, conceive the words to bear, that the same children were taken with the mother by the Prophet, and yet are said to be begotten by him of her. Or that they were begotten by him of her, and yet called children of whoredomes, because of the ill name and fame of the mother. And they make this the rather to evince all this to be enely in vision, or as a Parable, type and figure propounded, and preached to the people.

For the Land] The end, use, and application, of the former command, vision, or type. I will have thee in this manner represent unto the people their Idolatries, and spiritual strayings, and to reprove them for it, Chap. 2. 4. John 8. 41. See Psal. 73. 27. and Ezek. 23. 3, 5. Their Idolatry indeed, was their grand sin, and the wel-spring of their other sins. And it is likened to whoredome, in relation to that usual affiniulation of God, to an husband, and the Church to his wife, Chap. 2. 2, 16. Jer. 3. 1, 8, 20. Ezek. 16. 8. whence jealousie is attributed to God; Exod. 20. 4.

From the Lord] And his wpid, and going a whoring after her Lovers, as Adulteresses do, Chap. 2. 5, 13. Exod. 34. 15. The people of that pleasant land, the land of promise, did deal thus treacherously against such an husband, against the Lord.

V. 3. Took] He preached this Type, parable, or vision. Though some, as was said, take it literally, as a thing really acted by him. We must obey God, even in things that seem to be never so much against our reason and sence.

Gomer] Some think it was the name of a famous strumpet, which lived in those dayes. Others, that it signified a name, to set out the qualities of this people, as well in grace (for it may signifie perfection) as in judgement, for it may be taken for the end or final extirpation.

Diblaim] The reason of this name which seems also figurative, is very obscure. Some have held it the name of a wilderness, Ezek. 6. 14. to shew the Churches wretched beginning in its own nature; as Cant. 3. 6. Ezek. 16. 7. Others, say it signifies clusters of figs, Jer. 24. 3.

Bare him a son] It seems that by those three children, born to the Prophet, was figured the ruine of the ten Tribes, which were effected at three several times. First, in the extirpation of John his house by Shallum, 2 King. 15. 10, 12. The other two were by the invasions of the Kings of Assyria, Tiglath-Pilneser, 2 King. 15. 19. 1 Chron. 5. 2, 6. and Shalmeneser, 2 King. 17. 3, 6. If this were literally understood, it would much have retarded the beginning of the Prophets preaching.

V. 4. Jezreel] Meaning, that they were no more worthy to be called Israelites, of which name they boasted, because Israel did prevail with God; but that they were as bastards, and deserved to be called Jezreelites, that is scattered people; alluding to Jezreel, which was the chief City of the ten Tribes under Ahab, where Jehu shed so much bloud, 2 King. 9. 24, 31. & 10. 8, 11, 17. This name then should be a monument of the blood there shed by Jehu, and of Gods vengeance to be executed for it in that same place, verſ. 5.

Yet a little while] The meaning of this first passage and prophecie, see 1 King. 14. 14. Zachariah the son of Jeroboam reigned only 6 moneths, and was slain by Shallum, and the kingdom taken from the posterity of Jehu. See 2 King. 15. 10, 12. yet was this 100 years after that bloudy sin of Jehu, Esay 65. 20.

Avenge] Heb. visite; as Chap. 2. 13. & 4. 9. & 8. 13. & 9. 9.

The bloud of Jezreel] Namely, the executions done by Jehu in Jezreel, 2 King. 9. 24, 33. & 10. 11, 17.

upon the house of Jehu] Jehu his house and posterity do suffer here for Jehu his sin. God stirred up Jehu to execute his judgments upon Ahabs house, which thing he did, and for that was rewarded, 2 King. 10. 30. and to re-establish Gods service which he did not, 2 King. 10. 31. he reformed Baal; but not the Calves of Dan and Bethel: wherefore those former executions, are imputed unto him for so many murthers. See 1 King. 16. 7. because he did not him for so many murthers. See 1 King. 16. 7. because he did not with all his heart. And with all his the former commands with an upright heart. And with all his bloodinesse upon Ahaziah, and his brethren was cruel, and beyond his commission. God will be the avenger of blood. Jehu did not Gods work for God, but for himself; out of his desire to reign. We must see to it, that our heart be upright and sincere in doing God service and bufinesse; that we serve God in it, and not our selves, and our own turn; and so subject the works of God to our own base ends.

will cause to cease] The Kingdom of Jehu in the house of Israel. And by the rooting out of the line of Jehu, the kingdom of Israel received such a blow, that it could never rise again. Or the utter ceſsation of the kingdom, see verſ. 9. kingdoms have their change and periods.

V. 5. At that day] When the time of vengeance shall come, and they ripe for it. I will beat down the power of Israel, taking from them all means of defending themselves. And God brak the bowe of Israel in the valley of Jezreel, when Jehues wicked house smarteth for Achab's; as Achabs did for Naboth the bowe] Bowe then much used in war. See on Zech. 10. 4. By the bowe Jehu got the Crown, 2 King. 9. 24. They thought themselves strong in men and arms. But this should not hinder Gods breaking of them; for all their vain boasting and confidence, he would tame them.

for the valley of Jezreel] This seems allotted to the Tribe of Ephraim, or to Manasseh, Josh. 17. 16. yet some assignes the city to Issachar, Josh. 19. 18. The Midianites and Amalekites camped here, Judg. 6. 33. Saul slain here, 1 Sam. 29. 1. 31. Isbosheth made King over it, and the most of Israel, 2 Sam. 2. 9. Naboth dwelt, and was stoned in Jezreel, and Ahab had a palace here, 1 King. 21. It was a strong and fortified City in his time. Hither he came from Carmel, and Elias ran on foot before him, 1 King. 18. 45, 46. Here were Iezabel, and Jehoram the son of Ahab slain by Jehu, 2 King. 9. For whose slaughters made there, God would be avenged there, even in that place, wherein they much gloried and boasted; and where they thoughts their greatest strength and security to be. See Nah. 3. 1, 2, 3, 8, 10. There was a city in the Tribe of Judah of that name, Josh. 15. 56.

V. 6. Conceived again] God, by his Prophet, gradually proceeds to describe the state of the people in sin and punishment. They still grow worse and worse.

Lo-ruhamah] That is, not having obteined mercy: whereby he signifieth that Gods favour was departed from them. See Rom. 9. 25. See ver. 10. as a daughter whom the father doth repudiate and cast off.

I will no more] Heb. I will not add any more to. Because I have pardoned them enough already: therefore I will suffer them to be spoyled by Tiglath-Pilneser, who captiveth Gallie, and by him to be unpitied. See it performed, 1 Chron. 5. 26. See Chap. 2. 4. See the like comination, Jer. 13. 14. Amos 7. 8. See likewise, Jer. 15. 1. Ezek. 14. 14. Zeph. 2. 1. Judg. 2. 16. Hitherto he had used much patience and forbearance; had been hasty to wrath and revenge, but had tryed all meanes of their amendment, and expected long. But now he would delay no longer, Amos 3. 2.

But I will utterly] Or, that I should altogether, or any ways pardon them; they were never brought back again, as the Jews were from Babylon. Thus God's last breakes are the dreadfull and dreadly.

V. 7. The house of Judah] In which the covenant service, and Church of God remained: and which Pekah, and Rezin, Israel joyning with Syria, fought after to destroy, Esay 7. 1. and which before, that was miserably wasted by Joash or Jehoash the father of this Jeroboam, in the dayes of Amaziah, 2 King. 14. & now was despicable and forlorn, in the eyes of Israel, This is inserted, to abate their pride against Judah: and to provoke them to follow their example, and to shew, that though Israel were rejected, yet God would have his Church, upon which he would have mercy. So Mal. 3. 10. Esay 65. 13. yea, mercy still, notwithstanding their future crosses and miseries, by Israel, Syria, and Assyria.

Save them by the Lord] By my self miraculously; or by vertue of the everlasting Son of God, perpetual head, and Saviour of his Church, Isa. 7. 14. He saved Judah from the Assyrian miraculously, sending an angel to destroy their Camp, 2 King. 19. 35. at Jerusalem, or Lybna. See Esay 36. 2. and 37. 8, 9, 14, 33. and after brought Judah back from the Babylonish Captivity.

their God] He is not your God; notwithstanding all the pretences and claims you make thereunto.

and will not save them by] Zach. 4. 6. Not by their own power, or forrein forces, God needs not humane helps. Neither doth mans safety and salvation depend upon the arm of flesh and bloud, but upon the favour and power of the Lord, Esay 43. 7, 15. Psal. 33. 16. and 44. 5, 6. Exod. 15. 16. Psal. 21. 13. & 44. 7, 8.

V. 9. Lo-ammi] That is, not my people, Rom. 9. 25. for ye do not worship me as my people should: and therefore as ye have rejected me by your Idolatry, So I will cast you off. This is the last abdication and disherizing of them; counting them now as in the rank of other Heathen Nations: and yet this is prophecied and foretold in the time of the flourishing reign of the second Jeroboam.

I will not be your] God is here understood. The like Ellipsis is, Ezek. 16. 8. The Covenant between God and his people, frequently mentioned; as Chap. 2. 23. Jer. 11. 4. is here broken off. Because, you have changed the unchangeable condition of the Covenant; I will not do you good, as your God; but will suffer Shalmaneser, King of Assyria, to carry you all captive, that Israel may be no people. See it fulfilled, 2 King. 17.

V. 10. yet the number] See Jer. 30. 7. Because, they thought that God could not have been true of his promise, except he had preserved them; as Matt. 3. 9. he declareth, that though they were destroyed, yet the true Israelites, which are the sons of the promise should be without number; which stand, both of the Jews and Gentiles, Rom. 9. 24. Mat. 8. 11. thus he answers their secret objections, and retels their vain confidence, whereby they sleighted Gods threatnings. Others, think it may be understood, of the multiplication of this people, in all their dispersions, until the time of their conversion; and to be a kind of qualification, of the sharpnesse of the former sentence which makes way to that which follows in the next Chapter. Chap. 2. 1, 2, 3. And a consolation, that their forefaid abdication and rejection, should be such, as yet a seed should remain, an elect seed, that should multiply, and grow innumerable. So that God will be as sure as his word, and make good his promises; that to Abraham, Gen. 22. 5. and preserve his Church, when the vile sinners and hypocrites perish; his Church shall grow to be more pure and numerous. The full accomplishment hereof, is more verified in the spiritual, then in the carnal seed of Israel.

not numbred] See Gen. 32. 12. Heb. 11. 12.

come to passe] Rom. 9. 25, 26. 1 Pet. 2. 10.

in the place] Or, instead of that. By the Gospel which they shall hereafter receive, they will obtein a more firm covenant and conjunction with God, being made not only his people and subjects; but his children by grace and adoption, and regeneration of spirit, and holy spiritual liberty: when Christ beginneth to preach where captivity began, Isa. 9. 1.

it shall be said unto them] As Isai. 61. 6 and 61. 6. and 1. 26.

V. 11. Then shall the children of Judah] To wit, after the captivity of Babylon, when the Jews were restored: but chiefly this is referred to the time of the Messiah, who should be acknowledged and accepted for the head of his Church, by Judah and Israel joyned, and Gentiles united to the Church, Rom 11. 12, 15, 25. 2 Cor. 5. 16. See Esay 11. 13. Jer. 3. 18. Ezek. 37. 16, 22, 24.

come up out of the land] Upon Cyrus his grant the Jews shall appoint them Zorobabel, and return from Chaldea into Judea; and many Israelites, in banishment, shall separate themselves from the world, and go up (in expectation of the heavenly kingdom) to build Jerusalem, and so go on in the way to the kingdom of heaven. See Jer. 23. 8. Psal. 110. 3. This was the beginning of their instauration. Their captivity should not hinder the accomplishment of this Promise in the former verse; but the coming up thence should serve as a Type of their spiritual collection to and under Christ. He phraseth this as with an eye to that Type.

day of Jezreel] Though the calamity and destruction of Jezreel shall be so great, that to restore them, shall be as a miracle; yet that shall not hinder their reduction an instauration. Others thus; that time will be admirable, by reason of the gathering together of the Israelites, which before seemed rather to be Jezreel (that is, a people disperſed by God) then an Israel. See Luk. 19. 42. Phil. 2. 11. Isa. 33. 6.

CHAP. II.

Verſ. 1. SAy] God chargeth the godly children to plead against her in their dreadful manner. And thereafter are eſt-soons repeated; their sins, and his judgments: with promiſes, at the last, of their conversion; and of his manifold mercies, corporal and spiritual; to be vouchsafed thereupon: so that the peoples Idolatry, and Gods punishments against the impenitent, and his promises to the penitent, are all here more fully and clearly held out, then in the former Chapter.

ye] Thou Hosea, and other Prophets, present, and to come, and all other believers among this People, do not yet hold them as altogether rejected, to leave them to their own lusts; but call them to repentance, setting before them what is the duty of Gods people, signified by Ammi, that is, my people, towards God, signified by Ruhamah, that is, my people, towards those, to whom God hath not shut up the bowels of his mercy, which which is signified by Ruhamah. And thus also he exhorts the faithful, that they invite and encourage one another, to embrace and receive the glorious promises last mentioned, and to a mutual congratulation among them for the same. And such is the duty of the godly, to exhort, comfort, and admonish, strengthen, edifie one another.

unto your brethren] Of the house of Israel, not yet altogether forsaken.

Ammi] That is, my people; that yet they are, or may be such; behaving them, as my people. Some thus, O ye that are yet my people, plead; as it is, ver. 2.

sisters] Every one of them, bespeak them thus.

Ruhamah] That is, having obtained mercy. See on Ammi: The like here.

V. 2. plead] Reprove the Body of your Nation openly, 1 Tim. 5.20. plead freely, boldly, and constantly. This command may reach to the best among them, and such as were the most zealous: yea, and to the wicked Israelites, who as grosse hypocrites use to do, are ready to excuse and justifie them; and to charge God with too much rigour and severity against them, in so rejecting them.

with your mother] The whole body of the people. Blame not me, but her: the first brake the Covenant, Thus he shews, that God did justly cast them off; and because as yet they repented not, that it was needful thus roughly again to deal with them, till they altered their course. And hence it is, that God, in Scripture, so often mixeth threatnings with his promises.

Plead] The Reception shews, their obstinacy in sin, their continuing still in murmuring still against God for this his too much severity against them: and also the necessity of this duty here to be performed with all care and courage.

not my wife] She doth not keep her Faith which she hath promised me: and I have already good cause to put her away, which I forbear to do through my great patience. Others say, God sheweth that the fault was not in him, but in their Synagogue, and their Idolatries, that he forsook them, Esay 50. 1. The children then might thank their mother, and her whoredomes, and not contend and expostulate the matter with God, who did his part of a husband; but not the the part of a wife.

put away] Ezek. 16. 25. Let her dispose her self to true chastity, and spiritual purity, using no more lascivious baits, and practices, to draw prosane Nations on to trade with them in their Idolatries. See Jer. 2. 33. & 4. 30. This God would be at, to convict her, and bring her to this amendment.

from between her breasts] Alluding, in this phrase, to unchaste women, and adulteresses, who set out their breasts to allure lovers. See also Ezek. 23. 3. 21.

V. 3. Lest I strip] Lest I take away from her all my graces, bodily and spiritual, and bring her to extream misery. See Ezek. 16. 39. & 23. 26, 29. For though this people were as an harlot for their Idolatries, and had lost the name of a wife, yet he had left them with their apparel and dowry, and some signes of his favour; but if they went on still, he would utterly deform them, ver. 9—13. Though this be sore against her, yet it somewhat mitigates the former sentence, and leaves open a door of hope for her pardon upon repentance.

as in the day] Ezek. 16. 4. when I brought her out of Egypt: Minds her of her nakednesse then, to abate her pride, and upbraid her unthankfulnesse: and we should remember what originally we are.

as a wilderness] The article prefixed, seems to point at that wilderness, wherein they wandred 40 years.

slay her with thirst] With the scorching heat of my wrath, not tempered with any grace or comfort, Jer. 2. 15. Ezek. 22. 24. Amos 8. 11, 13. drought and famine are often named for signes of Gods anger, and of the barrennesse of grace. And waters are often used to signifie plenty of divine blessings; as Esay 55. 1. John 4. 14. & 7. 38.

V. 4. And I will not have mercy] Though by vertue of the promise before mentioned, there should come to this people a state of grace in its due time; yet for the present their state was horribly vile, and wicked, & they yet nothing humbled for it, which makes him go on in these dreadful comminations, and fearful dooms against them; as was that, Chap. 1. 6. Ezek. 5. 11. & 7. 4, 9. Jer. 13. 14.

upon her children] Upon the particular members of this people. By children he understands each of them severally; as by the mother, the whole body of them generally. And here he applies the general commination to them more particularly, the better to work upon them.

for they be children of whoredomes] As the mother is, such are the children; that is, bastards, having no part in the regeneration of the heavenly Father, to holinesse of life; being altogether corrupted like their mother. See Joh. 8. 44. yet this chiefly relates to the refractory reprobates amongst them.

V. 5. For their mother] The reason of their former threatnings: or he shews how the children were children of whoredomes.

harlot] With forreign gods, and idolatrous Nations, forgetting the matrimonial Covenant between God and her: and that shamefully and impudently, with a Whores forehead. And yet still they will boast of their adoption, and needs be accounted the children of God in their own esteem, because once they were so.

for] Shews how the plaid the harlot.

she said] Upon meditation and consultation resolves, and upon resolution protesteth thus to do.

I will go] As they, Jer. 44. 16, 17.

after my lovers] False gods, and their false worship; corrupting and forsaking the true worship of the true God. In a subordinate way, the Assyrian, and Egyptian may also be understood; that give me my bread] Ver. 8. 12. Jer. 42. 17. Thus Idolaters ascribe that to their Idols, which of right belongs to the true God. See that, Judg. 16. 23. And they think that God loves them, because they abound in wealth.

drink] Heb. drinks.

V. 6. Therefore, behold] God shews how necessary these his judgments were; no other remedy appeared.

I will] God himself will be the author of it; though they would not see, nor acknowledge so much.

hedg up thy way] Adulteresses covet to wander abroad; But I will watch and bar up thy ways, that thou shalt not so freely and securely, as before, follow thy whoredomes. I will punish thee, that thou mayest try, whether thine Idols can help thee; and I will include thee, and encompasse thee with difficulties, and bring thee into such distresse and straitnesse, that thou shalt not be able to run out at thy own pleasure. See Job 3. 23. & 19. 8. Lam. 3. 7, 9. He changeth the person twice in this verse.

make a wall] Heb. wall, a wall: by inflicting calamities and judgements.

her paths] To play the harlot hereafter with them: my judgements shall crosse her therein.

V. 7. follow after] A wondrous obstinacy, and a mad rage, to be thus eager in the pursuit of their sins, even in the midst of Gods judgements upon them for the same: which shews, that God was not too rigorous in punishing, when he so little prevailed by them. She shall then seek for favour and ayd at their hands, but all in vain; they shall all forsake her, and change their ancient love into mortal hatred, Jer. 2. 36. Ezek. 16. 37.

return to my first husband] Namely, to God. This is spoken of the elect remnant; they, at last, shall be tamed, changed, and repent. Thus needful were chastisements for them, and profitable to them, Esay 26. 9. & 27. 9. Thus God seconded his rods with his saving grace; in the midst of anger, remembred mercy. But the rest murmured at, and hardned them: against his judgements, were the worse for them.

V. 8. For she did not know] Prodigious ignorance; The Scriptures every where teaching her otherwise, that it is God, and not Idols, that gives these blessings. And that she should not be ignorant of it, aggravates the crime: Lesse marvail, though Heathen nesse to their Idols.

which they prepared for Baal] Or, wherewith they made Baal; In making of Idols, or in serving and honouring of them. See 2 Chron. 24. 7. Ezek. 7. 20. & 16. 16. Hos. 8. 4. See on Hos. 13. 1. Baal signifies a Lord or Patrone. And such the Heathens had many; whom some called their lesser gods, as Mediators between the great God, and them; and such as did deal more immediately with men, and were procurers of these outward blessings and benefits here named, and called by other particular names; as Ceres, Bacchus, &c.

V. 9. return and take away] That is, take again: an usual Hebraism; like that, Gen. 26. 18. signifying, that God will take again his benefits, when man, by his ingratitude, doth abuse them. They thought their prosperity, in the abundance of Gods blessings, warranted what ever they did. It was time then to take them away.

my corn] Not theirs, nor their Idols: and they shall know it to be mine, ver. 5, 8.

in the time thereof] Namely, at the time which I have appointed: or, in harvest and vintage time, I will take away her increase of corn and wine; which may be done, by curbing the earth, that none or little fruit should arise: or, not letting it answer their labour and expectation: or, by bringing in the enemies at that time of the year to take the harvest to help them, and to hurt the inhabitants; as Ezek. 23. 29. or, by some other means.

recover] Or take away violently, what they unjustly possesse and abuse.

my wall] Relating to that which followeth.

to cover her nakedness] For her necessary use; and not trim and deck her Idols withall; as the Heathen basely abused these good gifts.

V. 10. And] He pursues the same point, and parcels it out in several members.

now] Soon and suddenly. The evils named before, he saith, he will presently bring upon them; thereby the more to move and provoke them to repentance.

I will

I will discover] See Ezek. 16. 37. & 23. 29.

her lewdnesse] Heb. folly, or, villany. That is, all her service, ceremonies, and inventions, whereby she worshiped her Idols.

in the sight of her lovers] All her hopes she had in her Idols, and hopes also in the Assyrians, and Egyptians shall likewise fail her.

and none shall] For who shall resist me? Thus God would cut off all the hopes and vain confidence she had in her false worship, and false friends, wherein she so much pleased and soothed up her self.

V. 11. All her mirth to cease] Her mirth in her Festivals, Deut. 16. 14. which are therefore called the days of their gladnesse, Num. 10. 10. wherein they had the sounding of trumpets, and the noise of other musical instruments, and melodious voyces and songs in the Temple, Amos 5. 23. and 8. 10.

her feast days] He seems to shew that there shall be such want of all things by famine, or war, or otherwise, that sacrifices shall fail in their festival days; when they used publikely to rejoyce; and these were observed among the ten Tribes, in imitation of those of Judah, 1 King. 12. 32. Or rather in their exile, and extirpation they shall want all these, Chap. 9. 4, 5. The three great anniversary Feasts of the Passeover, Weekes, and Tabernacles are meant.

New Moons.] See Num. 28. 11. and 10. 10. and 29. 6. 1 Sam. 20. 5. 1. Chron. 23. 31. 2 Chron. 8. 13. and 31. 3. Ezra 3. 5. Nehemiah 10. 33.

solemn feasts] As those other, Lev. 23. 24, 27.

V. 12. destroy] Heb. make desolate.

she hath said] The cause of such severe judgement is repeated, that Gods justice may be commended: and that is double, because they defrauded God of his honour, and because they gave the glory due to God, unto false gods.

my rewards] Price, & hire her for her whoredoms. The blessings bestowed on her for her superstitious and idolatrous worhipings. See Mic. 1. 7. and Ezek. 16. 31. 33, 34.

a forrest] Ver. 3. See Esay 5. 5, 6. Lev. 26. 31. Jer. 22. 6. Ezek. 5. 14. Joel 1. 7. Zeph. 2. 13, 15. The LXX wrongly read a Witnesse, omitting Jod, and changing Resh into Daleth.

V. 13. visit] They shall see I will not forget them, but visit them; as Chap. 1. 4 & 4. 9. and 8. 13.

the days of Baalim] V. 8. Thus God points, as it were, with the finger, to their grand sin, their spiritual whoredom; so displeasing to him, that he cannot endure it, but plague them for it. And all their Idols he calleth here by the name of Baalim, in the plural number; as they were accounted of by them, their Lords and Patrons.

burnt incense] And sacrifices: for so large is the signification of the word here used; as may appear, Lev. 1. 9. and 3. 15. where the same word is found. God commanded this service to be done to him, Lev. 2. 2, 9. Exod. 30. 1. This the Israelites used and imitated in their Idolatrous worship, Ezek. 8. 11. and for the most part, all Idolaters do the like, turning so Gods worship to their Idols; and Papists burn incense before their images.

decked her self] A term taken from lascivious women, which deck themselves for to allure men; whereby is meant the Israelites prosane pomps in their Idolatries. They adorn themselves in bravery, in their idol-services; and as themselves, so their idols too: and Papists come not behind them in decking their images.

lovers] See on ver. 5, 10.

forgat me] Though she had been acquainted with Me and my Word so long, and accustomed to my service, yet now she forgat Me, and all: but I will not forget her, to visit and plague her for it.

V. 14. Therefore] Afterwards, affuredly in the end.

behold] A remarkable mercy, calls them to view it, and weigh it, as if it were a matter in present possession.

I will allure her] As kind husbands use to do; not as her adulterous Lovers formerly did: By my benefits in offering her grace and mercy, I will do it, seeing she will not, or cannot, return of her self. And this even then, and in that place, where she shall think her self destitute of all help and comfort: I will challenge her mind sweetly. God is the Authour of mans conversion, makes him pliant and flexible. Here is a gracious promise of Gods rich and manifold mercies to her, both spiritual, and temporal, continued all along to the end of this Chapter: alluding thereto to Gods former mercies, in bringing her out of Egypt, through the wilderneslie, into the good land of promise. See the like, Esay 11. 16. like that in the Poet, Allevit tum Typhin & altera quæ vehat Argo, &c.

and bring her into the wilderness] I will gather her unto me, bringing her home from her banishment through many miseries, as I brought my people of Canaan through the wilderneslie. Some thus, after I have brought her into the desert of desperation, Mean afflictions would not do the turn; extreme, and almost desperate ones, must be used: and in their due time these severe chastisements should prove profitable, and be useful remedies for her recovery, and fit her to hear any comfortable voyce in the Gospel.

V. 15. her vineyards] Plenty of all things, and store of all blessings temporal: which may also mystically relate to b'essings spiritual. They shall see, in effect, and by experience, the favour and bounty of my reconciliation with them. Before I had said, ver 12. I will destroy her vines: now upon my grace, and their conversion, I say the contrary.

from thence] From the head of the wilderneslie. The meaning is, as my people coming out of the wilderneslie, entred into a most fruitful Countrey: so mine elect coming out of extream spiritual misery, shall enjoy mine abundant blessings. Others, translate it, from that time, meaning of her conversion.

and the valley of Achor] As the valley of Achor was to the Israelites, Josh. 7. 24, 26. Esay 65. 10. It was a most fruitful place, at the entrance of the country, so soon as they were come over Jordan; and by it are meant, the first favours which God bestowed upon his, when they entred into the Church; which are to them certain pledges of the increase and accomplishment of them.

for a door of hope] To open their hope; as Hierome, and Theodotion have it, and the whole territory of Jericho, though Achan there troubled Israel, Josh. 7. yet was to the Israelites, a door and entrance into the land of Canaan; and, as a key, opened the door of their hope, and was an earnest and pledge that they should speedily possesse it all; such shall my blessings be to my people upon their conversion.

sing] For joy of heart: sing songs of Praises and Thanksgiving: sing with Responds, as the word signifieth.

there] This may allude to that singing at vintage, Esay 16. 10. Judg. 9. 27.

Of her youth] She shall then praise God, as she did when she was delivered out of Egypt, Exod. 15. See Jer. 22. Ezek. 16. 60.

V. 16. And it shall be] The fruit of their repentance shall appeare and be conspicuous.

at that day] After those grievous afflictions, and upon my grace for her conversion.

Ishi] That is, my husband; knowing that I am joyned to thee by an inviolable Covenant. The people should be mindful of their conjugal Covenant with God, and abide in it. Conversion of heart, and amendment of life, ever go together.

Baali] That is my Lord. Baal, indeed, may signifie husband also, and is a name good in it self; but because this name had been prophaned, by being given to idols, the Lord, in a kind, forbids it; and meaneth, that all contagions and mixture of idolatry, should be cut off from his service: upon a like occasion is the word Ishi given, forbidden, Jer. 3. 4, 5. 3. 6.

V. 17. For I will take away] God expounds more fully what he had said last before.

the names] See Exod. 23. 13. Psal. 16. 4. Zach. 13. 2.

by their names] No idolatry shall once come into their mouth, but they shall serve me purely according to my word. The relicks of Idolatry are to be abolished, that nothing may hinder or retard us in the true and pure service of God, 1 Thess. 5. 22. See Micah 5. 13.

V. 18. in that day] See on ver. 16.

I will make] They shall be blessed and happy all manner of ways, in all manner of things.

a covenant for them with the beasts] See Job 5. 22, 23. Esay 11. 6, 8. Ezek. 34. 25. Psal. 91. 1, 6, 13. when God is reconciled to us, all his creatures shall favour us: God will reduce them to the rule of their first creation, to obey and serve us as they did Adam. As on the other side, they serve him, as his hoast, against us, Amos 5. 19. Joel 2. 11, 20. The meaning is, That God will so bless them, that all creatures shall favour them. A figurative description of the Churches spiritual peace, under the Gospel. For this prophecie extends it self to the Kingdom of Christ.

break the bow] Psal. 46. 9. Esay 2. 4. & 54. 17. Ezek. 39. 9. break their enemies, and their forces. And bring in all peace; including all earthly felicity.

safely] and securely, under the wings of Gods protection, Prov. 3. 26. Esay 12. 2. Psal. 91. 1.

V. 19. betroth thee] An honourable reception. I will forgive and forget thy former whoredoms, as if thou hadst never broken wedlock; I will take thee a new, as a pure Virgin, I will re-establish my covenant of grace with thee, not only to observe that faith which is required in all Covenants: but also to forgive thee thy sins; and not to take notice of thine unworthinesse, Psal. 121. 5.

for ever] That Matrimonial conjugal covenant was temporary, determinable, failable; This, firme and stable for ever.

in righteousness] Upon these terms and conditions following; in sincerity and integrity, without fraud or guile.

in loving kindness] My love, and mercies shall maintain this marriage.

V. 20. betroth thee] Thrice repeated, to shew the Zeal and constancy of God in making and maintaining this marriage. And to meet with the incredulity of the people, who out of feare and desperation, through their own guiltinesse, could hardly be perswaded that this was a thing credible.

in faithfulnesse] With an invariable fidelity and constancy to maintain my covenant of grace with mine Elect, notwithstanding all their defects. Zach. 8 8. Rom. 3. 3, 7. God performed his part in the former Covenant: The people broke. God here promiseth for both. See Jer. 31. 32, 33, 34. & 24. 7. & 33. 15. &c. Ezek. 36. 25, &c.

and thou shalt know the Lord] Jer. 31. 34. Joh. 6. 45. In the knowledge of whom our felicity doth consist, Jer. 9. 23, 24. Joh. 17. 3.

V. 21. In that day] See on ver. 18. He minds them still of Gods gracious covenant.

I will hear the heavens] These accessions shall find place, after God hath once betrothed us unto himself, Rom. 8. 32. Mat. 6. 33. As brown paper and packthred are given into the bargain, Zech. 8. 12. See on Hag. 1. 10, 11. and on Amos 4. 7. God is the father of rain, Job 38. 28. and 28. 26. & 5. 10. & 36. 27. & 37. 6, 11, 13. He will cause these earthly blessings to glide along with his spiritual blessings.

Hear the earth] The earth, when parched with drought, seems to open her mouth and crave for the rain of heaven.

V. 22. Hear the corn] The earth moistned by the heavens, shall vigorously nourish her fruits, for the sustenance and comfort of Gods people. He opposeth this, to that in the 9 verse.

Hear Jezreel] Men in extream necessity, do ragingly cry for, and call upon these blessings, corn, wine, &c. Though in themselves they are Jezreel, not Israel; yet God will thus prevent them with his favour and blessings. Others thus, The Word whereby Gods people had been called, by way of threatning and curse, chap. 1. 4. is here changed, in a meaning of Grace and Promise: For Jezreel may also signifie him, whom God soweth, or shall sow.

V. 23. I will sow her unto me] Here is an allusion to the word Jezreel, from the word זרע seed. This foretels the wondrous multiplication of the Church. See Jer. 31. 27. Esay 60. 22. Zech. 10 8, 9. as grain multiplieth, sowen in some rich and fat soil; as Gen. 26. 12. Mat. 13. 8.

and will have mercy] Notwithstanding that, vers. 6. & Chap. 1. 6, 7, 8, 9. yet he excepts a remnant, which shall thus marvellously multiply in the days of the Gospel chiefly, and in the kingdome of Christ. See Rom. 9. 26. 1 Pet. 2. 10.

upon her that had not] That is to say, My people, called by these names, Hos. 1. 8, 9, 10. notwithstanding that, vers. 6. yet here he promiseth to except a remnant.

I will say to them] Rom. 9. 26. 1 Pet. 2. 10.

CHAP. III.

Vers. 1. ¶ Then] The Prophet, by Gods command, loves and buyes an adultresse, and layes a charge upon her, to abide for him for many dayes. Thereafter applies this Type to Israel, to the long time of desolation in their State, Civil, and Ecclesiastical. And foretels their conversion and restauration afterwards.

Go] God here puts a case, propounds a picture, or image, before the eyes of his people, wherein they might behold their own state and condition. This serves for a sign, that God had often renewed his Covenant with his people, forgiving them their sins which were past: as in special under Jehu his reign, 2 King. 9. and 10 Chapters.

yet] This hath reference to that, Chap. 1. vers. 2. That hereby, God doth yet more plainly and fully represent the same thing, in effect, to their eyes, and senses, then formerly he did.

love] He doth not say, Take to thee for a wife. This must also be understood the same way, and in the same sense, as Chap. 1. 2.

a woman] To be espoused to thee first; not married, till a long time after, ver. 3. Chap. 1 5, 9. beloved of her friend] Her husband; or rather, some lover; as Jer. 3. 1. The LXX wrongfully read thus, Beloved being evil.

an adulteresse] False to him.

according to the love] The key and opening of the meaning of all this here commanded. This shewes the peoples shameleese sin and ingratitude; and Gods boundlesse goodness and mercy, that loves even his adulterous people, loves them, even when he doth severely chastise them.

children of Israel] So again named, ver. 4. & 5. The application of this Parable. Yet some understand this whole parable, not of Israel, but of Judah.

we look] Are vigilant, and seek eagerly after them, dote upon them. See Numb. 15. 39.

other gods] Such in their mad opinions; but such falsly, 1 Cor. 8. 5, 6. This is their adultery; they place their faith, hope, and love, in, and upon them.

flagons of wine] Heb. of grapes. Wine is called the blood of grapes, Deut. 32. 14. Idolaters in sacrifices used to feast, Judg. 9. 27. Amos 2. 8. 1 Cor. 10. 21. Or, hereby in general, he may intimate their dissolute manner of living, which is the ordinary companion of Idolatry: see Exod. 32. 6. 1 Cor. 10. 7. even as corporal fornication, draws gluttony and drunkennesse along with it. Idolatry and Epicurisme usually go together.

V. 2. So I bought her] Not I hired her; as the LXX have it, ἐμισθωσάμην; I bought her: I had no dowry with her, as husbands usually have. Or this may have relation to the ancient custom, by which husbands did bestow dowries upon their wives, or purchase them, Gen. 29. 18, 27. & 34. 12. 1 Sam. 18. 25. This may signifie the slavish condition wherein the Church is, till God doth redeem and purchase her. For slaves onely were bought and sold, Esay 43. 24. Eph. 5. 26.

for fifteen] Fifteen shekels; That is, one pound seventeen shillings six pence. This was the valuation of him that was above sixty years old, Lev. 27. vers. 7. The Homer of Barley, or the land of an Homer, whose rate was fifty shekels, Lev. 27 ver. 16. was his value that was between 20 and 60. vers. 3. But this Text hath little or no reference to that place. See Ezek. 45. 11, 12. and the Annotator there, and Exod. 16. 36. and on Exod. 21. 32.

half homer] Heb. bethech. Likely all this was but a base price. But haply we may be too curious after such inquisitions.

V. 3. abide for me] Sit down for me; as this word is used, Exo. 24. 14. That is, stay and wait, and expect; abide unmarried, till fit time shall come for me to take thee to wife. See Deut. 21. 13. Or I will separate thee from me for some time; keeping thee, as it were, shut up, to hinder thy unfaydnesse; until I take thee to me again, as I intend to do, not putting thee away for ever. I will try so whether thou will seriously and sincerely repent; and neither marry another, nor commit adultery with a lover, as it after follows.

so will I] He abandons the body of the people, Chap. 1 9. He speaks here to the Elect remnant. There he shews his justice; Here his mercy, and the constancy of his love towards them; that no unworthinesse of theirs shall break it off. As the shall abide for him, so he will abide, and be bound and found faithful to her. She shall not wait in vain, neither without good cause why.

V. 4. the children of Israel] The explication, and application of the type. By this figure, I will have thee to set forth the state of thy people; which for their idolatries shall be separated from the grace and communion of their God: without any, kingdome or form of Common-wealth; and without any exercise of Religion, unlesse of Idolatry; until the time of their conversion to God by the Gospel.

many dayes without a king] From the sixth year of Hezekiah's reign, when Salmanesser carried away the ten Tribes, until Christ by his Death and Resurrection, conquered the enemies of mans salvation, and was constituted the King of his Church, were years 675, or thereabout. Some yet understand this of Judah, and their captivity in Babylon.

and without a sacrifice] The Israelites did imitate the worship at Jerusalem.

image] Heb. a standing, or statue. See 2 King. 17. 1.

ephod] The name of a Priestly garment, Exod. 28. 4, 40. Under which is comprehended all the service of the Church. There was one for the High Priest, most curious and costly, Exod. 28. 6. &c. And another sort for the rest of the Priests, Exod. 28. 40. called coats, and linnen ephods, 1 Sam. 22. 18. Besides the Linnen breeches mentioned, Exod. 28. 42.

Teraphim] Exod. 28. 4. Gen. 31. 19, 30. Judg. 17. 5. & 18. 14, 17, 18, 20. They shall want, both Kingdom and Priesthood; Church and Polity, wherein they trusted; they shall be without any form of Religion, right or wrong; that they might see their misery, and learn to flye to, and rely upon, Gods mercy.

V. 5. Afterward shall] Now they run headlong after their idolatries. But after so long, & so many miseries and judgements, they should surcease and abandon that course. And therefore they should the more patiently undergo those chastisements, for the good and benefit they should reap by them.

return] Repenting; as the sequel shews.

and seek] That they may be safe under his Regal power and protection.

the Lord their God] Not their Baalims, or vain gods; but Jehovah the true Lord and their God, upon their repentance.

and David their king] The Messias, Davids son according to the flesh. See Jer. 30. 9. Ezek. 34. 23, 24. & 37. 24. Mat. 9. 27. Apoc. 22. 16. In whom Davids Kingdom according to promise, was eternal, Psalm. 72. 17. And thus the learned Jews themselves expound this place.

fear the Lord] Psal. 2. 11. and in reverence make haste unto him. So Chap. 11. 11.

and his goodnesse] This is a filial fear, and sure signe of Adoption, when we fear the Lord for his goodnesse sake.

in the latter dayes] Esay 2. 2. Heb. 1. 1.

CHAP. IV.

Vers. 1. ¶ Hear] This Chapter seems to be a new Sermon. And herein we have Gods controversie, in more particular manner, with the people and Priests of Israel. First, the peoples sins are reckoned up: and Gods judgments denounced for them. Then the Priests sins; and threatnings for them. Again, the the Peoples sins, their Idolatries and whoredomes are told, and threatned. And after that Judah is warned; Israel and Ephraim are yet again charged with sins and punishment. So that here are convictions of sins, and predictions of punishments, gone over again, and again.

the Lord] Because they would not obey the admonitions of the Prophet, he summons them before Gods tribunal, and shewes, God will plead his own cause, he will deal severely with them, and make it appear that he hath good reason so to do.

hath a controversie] a metaphor from Courts of Judicature; wherein parties contend in Controversies one with another. Here God takes upon himself the person of an adversary, to accuse and convict his people. See Chap. 12. 2. Esay. 3. 13. and 7. 13. Jer. 25. 31. Micah 6. 1, 2. His controversie will not be verbal only; but likewise in deeds, judgments, and punishments. Thus the Prophet intermixeth Threatnings, and Promises: Formerly giving hopes of mercies, left they should despair; and now again returns to Threatnings, left hypocrites upon his promises should presume, and sooth up themselves thereupon, without true conversion, and reconciliation with God. This controversie is the sum of the Chapter.

inhabitants] Whole body of the people; which fill the land.

of the land] Or this land, relating to Canaan; as the article prefixt doth seem to import. See Deut. 18. 9.

because there is] The causes of this controversie; the heads of the Indictment, or Bill of charge. He chargeth home; as Prophets use to do, and Preachers must, with such flagitious sinners. He begins with their sins against the second Table; because by them a sinner may be more easily convicted.

no truth] No sincerity, or fidelity, in heart, word, or deed.

nor mercy] Towards men, in their dealings one with another.

nor knowledge] as if there were no God in heaven, Psal. 14. 1. The true knowledge of God is the fountain of all piety, as the want of it is the well spring of all manner of sinne and iniquity.

V. 2. By swearing] Sinners are hardly brought to the fight and sense of their sins: and therefore he goes on, and brings their sins upon the stage, that they cannot deny them; and insists upon the sorts, numbers, and greatnesse of them; the more thereby to affect them. The words run in the Infinitive mood, to swear, &c. as in some other languages is usual. And the word to swear, signifieth properly to curse; as execrations are often joyned with oathes, Gen. 26. 28. and Chap. 5. 1.

they break out] Or all bounds and bands of all Laws of God and man; ragingly without any mean, or measure like the breakings out and inundations of waters; as Joel 3. 13.

toucheth blood] Heb. bloods. In every place appeareth a liberty to most hainous vices; so that one followeth in the neck of another. And the blood-Royal, of Zachariah, Shallum, Pekahiah, Pekah, being all slain, touched each other, 2 King. 15. There is a connexion and concatenation of capital crimes, all over, every where, no place left free.

V. 3. land mourn] a description of an extreme and universal desolation, as Jer. 4. 25. and 12. 4. Thus by deeds God contends with them. The Land shall bear the marks of Gods wrath, being left desolate and void of her Inhabitants.

with the beasts] These creatures were made for the use of man. And here he is punished in them: as if in detestation of some flagitious person one should overthrow his house, and burn all the houshould-stuff was in it. This here is an hyperbolical expression. The LXX adde here, and with the creeping things of the land.

V. 4. yet let no man strive] Notwithstanding these great and publick sins, in which the false prophets do flatter and sooth up the people, let not the true Prophets, nor any good man, (for it would be all in vain, and labour lost, Mat. 7. 6. Ezek. 3. 26.) profane my word, by speaking it to those obstinate and hardened rebels: I will contend with them by effects, and punishments, and no more by words and reproofs. So this agreeth with what was spoken, ver. 1. See Gen. 6. 3. and that, Amos 5. 13.

strive with the priests] Sin with an high hand, presumptuously: as guilty, as those that withstand Gods right and power in the high Priest, Deut. 17. 12. See Num. 16. They will endure no reprover: which is the last degree of desperate boldnesse. See Rom. 2. 8. and 10, 21. The despaireteesse of their disease in sinning, will not endure the plaister; they will strive with, and resist the Physician; oppose them, and their office, whom God hath set over them for this very purpose: If they handle their sores roughly, they will fly out upon them. See Jer. 18. 18, & 15, 10, & 20, 2, 7, & 26, 8, 11. and 29. 26, 27. Amos 5. 12 and 7. 10——14.

V. 5. Therefore] Thus again God will contend with blowes, Sin shall not passe without its punishment.

shalt thou] Every one of you. He directeth his speech to each particular person among the people.

fall] Chap. 13. 16. and 14. 1. Jer. 6. 15. and 8. 12. Prov. 11. 5.

in the day] Even at noon day: openly in the sight of all. Some translateit, to day, that is, within a short time.

and the Prophet] The false prophet.

shall fall with thee] Follow in his order, and accompany thee, in thy punishment.

in the night] Presently, as the night succeedeth the day, and in a continued series and succession are joyned together.

thy mother] Samaria, or the whole body of the Kingdome: or the Church; in whose name they pride themselves: as the Papists do at this day. The vulgar Latin translates thus, nolle facere fieri matrem tuam. The LXX νυκτὶ ὁμοίωσα τὴν μητέρα σου. Both mis-joyning night (which yet hath an Athnach upon it) to the words following: And the LXX reading ודמיתי for דמיתי

V. 6. My people] God here begins to fall upon the Priests; and chargeth them with sloth, and ignorance; and that by their default, not doing their duty in teaching, his people perished for want of instruction and knowledge, Mat. 15. 14. Ezek. 33. 6. Prov. 29. 18. Esay 5. 13.

because thou hast rejected] Their chief duty is to teach and instruct, Lev. 10. 11. Deut. 33. 9, 10. Mal. 2. 7. 2 Chron. 17. 8, 9. And therefore they themselves must not be without knowledge. But the Priests of the Israelites, of the Ten Tribes, of whom here he speaketh, did reject this knowledge in an high degree.

forgotten] This may be understood either of the Priests, or people, or both together; For the Prophet is quick and concise, speaks sometimes in his own person, anon in Gods person; sometimes to the people, straight to the priests, and quickly to the people again. And likely the people willingly would forget the Law, and not have the threatnings of it still thundering in their ears; they were well contented with such Idol, and idle Priests, and dumb dogs that could not, or would not bark. The knowledge of the Law of God made mainly against priests and people of the ten Tribes.

I will also forget] Thee, and thine; thy self, and thy posterity they shall not be remembred, nor reckoned in my Covenant.

V. 7. as they were increased, so] Namely, in dignity and authority; so referring this to the Priests. Or if we refer it to the people, then, as they were increased in number, riches, and all manner of Blessings, so they took the more liberty and boldnesse to sin against God. Which argues the more their ingratitude, and impiety against him.

therefore will I change] It is Gods doing; the enemies were but Gods instruments. The Targum thus; they have changed.

their glory] Their prosperity wherewith they made themselves drunk, and wherein they so gloried, Phil. 3. 19. Or rather, understanding it of the Priests, their priestly Prerogatives wherein they glorified, should be turned to their shame, Mat. 1. 9, 10. and 2. 2, 3, 9.

V. 8. They eat up] They fatten themselves with the sacrifices which my people offer for their sins, and are greedy after them; & take no care of their conversion, but rather willingly suffer them to multiply their sins, & foster them therein for the fat sacrifices sake.

the sin] Sacrifices for sin, Exod. 29. 14.

set their heart on their iniquity] Heb. lift up their soul to their iniquity. Deut. 24. 15. Jer. 22. 27. The priests hearts are set on it, and glad at it, at the peoples sins and iniquity. And the peoples hearts, and souls are set on, and lifted up to their iniquity, hearttned to it, and hardned in it, by the priests meanes; perswaded by them, as if their consciences were discharged, and themselves quit of the guilt of their sins, by those very sacrifices; and therefore relying upon the virtue and efficacy of them, they might sin the more freely and boldly. Thus the covetousnesse of the priests corrupted the right end and use of the sacrifices; and turned them to the clean contrary.

V. 9. like people, like Priest] Esay 24. 2. signifying, that as they have sinned together, so shall they be punished together, without any difference or respect had of their office. The priests should not onely be spoyled of their honour, and made to differ in nothing from the common people, but both should undergo the same common Judgment; both punished, as after followeth. The Priests of and among the Israelites were no true priests indeed, neither in descent, nor doctrine, ver. 6. But yet that account and reputation they had among them, as supposed to be such, they should lose it also.

punish them] Heb. visit upon. See on Chap. 8. 4.

reward them their doings] Heb. cause to return, Chap. 12. 2. Jer. 32. 19. Esay 65. 6. Prov. 24. 12. Psal. 94. 23. 2 Chr. 6. 23.

V. 10. For they shall eat] Lev. 26. 26. Hag. 1. 6. Micah 6. 14. Not meat, but Gods blessing, is the sustenance of man, Mat. 4. 4. Though the priests eat the sin of the people, ver. 8. yet they shall not be satisfied, Ezek. 7. 19. Quo plus sunt pota plus sitiuntur aquæ.

commit whoredom and shall not encrease] The vulgar Latine thus; They have committed whoredome, and ceased not. The LXX, ἐπ' ἀδικίᾳ ἐπόνεσαν; shall not be directed, or righted. The true meaning is, according to the true Hebrew, to shew that their wickedness shall be punished on all sorts and sides; for though they think by the multitude of wives, or whoredome, to have many children, yet they shall be deceived of their hope, Chap. 9. 14. In vain do sinners seek and hope to obtain their desires by unlawful means. because to take heed to the Lord] Zech. 11. 11. and to his word and worship, Jer. 2. 13, 17. and 5. 7. and 9. 13. and 16. 11. Esay 1. 4.

V. 11. whoredome] The LXX, as now we have it, do much alter and corrupt the true reading, and meaning of this verse, and of the 12, 14, 15, 17, 18, 19. verses following. The vulgar Latine, much better. The meaning of this 11. verse is, That their abundance makes them run into all riot, in carnal sinfull pleasures.

take away the heart] ver. 12. So drown them, and make them drunken, that they become like brute beasts; deprive them of the use of common sense and reason; and have not the hearts of men, to heed the Lord, and his Judgments against their sins, either threatned to come, or though presently inflicted upon them, Prov. 23. 33.

V. 12. My people] Thus he speaketh by derision, in calling them his people, which now for their sins they were not. Or this aggravateth their sin, that being his people, at least in profession, they should thus fall to Idolatry. The LXX thus, The heart of my people embraceth whoredome, and wine, and new wine. So, joyning my people, to the former verse.

ask counsel] Instead of seeking after Gods Oracle, to have Counsel given them in difficult cases.

at their stock] Or, block; Namely, their Idols; made of wood, Jer. 2. 27. and 3, 9. Esay 40. 20. and 44. 14——18. He calls them thus in way of greater detestation, and to shew their greater madnesse and brutishnesse.

their staffe] Pointing at their madnesse again. Some think he hath relation to an ancient manner of divining by staves and rods; and hold that here are meant the rods of the South-sayers and Magicians; so Oecol. Exod. 7. 12. Others, that this is spoken by way of Irony and derision; as Esay 40. 18, &c. And is as much as if a blind man should ask counsel of his staffe.

the spirit of whoredomes] Namely, the inclination and affection unto Idolatry; which is spiritual whoredome, kindled in the heart of man by the evil spirit: See Esay 44. 20. The vehement and impetuous motions and commotions of the minde, are called in Scripture by the name of spirits; so the spirit of jealousie, Num. 5. 14. the spirit of lying, 1 King. 22. 22. a spirit of perversities, Esay 19. 14. a spirit of slumber, or deep sleep, Esay 29. 10. And so a spirit of uncleannesse, of errour, of giddinesse. In all which the evil spirit the devil, hath a working hand.

them] Not in the Hebrew, but understood, as Chap. 2. 7.

from under their god] Chap. 1. 2. from after their god; withdrawing their due subjection from him.

V. 13. They sacrifice] This shewes the kind of their whoredome to be Idolatry. They pretended a good intention; and great zeal in their manner of worship. But that salves not the sore. God declares this to be spiritual whoredome.

upon the tops] Idolaters usually delight in high places, there to perform their worships. And hence we have so often mention of high places; as 1 King. 3. 2, 3. and 12. 31, 32. and 15. 14. & 22. 44. 2 King. 12. 3. & 15. 4, 35.

of the mountaines] Isa. 1. 29. & 57. 5, 7, 9. Ezek. 6. 13.

incense] See on Chap. 2. 13.

hills] Ezek. 20. 28. Jer. 13. 27. & 2. 20. 2 King. 17. 10.

under oakes] Esay 1. 29. & 57. 5, 7. Ezek. 6. 13.

the shadow] Because of the greatnesse of the trees and leaves; they yeelded the more shade from the bright light, and scorching heat of the Sun in those hot climates. This there is a shew and shadow of humane wisdome in this part of their will-worships, as Col. 2. 23. But all this was against Gods expresse Law, that commanded the place for sacrifice to be the Altar onely in the Court of the Temple at Jerusalem, Deut. 12. 1——7. 2 King. 18. 22. Neh. 10. 34. And yet they did not stick to glory in their shame, in exceeding and excelling the Jewes in the numerous multitudes of their Altars, and places of worship, Chap. 12. 11.

Therefore your daughters shall] Because they take away Gods honour, and give it to Idols, therefore he will give them up to their lusts, that they shall dishonour their own bodies, Rom. 1. 28. See Amos 7. 17.

V. 14. I will not] Or, shall I not?

punish your daughters] Punish those shameful sins in them; but let them run headlong in those bad courses, God will not vouchsafe his restraining grace; but deliver them up to their own vile lusts. See Gen. 20. 6. Rom. 1. 24, 26, 27, 28. And so vindicate and revenge himselfe, and his glory, 1 Sam. 2. 30. By the other reading, God will most surely punish them, Heb. 13. 4.

nor your spouses] Or, daughters in-law. The word signifieth both.

commit adultery] Some understand this of their ravishment by force; as enemies use in sacking of cities. And so likewise they take that place, Amos 7. 17.

for themselves are separated with whores] They separate themselves from me, cut themselves from my covenant and communion, by joyning themselves to harlots, which were excommunicated from amongst Gods people, Prov. 2. 16. & 6. 24. See of this separation, Prov. 18. 1. Ezek. 14. 7. Hos. 9. 10. Jude 19.

sacrifice with harlots] Like that, Numb. 25. 1, 2, 3. Thus they defiled themselves with carnal and spiritual pollutions.

that doth not understand] ver. 6. Their ignorance shall not excuse them; they are willingly ignorant, and blindfold themselves.

shall fall] See on ver. 5. Fall, both into sin and punishment.

V. 15. though thou Israel] Less marvel though the Israelites did so; being brought to it, and accustomed in it, even since the dayes of the first Jeroboam; neer two hundred years ago.

yet let not Judah offend] God turneth his speech to Judah, willing them, that by the example of Israel they do not sin, by whoredoms, in worshiping Idols. Dangerous it was to Judah, to have such, and so neer a neighbour, as Idolatrous Israel was. We are apt to receive contagion that wayes, 1 King. 11. 2. Judg. 3. 6, 9. which made God so often, and carefully forewarn his people against the like insections by the Canaanites, Deut. 7. 3, 4. Exod. 34. 15, 16. As here he doth, against the like danger by the Israelites. See Chap. 6. 11.

Gilgal] This was neer Jordan, the East border of Jericho; not far from mount Gerizim, & Ebal, and Ai, and the valley of Acor. There Joshuah pitched the twelve stones; & circumcised the people, whence he named the place Gilgal: and there he kept the Passeover: See Deut. 11. 29, 30. & Josh. 4. and 5, Chapters. And this constant Camp was there, Josh. 9. 6. & 10. 6, 15, 43. And there he divided the land, Josh. 14. 6. There was the Tabernacle, and the Sacrifices. There they made Saul King before the Lord, 1 Sam. 11. 14, 15. There Samuel, in his circuit, kept Assizes, and hewed Agag in pieces before the Lord, 1 Sam. 7. 16. & 15. 33. After Jeroboam set up idolatry, there were in the dayes of Ahab and his sons, the Prophets Elias, and Eliseus, and a Colledg of Prophets in Gilgal; whose pottage Eliseus healed; and for whom he multiplyed the loaves, 2 King. 2. 1. and Chap. 4. 38, 41, 43. This became a famous high-place for idol-service and sacrifices; and so abominable. See Hos. 9. 15. and 12. 11. Amos 4. 4. and 5. 5. The LXX as now we have it, do much mis-read this verse, and in vertit.

Beth-aven] 1 King. 12. 29. is the same as Bethel, And of Bethel, See on Chap. 10. 15. But because Bethel signifies the House of God, Gen. 28. 17. and that this place had been prophaned by the Idolatry of the calves; the Prophets do often call it Beth-aven, that is to say, the house of an Idol, or the house of vanity, Hos. 5. 8. and 10. 5. Besides, that neer unto Bethel, there was another place, called Beth-aven, Josh. 7. 2.

nor swear] This form of oath is lawful; but not to be used by idolaters; as those were in the former words, God would not have his name in the mouth of idolaters. See Psal. 50. 16. nor would have his people to take the name of idols in their mouthes, Psal. 16. 4. nor must his people use it, as idolaters do. They pretended they did swear by the true God, when they sware by their calves, Amos 8. 14. for the ten Tribes did profess that they worshiped God, in them imitating Aaron, Exod. 32. 5. 2 King. 10. 16. which notwithstanding was reproved by God. God cannot endure it, to be joyned with idols, 2 Cor. 6. 15. Zeph. 1. 5. Ezek. 20. 39.

V. 16. For Israel slideth back] Deut. 32. 15. Zech. 7. 11. See Psal. 125. 5. and 78. 57.

as a lamb in a large place] Sheep are sociable. A Lamb being alone, by its bleating, bewrayes its fear and unquietnes, and its desire and seeking after the dam, and the flock, and shepherd, that it perish not. God will put Israel in that case. Israel was a wanton heifer; the whole field and pasture could not containe and content her. God would tame her, and make her as this Lamb. Seeing they have been so rebellious, and have loved liberty so well, I will grant it them, but to their ruine; like to the liberty of a Lamb in the wildernesse, where it would be exposed to a thousand dangers and miseries. Unless he threaten them with the desolation of the country, and with the small number which should remain in it.

V. 17. Ephraim] The ten Tribes, called by the name of their cheif City. Whence was the first, and the most of their Kings; and where their head City Samaria was. Thus usually is it taken, Esay 11. 13. and 7. 17. and 17. 3. Jer. 7. 15. and 31. 9, 20. Psal. 60. 7. and 108. 8. Hos. 6. 4. and 11. 8.

is joyned to idols] And that Tribe was the head-spring of all their idolatry, 1 Kin. 12. 28. Targum thus; They have permitted to themselves Idols. The LXX thus; They have set to themselves sacrifices, saith the LXX. thus.

Let him alone] A fearful dismission, that is, Thou Judah, or every Believer, have nothing to do with him; by conference of vet. 15. Others say, Such as are good amongst them, let them be separated from him to Judah, or some other faithful, 2 Cor. 6. 17. Or else, Let him be filthy still, Ezek. 20. 39. Apoc. 22. 11. Or, do thou Hosea for bear further to deal with him, by preaching to reclaim him: For it will not be, he will not be drawn away from his idolatry, All these do not so much differ, but that they might be conjoyned.

V. 18. Their drink is sowre] LXX. thus; ἡ μὴ ποτε κραιπαλωσι mis-reading חמרם for חמרם Targum thus; Their Princes multiply swearings with violence. Heb. is gone, dead, or stinks. A metaphor, or proverbial speech, to set out the filthy corruption of the people, in their lives and religion. They are so given to swilling and gluttony, that they belch out, and cast up stinking vomitings.

They

They so swill in drink, and ingorge themselves therewith, that over-charging their stomach, it grows sowre in it. They sin not in a common way, or keep any mean, or mediocrity in sinning; but so exceed, as they are past all shame altogether, Psal. 14. 3. Isa. 1. 22.

rulers] Heb. shields, Psal. 47. 9. The heads of the people; who should have remedied, and curbed those sins and sinners, and protect the people, do spoil them.

Give ye] Prov. 30. 15. They are so shamefully impudent in receiving bribes, that they will command men to bring them unto them: and so the Rulers base covetise of presents, disgraceth all the government; they make publike sale of justice and right: See on Micah 7. 3. The foresaid sins commonly follow idolatry. LXX thus, They loved shame by gifts.

V. 19. The wind] The denunciation of Gods judgements, and revenge upon them for their foresaid sins.

bath] Speaks of the time to come, as if it were already past and done, for the certainty of it.

bound her up in her wings] To carry them suddenly away, as it were, by a strong puffe of wind, or a storm. They shall be speedily carried away into Captivity, as if upon the wings of the wind. See the phrase, 2 Sam. 22. 11. repeated, Psal. 18. 10. See Psal. 1. 4. Ezek. 5. 3.

be ashamed because of their sacrifices] Seeing themselves fallen from the hope which they had conceived, of pleasing God by them; and deceived in the truft which they had put in them: or, they shall be disgraced; that is to say, they shall fall into extream misery and ignominy, through their Idolatries, Jer. 2. 26, 27. Esay 2. 20.

CHAP. V.

Vers. 1. HEar] This, and the two Chapters following, seem to belong to the same prophecie or Sermon. In this chap. are sins charged upon all, of all ranks in Israel: Their fall, and Judah's with them. And again are repeated, the sins of both: And Gods judgements against both. These in this verse, the Prophet calls for, and commands audience.

O Priests] Whose function was to teach and correct others, and be good examples themselves. Ecclesiastical persons in the first place are called upon.

O house of the King] Kings are not exempted from obedience to Gods Will and Word. Though they, of all others, will stand upon their priviledges and prerogatives. Nor can they exempt themselves from his judgements; whereof they are the more worthy, as abusing their high dignity, and trust; and hurting more then others, by their ill example. And this may be extended to all Magistrates, Officers, Ministers, and Counsellors of the King.

for judgement is toward you] Heb. for to you the judgement is. To you Priests, and Princes specially, who should have corrected and repressed others, and are the fountains of all evils your selves. The charge of teaching, and doing right and justice belongeth to you, and ye have been the chief authors of extortion & injury, as is said afterwards. Or, Judgment is coming upon you, Mal. 2. 1. as it specidily fell upon the house of Jeroboam, and his successors. Think not that ye can any wayes escape, and avoid it. Thus he summons and cites them to Gods tribunal. He will judge, and execute his judgements upon them.

a snare on Mizpah] Ye Priests and Princes have laid snares to intrap the innocent in their lives and goods: as theeves and robbers do for passers by, or followers do upon the hills of Mizpah, and Tabor. Mizpah signifieth a beacon or watch-tower, or place of spial and speculation, Gen. 31. 49. And there were divers places of this name; one belonging to the Tribe of Judah, Josh. 15. 38. another to Benjamin, Josh. 18. 26. another Mizpah of Gilead, Gen. 31. 49. Judg. 10. 17. & 11. 29. another of the Moabites, 1 Sam. 22. 3. This here seems to be neer Mount Hermon and Libanus, Josh. 11. 3. and watch towers are built on hills and mountains for the more spacious view and prospect.

Tabor] We read of a City of that name given to the Merarites out of the Tribe of Zebulun, 1 Chron. 6. 77. And of the plain of Tabor, where three men going up to God to Bethel, did meet Saul, 1 Sam. 10. 3. and of mount Tabor, Psal. 89. 12. Jer. 46. 18. whether Barack drew his army, Judg. 4. 6, 12, 14. and where Gideons brethren were slain by Zeba and Zalmunna, Judg. 8. 18. On these two mountains, it seems hunting and fowling were used; whence these similitudes are taken.

V. 2. And the revolters] Terms taken from such as are highway Robbers, which turn aside, or lie in ambush, and hidden places, for mens estates, and lives. Others take them for revolters from the right Religion of Judah at Jerusalem.

are profound] Deep, and deeply rooted in their own devices, wherein they please themselves, and think to delude and deceive God; and are obstinate in their own superstitions, and contemn and reject all counsel, advice, and admonitions, to reclaim them. Others rather, that they seek deep and secret hidden lurking places for to work their mischief, & have deeply engaged themselves; and made great progresse that way. So Chap. 9. 9. They have deeply corrupted themselves. And so Esay 31. 6. they have deeply revolted; that is, exceedingly.

to make slaughter] Some understand this of their sacrifices, here contemptuously called slaughter; as Esay 66. 3. But rather the literal meaning is to be embraced, as best agreeing with the context, that profundarent (ut ita dicam) jugulationem, were deep and very far gone in bloud and murder. And did it cunningly, that they might not be found out, and convinced of it, Chap. 4. 2. See such crafty and subtile oppressors set out in their colours, Psal. 10. 9, 10. Targum thus; they slay very many sacrifices to Idols.

a rebuker] Heb. a correction: that is, I that am the supream Lord, will look over, and correct their judgements, and make these false Judges give an account. I will be he that shall reprove and punish all these iniquities, Job 24. 16. Hos. 6. 9. Or this they did, though I did rebuke them by my Prophets, and labour their amendment; which takes away all excuse from them, and aggravates their crime: yet some would make the meaning this, And I have been rebuked of them all. Like that, Chap. 4. 4. & Lam. 3. 13. & Psal. 22. 6, 7. & 44. 14.

V. 3. I know Ephraim] They boasted themselves not onely to be Israelites, but also Ephraimites, because their King Jeroboam came of that Tribe. And that was the chief Tribe of the ten: and they pretended many colours & shews of excuses and defences for their pretended many colours & shews of excuses and defences for themselves, under which they thought to hide and shelter themselves. But all in vain. If they knew not themselves, yet God did know them, and tels them so, that his eyes could not be blinded with such smoaky shifts.

for now] The thing he knew. For all their shifts and shuflings, pretences and defences, they were yet in all their will-worship of their own devising, but whorish and filthy Idolaters, when they left the rule of the Word and Law of God.

V. 4. They will not frame their doings] Heb. They will not give. Or, their doings will not suffer them: or their works will not suffer them to be converted. The Prophet may be conceived to speak this, either in the Person of God, or in his own person. They are so drowned in their Idolatries and sins, so devoted to them, that they are past hope of amendment; so manicipated to them, that their minds will not give way to them, or they give their minds to return. No hope remains, as Chap. 4. 17. They think no ways of any reconciling, returning to God.

their God] That had been theirs by Covenant, and is by their profession; that had dealt with them as a gracious God, and was yet ready, upon their returning, to receive them.

for the spirit] Chap. 4. 12. They so please them: in their whorish wayes, the Devil hath so madded them, that now without all shame, as whores in publick shewes, they act their filthinesse.

not know the Lord] This is not to extenuate their fault, but amplifies it, That they have banished from them the true knowledg of the Lord; shut their eyes against it.

V. 5. And the pride] In contemning Gods will and word in his, and by his Prophets: proudly bearing out themselves against them, without fear, yea haughtily, scorning their reproofs. Some here would understand God himself to be called the pride and glory of Israel, as Amos 8. 7. And to like purpose would wrest those places, Nah. 2. 2. 2 Sam. 1. 19. as the Temple is called the excellency of Jacob, Amos 6. 8.

testifie] Needs no other witnesse. This their impudent boldnesse in sinning, and contemning of God, makes them notoriously guilty, and altogether inexcusable, Chap. 7. 10. Esay 3. 9. The others make God here to witnesse against them; as Ruth 1. 21. Job 10. 17. Micah 1. 2.

therefore] In vain they promise to them impunity.

Judah also] Mercy was promised to Judah, Chap. 1. 7. But this is spoken here of such degenerate Jews as fell off, and joyned themselves to the Israelites and their Idolatries.

V. 6. They shall goe with their flocks] To offer sacrifices. By them to seek counsel and help of God, and to win his favour. And they shall be studious and carefull in their sacrifices, Mic. 6. 7. And they trusted in, and by their sacrifices, to please and pacifie God. Thus men are apt to truft in outward rites, exercises of Religion, and secure-ly to rest there; which yet are but helps to faith in Christ, and re-pentance for sin: yea, many times they are the bolder to sin, when they think they have such means of expiation ready at hand; and have their good intentions with al, by those meanes to seeke the Lord.

But they shall not find him] All aforesaid is in vain altogether, while they remain sinners, continuing therein, Prov. 1. 28. Esay 1. 15. Jer. 11. 11. Ezek. 8. 18. Micah 3. 4. John 7. 34. & 9. 31. God mainly requires the heart and inner man; spiritual services and sacrifices. They abused the true end of the sacrifices, their outward services, though never so many, shall not serve their turn, and save them. God will forsake them, as ver. 15. Ezek. Chap. 10.

from them] From such a kind of seekers aud worshippers.

V. 7. treacherously] Like an adulterous woman which conceives and brings forth by others, more then by her husband, Jer.3.20. The meaning is, the peoples corruptneſſe ſheweth it ſelf in this; that publick orders ſerve for nothing, but to make them fitting for Idolatry, and not to turn and amend them. Treacherouſly breaking his Covenant, and proſtituting themſelves to Idols.

ſtrange children] Of ſtrange women; ſo mingling the holy ſeed with the Heathen: And thoſe likely brought up as ſtrangers to God, and his people, in the ſuperſtitions, and Idolatries of the Heathen. Contrary to that, Deut.7.3,4. Or elſe, children like themſelves, brought up by them in the ſame apoſtacy, and continuing in the ſame treachery, ſo that now it grows to be hereditary, and no hope is leftremaining; and I cannot call them my children, for the children of Abraham, but ſtrange children, Eph.2.12.

a moneth] their deſtruction is not far off, or a ſhort time will ſerve for to root them quite out. See Zach.11.8. 1 King.14.14. Or elſe moneth may be taken here, as Jer.1.24. and ſo,that their own deſperate diſſolutenеſſe and looſneſſe of life ſhall devour and conſume them, as it were, by piece-meal.

with their portions] As formerly out of Jer.2.24. Or, elſe, the portions of their wealths, and ſtrengths, their victuals, ammunitions, and fortifications.

V. 8. Blow ye the cornet] Here the Prophet, as an Herald from heaven, not a Prophet, proclaimeth war, ſeeing his former warnings and threatnings would not ſuffice. As God commanded Ezekiel to lay a ſiege, Ezek.4. That they may know, God threatned not in vain; but his executions ſhall follow his threatnings cloſe at the heel. The wicked counted the Prophets words but vain; but here God himſelf comes in ready armed, to take revenge.

in Gibeah] A repreſentation of the enemies ſudden coming: as it were by a ſignal given from theſe high places of Benjamin, which bordered upon the Kingdom of the ten Tribes, 1 King. 15.21,22. Gather Souldiers, prepare for defence; yet all ſhall not ſerve; neighbouring ſtrengths, ſhall be but a vain confidence. Of Gibeah, ſee on Chap.9.9.

in Ramah] There was Ramah in Naphtali, Joſh.19.36 And Ramah of Zophim, 1 Sam.1.1,19. where Samuel was born,dwelt, Judged Iſrael, dyed and was buried. And Ramah of Benjamin, Joſh.19.25. neer to Gibeah, Judg.19.13. 1 Sam.22.6. Eſay 10.29. and bordering upon Judah. There Rachel was buried, neer Bethlehem. Whence is that, Jer.31.15. Mat.2.18. And this ſeems to be meant in this place.

at Beth-aven] A city differing from Bethel, and ſituate between Ephraim, and Benjamin, Joſh.7.2. & 18.12. belonging to the Kingdom of Iſrael.

after thee, O Benjamin] The City of Beth-aven being a little beyond Benjamins Countrey. Or, thus, Benjamin and Judah after Ephraim and Iſrael, ſhould prepare themſelves to ſuffer the calamities of war.

V. 9. Ephraim ſhall be deſolate] Here deſolation, deſtruction, and devaſtation, is denounced; and that by reaſon of their deſperate and irrecoverable ſtate in ſin. And indeed the kingdom of the ten Tribes never recovered their eſtate again, after their deſolation by Shalmaneſer,2 King.17.

among the tribes of Iſrael have I made known] I do not ſuddenly, raſhly, or haſtily proceed to vengeance; but make it known before: Or thus, in the perſon of the Prophet, I have done my duty, and made known, among all the people, the wrath to come; as Ezek.33.38. ſo that the people may thank themſelves, if they will be wilfully blind and beſotted.

ſhall ſurely be] By the ſucceſſe, they ſhall ſurely know that I have determined this, which they ſlight as uncertain, if they be not careful, by timely repentance, to prevent it. And ſo he goes on to deal againſt both, to the end of the Chapter: This wrath and vengeance, is firmly and irrecoverably determined by God; not conditionally threatned, as moſt commonly it is; but they being deſperate in ſin without hope of repentance, it is preciſely and abſolutely decreed and denounced; ſo that none may conceit any hope of eſcaping it.

V. 10. The Princes of Judah] To them of Judah alſo, he was a Propher, Chap.1.1. And Judah was not free of ſin, though not ſo ſinful as Iſrael. And the Princes, they the fountains of all evil; Magnates, magnetes; they confounded all, that ſhould have kept all right and in order.

that remove the bound] They ſhould be as boundaries of land, to ſet and keep all things right and ſtraight. But they do violate all laws, which are the publike bounds of every ones right: and in their judgments do overthrow particular mens titles, concerning the lawful poſſeſſions of their goods. The haynouſneſſe of this crime appears, Deut.19.14. and Chap.27.17.

like water] Like a cloud, or deluge of waters, moſt abundantly; the greater ſhall my wrath and vengeance be againſt them.

V. 11. Ephraim] returns to the Iſraelites.

is oppreſſed] And preyed upon. As Judges 4.3. & 10.8.12.

and broken in judgment] By the abuſe of publick orders, and officers, and Gods hand of judgment in it.

becauſe he willingly walked] Juſtly for this cauſe; Becauſe he walked after the commandement and traditions of men; and that willingly, becauſe he better liked them, then Gods commandements: as was ſpecially ſeen, in their willing following the commandement of Jeroboam for idolatry, 1 King.12.28,29. They were as ready to obey, as he to command. Though to aggravate his ſin, he is ſaid to make them ſin, to drive them to it, 2 King.17. 21. Some with the LXX tranſlate thus, Becauſe he would, he went after vanity, or vain things; he willingly followed vanity; as Job,31.5. 2 King.17.15. 1 Sam.12.21. The LXX varies much more, in the verſion of this verſe. And the Targum thus, Their Judges turned themſelves to go aſtray after lying riches. Vulgar Latin thus, calumniam patiens eſt Ephraim, quoniam cepit abire poſt ſordes.

V. 12. as a moth] I will cauſe them, by little and little, to conſume themſelves with diſorders, and inward evils, until they be quite overthrown, Job 4.19. Eſay 50.9. and 51.8. The LXX hath τηκεδων.

Judah] His ſin alſo is not without its puniſhment.

rottenneſſe] Or, a worme, ſee Job 13.28.

V. 13. when Ephraim ſaw] The ſore, and the miſt of both: they both ſee their ſickneſſe and wound; but not the true cauſe of it, Gods wrath for their ſins. They feel the preſent ſmart; as luſt beaſts will do their blows, and roar at them; but know neither the cauſe why, nor the means how to prevent them afterwards. So they ſaw the evils that did conſume them, but took not the right courſe to remove them.

Then went Ephraim to the Aſſyrian] Menahem, King of Iſrael, required the aſſiſtance of Pul, King of Aſſyria, 2 King.15.19. Thus they repented not with theſe lingring puniſhments, but betook themſelves to vain ſhifts, and the arm of fleſh, to broken reeds; as is uſual with ſuch ſinners, in like caſe to do, They went not to God, as they ſhould have done. Chap.14.1,2,3. and Chap. 6.1,2. but they went to the Aſſyrian. Of the Aſſyrians, ſee the Annotations on Chap.7.11.

and ſent] That is, Judah ſent: which is to be ſupplied by analogy of what went before, and follows after. See 2 King16.7. Both alike ſinned in this kind.

to King Jareb] Or, the King of Jareb; or to the king that ſhould plead, defend, and revenge them. Some think thisto be the name of a King, or rather of his City, or Country, of ſome place or petty kingdom in Aſſyria. To Tiglah-Pilneſer King of Aſſyria; Ahaz King of Judah, ſent for help againſt Rezin King of Syria, and Pekah King of Iſrael, 2 King.16.7. 2 Chr.28. and went not to God for help; but rather refuſed him, Eſay 7.12,13.

yet could he not] This ſhall not profit you in the end. It ſhall ſhew you your folly. The wiſe way is to run to God. All others ſhall prove Phiſicians of no value.

V. 14. as a Lion] In the end he will be more then a moth, and rottenneſſe, when they will not repent upon lingering puniſhments,he will grow to be a very Lion. This men get by ſeeking to vain helpes againſt God. Nothing can reſiſt his hand. See Chap. 13.8. Lam.3 10. Pſal.17.12.

and go away] A term taken from wild beaſts, which having taken any prey, do run away preſently, ſo that the prey cannot be recover'd from them: yet he will go away with the prey, not as a Fox, ſlily and ſtealingly; but as a Lion openly, daringly, and without any fear, of any reſcue

V. 15. return to myplace] I will take away the preſence of my help and grace from them; as if I did ſhut my ſelf up in heaven, as if I would not care for them any more; and I will expect the iſſue of their behaviour upon my fierce wrath. See Eſay 18.4.

till they acknowledge] Here are the two parts of repentance expreſſed.

in their afflictions they will] Here is the end and uſe, and fruit of afflictions, Pſal.78.34. & 83.16. Judg.3.9,15. & 4.3 & 6.6,7. and 10.10 and Eſay 26.16.

early] That is, with all ſpeed, care and induſtry, Job.8.5.

CHAP. VI.

Verſ.1. Come] An exhortation to both, to return to the Lord; upon his readineſſe to heal and revive them.

All means of converſion afforded to Ephraim, and Judah and yet they all deal treacherouſly,Gilead,the Prieſts, Ephraim, and Judah.

and let us return] He ſheweth the people how they ought to return to the Lord,that he might call back his plagues. To others, it ſeems to be a diſcourſe of the people repenting, being the ſequel of

of the precedent Chapter, ſo as they yield not to deſpair, but rather raiſe up themſelves to repent, and to hope in Gods mercies; each one begitning with himſelf; and then mutually exhorting one another, as the words do ſhew.

for he hath torn and] And indeed this is the courſe and cuſtome of God, He ſo ſmites, as willing to heal, though he tear as a lion, Chap. 5.14. yet leaves place for mercy; and in his puniſhments, aims at repentance. And the knowledg of this, and the apprehenſion and hope of mercy, is the very beginning of repentance, and induceth ſinners to it, Pſal. 130.4. See Deut. 32. 39. 1 Sam. 2. 6. Job 5. 18. Eſay 30.26.

bind us up] As a Chyrurgion having laid on plaiſters,then binds up all.

V. 2. After two dayes] In a very ſhort time he will reſtore us; as it were from death to life, upon our repentance, Eſay 54.7. The Jews underſtand the two dayes of their deliverance, from the Egyptians bondage, and Babylonian captivity, and the third day of their redemption by the Meſſias. Others, hold it to be a ſecret prophecie of Chriſts Reſurrection the third day after his death, 1 Cor.15.4. But this ſeems too far-fetcht; and that place may not have relation to this Text, but to other Scriptures: unleſs we hold according to that rule, That there are many prophecies concerning Chriſt,which firſt have their accompliſhments in others, as in Types, and after receive their full and perfect accompliſhment in him: as that, Chap.11.1. The true ſenſe is, that though God deliver them not in the firſt, or ſecond day, but delay a while longer, yet they will patiently expect, and truſt ſtill, that aſſuredly at laſt he will deliver them. Thus they ſtrengthen themſelves in their faith and hope, though two dayes paſſe without help; as Jer.8.20. Are markable pattern hereof we may take to be that of our Saviour, r Cor. 15. 4. and we muſt be made conformable to our head, Rom. 8.29.

live in his ſight] Here is their hope. In the ſight of God, is all life and felicity, the life of grace and glory, Pſal. 16 11. & 17,15. Apoc 7.9. we ſhall live under his protection and favour, participating of his grace, and in his fear and obedience.

V. 3. Then ſhall we know] Naturally we are inclining and prone to doubt of Gods favour. Therefore the faithful continue and go on to encourage themſelves in their comforts. And this is the exerciſe of their faith. Then ſhall we know, though now we ſee no ſuch thing. The light of life ſhall dawn at laſt, after this darkneſſe, Rom.1.20. Pſal.30.5.

if we follow on] Or, how to follow, John 8.31, 32. If we manfully ſtrive to ſurmount all impediments, which would otherwiſe hinder us from attaining that grace, which yet ſeemes ſhut up from us.

his going forth] The manifeſtation of himſelf in grace and favour. Others thus, the manifeſtation of his Grace in his Son, the knowledg of God, which ſhall be through Chriſt in the Goſpel, ſhall be in the appointed time, and ſhall keep its ordinary courſe, as the Sun doth at his riſing. See Judg.5.31. Prov. 4.18.

as the rain] The fruit of this his appearing, and revealing of himſelf. See Job 29.23. Pſal.72.6. It ſhall be as the rain watering the earth, and making it to fruktifie.

as the latter and former] So ſhall he ſeaſonably and conſtantly ſhour down his bleſſings upon us. The ſum is, we ſhall more and more increaſe in the knowledg of God, notional, and experimental: as the light of the morning doth hourly more and more increaſe, and grow fruitful by it, as the earth doth by the rain. Thus they go on in reckoning up the effects and benefits of Gods grace and bounty towards them, upon their repentance; He will heale us, revive us, and we ſhall live in his ſight, and know him, and find his gracious favour ſtill more and more. Thus the faithful increaſe in the knowledg of God, and truſt in him. The LXX thus, ὡς ὑετὸς ὄψιμος καὶ πρωϊμος ἐπὶ τὴν γῆν.

V. 4. O Ephraim] The Prophets, as hath been ſaid, uſually add to their threatnings, ſome promiſe of hope and comfort, leſt the faithful ſhould deſpair. And again, to their Promiſes, ſome threatnings and exceptions, leſt hypocrites lay hold on the promiſes, which indeed belong not to them. For they had to do both with the whole body of the people that was corrupt; and alſo with a few godly ones amongſt them. Here the Prophet turns himſelf to the ſimilitude, and ſhewes they were incorrigible, incurable.

what ſhall I do unto thee ?] A pathetical contеſtation, appealing to their own conſciences, in the matters following. See Chap. 11.8. Eſay 1.5. & 5.4. ſeeing your perverſneſſe is ſo great, that ye cannot give way and place to my grace and goodneſſe; what now ſhall I do unto thee ?

O Judah] Judah in no better caſe: A thing the more deplorable.

your goodneſſe] Or,mercy, or,kindneſſe: All the ſhews you make of converting to me, of ſerving and fearing me, have no firmneſſe nor continuance. He hath a relation likely to the frequent reformations of Gods worſhip, which were never of any long continuance among the children of Iſrael, longer then Gods hand was on them, Chap 5.15.

early dew] Which is ſoon dryed up. Thy goodneſſe had no continuance, no ſubſtance, or ſolidity in it.

V. 5. Therefore have I ſhewed them] Their former hardneſſe and obduration in ſin,cauſed God to deal hardly with them: an hard knot muſt have an hard wedg. They might thank themſelves they were ſo hardly dealt with: and not complain of any ſeverity in God, they forced him to it, Eſay 28.21. Lam.3.33. I have ſeverely reproved, chidden, and threatned them by my Prophets, to ſet them upright, like as is done to a knotry and crooked piece of timber.

I have ſlain them] I have judged and condemned them to death. See 1 King.19.17. Jer.1.10. 2 Cor.10.5,6.

by the words] Gods word is compared to a ſword, a rod, a ſtaff, an hammer, a fire, Eſay 11.4. Jer.23.29. Heb.4.12. Apoc.2.16. for the force and effects of it. The Prophets duty, and the peoples,are to examine themſelves, how they are wrought upon by the Word.

and thy judgements are as the light] Or, that thy judgements might be as the light. My threatnings, and the ſentence which I have pronounced againſt them, hath euery morning been declared unto them by my Prophets; as the light to ſhew them their duty, Jer. 7.13. & 11.7. & 35.14. ſo that they could not pretend ignorance; which clears Gods juſtice, and convicts their contumacy. Some underſtand here the light,not of Doctrine, but of Gods judgments and puniſhments, Eſay 26.9. Job 37.23,24. Apoc.15.4.

that goeth forth] Every morning: whence ſome would collect, that the morning was the time for the Prophets uſual teaching and preaching. Targum thus, Becauſe I admoniſhed them, ſending my Prophets, and yet they did not return; I will bring againſt them ſlayers, in as much as they have tranſgreſſed the word of my good pleaſure, my judgement is as the light that goeth forth.

V. 6. For I deſired] Hypocrites will always have ſomewhat to alledge and pretend, and ſticke not to wrangle it out with God, whiles they are ſedulous in ceremonials and externals. So here, Our Saviour cites this Text twice, Mat.9.13. & 12.7. and it agrees with that, 1 Sam.15.22.

and not ſacrifice] Comparatively; that is, more (as the word is after expreſſed) then ſacrifice. God condemns the abuſe onely, Eſay 1.11. & 29.13,2. Jer.6.20. Amos 5.21. Mat. 12.33. The external worſhip of God, and all legal ceremonies, are underſtood hereby. The LXX read the words thus, Will I have mercy, or ſacrifice? reading the words interrogatively, to the ſame ſenſe.

and the knowledge of God] This comprehends the duties of the firſt Table. God here joynes both togeſther. They muſt not be ſeparated.

more] The compariſon here expreſſed. The meaning is, both outward, and inward worſhip of God, are enjoyned, and to be conjoyned: which hypocrites pull aſunder, and reſt in the outward worſhip onely; which yet, without the inward, and without the real duties of the ſecond Table, is of no value and eſteem, but odious to God, Pſal. 50. 8. Jer.7.21,22. Eſay 66.3. He ſheweth to what ſcope his doctrine tendeth, that they ſhould joyn the obedience of God, and the love of their neighbour, with outward ſacrifice; for elſe outward ſacrifice will not ſatisfie God.

V. 7. But they like men] Heb. like Adam, the firſt ſinner of all, who brake Gods firſt Covenant with mankind; whence followed the general curſe upon all men. See Job 31.33. Iſa.43.27. Or, as if it had been the Covenant of ſome mean man, Gal. 3.15. See 1 Cor.3.3.

there] Where, and when as I dealt with them, as is expreſſed, verſ.5. See 2 King.17.7, &c. yea even there, in the very abuſing of their ſacrifices. They ſhewed themſelves men, in tranſgreſſing the their Covenant.

treacherouſly] Chap.5.7. & 7.13. & 8.1.

V. 8. Gilead] Which was the place where the Prieſts dwelt, and which ſhould have been beſt inſtructed in my word: it is thought to be Ramoth-Gilead, Joſh.20 8. & 21.38. which was one of the Cities of refuge, for thoſe which had committed ſome murther unawares; and he ſeems to infer, that it was a refuge for wilful murtherers. See Chap. 12. 11. Some underſtand this of the Countrey of Gilead, beyond Jordan, given to the two Tribes and an half, Num.32.1,26,29,40. and now captivated by Pul, King of Aſſyria, for their ſin, 1 Chron.5.26. But the addition of the word Aſſyria, makes againſt that; unleſſe by City we underſtand every City of Gilead, as ſome do. If this City, which ſhould have been a good example to others, was ſo wicked and bloody,what might be thought of other Cities? Of Gilead, ſee on Obad. verſ.19.

polluted with bloud] Or, cunning for blood,or,traced with blood; guilty of much bloud. The LXX, thus; But they are as a man tranſgreſſing the Covenant. There Gilead dealt treacherouſly againſt me, a City that acts vain things, troubling the water; reading ſo me, for ם ג

V. 9. And as troops of robbers] As Judg.9.25. Prov. 11. 23. as the Arabian in the wildernesse. See Obad. ver.5.

the company of Priests] Or, the league and conspiracy; as Jer.11. 9. Ezek.22.25.

murther] By this it may seem, that this is a profecution of that in the former verse; that the Priests of Ramoth-Gilead committed all manner of bloudy cruelties: they were the companions, the Captains, and Commanders of such bloody robbers.

In the way by consent] Heb. with one shoulder; or, to Shechem. One shoulder signifies one consent, that they did it unanimously; by factions and conspiracies. So Zeph. 3.9. If we take it for Shechem, we find Shechem to be a City of refuge on Mount Ephraim, Josh.20.7. belonging to the Kohathite-Levites, Josh.21.21. a prime City in the heart of the Kingdome, where they met to make Rehoboam King, 1 King.12.1. and King Jeroboam dwelt there, verſ. 25. many travellers went that way because of the celebrity of the City; and therefore that was fittest for their bloody robberie. Some thus, It may be that Jeroboam had placed there some false priests which himself had made: See Chap.5.2. which committed many outrages and murders upon them which frequented the Temple of Jerusalem, contrary to his command: or, generally upon all travellers; and that by guile and treachery; as Simeon and Levi had of old time murdered the Chemites, Gen. 34. The LXX thus, Thy strength is of such a man, &c. as abuseth his strength to robbery, as aforesaid. Thus variously are these words taken, and interpreted.

for they commit lewdnesse] Or, Enormity. I do liken these Priests violences to theft, for they are cruel and insufferable: or commit such like enormities, as Simeon and Levi did at Shechem, Gen.34.

V. 10. I have seen] Whatsoever they dream or imagine, pleasing themselves in their wil-worships, and good intentions; yet I the true Judge do thus see and deem.

an horrible thing] Or, brutish and infamous. The boldnesse of Prophets from God in reproving sin: They muſt set out sin in its colours. Better so, then for people to find how fearful a thing it is to fall into the hands of the living God.

the whoredome] The idolatry; usually called whoredome.

of Ephraim] Ephraim the chief Tribe and Head of that Kingdom; and Jeroboam the King-leader to Idolatry was of the Tribe of Ephraim, 1 King.11.26. & 12.26, &c.

V. 11. Also O Judah] The words of this verse are so generally put, as that they may be divers ways applyed and understood. Some thus, O ye ten Tribes, though for the present you have no good plants of true believers amongst you, yet ye shall be replenished with them again, when ye shall be united again to Judah; and by means of the Gospel which shall come forth of Jerusalem, Psal.110.2. Isa.2.3. God shall deliver his elect of all Nations out of their spiritual captivity, and at last the whole body of his people Israel, Jer. 31.5. Others make God set an harveſt of joy for Judah, when he shall cause his people to return from their spiritual captivity, by the preaching of the Gospel: like to that, Jer. 31. 23. Zeph.3.20. Psal.14.7. But others, more agreeable to the context, understand here the harveſt of Idolatry, and of Gods judgements for it. And that this harveſt either Judah hath set and sown for Israel, taking from Israel the seeds and plants of idolatry, to corrupt it self; and so by his example to confirm it in Israel, to propagate and ripen the harveſt of Israel, and Gods anger for it. Or rather, that Ephraim and Israel have also sown the seeds, and set an harveſt of idolatry in Judah, corrupting Judah, and ripening him for the harveſt of Gods wrath. And this relates, as the former likewise doth, to that history, 2 Chron. 28.8, &c. So that the meaning will be, That Ephraim had not onely defiled Israel with Idolatry; but also had sowed it in Judah, or Judah had taken the seeds, and plants, and harveſt of Idolatry from them, when Ahab was joyned in affinity with the Kings of Judah, and when Ahaz reigned in Judah, and in the end of his reign was delivered into the hands of Pekah, King of Israel.

when I returned] When I did it by my Spirit in the powerful preaching of my Prophet Oded, 2 Chr. 28. 9. &c. though ye arrogantly ascribe it to your selves, and your own praise. Others, more generally thus, When I laboured to prevent their captivity, by turning them from Idolatry by the Ministry of my Prophets, even when and where I was about to reduce and restore them.

CHAP. VII.

Verſ. 1. WHen] God reproves Israels and Ephraims manifold sins; though he would heal them, yet they continue sinning against him, and seek another means of help, & come to him but hypocritically; which shall be their ruine.

I would have healed Israel] as a good Physitian, Chap. 14.4. Psal.30.2. & 103.3. Esay 30. 26. & 57. 18, 19. By my Word, and Prophets, by my mercies and judgements. Assur could not heale them, Chap.5.13.

then the iniquity] When by my Word I tryed to correct the sins of my people, their secret wickednesse and inward hardnesse hath manifested it selfe; as it often happeneth in bodily infirmities, when the Physician tries his remedies, he finds diseases greater, and more then at first appeared. God applied his remedies, Chap. 6.5. but they prevailed not. They did but stir and provoke the evil humours. When sinners are rubbed on their sores, they kick, and fare as those, Mat.7.6. and so bewray that bitternesse of spirit which before lay hid in them. He that evil doth; hates the light.

commit falshood] They are so much the more set on all mischief, are addicted to it, and make a trade of it, 1 Joh. 3.8,9. Mat.7.23. Ezek.22.9.11.

the thief cometh in] Into the house for to steal. Meaning, that there was no one only kind of vice among them; but that they were subject to all kind of wickednesse, both secret and open, within and without; they were so infected, that no place or part was left whole.

spoileth] Heb. shippeth. Violently plunder abroad.

V. 2. Consider not in] Heb. say not to their hearts.

that I remember] As if there were no God; or God heeded not all their wickednesse, or would never call them to account for it, Psal.50.21. Job 22.13,14. And this opens the flood-gate to let in all sin, now their own] Though they think nothing lesse, yet they shall find by experience this to be true, before them about] Like as it were with ropes and snares, that they may no longer escape judgements, Prov.5.22. or the punishments of their misdeeds have bound them; or their misdeeds compasse them on every side; wherein and whereof they boast themselves, as men do of a guard about them. There shall be no way left for them to escape.

they are before my face] They commit their misdeeds boldly and openly. Or I keep them in mind, and they are always present before me, Prov.5.21. & 15.3. Job 31.4. & 34. 21. Jer. 16. 17. & 32. 19. And my part and office shall not be taken out of my hands, Gen.4.7. I will see them punished.

V. 3. They make the King glad] Chap. 5.11. in obeying readily their Idolatrous wayes and commands. Yea, they stick not to applaud him in all his vileſt ways, crying up his vices for virtues, so as they may please his humour, and rejoyce his spirit. Or thus, All their wickednesses are made occasions of their mirth & pastime, even by the Judges and Magistrates themselves; or they stick not at any sin, so as thereby they may make the King merry, ver. 5. but rather invent such ways of wickednesse as wherein he may take delight. Such was their flattery and scurrility. A signe of an extream corruption.

V. 4. adulterers] Spiritually; and likely bodily too.

as an oven] Raging hot and furious in their sinning; burning in lusts and desires after it.

heated] He compareth the rage of the people after adultery, and Idolatry, to a burning Oven, which the Baker heateth still, till his dough be leavened and raised: and so they use all meanes to fulfil their unbridled concupiscence.

who ceaseth] Or, the raiser will cease.

from raising] Or, from waking. Some thus, who ceaseth from raising and calling up the women to prepare their dough and bread for the Oven; as is usual with him who keeps a common bakehouse, and after falls fast to the heating of the Oven. Others thus; who ceaseth from waking and heating the Oven, no longer time, then while the dough is kneaded and leavened: signifying hereby, their continual eager burning desires after these sins. Vulgar Latine thus, quievit paululum civitas à commissione fermenti, donec fermentaretur totum.

V. 5. In the day of our King] Namely, the day of his birth, or of his coronation; his Courtiers have perswaded him to drunkennesse; so that there was no goodnesse in the Court; but all excesse of drunkennesse and disorder there.

sick with bottles of wine] Or, with heat through wine, Esay 5.11. Hab.2.15,16. LXX thus; ἤρξαντο δὲ οἱ ἔχοντες ὕμνον ὠδὰς ἐξ ὕπνου, he stretched out his hand] There upon having laid aside all manner of Majesty, he doth acts not beseeming him, but such men as are desperate scornful sinners, Psal.1.1. Prov.1.22. & Chap. 7.8. he rakes them by the hand, and becomes their companion in competitions. And all this in that day which should have been dedicated to better uses. Thus good Ordinances are abused.

V. 6. For they have] When they have plotted some treachery, they hatch it within themselves secretly, until such time as the passion of desire or of revenge being come to the height, it do break out in effects. See Mic. 2.1.

made ready] Or, applyed; or, as the LXX, their hearts were heated as an oven: for קרבו reading קרבר like an oven] As verſ.4. & 7. hot as that, Dan.3.6.

whiles they lie in wait] To execute their burning mischievous desires; as Judg.9.25,34,35,43. Jer.9.8.

their baker sleepeth] When he hath made the fire that it will last and continue burning till morning, though he sleep.

as a flaming fire] Some thus, through the bakers sleeping all the night, and not attending the fire, but letting it burn on still. The baker may relate to the King.

V. 7. all hot as an oven] All fiery hot upon mischief. An Epidemical and œcumenical corruption.

devoured their Judges] This rage discovers it self chiefly in their seditious, and frequent conspiracies, to the devouring and destroying of their Judges and Magistrates, all their Kings are fallen] as appears in the frequent murders of them. Of Zachariah, Shallum, Pekahiah, Pekah, see 2 King. 15. 10,14,25,30. and before these times, see 1 King.27. & 16.9,10,21. & 2 King.9.14.

there is none] They are so possessed with their affection to evil, that they cannot think upon me, to call upon me in these publick disorders; nor to be rightly converted to me, Isa. 64.7. and all their Kings that then fell by the sword, were alike evil, among them calling upon the Lord.

V. 8. hath mixed himself among the people] By treaties, leagues, and commerce; which have brought them into participation of Idolatry, and vices. See Chap. 5.7. That now they little differ from the Heathens, following their manners.

a cake not turned] As if he should say, He is neither raw nor roasted, dough nor cake, fish nor flesh: which may be referred to the mixtures and differences of Religion; as was in Ahabs time, when they halted between Jehovah and Baal, 1 King. 18. or in Samaria, 2 King. 17. 33. See Zeph.1.5. Apoc. 3. 15,16. or else it may relate to that; That being as it were all fired by Gods judgements, he was not one whit humbled nor amended by it; but was still raw in impenitency and obstinacy like a cake that is burnt on one side, and dough on the other.

V. 9. strangers] Forrain enemies.

and he knoweth it not] Hath not a right knowledge of it, to make right use of it. He repents not, though God by divers wayes, by words and blows doth invite and drive him to it.

gray hairs] Which are a token of his decayed strength, brought upon him before its time, through the anguish of his manifold afflictions and distractions. And yet by all that he was not reclaimed, but remained still obstinate and incurable. Which is a continual charge of this Prophet against this people, as a people of forlorn hope, and desperate.

here and there] Heb. sprinkled. Like drops of water.

V. 10. The pride of Israel] Chap.5.5. whereby they did speak proudly against the Lord, were stout against him, and wearied him in the day of their pride; as Mal. 3. 13, 14, 15. So that his word, and his judgements could not break them; but they were even those men, Esay 9.9,10. yet God in his time would take them in their pride, reſist them, mar it, break it, and plentifully reward the proud doer, Esay 28. 1.

testifieth] That there needs no other witnesse to convict him they do not return to the Lord] By repentance, Esay 9. 13. but turn to their Idols.

their God] Who had so revealed and communicated himselfe to them. This is not to honour them hereby, but to aggravate their ingratitude and treachery.

for all this] For all the chastisements aforesaid. See Jer. 3. 10. And then, for all this, his anger will not be turned away, but his hand will be stretched out still.

V. 11. a silly dove] The Dove neither harms others, nor fears harm her self; Ephraim is not innocent as the Dove; but silly, without the wit, and the wildome of the Serpent, Mat.10.16. they foolishly fought not to God for help as they should by repentance; but they call and go to Egypt and Assur for help.

without heart] without all judgment; as they that cannot tell whether it is better to cleave onely to God, or to seek the help of man.

they call to Egypt] This shewed their silly heart. See on Chap. 2,5,7. & 5.13. & 8.9. & 12.1. To aid and relieve them, and would not come to me. See 2 King.15.19. & 17.4. Ezek.17.15.

go to Assyria] For the better and clearer understanding of the facied history, take this catalogue of the Kings of Assyria; we read of Pul in the days of Menahem, 2 King.15.19. of Tiglath Pileser, in the dayes of Pekah, and Ahaz, 1 Chron. 5.26. 2 King. 15.29. & 16.7,10. of Shalmaneser in the days of Hoshea, who took him, and Samaria, and put an end to that Kingdome, 2 King. 17.4. & 18.9,10. He is called Shalman, Hos. 10. 14. And he or his next successor seem to be called Esarhaddon, Asnapper, and Sargon, 2 King.19.37. Ezra 4.2,10. Esay 10.1. And we read of Sennacherib, in the days of Ezekiah, 2 King.18.13.

V. 12. I will spread my net] Esay 30.1——8. & 31. 1, 2, 3. As the fowler doth spread his net upon the silly Dove, verſ.11. I will curse their endeavours, and make the issue of them to be to their ruine and confusion.

as their congregation hath heard] According to my curses made to the whole congregation of Israel in my Law, by Moses in the wildernesse; and denounced by my Prophets, 2 King. 17. 13. Others thus, As they have heard of the like judgement upon themselves, or others. Like that, Esay 23.5. LXX thus, ὡς τὴν ἀκοὴν τῶν ὑπολειμμάτων.

V. 13. woe] Esay 30.1, Lam 5.16. Ezek.16.23.

fled from me] Departed, revolted, estranged themselves, as Ezek.6.9. & 14.5. See Jer.17.13. & Hos.9.12. Zech.7.11,12.

because] Sin the cause of it. See Lev. 26.43.

yet they have spoken lies] They have abused my patience and former deliverances; they have made lying protestations to me of future faithfulnesse and service; they did never return but feignedly and tailly. Or they have spoken lies against me, attributing their deliverance to men or to Idols, and all their afflictions to me,

V. 14. And they] Thus God prosecutes their impenitency and hypocrisie.

have not cried unto me] Prayer is a great part of repentance, so it be sincere in the heart. The cry of the heart is that God likes, and loves, and looks for, Psal. 139. 148. Lam. 2. 18. Jonah 3. 8. Thus Moses cryed, when his voice was not heard, Exod. 14. 15. and Hannah, 1 Sam. 1.13.

when they howled] as dogs and brute beasts. Though the smart of their miseries urged them to howling; yet they were dumb towards me, and fraught with grumbling and impatience, murmuring and repining against me. See Joh 35.9,10,11.

they assemble themselves] To make supplications, seeking onely their own commodity and wealth, and not passing for me their God. So they have these earthly blessings, they heed not me, nor my favour or displeasure. But we should first seek Gods Kingdom, and these things afterwards.

they rebel against me] LXX thus, they were chastised by me.

V. 15. Though I have bound] Or, chastened. I, as a Chirurgion, have bound up their wounds and sores. The LXX omit this word.

and strengthened their armes] I have tempered my punishments, and I have given them strength to bear them, and not to be overthrown by them. Or, after I have scourged them, I have re-established them, yet do they] They abuse my goodnesse; they render unto me evil for good. Take heed of this sin.

mischief against me] By their rebellion and apostasie, Nahum 1.9.11.

V. 16. They return] They do but counterfeit Repentance, dally, and delude me in it. God requires soundnesse, and reality therein, Jer. 4.1.

but not to the most high] LXX, to that which is not. Vulgar Latine, that they might be without a yoke. Which variety seems to arise from their various readings in their copies.

a deceitful bow] Psal.78.57. They have no stayednesse nor uprightnesse towards me; but are like a slack-stringed, or ill fashioned bow; or, a bow which turneth in the Archers hand, or a warping or casting bow.

their Princes] As ver. 7. much more then the people.

for the rage of their tongue] Against God, and man; belching out blasphemies against God, and proudly bearing out themselves in their presumptuous and idolatrous courses; boasting of their own strength, and passing not a whit what they speak against God, and his servants. Or thus, the outragious virulency of their tongue should be the stirrer up of indignation amongst them; and the cause of their Princes falling by the sword. See Psal.73.9. & 12.3, 4. Jam. 3.5, &c.

their derision] This often slaughter of their Princes; and change of State, shall render them as scorn to all; yea, even to their confederates, as the Egyptians now were, in whom they so much trusted.

CHAP. VIII.

Verſ. 1. SEt] God threatens destruction to Israel so: their sins; their Idolatry in the calf of Samaria: their hiring Assur for help, &c. And Judah is shortly threatned.

the trumpet] To give warning of the enemies coming, Chap. 5. 8. A military phrase. The Prophet here, as a Herauld, proclaims war against them.

thy mouth] Heb. the roof of thy mouth.

as an eagle] Swiftly to seize on the prey. Though they, as is usual with sinners, do put off the evil day far from them. Namely, the King of Assyria shall speedily come, a swift and powerful enemie, See Deut. 28. 49. Jer. 4.13. & 48.40. & 49.22. Ezek. 17.3. Heb.1.8.

against the house of the Lord] Not meaning here the Temple of Jerusalem, and kingdom of Judah; as many would. For the whole context carrieth it to Israel, which was once the people of God, among whom God had his habitation as in his Temple or palace; and they still pretend to be so.

because they have] The cause of the war. And that twice told.

trespassed] Impiously; and that against their knowledge and conscience.

V. 2. Israel] Or they shall cry unto me, My God, we know thee, we are Israel.

ſhall] This is no exhortation to them ſo to do; nor accuſation againſt them for their failing therein: But a declaration of their ſimulation and counterfeiting in ſo doing.

cry unto me] Out of ſeaſon, and not be heard. Or out of mere ſenſe of evil, without faith, piety, or converſion, as Job 27.9. Prov. 1.27,28. Iſa 1.15. Mal.3.4.

My God] This is the voice of their cry, this is their vain boaſting and confidence. As is uſual with hypocrites and ſinners.

we know thee] Thou haſt revealed thy ſelfe to us by thy Law and Word, and we make profeſſion of being thy people. See Mat. 7.21,22. Luk.13.26,27.

V. 3. hath caſt off] Rejected, deteſted. This is, as it were, an anſwer to that in the former Verſe, that their counterfeit cry was but in vain. The truth was otherways, as it is here ſet down; their ſin did ſtick faſt in them, and the puniſhment ſhould follow: they did caſt off all goodneſſe; and the enemies ſhould ſeize upon them.

the thing that is good] They have ſtrayed from all piety and righteouſneſſe. Or, they are in cauſe that my grace and bleſſing is gone away from them.

V. 4. They have ſet up Kings] This relates not ſo much to that of Saul, 1 Sam. 8. as to that of Rehoboam, and his Succeſſors. The people of their own proper motion, and without enquiring after my will, or ſtaying for my command, or permiſſion, have choſen & made Kings of their own heads: firſt, Jeroboam, 1 King. 12. and after him Succeſſors: For though God promiſed ten Tribes to Jeroboam, 1 King.11.31. yet the people had no command by God, or notice from him, to make him King; wherefore they ſinned, ſeparating themſelves from the lawful rule of Davids poſterity; though this happened according to Gods ſecret providence, Hoſ. 13.11.

but not by me] God ſo works by men to ſerve his providence, as leaving yet no pretence or excuſe to them to cover or colour their own wicked actions thereby. Gods intent and providence to prove Jobs patience, yet did nothing juſtifie the outrages and robberies of the Chaldeans and Sabeans againſt him, Job 1. They meant nothing leſſe then to obey and perform Gods will therein. Thus God may truly be ſaid to do and not to do the ſame thing; that is, in divers reſpects nothing falls out in the world, yea, no ſin of man or Satan, which is not ſome way governed by Gods ſpecial providence, and wiſely and hollily ordered by him.

they have made] Doubles the point; the more to ſet it home upon their conſciences.

knew it not] With approbation. As the word Knowing, is uſed. Pſal.1.6. Mat.7.23. Luk.13.27. 1 Cor.8.3.

of their ſilver] This is the ſecond capital ſin of apoſtate Iſrael, in rejecting, as the kingdome of David, ſo the Prieſthood of Levi: Both which God had appointed and eſtabliſhed, and were as types of the kingdom and Prieſthood of our Saviour; yet they had made other Kings, and other worſhip. They corrupted and rejected Gods whole worſhip, and the Prieſthood with it.

and their gold] Made to ſerve them; not they to ſerve gods made of it. But ſuch is the bruiſh blindneſſe and madneſſe of idolaters. See Chap.2.8. Judg.17.3. 1 King.12.28.

cut off] This juſtly follows upon it; though they think far otherwiſe, Judg.18.24.

V. 5. thy calfe] He goeth on to ſhew, that Iſrael doth ſtill perith through his own default, and that he cannot lay the blame elſwhere.

thy] Called his calf, though at Bethel, and the ſin of Samaria, Amos 8.14.

calf] So called in contempt, Pſ. 106.19,20. Deut.29.17. 1 King. 12.12. See Hoſ.9.10.

Samaria] The hill Samaria was bought of Shemer the owner of it, by Omri, who built a City thereon, and called it after the name of Shemer, and of the hill Samaria, 1 King.16.24. This preſently became the head City of the ten Tribes, Eſay 7.9. 1 King. 16.28,29. where their Kings raigned, and were afterward buried. It is ſometimes taken, to ſignifie the whole kingdome of the ten Tribes, 1 King.13.32. 2 King.17.24,26. This is ſet forth under the name of Aholà, Ezek.23. and ſome miſtake it to be the ſame with Jezreel, mentioned in the ſtory of Naboth, Elias, and Eliſeus, and other extraordinary Prophets dwelt here: And yet Ahab built an Houſe, Altar, and Grove, for Baal here. This City was beſieged by Benhadad in Ahab's time; and at laſt, for her Idolatries, and other ſins, was beſieged, and taken by Shalmaneſer King of Aſſyria, in the days of Hoſea and Ezekiel, and the kingdome deſtroyed, 2 King.17. and forrein Colonies brought in to inhabit there. After the return of Judah from the Babyloniſh Captivity, there dwelt in Samaria a mungrel kind of people. Some Iſraelites, moſt Heathen: and they, were of a mungrel Religion: There were Reham, and Shimſai, and Sanballet, and others, enemies of the Jewes, which ſtill laboured to hinder the rebuilding of the Temple walls, & City of Jeruſalem. The hatred betwixt the Jews and them grew to an extreem height, and ſo ſtill continued: whence is that, Joh.4.9. & 8.48. and our Saviour in his Commiſſion, to his Apoſtles, forbiddeth them to enter into any City of the Samaritanes, till the time of that general Commiſſion, into all the world, Act. 1.8. & 8.5,9, 14, 25.

hath] He uſeth the time paſt, for the time to come, for the greater aſſurance of the truth of his prophecie.

caſt thee off] Off from me, and failed thee in thy greateſt need, and caſt thee off into exile and captivity: Impute not this to chance, or to thine enemy, but to thy Iuolatry. As thy Calfe hath caſt me out, ſo it ſhall caſt thee out. O ye ten Tribes, whoſe chief City is Samaria, your idolatry with your Calves, at Bethel, and Dan, 1 King.12.28,29. will be the chief cauſe of your diſperſion out of your own Country. Or, as (ſome) Thy Calf hath left Samaria: Your Calf hath been carried afar off; namely, into Aſſyria, as the idols of the Nations overcome, were carried away captive in triumph, by the Conquerours. See Chap.10.6. Some read, Caſt off thy calf, O Samaria. The vulgar Latine thus; Thy Calf is caſt off, O Samaria. Targum thus, They have cered after the Calf of Samaria, i.e. committed adultery with it.

againſt them] The idolatrous people, how long] He expected longs but no length of time would ſerve their turn to turn to God.

to innocency] That is, upright judgement, and godly life. See Ezek.33.11. Jer.13.27.

V. 6. For from Iſrael] That is, the Calf which Iſrael did adore, was not taken from the Gentiles; as many times they borrowed from their Idolatries, but was invented by themſelves; no leſſe then that of their fathers, ſet up in the wilderneſſe of Sinai; yea, Idols were in Iſraels own time; they were given to Idolatry, even in Jacobs own family, Gen. 35.2,3,4. And the worſhipping of the Calves, in which the children of Iſrael profeſſed, they worſhipped the true God, is falſe and reproved by God, being but an humane invention, as all other idolatries are, therefore it is not God] Nor any kind of divine worſhip is to be yielded to it. Thus he derides their brutiſh ſtupidity and madneſs and ſo the Prophets do in many other places.

broken in pieces] Being the work of the goldſmith, and not of God, it ſhall be broken in pieces, the frame and feature of it demoliſhed, in Gods anger, by the executioners of his wrath. And this ſhall prove it to be no God. The LXX render all thus, Mine anger is kindled againſt them. How long will it be ere they can be cleanſed in Iſrael? even the Workman made it, and it is not a God.

V. 7. They have ſown] A proverbial kind of ſpeech: as they ſow, ſo they ſhall reap, yea, and worſe too: meaning, they have ſtudied vain things, and ſhall reap nothing thereby, but damage and ruine. Their vain ſuperſtitions, and their vain excules of them, ſhall thus little avail them. See Chap. 10. 13. Prov. 22.8. Jer.12. 13. Job 4.8. & 27.20,21. Mic.6.15.

V. 8. Iſrael is ſwallowed up] Is ſpoiled by the Aſſyrians, and laid waſte. It may be he hath relation to what is written, 2 King. 15.19,20. See Chap.7.9. 1 Chron 2.5, & 5.26. Ezek.7.15.

V. 8. Iſrael is ſwallowed up] Is ſpoiled by the Aſſyrians, and laid waſte. It may be he hath relation to what is written, 2 King. 15.19,20. See Chap.7.9. 1 Chron 2.5, & 5.26. Ezek.7.15.

they be among the Gentiles] The Nations, whoſe favour they ſeek after, will diſdain and neglect them, as an old broken veſſel, fit for none but unclean uſes, Jer. 22.28. & 48.38. Thus baſe ſhould they be in the eyes of the Gentiles, whom the Jews, and not without warrant, eſteemed ſo baſe in compariſon of themſelves, Mat. 18.17. as Egypt, in Ezek.29.15. Joel 2.17.

a wild aſſe alone by himſelf] From under the care and guidance of any herdſman, and ſo running from the parks and fold of Iſrael, to the wild wilderneſſe of the heathen. See Job 39.5,6,7,8. Jer. 2.24. They never ceaſe, but run to and fro to ſeek help; are a ſalvage people, inhumane, and unnatural, that cannot be tamed, that care for no body. Or, the Aſſyrian heeds them no more then a wild aſſe would do.

Lovers] Heb. loves. Targum thus, They are given up into the hands of the people whom they loved.

V. 10. yea though] This evil ſhall hurt, not help them. LXX thus; When they ſhall be given up among the Nations.

now will I gather] Thoſe Nations on my ſide, againſt Iſrael, I will bring them up in arms to deſtroy Iſrael, Ezek. 16. 37. Or, I will gather the Iſraelites into an heap for deſtruction. Or, the Iſraelites from gadding and gathering forrein aids, though againſt their wills, and will ſubject them to their enemy. Or, to delay a while their utter diſperſion, and ſee if they will return and repent. Or, gather them again into their own land, after their diſperſion among the Nations. So the LXX, ſo variouſly may this general expreſſion be interpreted.

and they ſhall ſorrow a little for the burden] Or, begin. They begin to complain of that burden of Tribute; but the leaſt evils which they ſhall endure ſhall be ſo exream, that the burden of the tribute which which they paid to the King of Aſſyria, wherewith they found themſelves ſo much oppreſſed, ſhall be eſteemed but a very light thing. Or, they begin to hire others, againſt their ſworn loyalty and allegiance to eaſe them of that burden. See 2 King.17.3,4.

for the burden] Of Tribute. of the King of Princes] Of the greateſt Monarch then of the world, 2 King.18. & 19. Iſa. 10, 11. See Dan.2.37. Or, of the King and Princes of Iſrael, who impoſed that tax and tribute upon the people, to be paid to the great Monarch of Aſſyria. So the LXX. The ſcope of the verſe may ſeem to be this; Though they reject my aid, and fly to forreign helps, yet will I delay for a time their utter rejection and exitirpation: and they ſhall begin to be burthened by tribute; and they ſhall ſorrow for it a little, becauſe they ſhall ſo become tributaries, before the enemies carry them into captivity. And all this to ſee, yet if ſo they will repent; and it not, far greater evils ſhall betide them: as in iſſue it fell out afterwards.

V. 11. Becauſe Ephraim hath made many altars] Becauſe the ten Tribes would not be content with my one altar, but make many, and do commit idolatry without any end or meaſure; I have given them up to do ſo, that they might be heap up their meaſure of ſin.

to ſin, altars ſhall] Though they think otherwiſe, they ſhall be their ſin and ſhame, and ruine. Though they think this multiplication of altars, to be the beſt religion; long cuſtome had ſo confirmed them therein, they could not otherwiſe be perſwaded, their good intentions therein did aſſure them ſo: yet God will ſhew it to be their ſin, by the horrible vengeance he will take for it. They did but increaſe their ſin, by increaſing the number of their altars.

V. 12. I have written] Here was the rule of their worſhip, which might cut off all their pretentions, and excuſes in their falſe willworſhips. God himſelf here, in his own perſon, ſpeaks it.

the great things] Namely, the admirable and precious revelation, and doctrine; great, and precious, Pſal. 119.18.

ſtrange thing] As no ways appertaining to them. They have contemned them, as things which no way concerned them. Thus Idolaters count the Word of God as ſtrange, in reſpect of their own inventions.

V. 13. They ſacrifice] Formerly againſt their altars: now againſt their ſacrifices.

fleſh for the ſacrifices of mine offerings] Or, in the ſacrifices of mine offerings, He chargeth them with impiety in offering fleſh, and dead carkaſes; without faith, and inward piety.

and eat it] In their ſacrifices of thankſgiving, (whereof a certain portion was aſſigned to them that offered, to make their ſacred Feaſts therewith) they never had any regard of devotion towards me, but onely regarded their own bellies: ſo that it is no longer a ſacrifice, but profane fleſh. See Jer.7.21. Or, the fleſh, or part of it, of thoſe ſacrifices, which ſhould have been wholly burnt with fire, they turned the holocauſts into thankſgiving-offerings, that they may eat the fleſh.

accepteth them not] Neither them, nor their ſacrifices, Prov.15. 8, & 21.27.

now will he] Though he forbear a while, yet he will ſoon ſhew that he remembers it.

they will] He neither allows, nor commands it; but ſhews, that they will go: and that it ſhall be in vain. This is forbidden, Deut. 19.16. 2 King.17.4. Some thus, They ſhall be led captives into Aſſyria, where they ſhall be uſed as ſervants, as they had been formerly uſed in Egypt: according to the threatning, Deut.28.68. confer with this verſe, Chap.9.3. Or rather, Egypt may be taken literally; and God will puniſh thus their ſin, in ſeeking unto Egypt. See Eſay 30.2,3. & 31.1. &c. & 31.1. &c.

V. 14. his Maker] That is, God, who created them after his image, Gen.1.26. and afterwards made them his people by Covenant of Grace, Pſal.100.3. Eſay 29.23. & 51.13. & 54.5. Ephel.2. 10. And advanced them to that ſtate of grace and honour, above all other people of the world. Such a ſignification hath the word, Chap.2.8. Deut.32.6.1 Sam.12.6. and buildeth Temples] Inſtead of any one Temple. And theſe to Idols; or if to the true God, yet againſt Gods commandement, who approved but of one, where he had placed the tokens of his preſence. Though they built the Temples in Dan and Bethel, to the memory of God, yet God calls them a forgetting of him. God will be worſhipped onely by the rule of his Law. God then would have onely one Temple, and one Altar.

CHAP. IX.

THE time of this Sermon is not ſet down. Or rather, he daily, or uſually preached againſt their idolatries, ſuperſtitions, and other groſs ſins which then reigned amongſt the people: and he eſtſoons repeated the ſame threatnings, and denunciations of Gods judgments for them. Afterwards, he gathers what he had preached into certain heads, and ſummarily propounds them in the Chapters of this Book. Here we have their whoriſh idolatry propounded, dearth, and captivity denounced: their ſacrifices, and feaſts rejected: their deſtruction in Egypt. Againſt their Prophets. Of Gods firſt kindneſs; and their ſins then. His denunciations againſt Ephraim: Their ſins, and his puniſhments.

V. 1. Rejoyce not] He envies againſt their obſtinate continuance in ſin, and impenitency: and that they ſhould not pleaſe themſelves in their preſent proſperity and impunity for Gods judgments ſhould not fail to purſue them, though he now ſpared; yea, though all nations under heaven proſpered, yet they ſhould ſmart and ſorrow. Our preſent proſperity muſt not make us ſecure in our ſins. Preſume not, that thine idolatry ſhall eſcape unpuniſhed; or that God will cauſe it to proſper; as it happeneth to other profane people: for though all other people ſhould eſcape, yet thou ſhalt be puniſhed. See Ezek.20.31. Amos 3.2.

for joy] Or, with joy. Targum thus, Rejoyce not & houſe of Iſrael: and follow not the manners of the people. Vulg. Latine thus, Rejoyce not O Iſrael, exult not as the people.

for thou haſt gone a whoring] After heathen gods and nations. And that ſpiritual whoredom, which in other nations, is but meer ignorance, in thee is meer apoſtacy and rebellion.

thou haſt loved] Thou haſt proſtituted thy ſelf to looſe idolatry, like to a common whore, that goeth a whoring up and down the threſhing floors. Or he doth mean ſome particular kind of idolatry, which was uſed in the time of harveſt and threſhing; as if they would have acknowledged their increaſe to come by their idols goodneſſe, Hoſ.2.5.

a reward] Jer.44.17. See on Chap.2.12. Deut.23.18. Ephraim, Chap.8.9. hired lovers. Here he loves a reward; There he hired aſſiſtance from Idolaters. Here he loves, and looks for rewards, and worldly bleſſings from their idols, and idol-ſervice, and not from God, Chap.2.5,8. do it not, thou haſt no cauſe for it.

upon every corn-floor] Or, in, &c. Loves the reward of a plentiful harveſt, and full barn.

V. 2. The floor] Theſe plenteous earthly bleſſings of corn and wine. See Pſal.4.7.

ſhall not feed them] LXX own them. Theſe outward things that thou ſeekeſt from Idols, ſhall be taken from thee, ſhall deceive thy hope, and fruſtrate thy expectation. A puniſhment meet for them, worthy of them, ſuch as they deſerved, who minded theſe belly-bleſſings, and looked for them from their idols, Chap.2.9. He will take the wheat and wine away; or his bleſſings upon them.

fail in her] Fail their expectation, and the hope they had therein, LXX, fail them.

V. 3. They ſhall not] A further judgment of exile and captivity, in the Lords land] In a peculiar manner his, above all other lands, Pſal.132.14. As Adam out of Eden; and Cain out of Adams family, ſo they out of the Lords land; that land being a type, and pledg to them of the heavenly Canaan.

return to Egypt] See on Chap.8.13. Deut.28.68.

eat unclean] Ezek.4.13. Being not able, by reaſon of their miſery and ſlavery, to obſerve the diſtinction of meats, which was appointed by the Law; being alſo conſtrained to eat things conſecrated to idols. See Dan.1.8. They ſhall differ nothing from the profane Gentiles.

V. 4. not offer] In their exile they ſhall not do it; nay, then by the law they may not do it. Or, now their offerings and ſacrifices ſhall be in vain, not pleaſing to God.

as the bread of mourners] Uſed at funerals. See Eſay 66.2.

ſhall be polluted] It is ſo vile in it ſelf, and in Gods eyes, wanting the inward and ſpiritual part, that it defiles the offerers and being Communicants. In ſum; All their offerings and ſacrifices being profaned by their impieties, are rejected by God: and they themſelves, inſtead of being ſanctified by them, are polluted thereby, as they ſhould be by funeral, and mourning feaſts. Whereof, ſee upon Deut.26.14.

bread for their ſoul] Meat-offerings and oblations for the ſins of their ſoul, See Lev.chap.2. They offer ſacrifices to me, onely to make their feaſts thereof, Hoſ.8.13. Zach.7.6. Let them therefore keep them as a common kind of fleſh, and not offer them to me through hypocriſie, as if they were holy. Their meat-offerings are rejected, as offerings for the dead would be.

ſhall not come] In their baniſhment it could not; in their own land it did not: Or this may be a prohibition, that it ſhould not, themſelves being impure and defiled, muſt needs pollute their own ſacrifices, and why ſhould ſuch come into the houſe of the Lord? God debars ſuch, both ſacrifices and ſacrificers, from his houſe.

V.5. do in the ſolemn day] When the Lord ſhal take away all joy and all occasions of serving him, even the very means of feastings, which ye do at this day, now abusing my feasts; the rejoycing at which should be altogether holy. This depriving your selves of the solemn worship of God, and the publick exercises of piety, puts you into a case so woful, as ye shall not know what to do; being then as a people that have nothing to do with God, nor God with them. This shall be the most grievous point of your captivity, when you shall see your selves cut off from God. Of these solemn Feast-days, see Lev.23. Deut.16.

V. 6. they are gone] He represents their flight and exile, as a thing that had happened already, the more to move them; and that no more they go on to fleight the Prophets threatnings.

destruction] Heb. spoil: done by their enemies.

shall gather them] And keep them up for the destruction, and no ways succour or save them.

Memphis] Isa.19.13. a City builded on Nilus, next to Ethiopia; so called, from a mountain of that name adjoyning to it, mentioned by Herodotus in his second book. Now most likely Grand Cairo.

bury them] Flying thither for refuge; they shall die there: no way to escape Gods vengeance, but it will pursue them.

the pleasant places] Heb. the desire.

for their silver] Or, their silver shall be desired.

nettles shall possesse them] Esay 34.13. Prov.24.31. The inhabitants being driven out, or dead, all manner of wild plants shall grow up there; even in their pleasant and choise places, for the laying up of their silver, and treasures: so waste and desolate shall their land be. LXX do otherwise distinguish the words and sentences of this verse.

V. 7. The dayes] Though long delaid, by Gods forbearance, to bring them on to repentance; yet now in his appointed time are come.

Israel shall know it] Though now too late experience shall prove it, to their cost: they shall learn it now in another school; not out of Gods mouth, but by his hand. And they shall know that which followeth, viz. that, the Prophet is a fool] Namely, the false prophets, who feigned themselves to be inspired by God, and flatter the people, feeding them with vain hopes, shall now appear to be fools.

the spiritual man] Heb. man of the spirit, Mic.2.11. who boasts of the Spirit, that he speaks and preacheth by the Spirit: for we are not to understand this of the wind, or of the evil spirit.

is mad] Not unjustly accounted so, as Rhoda, Act. 12.15. and Paul, Act.26.24. and that Prophet, 2 King.9.11. and Christ himself, Joh.10.20. Mar.3.21. But justly deemed so; as struck by God, for his own and the peoples sins, with a spiritual frenzie, doting upon his own dreams, and lunatick illuminations.

for the multitude] Their great sins, and the great hatred of God against them thereby procured, was the cause that the false prophets so bewitched them; and the day of Gods visitation was come upon them: the fault of all was in themselves, and they might thank themselves for all; because they had not the love of the truth, God gave them up to a reprobate mind, so to be deluded by such foolish and mad men. Those foolish and mad pretenders of the Spirit were no excuse to them; they did but endure their just punishment, of their own impiety.

great hatred] To wit, of God against you: and of one another amongst your selves.

V. 8. The watchman of Ephraim] Was so before the defection by Jeroboam; or his duty is still to be such, to be with, and for God. The faithful Prophets are the Churches Watchmen, Isa. 21. 11. & 62.6. Ezek.3.17.

but the Prophet] But now he is otherwise, rather against God: The false prophets which Ephraim chooseth to himself, are so far from doing their duty as they ought, and from keeping Ephraim from ruine, that they drive and cast him down headlong into it.

a snare] Intangling the people by their false prophecies, in all the ways of errours, and false worships; and consequently of mischief, misery, and destruction. Others say, The false prophets watch the godly in Ephraim, which yet stick close to God, to ensnare them. See 1 King.19.18.

hatred] Himselfe an hatred, and hateful; entangling the people into an hatred against Gods house; and the chief occasion of Gods wrath, and of the reprobation of Gods people, who are as it were his family; and also of the peoples mutual hatred one against another.

in the house of his God] Or, against. In the idolatrous temples of Bethel, Dan, and Samaria; called here the house of his God, his idol; or of the true God, according to their vulgar opinions; as Chap.8.1.

V. 9. They have deeply corrupted themselves] Heb. made deep, corrupted. So deeply rooted and drowned in the bottom and gulfe of their idolatries and iniquities; that there is no hope of curing and saving them. Or wholly corrupted to the bottom; as Isa.31.6.

as in the dayes of Gibeah] Chap.10.9. See their prodigious wickednes, Judg.19. This people is so rooted in their wickednesse, that Gibeah, which was like Sodom, was never more corrupt, Judg. 19.22. Of this City, read Josh.9.3,7. & 10.1,12. See 2 Sam.21. & 23.29. The Hivites dwet in it, afterwards it was allotted to the Tribe of Benjamin, Josh.18.25. and out of that Tribe given to be a City for the Priests, Josh.21.17. Jer.18.1. where was that field called Helkath-hazzurim, 2 Sam.2.16. where the Tabernacle, and Altar was; and Solomon offered, 1 King.3.4. 1 Chron.16.39. & 21.29. 2 Chr.1.3.

therefore] Such vengeance followeth such sins. LXX by another distinction of the words of these two verses, so vary and alter the sense.

V. 10. I found] Not any worth in them: but in my free love I vouchsafed thus to esteem of them, Chap.11.1. Ezek.16.

like grapes] When I freely adopted Israel to be my peculiar people, I took great delight in them: even as a traveller doth in grapes, beyond his expectation found in a desart, or a man doth in some rare and early fruit. See Esay 28.4. Mic.7.1. Deut.32.10. but they were quickly stained with idolatry; in which you do yet continue to this time.

as her first time] When the figs first come.

but they went] Thus he doth discover and reproach their prodigious ingratitude. I prevented them with my choice love; but they cast me off, and went.

to Baal-Peor] Thus did their fathers, to commit fornication by idolatry, Num.25.3. And the like their children do: they may see themselves in the glasse of their progenitors; as if such dealing and idolatry, by succession, became hereditary to them.

separated themselves] From God to go after idols, Chap.4.14. Ezek.14.7.

unto that shame] That shameful idol, to their shame; yet they did it without shame, impudently: idols are so called by way of abomination, Jer.3.24. & 11.13. and especially Baal-Peor, whose shape and worship was most obscene. See on Chap.8.5.

abominations were according] Like unto the idol. Their abominable idols, and themselves like their idols abominable to me, 1 Pet.4.3.

as they loved] According as their minds and lusts carryed them; sometime to one idol, sometime to another, Chap.13.2. Some thus; The more I had loved them, so much the more for their idolatry I hated them; as I hated the idols which they loved. LXX corruptly thus; They that formerly were abominable, (namely, the Gentiles) were made beloved (namely, by their calling to Christ.) Others thus, Ye beloved are made as abominable: all of them marring the true sense.

V. 11. Ephraim] The ten Tribes; and chiefly Ephraim who was chief and head of them.

their glory] Of what kind soever; but chiefly their numerous multitudes of people wherein they gloried; prophecied and promised by Jacob to that Tribe, Gen.48.4,19. and agreeing to the notation of their name, Gen.41.52.

flee away] See Esay 16.2. Job 20.8.

from the birth] By the sudden death of their children, so soon as they shall be born; or so soon as they shall be formed in the womb; or when they shall be conceived; or before by the barrenesse of the mothers, Chap.5.14. Thus, by degrees, the signes of Gods wrath, and revenge, should appear, till it came up to their utmost extirpation. The like degrees of revenge were set forth in the names of Gomers children, Chap.1.

V. 12. Though they bring] Though God spare some in the birth, yet it shall little avail them.

bereave them] By a violent death, or otherwise, Job 27.14. See Jer.18.21.

a man] Thus God threatens an utter overthrow to the Kingdom of Israel; which at the end of this prophecie came upon them.

woe] all manner of calamities, to children, parents, and all.

when] In whom onely, as the sole fountain of them, all true Blessings and felicity is to be found. See Ezek.23.18. Jer.6.8. LXX and Theodotian thus, My flesh is of them: through a mis-reading. And so they understand the words of Christs Incarnation.

V. 13. Ephraim] He prosecutes and confirms the former sentence and judgement.

as I saw Tyrus] Puts them this example.

is planted] Doth presently flourish, as Tyrus, or a tree planted in Tyrus with extraordinary art and care. Ephraim is drunken with prosperity, fears not Gods judgements, and the Prophets threatnings. This is the custome of sinners.

but Ephraim] Though Ephraim was pleasantly planted, and well fortified, as that fair and magnificent City Tyrus, Ezek.26. & 27. & 28. yet his children shall be brought under the Assyrians; who will kill them, or carry them forth to battel. This present prosperity, and their abuse of his patience, shall not hinder Gods judgements formerly threatned, Psal.37.35,36. See Jer.12.2,4. of Tyrus, see on Zech.9.2.

V. 14. Give] It may seem, the Prophet would willingly pray for them; for some mitigation.

what] He is ashamed to pray for such a people; and doubtful what thing he might be fit to pray for them.

miscarrying womb] Heb. that casteth the fruit. The Prophet seeing the the great plagues of God toward Ephraim, prayeth to God to make them barren, rather then that this great slaughter should come upon their children, after they are grown to ripe years, See Luk. 23.29. even this, rather then to have their children brought out to slaughter, to the murderer before their eyes; or the woman with child to be ripped up by the enemy: a miserable case, when that which is in it self a curse, is to be prayed for as a blessing.

V. 15. All] He shews the cause, and points to the well head of all their woful misery. They had no cause to accuse Gods severity, and extenuate their sins. And here he speaks comparatively, noting out the chief of all their sins.

is in Gilgal] See on Chap.9.15. & on Chap.12.11. That is now the shewes as it were and brothel-house of their spiritual whoredom and idolatry; one principal place for it: not but that in other places and almost every where they multiplyed and exercised their idolatries also, Chap.4.13. & 8.11.

there I hated them] Even there, where they thought they shewed their love to me, and highly pleased me by their sacrifices and worships, and procured my love to them thereby. Thus contrary is Gods judgment to the judgment of idolaters, how beit they will never be perswaded otherwise, Exod.20. ver.5.

I will drive them] They shall be no more of my houshold and family. I will expel them thence, expunge their names out of that catalogue, and no more, as a master and father of a family, take care of them, they will needs pretend themselves to be of my family, but I will put away that visor from them, Mat.13.12.

love them no more] As they think yet I do, by my patience towards them, and prosperity afforded them.

all their Princes] One root and rise of all their defection and apostacy: they which should have kept them from it, were revolters themselves, and executioners to them, and ring-leaders in it. The people are not here exempted, or excused.

V. 16. Ephraim] The Judgment is often repeated; because nothing can be too much, or enough, to awaken such sinners, Esay 48.4. nothing would serve this desperate and forlorn people, but utter extirpation, and diffipation of them and their seed.

is smitten] As by fire or thunder from God; whereby all power of recovering themselves shall be taken from them.

their root] Ver.13. and so no hope of recovery. Not like that, Dan.4.15,26. if they do prosper in off-spring, I will curse them, and root them out. See Job 31.8,12. Zeph.3.4. Amos 1. ver.2.

the beloved] Heb. the desires.

V. 17. My God] Not yours any more; as you falsly boast. Thus he opposeth his fingle self, having God on his side, against all the whole body of them. So Esay 7.13.

will cast them away] For all their boasting themselves to be the seed of Abraham, and Gods people, yet he will not any longer retain them in any degree of favour, as formerly he had done upon some hopes of their recovery; but totally reject them: and not reckon, or accompt them among his Church or people.

hearken unto him] To obey him; but hardned themselves in their rebellious obstinacy, and contumacy against him.

wanderers] He would no longer suffer them to be in his land of promise, his rest, Psal.95.11. and the rest of his people and under his wings: But as a visible sign to all people of his abdication, and rejection of them, they should be captives, exiles, wanderers without rest, among the Heathen Nations; and be as the Heathen themselves.

CHAP. X.

THE Heads of this Chapter are, Israels Idolatry; no King: False Covenant: Against the Calves of Beth-aven. Captives into Assyria. Their King and Calves shall be cut off. Their sinning; and Gods chastising. His good purpose, and their contrary doings. His Judgements therefore denounced by Shalman, for their Idolatry at Bethel.

V. 1. an empty vine] Or, a vine emptying the fruit which it giveth. Whereof though the grapes were gathered (for Pul King of Assyria pil'd them, 2 Kin.15.20.) yet ever as it gathered new strength, it increased new wickednesse, so that the correction which should have brought them to obedience, did but utter their stubbornnesse. Empty of good fruits; yea full of sowre grapes. Esay 5.2.

fruit unto himself] Not to others; but consumes it on its own lusts, and Idolatries. Or, his fruit is like to himself. Targum thus; The fruit of their works was the cause why they were carried away captives.

he hath encreased the altars] Chap.8.11. & 12.11.

to the goodnesse of his land] As they were rich, and had abundance by the fertility of the land; so they became more Idolatrous, Deut.32.15. so abusing Gods blessings as by the means of them to corrupt Gods pure worship the more, Chap.2.8.

images] Heb. statues or standing Images.

V. 2. Their heart is divided] Or, he hath divided their heart: Divided from God, who having taken away his Spirit of peace and concord from them, hath given them over to seditions, factions, and frequent murthers of their princes, which will cause the utter ruine of the Kingdom. See 2 King.15.10,14,25,30. Some thus, That Israel divided his heart between God and Baal; as 1 King. 18.21. Contrary to that, Deut.10.12.

found faulty] Convinced of their faultinesse, by Gods dealing against them; as it follows after.

he] Chap.9.17.

break down] Heb. behead.

their altars] That so they may see the vanity of their trusting in them; and Gods detestation of such Idolatrous ways of worship.

V. 3. For now they shall say, we have nothing] Within a very short time God shall take away their King, and then they shall feel the fruit of their sins, and how they trusted in him in vain, 2 Kin. 17.6,7. They should be forced then to this confession of Gods hand of judgement upon them; though not in way of true repentance, they still continuing obstinate in their former courses of sinning; yet their consciences should be convicted by evidence of the thing it self. This taking away of a King, is a remarkable evidence of Gods wrath, and convincing the same, even to a people obdurate in sin, that would fain deny Gods hand to be in it, Lam.4.20.

because] This extracted from them. As the like from Pharaoh, Exod.9.27 & 10.16. and Saul, 1 Sam.24.17. & Chap 26.21. The want of Gods fear & worship, is the cause of all sin, of all plagues.

what then] If we had one, he could not now help us, free, or defend us. What should we have of him? Some take it, as if they questioned any use of a King at all; they rather would rule, and have the legislative power in themselves to over-rule the King; if any were, to dispose, and depose him.

V. 4. They have spoken words] Boldly enough, and largely enough, and yet but words onely.

swearing falsly] To God, in promising him conversion and fervice. Or to their King, obliging themselves to be faithful to him. Or to the King of Assyria being under him; but swearing falsly, and conspiring with the King of Egypt, 2 King.17.3,4. They are perjured persons; new conspiracies break forth amongst them continually.

in making a covenant] Renewing it with God; or making it for aid with Forreiners. But with false hearts they did it; and became perjured Covenant-breakers. They used false execrations in making the Covenant. Vulgar Latine alters the words, and mars the sense.

as hemlock] Thus their integrity and fidelity which they pretended, was nothing but bitternesse and grief. Others, for this Gods judgements shall multiply like hemlock, or other poysonous herbs, which grow in abundance in the fields. See Amos 6.12.

V. 5. of Samaria] See on Chap.8.6.

shall fear] They fear when their Idols are in any dangers. And shall fear] They fear when their Idols are in any dangers. And the more, because they counted them the strangers of their Kingdome, and put great confidence in them. But their faith in them shall be turned to fear. Whence they expected safety, they shall reap fear and terrour.

because of the calves] Heb. the cowes, or, cow-calves. So called in contempt; seeing their Idols taken and carried away by the enemies.

of Beth-aven] See on Chap.4.15. There was a Beth-aven different and distant from Bethel, Joth.7.2.

the people thereof] To wit, of the calf, meaning that they were no more worthy to be called Gods people, but the people of the calf, their Idol. See Num.21.29. Others understand the Inhabitants of Samaria.

shall mourn over it] Over the Calf at Bethel.

the Priests thereof] Heb. chemarims. Who were certain Idolatrous priests, which did wear black apparel in their sacrifices, and cryed with a loud voice: which superstition Elijah derided, 1 Kin. 18.27. read 2 King.23.5. Zeph.1.4.

that rejoyced on it] Thus Idolaters dote on their Idols.

for the glory] The cause of their mourning. It shall be no more reverenced, or worshipped as a god.

V. 6. It shall be also carried] Namely, the calf. According to the custome of carrying away the Idols of those Nations which were conquered. See Esay 46.1,2. The Idol cannot help it selfe; much lesse its foolish worshippers. This shews the grosse madnesse of Idolaters in their Idol-worship, who yet in their extremities run to them for help. Others will understand it of the Inhabitants of Samaria.

King Jareb] To the King Protector, namely, the king of Assyria, whom the Israelites had chosen for their Protector and defender, Chap.5.13. See Annot. on Chap.7.11.

ashamed of his counsel] Namely, of that which he hath undertaken of his own mind, beyond, and against the will of God, Psal.106. 43. Hos.11.6. or, of conspiring with the king of Egypt against the king of Assyria, 2 King.17.4. or of that counsel, 1 King.2.27.

V. 7. her King] Next to their Idols, their trust was in their kings. But their kings, Zachariah, Shallum, Pekahiah, Pekah, were cut off by violent deaths, soon, and suddenly, as the foam and froth of the waters, as it here threatned: and Hoseah their last King imprisoned; and in him their kingdome ended. LXX thus, Samaria hath cast off her King.

as the ſome] This are Kings, Pſal.62.9. Jam.4.14.

the water] Heb. the face of the water.

V. 8. The high places] The Prophet continues on in his threatnings, becauſe they continue on in their ſins. They had necks of Iron, Eſay 48.4. nothing was enough to bow and bend them: all too little to make them relent and repent. The very places of their Idol-worſhip ſhall be deſtroyed.

V. 9. ſinned from] Now new ſinners, but of ancient ſtanding.

the dayes of Gibeah) Chap.9.9. Judg.19.14,22. ſuch deep ſinners; like thoſe of Sodome and Gomorrah; which were ſo ſeverely punished. And the like ſins do continue and increaſe in thee, wich like impudency & impunity: thou doſt juſtifie themſelves Ezek.16.51.

there they ſtood] Though they ſtood a while in doubt, and were at a ſtand & ſtammer, yet they ſtood it out at laſt. And for all that, ſtood obſtinate & obdurate in the like infamous ſins; Though their fathers were no better then they of Gibeah, againſt whom they warred, becauſe of their infamous wickedneſſe, yet the Lord, at laſt, delivered them out of thoſe bloody battles; they were not utterly overthrown, as they deſerved.

did not overtake them] The like ſevere puniſhment did not yet overtake them: nor did that take hold of them, that the remembrance of it, might deter them from the obſtinate perſevering in their ſins. Yet he implies, the like judgment ſhall overtake them; or a more ſharp, ſhort, and ſudden battle, to deſtroy them in a moment, if they make not better uſe of that example, and take better heed by it; yea, their anceſtors ſins ſhall not then be forgotten, when God ſhall come to reckon with them, upon the like ſcore, as Exod.32.34. Targum thus; Thither came againſt them warriours to ſlay, their fathers with the childrem came up thither.

V. 10. It is in my deſire] Vehement deſire: Like that, Luk.22.15. Vulgar Latine thus; according to my deſire I will chaſtiſe them: Targum thus, By my word, or by my ſelf, I will bring chaſtiſement upon them.

and the people ſhall be] And I will ſatiſfie that deſire; I will avenge me of them, Eſay 1.24. compare Chap.11.8,9. & Lam.4.33. yet here, ſaith God, becauſe they are ſo deſperately evil, I will ſatisfie my wrath with their juſt puniſhment.

gathered againſt them] Chap.8.10. The manner how he will chaſtiſe them; namely, not ſo much by domeſtick wars, as by a forreign people. God hath all Nations at his command, to arm them at his pleaſure; againſt his ſinful people; he can hiſſe for the Flye of Egypt, for the Bee of Aſſhur.

when they ſhall binde themſelves in their two furrowes] The text is עיניהם their eyes. The Keri of the Maſſorites will have it read עבותיהם their furrowes. When I ſhall bind them in their two furrowes, like oxen tied to the yoke, each of which treads in his furrow. The Targum thus, I will gather the people againſt them, and they ſhall rule over them, as the bond of a yoke upon their two eyes; that is, as the oxe is ſo bound with the yoke there, or thereabout; ſo ſtrictly ſhould they be bound with the yoke of the people domineering over them. Or, When I ſhall bind them, or chaſtiſe them, for their two tranſgreſſions; reading עבותיהם ſo the LXX, and vulgar Latine read it. And underſtand then their two golden Calves: or as that, Jer.2.13. Some thus, in their two habitations. And with them, this ſeems to have relation to the two Invaſions of the Kings of Aſſyria, 2 King.15.29. and 17.3. And becauſe the Aſſyrians had been as the lovers of the children of Iſrael, Chap.8.9,10. the Prophet uſeth a word which ſignifieth an appointment of ſome unchaſt meeting. Or thus; Notwithſtanding all their Preparations for defence, nothing can hinder the execution of my decree. But even then when they have gathered all their ſtrength together, I will gather people enough againſt them, to deſtroy them. So variouſly are theſe words rendred and interpreted.

V. 11. Ephraim] Conciſe, and obſcure is this verſe; and ſo ſubject to divers interpretations. The ſcope ſeems to be this; to ſet forth the diſpoſitions of the people, and Gods dealing with them thereupon.

is as an heifer) Chap.4.16. Jer.31.18.

that is taught] Inſtructed in her duty, and my ſervice, and that from the beginning.

and loveth to tread out the corn] Wherein is pleaſure; as in plowing is labour and pain; even ſo my people would enjoy my bleſſings, but would not be ſubject to the yoke of mine obedience and diſcipline; they love to ſerve me ſo, as may ſuit beſt with their eaſe, profit, and pleaſure; they are accuſtomed to that, but love not the yoke and lab ur of the plow; will not be taught and brought into that ſtrict obedience, to that through and true ſubjection to my ſervice. LXX thus, Ephraim is an heifer taught to love contention.

but I paſſed over upon her fair neck] Heb. the beauty of her neck. I made her fair and fat; in good caſe to bear any yoke; but the abuſed my bleſſings, grew ſtiff-necked, would not plow; caſt off the yoke. But I will tame her, and bring her into ſubjection; bring her neck to bear my yoke, I will ſend mine afflictions upon her, to bring her neck to the yoke.

I will make Ephraim to ride] Not reſt in his own land, but be driven into exile, and toſſed, and tumbled to and fro; as Job 30. 22. Some refer this to Ephraims reigning; but this ſuits not with the ſenſe of the context. Rather thus, I will uſe Ephraim for riding; people ſhall ride on him: I will handle Ephraim more hardly, the whole Nation ſhall be carried captive into Aſſyria.

Judah ſhall plow] Neither will I ſpare Judah; but Judah ſhall have his judgement too; but leſſe then then of Ephraim. He ſhall plow and harrow, that is, ſuffer miſery by the Babyloniſh captivity: and this will be more tolerable then that of the ten Tribes; as it is leſſe trouble to the beaſts that plougheth and harroweth, then to the horſe that is ridden, ſpecially by a rigid rider.

V. 12. Sow to your ſelves] He continueth the allegory of huſbandry. And thereby exhorts them to Repentance; Or ſhews how he hath been doing ſo: and yet they continued impenitent; as it is in the verſe following. He is not wanting thus to inſtruct them, and to exhort them thus; endeavour your ſelves to do good works.

in righteouſneſſe] He calls them to the duties of the ſecond Table, which will looneſt evidence their repentance, if true; or their hypocriſie, if falſe.

reap] By Gods bleſſings that ſhall not be wanting, but is ready for them, upon their ſowing: If they reap it not, the fault is not in him, but in their default of ſowing; and ſo the way of their remedy lies open before them: and yet mercy, not merit, ſhall be their reward.

break up] Jer.4.3. break up, and ſoften your hard hearts, pluck up the ſinful weeds and luſts of them; uſe double labour therein, as in a waſte ground: to fit it for ſeed, Mat.13.7,22. Jam.1.21.

for it is time] High time now, without any further delaying it, and the time not yet utterly paſt; yet hope remains, God is ſtill ready for his part; the door is not ſhut, Eſay 55.6. See Pſal.27.8. and 32.6. 2 Cor.6.2.

till he come] As he will, upon your ſeeking him: and yet you muſt not limit him, but wait his own time till he come.

and rain righteouſneſſe] His grace ſhall be like a ſhower of ſeaſonable rain, plentifully to fructifie, and bring on your harveſt, and fruits of righteouſneſſe. Your labour of ploughing, and ſowing ſhall not be in vain. His grace and bleſſing ſhall be upon you, according to the truth of his promiſes. Others underſtand this to be ſpoken of Chriſt, who brought the true righteouſneſſe into the world, Dan.9.24. to receive which, the preparation of the heart is neceſſarily required.

V. 13. ye have ploughed wickedneſſe] Job 4.8. Prov.22.8. Gal.6: 7. ye have done contrary. By art and endeavour, you have ſtirred up and practiſed your natural malice, to cauſe it to produce many evil acts.

reaped iniquity] Namely, the juſt puniſhment thereof. Or thus, your ploughing and harveſt were both alike, both ſinful; your work and wages well agree. Or thus; your reaping anſwers well to your ploughing, your continuing correſponds to your beginnings both alike ſinful.

ye have eaten] Ye have in effect tryed what vanity was in your hopes, grounded upon your wickedneſſes; a fruit well worthy of your perfidiouſneſſe.

becauſe] The chief cauſe, and head-ſpring of their miſ-doings; the relying upon their own wiſdom and ſtrength; and not ſubmitting to Gods wiſdom, and reſting upon his power; and thereupon ſlighting the prophets admonitions, and Gods threatnings.

V. 14. Therefore] Upon the conviction, the ſentence follows.

Arbel; which may be the ſame with this. And then this was an example of a fearful judgement and vengeance freſh even before their eyes, and famouſly known to them. The Vulgar Latine tranſlate thus; thy fortreſſes ſhall be ſpoiled, as Shalman was ſpoiled by his houſe, who judged Baal in the day of battel. And ſo do the LXX, and Theodoret. And in this tranſlation there ſeems relation to be had to that hiſtory, Judg.7 and 8 Chapters, where Gideon, who judged Baal, and therefore was called Jerubbaal (a word without pricks or vowels, little differing from Arbel) ſpoiled Zalmunna in the day of battel.

the mother] A proverbial kind of ſpeech, to deſcribe a total deſtruction, Chap.13.16. Gen.32.11.

V. 15. So ſhall Bethel] He ſaith not the Aſſyrian ſhall do it, or God ſhall do it: but Bethel ſhall do it. By this expreſſion the more powerfully to ſhew, that that woful evil and the cauſe of it was in themſelves: your ſelves are the deſtroyers of your ſelves, think not ſo to put it off to any others. As if he ſhould ſay; Your idolatry which you run headlong into, the chief mother whereof is Bethel, ſhall be the cauſe of all this: God is juſt herein. Bethel was formerly called Luz, differing from that Luz, Joſh.16.2. Judg. 1.26, this was weſt of Ai and Beth-aven in the ſouth part of Jury on a mount, Joſh.7.2. & 18.12,13. Hard by it Abraham pitched his tent, Gen.12.8. and here Jacob ſaw the viſion of the ladder, Gen. 28. It had a King when Joſhua conquered it, Joſh.12.16. and then allotted to the tribe of Benjamin, Joſh.18.22. Here Samuel kept his Aſſizes, when he rid his circuit yearly, 1 Sam.7.16. And here Jeroboam put one of his golden Calves, and built an altar, high place, and grove, 1 King.12. and 13. Chapters: yet Abijah took Bethel from Jeroboam, 2 Chron.13.19. but it ſeems it was ſoon after loſt; and became the King of Iſraels chappel and court, Amos 7.13. had a School, and Colledg of Prophets, 2 King.2. Hither came the Prieſt ſent by the Aſſyrian, 2 King.17. Joſiah polluted and deſtroyed all the monuments of idolatry there, 2 King.23. 4,15,16.

Verſ. 1. When Iſrael] In this Chapter God tells his love to Iſrael, when he was a childe. Iſrael ſins then: and now. His judgements therefore threatned by Aſſhur. His fierce anger againſt them. Which yet he will aſſwage. His promiſe of their coming in to Chriſt.

Iſrael was a childe] Or, becauſe Iſrael was a childe; or becauſe he is a childe of Iſrael. In Iſraels firſt riſe in Egypt, where he was as a carkaſſe in a grave, as an Embrio in the womb; whereupon his bringing forth thence is called the day of his nativity, Chap.2.15. In his firſt beginning, when firſt he began to be a Nation there, ſee Jer.2.2. Ezek.16.22. Alſo it is true of Chriſt, who when he was a childe fled thither from Herod, and came thence to Judea, where by his death he delivered his people from the bondage of ſin, figured by that Egyptian bondage. This Expoſition the Evangeliſt maketh, Mat.2.15. See Annotations on Chap.6.2.

I loved him] Freely of my ſelf without any worth or merit in him. The more monſtrous now is their ingratitude. See Rom.9.11, 12,13. Mal.1.verſ.2,3. Or, underſtanding it of Chriſt, it ſuits with that, Mal.3.17. & 12.18. & 17.5. 2 Pet.1.17.

and called] The ſign and fruit of his love, Exod.4.22,23. Deut. 4.20.34. This is literally true in Iſrael, his adopted ſon, Jer. 31. 20. Myſtically, in Chriſt, his natural Son: true in the body of the Church; and true in the Head of the Church. That call, and deliverance out of Egypt, was but a prædium, pledge, a type of the true ſpiritual and perfect deliverance and redemption by Chriſts coming out of Egypt. St. Matthew therefore, Chap.2.15. doth more then allude to this place, when he ſpeaketh of the fulfilling of that which is here ſpoken.

my Son out of Egypt] Wonderful love, 1 John 3.2. See Exod. 4.22,23. and alſo Mat.2.15. Chriſt was in Egypt for a time to decline the cruelty of Herod. LXX thus; his ſons. So making the meaning to be, that God therefore brought the Iſraelites, the poſterity of Jacob, out of Egypt, becauſe he loved Iſrael or Jacob, when he was a childe; yea before he was born, as it is, Rom.9.11, 13. which ſeems the proper meaning of the Prophet: yet therein a type and figure of Chriſt were they; Egypt a type of Hell; the Iſraelites a type of the faithful people, and of Chriſt their head, their redeemer and deliverer.

V. 2. As] This belongs onely to Iſrael; no wayes to Chriſt. All things that were ſpoken of the High Prieſt, of David, and others that were types of Chriſt, yet agree not to Chriſt: they were types but in ſomething.

they] The Prophets all, and often.

called them] Not as that call was, as in the former verſe: but by their exhortations, and ſermons, calling them ſo to repentance and to my true ſervice, which was the chief end for which they were called out of Egypt, Exod. 4.23. but they turned their backs to them, Jer.2.27.

ſo] Openly, and as of purpoſe, contemptuouſly, they went a clean contrary way.

from them] From the Prophets of God; they would have nothing to do with them; nor their word and doctrine. Where the Word is not the favour of life unto life, it will be the ſavour of death unto death. LXX thus; From my face.

they ſacrificed unto Baalim] Their leſſer gods, their patrons. For no doubt they acknowledged one onely ſupream Deity. This a further degree of ſin then the former. Of Baalim ſee Chap.2.13. 16,17. Judg.2.11. and often in that book, and in the ſecond book of Chronicles, and in Jeremie.

and burnt incenſe] God will not have incenſe burnt, nor ſuch things done to images; as Papiſts do.

V. 3. I taught] God ſhews here his further love to them, and the continuation of it, to goe] As a nurſe doth the Infant. See Exod. 19.4. Numb. 11. ver. 12. Deut.8.4. & 32.10,11,12. as Eſay 5.2,4.

taking them by their armes] As nurſes uſe; yet ſome underſtand this of Ephraims embracing Baalim, and images, verſ.2. as an harlot doth her lovers.

knew not] Or, acknowledged not. The more ſtupid and monſtrous ingratitude.

that I healed them] Saved them from thoſe plagues of Egypt, and in all thoſe dangers in the wilderneſſe, Deut.8.2,3,4,5. Exod. 15.26. & 23.25.

V. 4. I drew them] God continues on in the ſame point. I uſed them not with rigour, but gently. A phraſe taken from cattle, bred up to carry or draw, which by a good maſter are uſed gently, and brought to their labour without violence.

with cords of a man] Humanely, courteouſly. I did not drag, or drive them as ſlaves; but allure and draw them on as ſons.

take off] Heb. lift up. Eaſe them every way.

the yoke on their jaws] By which muſt be underſtood the muzzel, for otherwiſe a yoke doth not uſe to be laid upon the jaw: or jaws taken by Synecdoche for the whole head and neck.

I laid meat unto them] Which they could not take till the muzzel was removed. Or, I laid it before them that they might feed with eaſe and quietneſſe; continuing ſtill my kind uſage of them. The Vulgar Latine thus; Declinavi eum ut veſceretur. LXX ſo render the words, as amounts to this meaning; I will chaſtiſe them as a father, when he raps or ſtrikes his ſon, and by my looks I will prevail againſt them, i.e. by a blench only, and caſt of mine eye, I will overthrow them.

He ſhall not return] Or, he ſhould not have returned. The body of this nation ſhall not go for ſafety into Egypt, which is a friends countrey; but they ſhall go into captivity to Aſſyria, an enemies countrey; and herein will I enforce them to obey my command, Deut. 17. 16. and 3.3. 6. Thus is Gods judgement upon them, for their ungrateful requital of Gods good dealing with them.

Egypt] Which they hoped to be their ſhelter and Sanctuary, and were their confederate, 2 Kin.17. upon which hope they ſlighted the more the Prophets threatnings and thunderings.

but the Aſſyrian] That hope ſhall faile them: they ſhall be ſubdued by the Aſſyrian, and captives to him; engaged there, as wilde beaſts in a grate; bound up there as mad men are bound with chains; ſo they in Aſſyria, where Egypt cannot help them.

ſhall be his King] Or, the Aſſyrian, have been his King: Some thus; He ſhould neither have truſted in the Aſſyrian, though he were tributary to him ſince the dayes of Menahem, 2 King. 15. 19. But he ſhould have truſted in me. See Annotations on Chap. 7.11.

becauſe] The cauſe of this judgement. See Deut.28.68.

to return] Not into Egypt; but unto God; to repent and truſt in him, and his aid; though they were ſo many wayes invited thereunto.

V. 6. And] He proſecutes the judgement, to withſtand their ſlighting of it, and to cut off their vain hopes of eſcaping.

ſhall abide] Shall fall furiouſly; rage and reign, and remain, and devour. Vulgar, began.

on his cities] Wherein he truſted.

his branches] Or bars, the bars of his cities: or the towns and villages, which are as branches and boughs of his cities, all his forces and defences, as well thoſe which conſiſt in ſtrong towns, as thoſe which conſiſt in the valour of men. LXX for his branches have in his hands.

becauſe of their own counſels] And carnal wiſdome; oppoſed to Gods wiſdome, and his decrees and judgements. See Chap.10.6. Their actions and enterprizes which they have undertaken, by their own advice, Pſal.106.43. Hoſ.10.6. Theſe their counſels ſhall not help them, but help to ruine them.

V. 7. my people are bent] Set upon it; not hang in ſuſpenſe, or doubtful doubtful therein, which way to take; but resolved, and obstinate.

to backsliding] Inconstancy, as a starting bow; to Apostacie.

from me] To other gods, and idolatrous worship. They desire and expect that I should turn in favour to them, and relieve them, whereas they should turn to me by repentance, which they will not do, though the sword abide on them, and consume them.

though they called them] Though the Prophets called them, and sought to recall them, to bring them back to God; and do so still. Some thus translate; they called on the most High, i.e. prayed to him, but prayed onely hypocritically.

none at all] Heb. together they exalted not; but all with one consent, conspire herein. An epidemical and ecumenical disease.

exalt him] Lift up their hearts and minds to him, to glorifie him, by their conversion to him; to extol his justice, and mercy, and truth, by their trusting in him; & their cheerfulnesse in serving and obeying of him. Others thus, none would exalt, or lift up a foot to make any progresse towards the most high; but stood still in obstinacy, without any motion or signe, or beginning of repentance at all. Some thus; that because of their obstinate backsliding, God will not at all exalt them. LXX make the meaning to be, that the people of God should go into captivity out of their land, and God would be angry against them, and their most precious things, even the Temple it selfe, that it should be destroyed.

V. 8. How] Here God takes upon him the person and passions of a man, complying with our weak capacites. Not that there is any doubting at all, or changing at all in him: he shews hereby what this people deserved; and how he proceedeth not to execution rashly, or overhastily: and how in the midst of wrath he remembereth mercy, and mitigates the heat and height, and fierceneslle of his anger. Though thou deservest to be irrevocably destroyed, as those wicked Cities were, Gen. 19. 24. Amos 4. 11. and thou art near it; such is thy flagitious wickednesse; yet my mercy will not suffer it; and therefore I promise thee re-establishment by meant of the Messias, Chap.6 4.

mine heart is turned within me] Isa.63.15. Jer.31.20.

my repentings are kindled together] Or, heated: the founding of my bowels; the yearning of them. See 1 King.3.26. Cant.5.4. Isa.6.11. Gen.43.30. Lam.1.20.

V. 9. I will not execute] With extremity of rigour, and without remission. Thus fierce we apprehend God to be, when the nature of his justice moves him to execute grievous judgements: yet still is he without any passion; thus are mingled judgements, and mercies; threatnings, and promises; total destructions to the general body of the wicked people; and yet reservations of mercies to his holy repenting and elect remnants amongst them: yea migrations of judgements many times to the body of the wicked, for the godlies sake that are among them: he spares the chaff and straw, for the wheat sake that is in it. Gods grace of Election and vocation, is, and remains ever firm and stable to his.

I will not return] That I may save the remnant of mine Elect among the people; I will not consume them wholly by redoubling of evils. His Elect shall never fail; his Church shal never utterly perish.

I am God] And therefore most true, and immutable in all my promises. Thus God confirms and bears up the trembling hopes, and fearful tender consciences of his holy remnant: and this must be a strong bulwark to us in all our fears, against our own manifold frailties, and Satans fiery darts, and temptations; this must be our shield and buckler to defend us, to establish, and comfort, and quiet us, against diffidence and despair. We must not measure God by our selves; but better remember with whom we have to deale, and wholly rely upon his free and unchangeable nature, and promises. Isa. 55. 8. 2 Sam. 7. 14. And no cause for this dealing can God finde in us, or else-where, but onely in himself.

and not man] Who is changeable in his purposes, and would no wayes bear and endure such wrongs. Numb. 23. 19. Mal. 3. 6. 1 Sam. 15. 29.

the holy one in the midst of thee] I will be within thee present by my grace and spirit; as thy true Deity, the object of all thy devotion, religion and adoration; and the wel-spring and author of all thy holinesse: I will be mindful of my covenant; as in 2 Sam. 7. 14, 15. Psal. 89. 3, 33. Mic. 7. 18, 19, 20. and I will not be there any more as thine enemy.

I will not enter into the city] As a besieging and conquering enemy useth to do; with fire and sword, of rage and revenge; I will forbear, and spare, though the gates and walls of the city lie open and level before me.

V. 10. They shall] He goes on further, and promiseth not onely mitigation, but restauration: Some extend this prophecie to the Kingdome of Christ, and so their spiritual collection and gathering to him, and walking after him, as their Lord, and guide; and all this by the mighty, sound, and powerful preaching of the Gospel.

walk after the Lord] And not go from him; as those, verf. 2. And he shall go before them, and become their Captain and Leader, though in their exile and dispersion, he seemed to forsake and abandon them. He shall manifest himself to them in grace, and salvation in Christ.

he shall roar like a Lion] Jer.25.30. Joel 3.16. Amos 1. verf. 2. He shall cause the powerful voice of the Gospel to sound all the world over; by which the consciences being moved, men will gather unto him, Haggai 2.6,7. Heb.12.26. Others thus, He shall be terrible to their enemies, that none in any quarter shall dare to withstand their return from thence.

the children shall tremble] Shall run to him, as children do tremble, and run to their parents, when they are afraid; and so as the Lions whelps to their dams. The true Elect, children of grace, John 1.12. shall joyn themselves in spirit, to the Communion of the Church, from all the ends of the world, where they have been scattered. Others thus, That the mighty voice, and power of the Lord then to be shown, shall make their enemies every where to tremble, and fear to oppose them, and their return.

from the west] Heb. sea, taken and used to signifie the West, because the great Mediterrane sea lay west from Jury. LXX translate thus; the children of the waters shall tremble and run to him. Their meaning likely is, that the Græcias, & western Islanders shall be converted to Christ, the Gentiles shall be called in to him.

V. 11. as a bird] Chap.3.5. As a frighted bird, and dove, with speed fly to their nests, and lockers.

out of Egypt] Egypt, and Assyria, then were, or were to be the chiefest places of their dispersion, Hos. 11.11.

in their houses] This may relate to the Church, the house and habitation of God, and of his people. God will bring them, and place them there, safely and quietly to continue and dwell there. Thus the Prophets usually speak of the spiritual kingdome of Christ, of the erection and advancement of it, of bringing people to it, of the blessings of it, under the shadows of the earthly kingdom of the Jewes, the restauration of it, the reduction of people to that land, and the temporal blessings in it.

V. 12. Ephraim] This, it seems, might better begin the next chapter, wherein the Prophet returneth again to reprehensions, and insisteth most upon them; more fully to convince their consciences of their sins.

Compasseth me about] As enemies use to besiege a City on all sides round about.

with lies] In all their actions they are disloyal unto me, dealing with me falsly and fraudulently to circumvent me. And that not one way, but every way; besieging me with charms, as it were of lying frauds and deceits. Such were the particulars of their false worships, and hypocritical doings. They think thus to delude me, and save themselves: nothing is found and sincere in them. But all in vain; nothing but sincerity and integrity serves God, and is pleasing to him.

and the house] An explication of the former sentence.

but Judah yet ruleth] Or, when Judah yet ruled.

with God] Hath the true kingdom, and Priesthood, the right Temple, Altar, and worship of God, though Ephraim and Israel boasted of the greater kingdom, of many Temples, and Altars. In the Tribe of Judah, which hath not forsaken Gods pure service, there doth yet remain the lawful government of Davids progenie; In Israel not so.

is faithfull] Or, was faithful. He persevereth in my covenant and true worship, holding himself constantly to the faith and religion of his ancient forefathers; or to that which is taught them by Gods holy servants, and Prophets, and Priests.

with the Saints] Or, with the most holy, with the holy Patriarchs, and Fathers, to whom the Promises were made, yet all this is spoken, not simply to free Judah from all faults, but comparatively; in respect of Israel and Ephraim. And the Prophet most an end leaves Judah's sins to Judah's Prophets to reprove them, he mindes most his own Commission to Israel, and Ephraim. LXX here again vary from the true reading, and sense, thus. As the house of Israel and Judah compasseth me about with impieties; now God knoweth them, and the holy people shall be called Gods [people] the vulgar Latine thus; Judas autem testis descendit cum Deo, & cum sanctis fidelis, reading it seems עִיר for עַיִן, and יָרַד for יָרֵד.

CHAP. XII.

OF this Chapter, the Contents are these; Ephraims sin, and seeking for help to Assur; and to Egypt. Judah's sin. Jacobs dealing at his birth, and in his wrestling with the Angel? Ephraims sin of guileful covetousnesse; and of Gods dealing with him. His sin of Idolatry, even in Gilead, and Gilgal: and of Gods former dealings with Jacob, and with Israel, in these places. Ephraims sin and Gods wrath.

V. 1. Ephraim feedeth on wind] That is, flattereth himself with vain confidence, and feeds himselfe with windy, empty hopes; continuing in his sins, contemning the Prophets threatnings, and thinking thinking to escape Gods judgements by strange and unlawful Covenants; winde fills indeed, but feeds not.

the east wind] This wind commonly is hurtful, dry, and tempestuous in these Countries. Jonah 4.8. Psal.48.7. so the hopes Ephraim pursues, are not only vain, but hurtful to him. It is a pernicious and a destructive way, to put trust in the arm of flesh for defence against God, The LXX read it an evil winde.

lyes] Chap.11. ver.12. and 10.13, & 14.3. Esay 57.13. when all comes to all, they are no better, and shall prove no better then lyes.

and desolation] This is more. They shall not only be lying helps, but prove destructive, and the causes of their desolation: desolation shall be the fruit and issue of them. See Esay 36.6. Emptie and vain things, say the LXX.

a covenant] He points to the Particulars, and points out their vain and pernicious ways, Generals would not suffice to pluck off the Visors from such secure sinners.

with the Assyrians] Chap.5.13. & 7.11. & 8. verf. 9. and 10.6. Not contenting themselves with Gods covenant, and his defence, which would never have failed them, or proved a lie to them, if they had stood to his Covenant, and repented of their sins, But they forsook this, and thought not themselves safe under his wings; and betake themselves to these unlawful confederacies; which were expresly forbidden them; by them to strengthen themselves in their rebellion against God; and in the idolatrous prophanation of his worship. See Jer.2.18.36. 2 King.15.19. Ezech.23.5. See the like, 2 Chr.28.16.21. 2 King.16.7, Ezech.17.15.

oil is carried into Egypt] Sweet smelling oil, whereof there was great plenty in Judea; 2 King.20.13. Ezech.27.17. meaning, presents to get friendship, 2 King.17.4. This forbidden, Esay 30. 2. and 31.1. & 36.6. See Esay 57.9. & 30.6. Thus they were at cost to buy and purchase their own harm. Esay 57.13.

V. 2. The Lord] Threatens Judah; And this to affright Israel the more, who was in a far worse case then Judah, and must therefore needs expect more grievous plagues. Luke 23 31. 1 Pet.4.17.

a controversie with Judah] Judah praised for their Kingdom, Priesthood and worship, Chap.11. verse 12. yet their lives and manners faulty; though nothing so much as Israels. That which I have spoken of Judah, is not to free him from all defects; for he also hath his grievous faults; but because Gods true service is yet remaining there, God will yet reprove and redargue him with words: but as for the ten Tribes, he will judge them with deeds, seeing they are almost become incapable of all correction. See Chap.4.15. & Chap.6.11.

punish] Heb. visit upon.

Jacob] He doth but touch upon Judah by the way: But his heavy wrath shall fall upon Jacob or Israel: to punish and recompence them according to their demerits, their shameful ways and works, and their obdurate and obstinate continuance in them, which they would not by any means be beaten from.

V. 3. He took] In the name of Jacob and Israel they much gloried; they boasted of Jacob their father, that they were the Sons of Jacob. See Joh.4.12. Micah.2.7. Esay 44.5. But he shews how far they had fallen from his example, how far unlike they were to him, and degenerate, as Joh.8.39.44.

by the heel in the womb] This he did, not out of his own judgement and industry; but God by his free Grace guided him so to do; and by this signe testified his free love and election of him. See Mal.1. verse 2,3. Rom.9.13. and so in his chosing of you in him, to be his peculiar people, without any merit or worth of yours. And therefore so much the greater now is your ingratitude, and the fouler your fall from him to idols. See Gen.25. verse 26. These histories seems to be alleaged here, to reprove Israel for their ingratitude, after so many great benefits of Gods towards their forefathers; which he reduceth to two heads, figured here in these two histories; one is Jacobs election before Esau his brother; the other, his deliverance from all those evils wherewith God had tried and exercised him. Or, thus Jacob your father left nothing unattempted whereby to get the blessing; if then ye be his children strive ye to turn to God, as it is ver.6. imitate his Piety; else unworthy are ye to bear his name; and most worthily deserve to be punished.

by his strength] Which was given him by Gods grace, A figure of the Spiritual strength of faith, and the Spirit. He did thus. But ye the Spiritual strength of faith, and the Spirit. He did thus. But ye far otherwise. And so his praise the more redounds to your dispraise; The sacred memory of his strength and power with God, the more shames your impotent and slavish service of idols: ye have lost then that dignity ye would derive from him; ye have stained it by your contrary base doings, ye but foolishly glory in his name; ye are a shame to him from whose example yee do so shamefully Prevaricate.

he had power] Heb. was as a Prince or behaved himself Princely. See Gen.32.24.

with God] With the Son of God, who appeared to Jacob in a humane shape; who also by reason of his office of mediator, is afterward called Angel, which name is also given to the Son of God, Gen.48.16.

V. 4. over the Angel] The Angel of the covenant, Jesus Christ, the mediator, called also God. ver. 5. and Jehovah, ver.5.

and prevailed] Whence God honours him with the name of Israel, Gen.32.28. and 35.10. not only applauding thereby his heroicall and more then Angellcall Power, but granting the victory to him, and some way yeilding himself to be overcome by him.

he wept] Not the Angel; though some would have it so. But Jacob wept; though Moses record it not: wept in prayer, like to that Heb.5.7. So here Jacob wept.

and made supplication] For a blessing, Gen.32.26. And for strength, and prevailing therein. So he acknowledgeth his strength, verse 5. not to be his own; but Agnizeth the author from whom he fought it, and of whom he had it: And so God was pleased in such manner to distribute his strength this in wrestling, that the greater part of it remained in Jacob. And yet God gives no ground for Jacob to pride himself in this victory; but leaves him a touch in the hollow of his thigh, for his after weeping and humiliation. And yet Jacob for that hurt seems not after to give over wrestling with God, till he doth at last prevail. The vulgar Latin hath it thus, & in fortitudine sua directus est cum Angelo. Et invaluit ad angelum, & confortatus est.

he found him in Bethel] God found Jacob, say some Jacob found God lay others. God had found him before, there; Gen.28.12. when all alone he fled from his brother, and thought not God had bin so nigh unto him; yet God there vouchsafed to testifie his free love to him, and care of him. And God found him after there, Gen.35.9,10,11. to comfort him in his grief and sorrow for the slaughter of the Sechemites: And there again the second time he solemnly renews the memorial of that glorious name given to Jacob, that it might be ever famous, never forgotten. Or Jacob in this place of Bethel found God, even this Angel; and found him so gracious to him; as was formerly said, some thus, they found me in Bethel. LXX have for Bethel, the house of Or.

he spake with us] So spake with him there, that the substance and fruit of that speech appertained to his posterity, whereof we are. And thus the Prophet applies to the use of the people what he had formerly related of the Patriarch Jacob, to shame them the more, for their defection and apostacy, from the contrary example of Jacob their father, and from the gracious dealing of God with him, and with them in him, some thus, and there he spake with him. i.e. Jacob spake there with the Angel. And a divers punctation of the same word will bear it; עִמָּנוּ with us; עִמּוֹ with him.

V. 5. Even the Lord God of hosts] Jehovah which signifieth an eternal being, Exod.3.14,15. and is a name which calleth into his peoples mind the power and truth of God, and a pledge of his promises, which he will without fail perform, if they trust in him, and turn to him; and this name here given to Christ, to prove his deity, to shew that he is God manifested in the flesh, 1 Tim.3.16.

his memorial] Exod.3.15.

V. 6. Therefore] Upon the consideration of the premises, and of Jehovahs name and nature.

turn thou to thy God] From thy false gods, and false worship; to the true God Jehovah, and his true worship; and thy God by his covenant, and thy profession. Thus after convincing them of sin; he exhorts them to Repentance to return to God, and rest in him; for both these the words may import.

keep mercy and judgement] He shews wherein true Repentance consisteth. He begins with the duties of the second Table; as the more evident way of triall; and of conviction of hypocrites.

and wait] Couteining the duties of the first Table. Jer.14.8. and 17.13. & 50.7. Psal.39.7.

V. 7. He is a merchant] Heb. Canaan. The Prophet returns to reproofs; implying their impenitency still. Thus Esay useth the like terms; ye rulars of Sodom; ye people of Gomorrah, Esay 1.10. Ephraim is degenerate; and like the wicked Canaanite; a Canaanite rather then an Israelite; a curfed rather then a blessed seed. And the Canaanites ordinary trade being Merchandizing, with all the vices which were annexed unto it, therefore that name is taken for a Merchant addicted to dishonest gain, fraud, and avarice. However; the word is also of that signification, see Ezek. 16.3. Zeph.1.11. and is very often also taken for a deceiver. And such was Ephraim.

the ballances] They kept not mercy and judgment, as was required in the former verse: but practised deceit, and oppression, used fraud and force, towards their neighbours.

V. 8. yet] Thus they please themselves in their riches, and trust in their prosperity; and thereby measure out Gods love unto themselves; and that notwithstanding all the Prophets rebukes, and threatnings; they heed not, they care not what they say.

I am become rich] Zach.11.5.

in all my labours] Or, all my labours suffice me not] I have not stained ſtained my trading with any great miſdeed, only I have uſed certain ſubtilties, and arts therein, as were not ſubject to the law: words of a prophane and cauterized conſcience.

ſhall none] He ſhall have puniſhment of iniquity, in whom is ſin. Therefore, that I have none; appears in that, it goes well with me, and I eſcape unpuniſhed. All my labours, whereby I have required riches, have not found me out, to be guilty, or puniſhable. Thus the wicked ſooth up themſelves in their proſperity. The LXX corrupt the ſenſe in their rendition of the words.

that] Heb. which, ſome thus; which were an heinous crime to have any iniquity found in my wayes. Thus they would juſtifie themſelves in the higheſt degree; and ſo become neereſt to ruine. Thus their boaſting confidence goes further, that God would not ſo proſper them, unleſſe he found them free from any great ſin; he would not ſo favour them, if he found them ſo faulty. Thus drunken with their proſperity, that they call that to witneſſe their innocency, and ſo they abuſe Gods goodneſſe, and gentleneſſe, and lift up their horns againſt the moſt High; as if his bleſſings and forbearance, and delay of puniſhments were teſtimonies of their unblamableneſſe, and approbations of their wickednеſſes; they are ſo intoxicated and infatuated, as they ſtick not to admire their vices for vertues.

V. 9. That am the Lord] That redeemed thee ſo miraculouſly out of Egypt, that thou ſhouldeſt be my people, and I ſhould be thy God; which thing ſhould never be forgotten of thee, neither the deliverance it ſelf, nor the end wherefore, though thou doſt obliterate the one, and pervert the other.

well yet] Notwithſtanding all thy unworthineſſe; yet I will out of my ancient goodneſſe do it, although thou be ſo corrupted, yet will I obſerve my ancient covenant which I made in the land of Egypt, towards my true Iſrael in Spirit, Chap.13.4. Others tranſlate, and expound ſo, as if God, in indignation againſt their former ſin, ſhould interrogate and appeal their own conſciences; whether he ſhould go on to deal ſo graciouſly with them, as is expreſſed in this, and the next verſes; and not rather diſdain ſo to do. And ſo they read the words interrogatively.

make thee to dwell] Deal with thee, as Chap.2.14. renew my mercy, to make thee renew thy duty.

in Tabernacles] I will deliver my Church from the Spiritual Egypt; and will make her paſſe through the wilderneſſe of the world, in particular Churches, aſpiring towards the heavenly Canaan; even as my people dwelt in tents in the wilderneſſe; the remembrance whereof is celebrated in the Feaſt of Tabernacles. Lev.23.43. See Zach.14.16.

as in the dayes of the ſolemn Feaſt] As I appointed in the feaſt of Tabernacles; ordained by me of purpoſe for the ſolemn and anniverſary remembrance of that deliverance; which yet thou ſo forgetteſt and doeſt obliterate, others expound it otherwiſe, thus; I will yet renue thy old ſervitude, and make thee to dwell in Tabernacles: again, as exiles and pilgrims in a ſtrange land; as they did of old, for fourty years in the wilderneſſe; ſo ſhall ye for an appointed time now do.

V. 10. I have alſo ſpoken] If we read it (as ſome do) in the future tenſe, then it is a promiſe alluding to Chap.2.14. meaning, I will amply manifeſt my ſelf to your poſterity, by my Apoſtles and Miniſters of the Goſpel; See Joel 2.28. But rather taking the word, as it is in the Preterтence, it denotes Gods care by his Prophets, continually uſeing them, one after another, by all means and in all manner and ways of preaching, as might beſt ſerve to inſtruct and reduce them. And it implies their invincible obſtinacy in their ſinful courſes, to their great reproach; others read this, as the former verſe, interrogatively; and underſtand it negatively, ſhould I continue to do thus, and thus?

uſed ſimilitudes] Grave ſentences, and doctrines, illuſtrated with ſimilitudes, according to the Holy Ghoſts Style, See Pſal.49. 4. & 78.2. Matt.13.34.35.

by the miniſtry] Heb. by the hand.

V. 11. Is there] Doubt they that? are they ſo blinde, ſo to ſooth up themſelves in their own fooliſh will worſhips and groſſe idolatries? It is ſpoken Ironically.

iniquity in Gilead?] There only among them that were carried captive by Tiglath-Pileſer? of Gilead, ſee on Chap.6.8. ſurely they are vanity] Pretend what they will, their greater zeal for Gods greater worſhip, and ſervice, their good intentions, and all their ſpecious pretexes, yet they are altogether vanity, have no foundneſſe and truth in them, are but colours and ſhews, frivolous excuſes, deceiving them: they ſhall nothing avail, nothing profit them before God.

they ſacrifice Bullocks] To idols; or ſo may be alſo to the true God, but beyond his command, wherefore it is all idolatry, ſee Hoſ.4.17. and 9.15. This they do, with great care, in great pomp, and great abundance, ſparing neither labour; nor coſt: yet are theſe but ſacrilegious ſacrifices, prophaning and polluting Gods name and worſhip, appointed by him in his word, the ſole rule of it.

in Gilgal] See on Chap.4.15. Or in Gilgal only? in ſome chief places only? nay every where rather, as it is in the next words: others thus, In thoſe two foreſaid places God ſhewed ſpecial mercies to your fore fathers, to Jacob, Gen.32.1. to all Iſrael, Joſh.5. How impious is it then to have theſe places ſo ſacrilegiouſly and idolatrouſly polluted and prophaned by you?

yea their Altars are as heaps] That is, they are innumerable, and at an end of every field, See Hoſ.8.11. & 10.1 many Altars, every where as means and monuments, ſay they, of piety and Gods worſhip in every place. But God himſelf appointed one only Altar in Jeruſalem for ſacrifices, and his worſhip, yet thus they went againſt Gods known will and expreſſe word; though he loves obedience better then ſacrifice.

in the furrows of the field] So many as heaps of ſtones gathered up in ſtony fields, to make the better way for the plough. Others thus, That their Altars ſhall be demoliſhed, and the ſtones of them lie ſcattered as heaps; God therein ſhewing his wrath againſt the idolaters themſelves.

V. 12. And Jacob fled] This people infinitely prided themſelves in being the progenie of Jacob, and in being Iſraelites; they cryed themſelves up by it, like to that cry, Jer.7.4. This many ways became a rock of ruin unto them. The Prophet here calls them back to a due recognition of Jacobs condition, what he was in the beginning, and what their anceſtours were at their bringing out of Egypt. He inſiſts upon both largely, to allay this heat, and prick this bladder, that it might not ſwell them up to burſt & break them, by their contemning hereupon, and deſpiſing of all other men; yea, of the prophets of God, and of God himſelf; as if the prophets threatnings were not to be ſo thundred out againſt ſuch a people; and as if God himſelf were bound to them, and had not, or could not have a Church and people in all the world without, and beſides them. By this he would humble this their pride, and draw them back to a due conſideration of the poor and beggerly, and miſerable condition of theſe their anceſtours at the beginning; and chiefly to admire God and his free favour, who did all in his meer mercy and grace, for their anceſtours, for Jacob, and the Iſraelites, in that their baſe and low eſtate. See Gen. 28.5.20. & 32.10. Eſay 51.1,2.

into the countrey of Syria] The meaning may ſeem to be, Remember the firſt voyage, which was Jacobs in extream miſery and ſervitude; and the ſecond (verſe 13.) which was your coming out of Egypt by a glorious deliverance by the hand of Moſes, that you may fear, leſt I cauſe you to make a third into wretched captivity.

and for a wife he kept ſheep] Gen.29.18 27. and Chap.31. 39,40,41.

V. 13. And by a Prophet] Moſes, that was likewiſe an exile, and a ſhepherd, as Jacob was, Exod.12.50,51. and 13.3. Pſal.77. 20. Eſay 63.11. And yet he but Gods prophet, and inſtrument herein, God the Authour.

out of Egypt] That houſe of bondage that iron furnace, where their male children were ſlain or drowned, themſelves ſuch ſlaves, ſo taxed and toyled, that death was ſweeter then life unto them.

and by a Prophet] Some refer this to Joſhua, who brought them ſafe to Gilgal, Joſh.5.

V. 14. Ephraim provoked] Thus ingratefully, unworthily they requite the Lord. See Deut.32.6. Jer.31.9,20.

moſt bitterly] Heb. with bitternеſſe, Deut.29.18. and 32.32. or; with their high places as the word alſo ſignifieth.

therefore ſhall he leave] He will not pardon him for his ſin, nor cleanſe him from it; but will keep it ſtill in remembrance to puniſh him for it capitally, at his appointed time. See Ezek.24.7,8. Exod.32.34.

blood] Heb. bloods, plurally; to note his great guiltineſſe in bloody ſins.

and his reproach] As he doth reproach God by his idols; ſo God will render and repay reproach to him.

ſhall his Lord] Who will not loſe his right and title, but retain his dominion over him, however he doth caſt off Gods yoke, and withdraw himſelf from the obedience of him and his Laws. He will as his God and Soveraign Lord juſtly puniſh him.

CHAP. XIII.

THe Contents are, Ephraims former glory, preſent idolatrie, and ruine that ſhall be by it. God ſhews his love of old: their ſins, his denunciation of vengeance, both horrible and ſpeedy. Thy evil (ſaith God) is of thy ſelf: thy help in me, thy King. I will or would ranſome thee from the grave, and death; yet concludes with Iſrael: and Samarians deſtruction.

V. 1. When Ephraim ſpake trembling] Time was that Ephraim the younger brother, was preferred before Manaſſeh, and made a diſtinct Tribe; yea and exalting himſelf in Iſrael, and having the rule of the ten tribes, for Jeroboam was an Ephraimite, he was terrible through its power, at his word they trembled: but now that it ſtrayed, and is run into idolatry, its ſtrength and glory is come to nothing, but when] When for all this, that God ſo honoured him, 1 King.11.31. yet he renders himſelf ſo ingrateful and vile, as to fall from God to open idolatry, and by it to erect and ſtabliſh his kingdom.

in Baal] Chap.2.8. Baal the god of the Sidonians, and Aſtaroth was their goddeſſe, 1 King.11.5,33. This idol and idolatry brought in by Ahab, 1 King.16.31. and in his time this idol had four hundred and fifty prophets, if not four hundred more, which were ſlain by Eliahs command, 1 King.18. verſe 19.40. A famous, or rather infamous idol this was See Num.22.41. Judg 6.25.1 Kings 19.18. 2 Kings 21.3. Jer.3.2.9.35. He had his Temples, Altars, Groves, Prophets, and Prieſts, ſacrifices, incenſe, bowings, kiſſings.

he died] His ſtrength and glory came to nothing he became like unto a dead carkaſſe; Jeroboams line was rooted out ſuddenly; and the kingdom fell to other tribes, and ſoon came to a dying condition; even dead in compariſon of what formerly it was, Sin and idolatry is the ruine of kingdoms.

V. And now they ſin more and more] Heb. They adde to ſin. Continue and increaſe in it. Their perſeverance and progreſſe in it is without end and meaſure. Jeroboam idolatry ended not, but with the end of his kingdom: yea, they multiplied more idolatries; and in effect proceeded to the clean renouncing of their God, and abrogation of his Law. Thus ſinners once forſaking God and his word, ſtill grow on from worſe to worſe. See 2 Tim.3.13.

molten images] Chap.2.8. and 8.4.

of their ſilver] Images of Silver, beſides their golden calves, 1 King.12.28. See Judg.17.4. Thus they make uſe of their wealth, and Gods bleſſings againſt himſelf: his diſhonour.

their own underſtanding] Mans deviſe and ſelf-wiſdom at the beſt pretend what he will, is no warrant for Gods worſhip; but only the rule of his Word, Chap.9.verſe 10. Coloſ.2.22,23.

all of it the work of the craftſman] Their idols and images conſiſt of matter and form. The matter is gold, and ſilver, wood and ſtone: this matter they worſhip not. But when the, forme comes to it, by the work of the craftſman, then they worſhip it. So all they worſhip is the work of the craftſman, made with their graving tools, hammers, cheſels, Bellows, fires, and other inſtruments. And when this form is taken away, their worſhip ceaſeth, and all that power and kind of divinity which they aſcribe to the image. This worſhip God renounceth, Acts 17.25.29. and derideth, Eſay 40.18,22. & 41.6,7,29. and 44.9,21. and 46.5,9. Jer.10.3,4,5. Pſal. 115.4,8. and 135.15,19. ſhewing the bruitiſneſſe and ſenſleſneſſe of it, that ſuch worſhippers are not men, but as bad if not worſe then the images themſelves, in worſhiping theſe as the images of God; what ever the excuſes, pretences, defences, and fair glosſes and flouriſhes of theſe idolaters be.

they ſay of them] The Kings of the tribe of Ephraim do command the people to follow the idolatry which they have eſtabliſhed, 1 King.12.28. Or the Prieſts ſay thus of their idols: or the people ſay thus; exhorting and inciting one another to idolatry: thus mad they are upon it.

the men that ſacrifice] Or the ſacrificers of men. And ſo ſome underſtand hereby that inhumane idolatry of ſacrificing men to their idols: forbidden Lev.18 21. and Chap.20.1,6. and yet practiſed, Jer.7.31. and 19.5. 2 King.23.10. A prodigious errour, and ſtupendious flagitious wickednеſſe.

kiſſe the calves] Whoſoever will do God ſervice, let him come and worſhip the calves which Jeroboam hath ſet up: kiſſing being an act and token of worſhip and religious honour. See 1 King.19. 18. Job 31.27. Pſalm 2.12. And this they perform to the calves themſelves. See alſo Gen.41.40. Symmachus thus, Sacrifice ye [to idols] and let the men kiſſe the calves. LXX thus, Sacrifice a man, for calves are wanting.

V. 3. Therefore] The puniſhment treads as it were upon the heels of their idolatry and ſin. The Prophet ſhews by four ſimilitudes; that though the ſtate of the kingdom, and they ſeem to flouriſh, yet they ſhall not be found and dedicate, but ſhall eaſily and quickly be diſperſed, and brought to nothing, See Chap.6.4.

as the morning cloud] Some thus, as a cloud of Locuſts, which though for a time it darkneth the light of the Sun, yet it ſoon paſſeth away.

as the chaff] See Dan.2.35. Eſay 17.13. and 29.5. Pſalm 1.4. and 35.5.

V. 4. I am] Chapter 12.9. Eſay 43.11. and 44.8. and 45.5,21.

the Lord] Jehovah, in oppoſition to all falſe and imaginary gods.

thy God] I have made my ſelf, and my will and law known unto thee, even ſo long; redeeming thee from the land of Egyp, that I might be thy God, and thou mighteſt be my people to obey and ſerve me. The more deteſtable now is thy defection from me, and apoſtacy to idolatry: no pretext of ignorance or infirmitie can excuſe or extenuate it.

from the land of Egypt] Chap.12.9. Thus minding them of his ancient love to them, and covenant with them, as Micah 6.3,4,5.

and thou ſhalt know no God but me] Exod.20.2,3. none of the gods of the Heathens ſhall be owned or acknowledged by thee; as being but fooliſh feigned deities, and I the only true God.

no Saviour beſides me] They cannot ſave, Eſay 44.10. and 46.7. Jer.10.5. But I am the only Saviour, Eſay 43.3.11. and 45.15,21. Pſalm 106.8. thou ſhalt not finde any other God that can ſave thee. Thou ſhouldeſt not truſt in, or relie upon any other.

V. 5. I did know thee] Thou ſhouldeſt know and acknowledge no God but me; the rather becauſe I prevented thee by my free favour, taking thee to neer to my ſelf, knowing, and owning thee for mine; familiarly revealing and communicating my ſelf unto thee, and taking care of thee, and providing all things neceſſary for thee: feeding thee, as the LXX have it. See Gal.4.9. Pſalm 144.3. Targum thus, I miniſtred all things that were neceſſary to them.

wilderneſſe] Deut.8.15. and 32.10. where God ſuſtained them miraculouſly with Manna from heaven, and Quails, and with water out of the rock. See Deut.29.5. The more ſhameful therefore is their defection and apoſtacy from him that deals ſo with their anceſtours; and ſtill ſo well with them. He often mindes them of this, wh ch it ſeems they too much forgat; for the due remembrance of it, would have kept them from ſuch rebellion againſt him.

V. 6. According to their paſture] When God had brought them out of the wilderneſſe to a land flowing with milk and honey, and fed them to the full.

their heart was exalted] They waxed proud and inſolent, fierce and maſterleſſe, Chap.10.1. Deut.8.12,13,14. and 32.15. This proſperity flayeth and deſtroyeth fooliſh ſinners, Prov.1.32.

forgotten me] Contrary to the expreſſe charge, Deut.8.11.13. and according to Gods fork knowledge of them, Deut.31.20. See Chap. 8.14. and 2.13. Ezek.23.35. and 22.12. Jer.2.32. and 18.14,15. Eſay 51.13.

V. 7. Therefore] To ſtartle and rouze them from their vain confidence and ſecurity, if poſſible to affright them with the fear of Gods wrath; which was a thing moſt neceſſary for ſuch ſinners, to make them know they have to deal with an angry God, he points out Gods judgements in three terrible ſimilitudes, of a Lion, Leopard, and Bear, Chap.5.14. Levit.26.21,24,28. Pſalm 38.16. See Proverbs.28.15. Lam.3.10. See the like fearful ſimilitudes, Mat.8.44.

as a Leopard] Which uſeth to lie in wait to ſet upon a man. See Jer.5.6.

will I obſerve them] אשׁור And ſo the moſt editions of the Hebrew text have it: and the Chaldee paraphraſe. But Plantinus editio hath נמר with Pathach and Dageſh, as if it were the proper name of Aſſyria. And ſo Jerom, and the LXX tranſlate it, as a leopard in the way of the Aſſyrians, that is, as they go to Aſſhur or Aſſyria: or as the leopard obſerveth with a watchful and harmful eye the paſſengers that travel from Judea to Aſſyria, being a dangerous paſſage for wild beaſts.

V. 8. as a bear] See 2 Sam.17.8. Prov.17.12. That is, I am become their implacable enemie.

the cawl of the heart] Pericardion, that incloſeth and incompaſſeth the heart, that lofty heart ſo lifted up, verſ.6. I will wound them mortally.

and there will I devour them] Namely, upon the high way; whereby are meant the inſtance and time appointed for Gods judgements. See the like uſe of this word, Pſalm 53.5. Eccleſ. 3.17.

the wild beaſt] Heb. the beaſt of the field, Lev.22.22. They, and all Gods creatures are his hoaſt againſt his enemies.

V. 9. O Iſrael thou haſt deſtroyed thy ſelf] Thy calf or thy King, or rather thy ſelf is the cauſe of thy own deſtruction: ſeek the cauſe where thou wilt, it is not in me, many have wrought together to overthrow thee, but I alone can ſave thee; and not thy kings in whom thou haſt truſted; or thine idol, and thy ſin: others tranſlate and expound thus; O Iſrael he hath deſtroyed thee, meaning thy king; of whom he ſpeaks in the next verſe.

but in me is thine help] Heb, in thy help. So by my covenant; ſo heretofore by thine often experience; and ſo ſtill I am the ſame without change; no cauſe haſt thou to complain of me, that I do not hear thy cry, and help thee in thy need. The whole and ſole cauſe is in thy ſelf; thy ſins obſtruct the way, cloſe up my hand of help, Eſay.59.1,2. Jer.5.25. Lam.3.44.

V. 10. I will be thy king] Or, where is thy king? Targum thus, where is thy king now? let him ſave thee, &c. And ſo the LXX where is thy king now? let him ſave thee, &c. And ſo the LXX where is thy king now? let him ſave thee, and ſo the vulgar Latine, according to the former rendition. In theſe words God challengeth his kingly power over Iſrael, which he had by redeeming them from Egypt; and derideth their fooliſh and wicked confidence, in oppoſing the help of their idols and confederates to his threatnings. See Pſal.13 8.8. I will be thy helper. Or this, where is thy king? where is he, or any other? Let him ſave thee, and oppoſe me. As Deut.32.38. Judg.10.14. Jer.2.28. ſpoken as a taunt, or bitter approach.

in all thy cities] Though never so many and strong, and unexpugnable, as thou thinkest and truſteſt, Amos 6.1. and thy judges] Princes, Peers, Magiſtrates, all; none can help thee, or hinder me.

of whom thou ſaidſt] Some refer this to the firſt asking of a King, 1 Sam.8.5. others to the cumulatory election of Jeroboam, 1 Kin. 12.16,20.

Give me a king] 1 Sam. 8.5. & 10.19. & 12.12. But chiefly he aims at their rebellion againſt the kingdom of David, in caſting off Rehoboam, and ſetting up Jeroboam, 1 King.12. To this very fitly and fully may be applyed that, 1 Sam.8.7.

V. 11. I gave] Heb. I will give. Then it is a threatning in both parts; becauſe they perfidiouſly fell from God, he tells them that he will give them into the hands of a ſtrange king, and overthrow their kingdom; fulfilled when conquered by the Aſſyrians; they loſt both their kingdom and countrey, as if they had been utterly rejected by God. Others read, I do give; that is, thou ſeeſt how in a ſhort time I ſet up and pull down Kings by my pleaſure and indignation; for at this time there were many changes of kings in Iſrael, ſee 2 King.15.& 17. The moſt follow Jonathans Chaldee paraphraſe, and read, I have given, or gave, whereof ſome ſay, I gave thee Saul (1 Sam.10.) in mine anger, 1 Sam. 8.6. and I will take him away that thou now haſt, namely, Hoſea the ſon of Ela, 2 King. 17.1. &c. in whom their kingdom ended. Others, I have ſuffered thee to thy hurt and damage, to have a King according to thine own will, though I did not approve of it, Hoſ. 8. 4. and I have aggravated my judgements the more upon thee, by reaſon of the frequent violent deaths of thy kings, which do bring thy kingdom into extream ruine.

a king in mine anger] 1 Sam.8.5. & 15.33. & 16.1. As Num. 11. 20,33. Pſal 106.15.

V. 12. Is bound up] As Job 14.17. & Jer.17.1. Not forgotten, though for a while ſpared; bound up and ſealed, and kept ſure to and for the due time of Gods vengeance. Nothing ſhall eſcape me, I will make them bear the puniſhment for all. See Deut.32. 34. Job 14.17. Jer.17.1.

V. 13. of a travelling woman] See this ſimile, Pſal.48.6. Eſay 26,17. Jer.6.24. and in other places: ſure and ſudden, extream and ſharp ſorrows ſhall come upon them, notwithſtanding all their carnal confidence and ſecurity.

an unwiſe ſon] If this people were not fooliſh and ſtupified, they would imitate little infants, who coming into the world do help themſelves, and ſtrive to free themſelves out of the ſtraits and dangers of the birth; ſo ſhould they have endeavoured to free themſelves out of their mortal danger and travels by true repentance. The LXX alter and change the words and ſenſe to the example and inſtance of a wiſe ſon, and his doing in this caſe of his child-birth.

ſtay long] Heb. a time. The travelling womans paths are ſharp but ſhort, Joh.16.21. And to ſtay long in the birth, is mortal both to the infant and mother. But this people aſtonied in their miſeries, and obdurate in their ſins, and deſperate, ſought not to come out of them by the pangs of true repentance, and ſo be born anew to God; but fooliſhly they periſh in them.

V. 14. I will ranſome them] If they would but repent indeed, he then would vouchſafe them a temporal deliverance from captivity; and a ſpiritual deliverance from the power of the grave and death. I am ready to do it for my part, if they hinder not, and cauſe the contrary. Though they were dead as it were in the grave, yet this could not withſtand my power, if their obduration in ſin did not alter my minde. See Eſay 48.18,19.

O death] And ſo the Targum and Jerome do read it. Thus the Prophet magnifies the vertue and power of God, meaning, that no power ſhall reſiſt God, when he will deliver his; but even in death will he give them life. St. Paul, 1 Cor.15.55. doth not properly cite this place, and the whole context of it, but rather alludes to ſuch words of it, as fit well his purpoſe to ſet forth the infinite power of God over death, and the grave. And the like to this the Apoſtles do many times.

I will be thy plagues] Or, where are thy plagues?

I will be thy deſtruction] Or, where is thy deſtruction? The Apoſtles words are, Death is ſwallowed up in victory. O death, where is thy ſting? O grave, where is thy victory? following there in the LXX, as it ſeemeth.

repentance ſhall be hid] My goodneſs towards them ſhall never alter; or rather thus, as beſt ſuiting with the whole context, there is no conſolation (for ſo the word alſo ſignifieth) for them; no repentance in me to alter my decree for their deſtruction.

V. 15. Though he be fruitful] Namely, Ephraim. He hath relation to the ſignification of the name Ephraim, and to the bleſſing which Jacob gave him, Gen. 41. 41. and 48.19. All which ſhould have made him the more thankful and obedient. But he proving otherwiſe, therefore, notwithſtanding all this, for his ſin and impenitency, the following judgment ſhall come upon him.

his brethren] To wit the other Tribes; though he be more in number, and greater in power.

an eaſt winde ſhall come] An inſp etuous and inevitable deſolation by the Aſſyrians, who aſſaulted the land of Iſrael toward the wilderneſſe. See the Annotations on Chapter 12.1. Ezek. 19. 12.

the winde of the Lord] Or, ſtrong winde of the Lord. as Job 1. 16. Pſal.36.6. Cant.8.6. See on Ezek.40.2. Or, raiſed by him, as his ſcourge; that they might know it came from him, and not by fortune or any other means.

his ſpring] Figurative terms; the ſenſe is, That every one of Gods bleſſings, which are the well-ſprings of all good things, ſhall be taken away from them: and conſequently all manner of happineſſe ſhall fail them. Thus eaſily can God do, when we abuſe his bleſſings, to his diſhonour.

he ſhall ſpoil the treaſure] Namely the enemie, (Shalmaneſer King of Aſſyria) ſignified by the Eaſt-winde, or, God by him; ſhall ſpoil the treaſure, or his land, as the LXX have it.

pleaſant veſſels] Heb. veſſels of deſire, though never ſo cloſely hid.

V. 16. Samaria] A plain Expoſition and application of the former ſimilies, and a concluſion of the ſermon. Samaria the head of the ten Tribes; and the well-head of their ſins and idolatries, Mic. 1.6. See Annot. on 8.5.

ſhall] What I have often denounced, and ye believe not, yet ſhall certainly and ſoon come to paſſe.

deſolate] See the accompliſhment, 2 King.17.

rebelled] They have no cauſe to blame God for it; but to thank themſelves, and their ſins provoking, and exaſperating him to it.

her God] That was theirs by covenant, which they have obliterated.

their infants] The grievouſneſs of the judgment, though they will not fear it. God hath cauſe of wrath ſufficient in the very infants themſelves, to juſtifie his judgments upon them, and to uſe his right and power over them; and will alſo be moved hereunto the rather upon the ſins of their Parents, and yet theſe outward judgements upon them may be mingled with mercies; as in Jeroboams childe, 1 King.14. ſpecially with ſpiritual mercies. Gods ſoveraign right and power over his creatures makes the ſenſeleſs and unreaſonable creatures to ſuffer for the ſin of man; Rom. 8.20,21,22. However we are to adore Gods judgements, if we cannot comprehend them, and to blame our own blindneſs, rather then by ſacrilegious boldneſſe to call to account, and take upon us to judge the great Judge of the world. But how much more vengeance then are the vile parents, and thoſe of riper years to expect.

women with childe] See on Chap. 10. 14. ſome yet expound thus: That notwithſtanding this Eaſt-winde, and all the evil by it, in this and the former verſe, yet Ephraim ſhall be fruitful among his brethren, and againſt flouriſh through my gracious promiſe.

CHAP. XIV.

Verſ. 1. OH] The contents are theſe; Iſrael exhorted to repentance; God promiſeth abundance of bleſſings to him, under many ſimilies, wiſdome required to underſtand theſe things.

Iſrael] He ſpeaks to the Remnant and holy ſeed among them; ſuch were involved and almoſt drowned in the univerſal inundation and deluge of ſin: But yet not paſt all hope of help and recovery, though the main body of them in general was deſperate, and already caſt off to decreed deſtruction, as he had eſt-ſoons formerly prophecied.

return] He exhorteth them to Repentance, to avoid all theſe plagues, willing them to declare by words their obedience and repentance. He ſpeaks to them lovingly, to put them in hope of favour, for without ſome faith and hope there cannot be any true Repentance.

for thou haſt fallen] Sight of ſin and humiliation for it, is the way to Repentance.

V. 2. Take with you words] I deſire neither ſacrifices, nor offerings from you, but do you preſent before me a ſincere confeſſion of your ſins, fervent prayers to obtain forgiveneſs, and ſincere actions of grace. Here are the true nature, acts, and fruits of Repentance: words, not counterfeit in hypocriſie, but ſincere as in the ſight of God, to God: words of converſion, confeſſion, deprecation: ſupplication, and thankſgiving: words from Gods mouth, and to be ſpoken unto him.

and turn to the Lord] Truly turn from ſin generally, and particularly to the Lord, and to the entire obedience of his will; even to him as it is, Joel 2.12. Deut.30.2. fully, not faintly.

ſay unto him] He dictates as it were the ſolemn form and manner of their converſion.

Take away] This includes confeſſion of manifold iniquities, which is the firſt ſtep of repentance, and this is an expreſſive prayer for the pardon of them, pardon through thy grace, and alter by thy Spirit.

and receive us graciouſly] Or, give good. Accept out of thy fatherly favour the true witneſſes and effects of our converſion: ſhew thy reconcilation to us, by thy gracious bleſſing of us, in thy grace and mercy is our all and only hope. LXX thus ſay unto him, that ye will no more deal wickedly, but will deal well.

ſo will we] That is all we can do, we can render no compenſation, make no ſatisfaction to thee: but only acknowledge and praiſe thy bountiful goodneſſe to us, Pſalme 116.12, 13, 14. And this is all God requires, Pſal.50.14. what good works we can do, are but ſacrifices of our Thankfulneſſe to God. Heb.13. 15,16.

calves of our lips] Declaring that this is the true ſacrifice that the faithful can offer, even thanks and praiſe, in ſtead of ſacrifices of beaſts. See Pſal.50 14,23. & 51.19. & 69.30,31. and 116.12,13. Lev.3.3. This is the true intent and ſubſtance of thoſe Levitical ſacrifices, Lev.3. & Chap.7.12. &c. and Chap.22.29. The LXX crifices, Lev.3. & Chap.7.12. &c. and Chap.22.29. The LXX have it, the fruit of our lips, whereunto Heb. 13.15. ſeems to relate.

V. 3. Aſſur ſhall not ſave us] Here is a more particular confeſſion of their ſins, wherein formerly they offended, and now promiſe amendment, See Chap.5.13, we will leave off all vain confidence and pride in humane power, and truſt in thee only. See Hoſ.5.13. & 12.1. ſee Annotations on Chap.7.11.

we will ride not upon horſes] Pſal.20.7. To ſeek relief from Aſſur, Egypt, or others, as formerly we have done, when we were in dangers and diſtreſſes, Eſay 30.7.15,16. & 31.1.

to the work of our hands] To idols: Putting our truſt in them, which is a ſecond way to withdraw us. Here they acknowledge their former blindneſſe, and madneſſe herein, and bruiſh ſtupidity. They confeſſe not more then truth was: God is not pleaſed with a lie. But truly in their own Conſciences, and yet ſo deeply. They condemn themſelves to get abſolution from God.

ye are our gods] And yet theſe men could plead as witty excuſes, and cover and colour their ſin with as much varniſh, and as many fair pretences and gloſſes, as idolaters now uſually do.

for in thee] In thee alone; and not in idols, or in Kings, or any creature; wherein formerly we truſted.

the fatherleſſe] To wit, every, perſon that wanteth a guide, relief and ſuſtinance, as we do, all ſuch as ſee they cannot help them: And in ſuch caſe we do acknowledge our ſelves now to be, depending wholly upon thy guidance, providence, and protection.

findeth mercy] Thus they acknowledge him to be the only true God: and themſelves fully to put their truſt in him.

V. 4. I will] It is an hard thing to perſwade great ſinners ſpecially lying under his Judgements, the ſigns of his angere to certain any hope of Gods reconciliation with them. Therefore to remedy this evil, and to keep them from deſpair or diſtruſt, he declareth by many and large promiſes under variety of ſimilitudes, how ready God is to receive them that do repent, to heal, love, and bleſſe them.

heal their backſlidings] Pardoning what is paſt, not imputing it to them; and by my grace preventing the like for the time to come.

love them freely] Singularly, with an abundant and conſtant love; freely, without finding any cauſe in them for it, and therefore the more freely being vouchſafed to ſuch unworthy ſinners, Chap.9.15,16,17. compared with this, ſhews the difference of Gods dealing between impenitent and penitent perſons.

for mine anger] Which formerly lay heavy upon him, ſhall now be turned away: not like that ſo often repeated, Eſay 5.25. and 9.12,21. and 10.4.

V. 5. I will be as the dew]: I will water them with my graces, and heavenly bleſſings; in oppoſition to that judgement, Chap. 13.15. The fruit of my reconciliation ſhall appear unto them; they ſhall finde by experience the bleſſing and benefit of it. Before they were dried up and withered with miſery, for their ſin. But now my favour ſhall be to them as the dew to the ground.

grow] Or, bloſſome.

as the lilly] Flouriſh ſpeedily with ſingular beauty, Cant.2.1,2. Chap.5.13. and 7.2. Matt.6.28,29. Vulgar Latine thus; I will be as the dew, Iſrael ſhall grow or bloſſome as the lilly.

caſt forth] Heb. Strike forth.

as Lebanon] As the cedars, and trees in Lebanon are rooted firmly, to laſt durably; ſuch ſhall their felicity be.

V. 6. His branches] Ariſing from ſuch roots ſhall ſpread. Gods bleſſings ſhall more and more multiply and increaſe towards him.

ſhall ſpread] Heb. Shall go.

olive tree] Which is always green, Judg.9.9. Jer.11.16.

his ſmell as Lebanon] wherein were many odoriferous trees and flowers. See the Annotations on Zech.11.1.

V. 8. Ephraim ſhall ſay] Thus ſay, as followeth, Renuing their confeſſion; verſe 2,3. ſome underſtand this, as the words of God to Ephraim, Thou Ephraim ſhalt joyn me no more with Idols, as thou haſt done heretofore; I will alone be ſerved in ſpirit and truth, 2 Cor.6.16.

is thy fruit] This implies, another ſimilitude from a fruitful tree. This may be underſtood of the good works of the faithful, brought forth in them, by the only power of Gods grace and Spirit John. 15.2.4. Or, rather thus: I am moſt fruitful for thy good, thou mayeſt readily and plentifully finde it in me.

V. 9. Who] An emphatical exclamation and interrogation: no doubt but Hoſeah in the whole courſe of his miniſtry for ſo very many years, preached much more then is in this book for deare. In many years, preached much more then is in this book for deare. In Preaching are gathered together. And he now concludes and ſeals up all with that, which in all likely-hood he had often uttered before, to raiſe the people up to a due conſideration of his prophecies: aſſerting the authority and uſe of them, and of the ways of the Lord declared in them, both to the good and to the bad.

And therefore he that hath any ſpark of true wiſdom, let him ſhew it in this; he will that hath any ſpark of true wiſdom, let him ſhew it in this; he will ſhew it in this. ANNOTATIONS on the Book of the Prophet JOEL.

THE ARGUMENT.

Joels time of Prophecie is not specified by the holy History: yet generally it is thought to be when Hosea prophecied: not onely because it is placed next Hosea; and before Amos; without any intimation of a differing time: but chiefly because the matters contained in it seem to fall in with the times of King Uzziah, of Judah; and of Jeroboam the second of Israel: though some do assigne unto him a latter time, upon consideration of those passages, Chap. 3. 1.---9. Joel preacheth to Judah, and declareth, and denounceth a general judgement of dearth and famine, caused by an extream drought, and swarmes of Caterpillars with Lion-like teeth, and other such like destroying Creatures; some eating what others left. Thereupon he exhorteth to Repentance, shewing it must be General, of all persons, of every age, and condition; because they had generally offended: And it must be earnest, and hearty, and testified by mourning, and humbling themselves before the Lord in Fasting, and Prayer: which if they do, the Prophet, from God, promiseth deliverance from that terrible plague of famine; and that their Afflictions and losses should be removed; and recompensed by a wonderful plenty, not onely of Temporal, but also in it's time of Spiritual blessings; under the Messiah; fore-telling so of the Gifts of the holy Spirit which then should abundantly be sent down and poured out; eminently at Penticost: Further they shall have redemption from their enemies, the Heathen round about: by Gods sitting to judge them, and to take dreadful revenge upon them, for the wrongs done to his people: concluding with a reiteration of Gods abundant blessings upon Jerusalem and Judah. The summe then, and Order is this: Joel first telleth the famine, and calleth for Lamentation and mourning, Chap. 1. Then he exhorteth to publique Repentance, promising a blessing thereon, Chap. 2. Lastly, he comforteth them, by destruction of their enemies, and Gods blessings on his Church, Chap. 3.

CHAP. I.

The word of the Lord] See Annotations on Hos. 1.1.

that came to Joel] Was deposited with him, to be imparted to the People, 2 Cor. 4.7. & 5.20.

Pethuel] Likely a man of note, and name, and fame. This is to distinguish him from other Joels.

V. 2. Hear ye old men] Signifying the Princes, the Priests, and the Governours, or such who by reason of old age have seen and heard many things. See v. 14. Compare Deut. 32.1. Psal. 49.1. Isa. 1. ver. 2.

and give ear] He implicitely chides their hardnesse of heart, that they were not sensible of these present plagues.

all] Young as well as old; none excepted: The matter in hand concerns all.

hath this been in your dayes] He calleth the Jews to the consideration of Gods judgements, and the greatnesse of them; so strange and unheard of formerly: all this, to shame them for their wretchlessnesse, and security, wherein they so pleased themselves: as if God were asleep in heaven; and to inforce them up to behold Gods hand stretched out, and his judgements thundering against them in so rare and uncouth a manner; and to call them to repentance, for their sins thereby.

or even in] Have you heard them tell any the like. Gods common judgements should affect us. But much more such extraordinary ones by their rarity should startle us, and astonish us.

V. 3. Tell] This is a more memorable judgement then to be a nine dayes wonder; the continuation of such a famine by such strange meanes. The use of it should reach to posterity. Thus the Prophets set forth Gods judgements, and improve them to the utmost.

V. 4. That which the Palmer-worm hath left] Heb. the residue of the Palmer-worm. Therefore this is not a threatning of judgements to come: but a narrative of that which presently did lie upon them: of the Palmer-worm, see Amos 4.9.

hath the Locust eaten] A description of a most great spoil made by these vermine: which joyned with an extream drought, had caused a most great dearth. See Chap. 2. 25. This famine seems not to be that in the days of Joram, the son of Ahab, King of Israel, 2 King 8.1. For this famine was in Judah. Neither yet that in Judah in the days of Jotham, mentioned, Jer. 14. But rather, that in the dayes of Uzziah, intimated, Isa. 13, 14. and Amos 1. ver. 2. and more fully, Amos 4. 6, 10, which is best agreeing with the time of the Contents in this prophecie: or else some other famine about that time, not mentioned elsewhere in Scripture. To take this off from the letter as some do, and apply it onely to the four several invasions of the Chaldeans and the devastations made by them; or, which is more, to apply these four Creatures to the four Monarchies; or to four chief vices, as some Moralists do, is a thing of more boldnesse then we have any warrant for from the Text. Those Locusts, Exo. 10. 14. were but for a short time. And such as they, should never be again in the land of Egypt; of Locusts, see Prov. 30. 27. Jer. 46. 23.

Canker-worm] Of the canker worm, see Nahum 3.15,16.

Caterpillar] Of the caterpillar, see Esay 33.4. Jer. 51.14.27.

V. 5. Awake] It is high time for to do, and not to continue wretchlesse and careleste any longer.

ye drunkards] That commonly after drink grow drowzy and sleepy; yet here is cause enough to awaken them. And what then should the sober do? He means, That the occasion of their excesse and drunkennesse was taken away.

and weep] And yet otherwise who so merry, and laughing as they.

from your mouth] That which was so pleasing to your palat, that your mouth did crave it of you; as the phrase is, Prov. 16.26.

V. 6. a nation] Joel tels of swarms of locusts, and caterpillars, like horses, & with lions teeth, spoken of in v. 4. by a tearm improperly attributed to those insects, see Prov. 30. 25,26. Some would understand this of the nation of the Assyrians, or Chaldeans, coming up in war against them; but this is not so suitable to the whole context.

my land] Gods honouring the land of Canaan.

V. 7. barked my fig-tree] Heb. laid my fig-tree for a barking.

casts it away] Having thus made them unprofitable, men care not now for dressing them, or to look for any fruit from them.

are made white] Without bark; as it were pale, a thing without bloud, and withering.

V. 8. Lament] O thou Jerusalem or Judah, mourn grievously, like a virgin] Espoused, and not yet had home; or presently after her espousals.

for the husband of her youth] Mourn grievously, as a woman which hath lost her husband, to whom she hath been married in her youth: or her young husband, as elsewhere it is said, a wife of youth, for a young wife. See Pro. 5.18. Isa. 54.6. Mal. 2.15. Others rather say, by husband is meant one that hath espoused a maid, and died before he came in unto her; or soon after the wedding, because here is speech of the virgins mourning.

V. 9. meat-offering] The extream dearth hinders them from furnishing their sacred offerings with bread, wine, and oil, &c. See Exod. 29. 40. Levit. 2. 1.

mourn] Partly because Gods service is interrupted: partly also because they want their ordinary food, which they got from the offerings and sacrifices.

V. 10. The field] He prosecutes the same matter more largely, in more variety of words, to work the more effectually, and make the greater impression upon a people so dull and obdurate.

new wine] All comfort and substance for nourishment is taken away.

dried up] Or, ashamed, Esay 24.7.

V. 11. Be ye ashamed] He labours still to have his word pierce into their heart; not swim in the brain, but sink deeper, and work shame and sorrow. He would have their senses teach them, and humble them.

O ye husbandmen] Or, the husbandmen are confounded, and the vine-dressers howl.

V. 12. Joy is withered away] He seems also to have relation to the feasts and merriments which were in harvest time, and in time of vintage, Psal. 4.7. Esay 16.10. Jer. 48.33. All to drive them from from dedolency and senselessnesse, under Gods heavy hand of judgment.

V. 13. gird your selves] He sheweth that the onely meanes to avoid Gods wrath, and to have all things restored, is unfeigned repentance. See Gen. 37. 34. and the Annotations there. He exhorts them to make use of this ready remedy; and to hasten the time of it.

ye priests] Begins with them, whose office it was to be guides and examples to the rest.

ye ministers of the altare] According to the Levitical law.

V. 14. All night in sackcloth] Watchings, humiliations, and sackcloth are signes and helps of extream mourning.

my God] Hardly your God in this your blockishnesse and stupidity under his so heavy hand of judgements.

Sanctifie you a fast] Chap. 2. 15. Appoint a time speedily for this holy exercise, and prepare your selves unto it by all acts of piety & devotion. Fasting is a voluntary and religious abstinence from all meat and drink, and from all corporal and sensual delights & comforts, so far forth as it will stand with necessity of nature, charity and comelinesse; together with a cessation from the works of our lawful callings; in that time, and by that means, generally to testifie the desert of our sins, to afflict our souls, and to humble our selves before God for them: More particularly, and punctually, to exercise, and increase our Repentance, and Prayer, in an extraordinary manner and measure, according to the occasion and exigence of the Fast; our repentance in sorrowing and mourning for sin past; both our own and others: And in confessing them and in forsaking, and amending them for the time to come; publiquely in a State; personally in our selves: And to exercise our prayer, in craving with more fervour and faith, aid and help at Gods hands, in all our necessities and extremities, corporal or spiritual: personal, or national; for the obtaining of blessings, or for the preventing, or removing of judgements, present, or imminent; felt, or feared; and so to gain our special suits for which we fast.

call a solemn assembly] Or, day of restraint, Lev. 23.36. Private fasting was not sufficient.

the elders] The Magistrates and chief of the People: their neglect of duty had set open the flood-gates of sin. They had need to be ringleaders in repentance.

and all] None excepted.

cry unto the Lord] Pray that he would take away the present evils. This was the end of their fasting and assembling: all to add wings to their prayer.

V. 15. Alas] Jer. 30.7.

for the day] Esay 13.6. we see by these great plagues, that utter destruction is at hand, greator plagues yet behind, if we prevent them not by repentance: but put it off from day to day. See Amos 6.3. & 5.18.

V. 16. joy and gladnesse] Deut. 16.11.14,15. Can we be so blind as not to see at noon day?

V. 17. feed] Heb. graze.

rotten under their clods] Because it could not grow up, by reason of the extream drought, v. 19,20. The Trent Bible very improperly thus; The beasts rotted in their own dung.

the garners] There being no need or use of them for want of grain.

V. 18. How do the beasts groan] Or, mourn in their kind. Then how much worse are beasts then ye? They also suffer for mans sins, and man in them.

the flocks of sheep are made desolate] Which otherwise feed in the most dry and desert places.

V. 19. To thee] From whom these judgements come, and who onely canst ease us of them; straight to thee, not to others.

will I cry] Though others will not, for ought I can do or say; yet I will do my duty, as a pious man should.

the fire hath devoured] The heat and fire of the sun. The drought hath burnt up the countrey, as if the fire had gone thorow it.

pastures] Or, habitations.

V. 20. cry also unto thee] In their way and kind, Psal. 104.21,27. 147.9. And other creatures, Job 38.41. When by reason of hunger or thirst they lift up their beaks.

are dried up] See Amos 4.6,7,8. Esay 5.13.

CHAP. II.

Vers. 1. Blow] What Joel had propounded and preached in the former Chapter, he doth repeat and prosecute in this: He represents the grievousnesse of the present judgement, And thereupon moves them again to repentance: And to the repentant he shews at large Gods gracious promises both of temporal and spiritual blessings.

ye the trumpet] Or, cornet, Numb. 10.9. As it were to give notice of the coming of these foresaid devouring creatures; that every one may prepare himself to prevent the scourge by repentance, and prayer to God to bear it patiently; and to overcome it by faith in his grace. See vers. 15.

tremble] Not trust in formalities of Gods worship, nor trifle with him in outward shews; but tremble and quake at the heart at his anger, and the signes of it, Jer. 5.22.

for the day of the Lord cometh] Chap. 1.15. See the Annotations there.

for it is nigh at hand] A threatning of further judgments; or enlargement and aggravation of this. See 1 King. 14.14.

V. 2. of darknesse and of gloominesse] Of affliction and trouble: and it may be he hath relation to the coming of these creatures in great swarms, whereby the air may be darkned, vers. 10. See Ezek. 32.7,8. Amos 5.18.20. Esay 5.30. & 8.22.

spread upon the mountains] Which shall in an instant cover the whole countrey, even as the morning light, or morning clouds and mysts, spread abroad on a sudden over the tops of hils. See Amos 4.13.

a great people] Chap. 1.6. & 2.11.25. See Prov. 30.25,26. This seems not to be understood of the Assyrian, or Chaldean enemy.

there hath not been] Exod. 10.14.

of many generations] Heb. of generation and generation.

V. 3. A fire devoureth before them] Chap. 1.19, these creatures going along to devour the countrey, which is rich & full of goods; and after they are gone by, every thing is found gnawn and consumed. To understand this fire of that fire which is said to be carried before the hoast of the Chaldeans as the god and guide they worshipped, is a fancy too far fetche.

garden of Eden] Paradise, Gen. 2.8. & 13.10. Ezek. 28.13.

V. 4. the appearance of them] He insists long upon this the more to affect them with it; they being so hard to be brought to it, and wrought upon by it, Rev. 9.7. of the horse, see Job 39.19, &c.

V. 5. shall they leap] Rev. 9.9. and make an horrible noise and concustion.

V. 6. All faces shall gather blackness] Heb. pot. Through horrour and hunger.

V. 7. Not break their] They shall not stop nor stay their pace, nor give the way to any.

V. 8. fall upon the sword] Or, dart. A term taken from the meeting of armies: to signifie, that there will be neither defence, nor resistance that can stay this tempest, but it will break through all difficulties, dangers, and obstructions, without fear or hurt.

V. 9. run to and fro in the city] A manner of speech taken from a city won by assault. Cities shall not withstand them.

V. 10. The earth] Hyperbolical terms, frequent in the Prophets, to signifie a horrible desolation.

quake before them] Heb. before his face. Meaning the people, whereof mention is made, verf. 2.

the sun and the moon] Shall be dark, with the over-shadowing clouds and swarms of these devouring vermines, wondrous expressions to meet with their wondrous stupidity. This may also be understood in the same manner, as Isa. 13.10. Ezek. 32.7. Joel 3.15. Mat. 24.29. unlesse it be interpreted, as upon v. 2.

V. 11. shall utter his voice] Like a Captain, incouraging his souldiers; or giving the signe of the battel.

before his army] It is Gods army; though the army it self know it not; and against him there is no resistance.

he is strong] Apoc. 18.8. Jer. 50.34.

day of the Lord] Jer. 30.7. Amos 5. 18. Zeph. 1.15. no abiding it; but to prevent it by repentance, Amos 4.12.

V. 12 also now] As I exhorted you before in the former Chapter, so also now again I exhort you to Repent, while there is yet space and place for it. And this the rather he renews, lest upon the premisses they might have doubted there had bin now no more place left for repentance; as if he should say, Though you have so long abused my mercy, and what lies in you let slip the time of turning, and shut the door against you; yet now, which no man would have thought, and your selves can scarcely believe, I still expect, and invite you to hope of mercy, 2 Cor. 6.2.

turn ye] Jer. 4.1. This is the end and scope of all the former judgements and threatnings, even to force them to repentance.

with all your heart] Not faintly or faindly, though not wait perfect repentance; yet in the sincerity & integrity of your heart.

fasting] With no ordinary and mean repentance; as ye have not meanly, but extraordinarily offended.

V. 13. rent your heart] Psal. 51.17. Mortifie your affections, and serve God with pureneſſe of heart, and not with ceremonies. The words of the Prophet, expounding as it were those words of the Lord, in the former verse.

gracious and merciful] Exo. 34.6. Psal. 86.5.15. Jonah 4.2. without hope of this, there could be no Repentance, but either dedolency, or despair; from both which the Prophet would draw them. He useth here so many words of Gods mercy, because it is so hard a thing to perswade sinners cast down, to over-master their own diffidence and despair, and to fasten on mercy.

repenteth him of the evil] Out of his infinite mercy he changeth, not his counsel or his will, as being sorry for having done evil, as men do when they repent, but the effects of his rigour into effects of his mercy, Gen. 6.6.

and not your garments] Onely as hypocrites do ; a like ellipsis is Gen.32.28. 1 Sam.8.7. That outward ceremony is not utterly rejected ; but when it goes alone for all, without the vital part and soul of it, the renting of the heart, and the inward man.

V. 14. who knoweth] Amos 5.15. John 3.9. Zeph. 2.3.

return and repent] He speaketh this to stir them up from their security, and not that he doubted of Gods mercies, if they did repent. See Josh.14.12. Exod.32.10. 1 Sam.14.6.

V. 15. blow the trumpet] Num.10.3. Namely, the holy trumpet, to call the general assembly or the people.

sanctifie a fast] Chap.1.14.

let the Bridegroom] What is lawful in it self, must at sometimes be forborn, Amos 6.4. Isa.22.12,13,14. To give our selves to pleasure, when God appears armed in weapons of wrath, is atheistically to scoffe at his power, and deny him and his providence.

V. 16. sanctifie the congregation] Appoint by proclamation, that all men Being duly purified according to the Law, may come to the Temple, to call upon the Lord, with mourning and fasting. See Exod.19.10,22.

gather the children] That as all have sinned, so all may shew forth signes of their repentance, that men seeing the children, which are not free from Gods wrath, might be the more lively touched with the consideration of their own sins, see Jon.3.v.7,8.

V. 17. Let the Priests] It was their office and duty. Not yet that the people must neglect their part.

between the porch and the altar] Whereof, see 1 King.6.3. This was the void space, Ezek. 8.16. where the sacred ministers prayed after the sacrifices were offered ; see the Annotations there. And on Ezek. 40. 48. & Chap. 43.13,18. The people were in an outer court beyond the Priests court.

spare] Nothing to be pleaded in prayer, but Gods mercy.

thy people] So again, thine heritage. Gods free and gracious Covenant is the ground of their plea ; and not any thing in themselves, Psal.74.1. & 94.5,14. Mic.7.18. See Jer. 10.16. Isai.63.17. Psal.33.12. Josh.7.9.

rule over them] Or, use a by-word against them. That thy people being constrained through want should put themselves into bondage to strangers : or, be subdued by them ; having no means to defend themselves, if the enemy should set upon them. See Isai. 26. 13. this evinceth not that the former judgement, so largely insisted upon, was the war, and sword of the Heathen Assyrians, or Chaldeans. The armies of enemies here are still those, Chap.1.4.

V. 20. I will send you corn] Verf. 24. upon your Repentance I will remove my judgements, Chap.1.11.16,17. See Psal.81.16.

V. 20. northern army] Namely, that great swarm of the foresaid destroying creatures which came out of the North.

in the land barren] That multitude shall be carried away out of your land, and like a great army it shall be driven into the wilderneſſe : the vanguard into the lake of Sodom, toward the East, and the rearward into the Mediterranean Sea, toward the west, Exod.10.19. Deut.11.24.

V. 23. in the Lord your God] In him, and his reconciliation, who is the fountain of all blessings : in him more then in the plenty he gives.

V. 27. And ye shall know] By my wonderful blessing of you, that I am in the midst of you] Vouchsafe to dwell among you, and am always present and at hand, upon all occasions, for your good, Psal.46.5. Isa.12.6. Hos.11.9. Zeph.3 15.17.

V. 28. Shall come to passe] Now he riseth higher, from bodily blessings to spiritual blessings. The people must not rest in the former ; but by them be handed to these.

afterward] In the Messias his days, I will poure down the gifts of my holy Spirit in abundance ; as I have heretofore poured out temporal blessings upon you.

I will poure out my Spirit] Isa.44.3. Zech.12.10. Acts 2.17.

upon all flesh] All manner of people, without any distinction of nations. Whereas formerly he imparted his Spirit sparingly to a few, here he doth it to all his Church.

and your sons] By the inward vertue of my Spirit, I will enlighten the understanding of mine elect, who of their own nature are but children in knowledge, or young men without experience ; or aged men weak of understanding ; and will give them a lively and Spiritual light of the Mysteries of the Gospel ; accompanied at certain times, and in certain persons, with prophetick revelations, Acts 2.17. see Num.12.6. Or rather, he shews particularly what he means by the former general promise ; all shall prophecie, all shall be taught of God, Heb.8.11. 1 Joh.2.20,27. Hab. 2.14. All which are spoken comparatively, in relation to the times before the coming of our Saviour in the flesh. All, of all sorts & sexes, shall have as much, and more light and illumination now, then the Prophets had in the Old Testament. See Mat. 11. 11. their common light of all now under the Gospel shall be better then that of prophecie of old, such light shall the Son of righteousnesse at his rising bring with him.

your old men] By an allusion to the visible manner of Gods gracious gifts and dealings with his people and Prophets, in dreams, and visions, before the coming of Christ. He describes the Spiritual worship of God, and the abundant gifts of his grace in the days of the Gospel : so applying here his speech to the better capacity of the present people, not yet confounding or disannulling the distinct orders of Ministers in the Church of Christ.

V. 29. Upon the servants and upon the handmaids] Persons of all conditions, be they never so mean shall be sanctified by me, and graced by the gifts of my Spirit : even these shall abundantly be filled with my Spirit. It may be by these terms, as some say, is meant the calling of the Gentiles, amongst whom slaves were bought, Levit.25.44. unlesse he mean the other principal effect of the Spirit of grace, which is to free men from the bondage of sin and the devil.

V. 30. wonders in the heavens] Chap. 3. 15. Mat. 24.20. Mark 13.24. Luke 21.25. He doth not threaten here, and terrifie ; but warneth the faithful what terrible things should come, to the intent that they should not look for continual quietnesse in this world ; and yet in all these troubles, he would preserve them. Or, this may import the fearful judgments of God upon the wicked for the defence of his Church.

V. 31. The sun shall be turned into darkness] Chap. 3.15. The order of nature shall seem to be changed for the horrible afflictions that shall be in the world. See verf. 10.

before the great] See Mal.3.2. & Chap.4.1. and 2 Thef.1.7.11. and Chap.2.2,3. before the day of Gods so fearful judgements for the rejecting of Christ when he came, and the contempt and prosecution of his Gospel. That day shall be terrible to the wicked, though a day of great joy to the godly. LXX thus, notable day. And so the Apostle seems to cite it, Acts 2. 20.

V. 32. whosoever shall call] In those prodigious calamities of the world, yet he will preserve and deliver his ; who by them will be driven to seek the Lord in prayer : when the state of things then doth seem to be in a desperate condition, yet this must not keep us from calling upon God by prayer, but rather provoke us thereunto, and that with confidence : knowing he can, and will save his, and if need were, out of death it self restore them to life. And this belongs both to Jew and Gentile ; as the Text here allows it, and the Apostle applies it, Rom.10.13.

on the name of the Lord] Gods judgments are for the destruction of the Infidels, and to move the godly to call upon the name of God, who will give them salvation, Acts 2.21.

deliverance] From those evils which shall trouble the world ; or, some remnant shall be saved. Gods Church shall never perish. He will still have a people on earth, to shew him faithful in heaven, and true and constant in all his promises.

the Lord hath said] In many places by his Prophets. See Deut. 30. & 32.43. To his word we must look in this case, and trust in his promises ; and not to our own sight, and sense.

the remnant] Which are not run into the general apostasie, and corruption of the world, Luk. 18. 8. This is added lest hypocrites, as their manner is, should shelter themselves under this promise. The true Church is but a remnant, a few, Luke 13.23.

shall call] Whom he shall move and effectually put forward to the participation of his grace in Christ : Gods gracious and inward call, out of his free election, and the good pleasure of his secret counsel ; and not any industry in man, or merit of man, makes this distinction and discrimination of their remnant from the rest ; which is therefore called a remnant according to the election of grace. See Rom.11.4,5,7.

CHAP. III.

Verf. 1. FOr] He prosecutes the former points of the restauration of the Church.

behold] It is a wonderful thing in it self, and almost incredible.

in those dayes] Being days wherein both Kingdom and Priesthood were lost, the worship of God, and the Temple overthrown. The Chaldeans ruling them, and tyrannizing over them, and themselves hated and scorned of their neighbouring nations, and of all the world. This in part, and figuratively may be thus understood of Gods vengeance upon the enemies of his people, after their deliverance from Babylon. But spiritually it may be referred to Christs judgements upon the enemies of the Church, by him delivered : and especially at the last and universal deliverance at his last coming.

I shall bring again] Yet Gods power then shall over-power all ; easily surmount all seeming difficulties and impossibilities.

the captivity of Judah and Jerusalem] This was done under Cyrus, and Darius : or rather begun then, and catried on to the coming of Christ, receiving its spiritual perfection in and under his kingdom even till his second coming, so accomplishing his vengeance on all his Churches enemies, and compleating her restauration and salvation.

V. 2. I will also gather all nations] The wicked nations which are enemies to me.

into the valley of Jehoshaphat] See verf. 12. 14. Sundry valleys are mentioned in Scripture. This valley is not thus mentioned elsewhere. Some believe that it is that which is called the valley of blessing, 2 Chr.20.26. where Jehoshaphat blessed the Lord, when he had discomfited his enemies. Others do firmly believe, that between the Mount of Olives, & the city of Jerusalem toward the East, there was a low valley of that name ; and that so the Prophet (he weth that the enemies shall be judged, as it were in the sight of the Church, Isa. 66. 24. See 1 Cor. 6.2. Others take the word Jehoshaphat appellatively, to signifie Gods judgments ; and the rather, because the word following alludeth thereunto : in the valley of Gods judgements, God will judge or plead. As for that fancy, that all the world shall be gathered together into the valley of Jehoshaphat before Jerusalem at doom-day, and God shall sit there in his throne of judgement to judge them there ; it is but an abusing of the letter of the Text, to frame and uphold such a fiction. The Truth that can be gathered is this, that God will set up his Tribunal in the sight and midst of his Church and people, and sit there to defend and preserve them from all injuries, and erect trophies for them over their enemies.

my people, and for my heritage] See Annot. on Chap. 2.17. See again my people, verf. 3. Gods precious esteem of his Church. He will maintain their cause, as his own ; as Naboth did for his heritage, 1 King.21.3. And this not for any worth in them, being such sinners ; but for his own meer mercy, having freely chosen Abrahams seed to be his heritage and peculiar people. See Deut. 32. 10. Zech. 2.8.

parted my land] Pickt out by my self, and peculiarly consecrated to the use of my people : they parted among heathens and strangers. See Dan.11.16,41. Hos.9 3. Ezek.20.6.

V. 3. cast lots] As upon my land, ver. 2. so upon my people here : impiously and imperiously domineering over them ; and at base rates, selling them ignominiously, and that to satisfie their lewd lust.

a harlot] That which the enemy got for the sale of my people, he bestowed upon harlots and drink.

V. 4. Yea] From the general, verf. 2. he falls here upon these particulars, to these neighbouring nations.

what have ye to do with me ?] With me, and my people ? He makes their case and cause to be his ; as Acts 9. 4. my people neither offended, nor provoked you ; and yet ye joyned of your own accord with their enemies against them.

O Tyre and Sidon] See Isa.23. and Chap. 14. 29.32. Both Prophets denouncing the like judgements against them, about the same time. See on Amos 1.9,10. & Zech.9 2.

will ye render me recompence ?] A retaliation for any wrong done you ? nay, it was your own covetousnesse, and cruelty, that set you on against me, and my people.

a recompence] Have I done you wrong that you will render me the like ? yea, ye provoke me without any cause given you. Or, it lyeth not in your power to give me satisfaction, for the spoils and wrongs which ye have done my people : therefore you must bear the punishment thereof in your persons, according to the law for theft, Exod. 22. 3.

swiftly] Thus God sees and takes to heart the afflictions of his people, and will soon revenge them. See Apoc.19.1. Psal.58.10.& 79.10. Ezek.25.14. Luke 18.18. Heb.10.30.

V. 5. my] Thus God still owns the goods, and affairs of his people, as his own.

silver] Being greedy of the prey and spoil and gratified with it by the Jews enemies, whom they assisted in the war.

into your Temples] The spoils of my Temple. And thus to the scorn of God, erecting, as it were, in their idol-temples, a trophie of victory over him.

pleasant things] Heb, desirable. See 2 Chron.18.18.

V. 6. Grecians] Heb. the sons of the Graecians, Transmarine and ourlandish people. Javans posterity were in Europe and Graecia, Gen.10.4,5.

far] That they might have the lesse hope to return thither again.

V. 7. Behold I will] God for a time forsook them ; yet so, as no distance of place by sea or land should hinder him from raising and bringing them back again ; which he chiefly did in the spiritual reducing of them to the Church and kingdom of Christ.

return] As v. 4. God will never forsake his Church, though for a while he do chastise her ; nor shall her enemies escape unpunished, though for a time they triumph over her.

V. 8. And I will sell] A strange change and vicissitude and just retaliation of that ver. 6. And God himself will be the Author of it ; He adjudgeth them to this slavery and vassalage, many examples are in Scripture of like Retaliation ; as Judg.1.7. 1 Sam.15 33. Isa. 33.1. So the Egyptians were drowned that had drowned the male children of Israel.

and they shall sell them] For afterward God sold them by Nebuchadnezzar, and Alexander the great, for the love he bare to his people ; and thereby they were comforted as though the price had been theirs. And haply the Jewes themselves by the meanes and favour of Nebuchadnezzar and Alexander, had an hand in the selling of them ; as they by like meanes got an hand in selling the Jewes.

Sabians] Gen.10.7. Job 1.15. People of the East.

the Lord hath spoken it] The sentence is past, and it is not now to be avoided.

V. 9. Proclaim] An Ironical challenge to all Christs enemies, for to do the uttermost of their power against him, and his Church ; that they may all be overcome and overthrown. See Esay 8.9,10. Apoc.16.14. Others thus ; He goes on to denounce war to those Heathen nations that had afflicted his people : and he doth this in so many words and ways, as representing the same to their eyes ; as as in a lively picture, the more thereby to move and affect the wicked nations that used to scoffe at Gods judgements, and the threatnings of them ; & to comfort his people in the midst of these dangerous concusions in the assured hope and expectation of their deliverance, safety, and salvation, when God shall thus take due revenge on his and their enemies ; and in the mean time to arm them with patience in their sufferings, beholding this horrible spectacle of Gods wrath upon their oppressors.

Prepare war] Heb. sanctifie. God will raise up horrible troubles in all the world, but yet for the good of his Church, his remnant.

V. 10. beat your plowshares] The phrase is inverted, Esay 2.4. Mic.4.3. where peace is promised, & prophecied to be in the kingdom of Christ. But where warre is, there is no use of the plow, the fields are forsaken, none dare go forth to till the land : all grows waste, all betake themselves to the sword. Others thus, when I shall execute my judgements against mine enemies, I will cause every one to be ready : and to prepare their weapons to destroy one another, for my Churches sake.

let the weak] Not plead exemption from the war by age, or sickneſſe ; here must be no excuse admitted, all must encourage themselves to it.

V. 11. assemble your selves] Do your utmost, all of you ; let none be spared ; ye shall be brought down ; none shall want his plague and judgement.

cause thy mighty ones to come down O Lord] Or, the Lord shall bring down. Namely, the holy Angels, who are thine armies, to discomfit thine enemies. See Psal. 103. 20. Apoc. 12.7. Thus he turns his speech to God on this ; There the Lord will cast down and overthrow thy strong ones ; even the strongest enemies of his Church and people. Thus in the most grievous afflictions God will still take care of his Churches safety : and revenge them of their enemies, after he hath a while by them chastised his people, to practise their patience, and amend their manners.

V. 12. Let the Heathen] God still goes on to shew, that at last he will be the avenger of his people. He is not idle, or carelesse of their their sufferings; but onely a while defers the punishments, till the wickednesse of his, and their enemies, be full and ripe for judgement.

ſit to judge] Sit upon his Tribunal; and cauſe all the Heathen round about, from all parts of the world, to undergo his judgements there.

V. 13. Put ye in the ſickle] Wherein he ſpeeds his judgements upon the wicked; which the godly groaning under their burdens, do think according to the prompting of the fleſh, that he doth defer over long. He expreſſeth the reaſons of his preſent execution, under the metaphors of a ripe harveſt, and vintage, which he plainly expounds in the laſt words, Rev. 14. 15, 18. O ye Angels, it is time to execute my judgements, for the malice of the world is grown to its height. This is Gods anſwer to the Prophets ſpeech.

is great] As Gen. 15. v. 16. Jer. 51. 13. Mat. 13. 30. Dan. 8. 23.

V. 14. multitudes] Multitudes of ſlain enemies. Though now they proudly domineer and inſult over the Church, yet they ſhall appeare at his Tribunal in the day of his judgement and execution.

deciſion] Or, Conciſion, or threſhing, or, of threſhing: for ſo the word is uſed, Eſay 28. 27. & 41. 15. naming the place ſo from the event, alluding to the harveſt, verſ. 13, and haply to the valley of Jehoſhaphat, where in time paſt he threſhed the Moabites, and Ammonites.

V. 15. The ſun] This ſerves to awaken the wicked that are aſleep, or dead in ſin, and ſecurity. See on Chap. 2. 31. Signes alſo foregoing the laſt judgement, Mat. 24. 29. Luke 21. 25.

V. 16. The Lord ſhall] As a Lion roar horribly againſt his, and his Churches enemies, ſo as the world ſhall tremble; though for a time he did wink at them, and held his peace, ſummoning, as it were, with a terrible cry, all the world to appear before him. See Jer. 25. 30. Amos 1. 2.

of Zion] Out of the ſeat of his glory: whoſe repreſentation was formerly in the ſanctuary. See Heb. 12. 22.

but the Lord] Will be the hope and ſtrong help to his people, will take upon him their defence and protection. Thus mindful is he of them, and this ſhould be a comfort to them in all their calamities; the illue ſhall be happy, though heaven and earth may ſeem to oppoſe and oppreſſe them: he will ſave his remnant, though they may ſeeme to be loſt and periſhed, before he come to ſave them.

hope] Heb. place of repair, or harbour.

V. 17. So ſhall ye know] Really, and finde it by experience to be true, which before your ſad calamities and extremities made you to doubt of. Our duty is to depend upon Gods Word and promiſe, even before we finde and feel the verification of it in our ſelves.

that I am] According to his covenant with them, and their fathers; upon which gracious covenant accepting them for his peculiar people, all his promiſes are founded and grounded.

dwelling] As by his promiſes, and ordinances formerly he hath been.

Jeruſalem be holy] Heb. holineſs. My Church ſhall be cleanſed from pollution, and ſuch a mixture of hypocrites and profane people, Iſai. 35. 8. Apoc. 21. 27. And ſhall then appear to be, choſen of me for my holy habitation.

no ſtrangers paſſe] The ſtrangers ſhall no more deſtroy his Church; nor pollute, or profane it, as formerly they have done, when it was given up as a prey unto them, Lam. 1. 10. Which if ever they do, it is the people which by their ſins make the breach for the enemy. Otherwiſe God would make good his promiſe; as Eſay 26. 1. See Eſay 35. 8. Apoc. 21. 27. Eſay 52. 1. Zech. 14. 21.

V. 18. The mountains ſhall] Gods large bounty to his Church, all manner of wayes. He mentions earthly bleſſings; therein ſuiting himſelf to the carnal people, that were as children under the elements of the Law; yet ſo, as thereby to raiſe up their thoughts to ſpiritual bleſſings in Chriſt, ſo that, herein he promiſeth to his Church abundance of graces, Ezek. 47. 1. Apoc. 22. 1. which would water and comfort the moſt barren places, Amos 9. 13. Others ſay, a figurative deſcription of the good and happineſſe of eternal life, Pſal. 36. 8.

a fountain ſhall come forth of the houſe of the Lord] Ezek. 47. 1. Zach. 14. 8. Rev. 22. 1.

valley of Shittim] A place ſay ſome in the land of Moab, Num. 25. 1. Joſh. 2. 1. Mic. 6. 5. which was deſert and dry; even ſo far, to the utmoſt bounds ſhould Gods bounty overflow. Others tranſlate it, the valley of choiceſt Cedars: and underſtand it of the Church, ſee Ezek. 47. 1. 8. Pſal. 92. 13. The Trent Bible reads it, the torrent of thorne.

V. 19. Egypt] Namely, all the Churches enemies.

Edom] As Egypt: and other enemies.

for the violence] God is ſo careful of his Church, that though he bear for a time with the enemies of it, yet in the end he will take vengeance on them, for the violence they do unto his people.

in their land] In the land of Egypt, and Edom, when the Jews fled to them for ſafety, in their diſtreſſes; or rather in the land of the children of Judah, murdering them in their own countrey, and holy heritage.

V. 20. But Iudah] The fruit, and benefit of Gods redemption and deliverance of his people, the true believers, and elect, they ſhall abide for ever, as his love to them is everlaſting: whereas the wicked at the moſt do but flouriſh for a time.

ſhall dwell] Or, abide.

V. 21. For I will cleanſe] He ſuffered his Church and people hitherto to be in their filthineſſe: but now he promiſeth to cleanſe them, and to make them pure unto him, without which cleanſing, in pardoning ſin paſt, and purging it out for the time to come, God could not be reconciled, and propitious to them.

for the Lord] Or, even I the Lord that dwelleth in Zion, Apoc. 21. 3. He minds them of his free and gracious covenant with them, by vertue whereof he ſtill is the Lord that dwelleth in Zion: and that is the only cauſe of his bounty, and good dealing toward them: and not any worth or merit in them.

ANNOTATIONS on the Book of the Prophet AMOS.

THE ARGUMENT.

THe prophecies of Amos and Hoſea have a great conformity, both in reſpect of the time when, and the perſons, the ten Tribes, to whom chiefly they were ſent. Amos prophecied in the dayes of Uzziah King of Judah, and Jeroboam the ſon of Joaſh King of Iſrael; But how long he prophecied, is not ſpecified. He threatneth both Judah and Iſrael, for their ſins, but Iſrael chiefly, and throughout his prophecie; that, for their Ingratitude, Idolatry, Cruelty, Inhumanity, Pride, Incorrigibleneſſe, Wantonneſſe, and Corruption in every kinde, they ſhould be puniſhed: and further, that their ſun ſhould be darkned at noon-day; that is, when Iſrael thought themſelves at the height of ſtate, they ſhould be caſt off, for obſcuring the Son of Righteouſneſſe: yet God would build again the Tabernacle of David, and return his captived people, both Judah and Iſrael, into their own Land. Or thus; Two years before an Earthquake. Amos foretelleth of ſtrange ſhakings of ſix Heathen neighbouring Nations; of Gods judgements upon Judah alſo: But principally upon Iſrael: Jeroboams houſe to be ruined, and Iſrael to be captived: yet Judah and Iſrael ſhould at laſt be reſtored to Chriſt; with Edom, or all Nations. See Acts 15. Or thus more particularly and orderly; Amos his prophecie telleth of Gods Judgements; Firſt, againſt the neighbour Nations, Enemies of the Church, Chap. 1, and 2. CHAP. I.

THe words of Amos] That is, the ſumme, collection, and heads of all his Sermons; that ſo we may know what his Doctrine and Teaching was. And ſo it is with all the other Prophets; which is a thing diligently to be obſerved throughout them all.

of Tekoa] A city of Judah where that wiſe woman dwelt, 2 Sam. 14. 2. Rebuilt or fortified by Rehoboam, 2 Chron. 11. 5, 6. mentioned, Jer. 6. 1. But yet Amos prophecied in Iſrael. See Chap. 7. 12.

which he ſaw] By Gods revelation to him.

concerning Iſrael] Though himſelf of Judah, yet ordained by God to be an extraordinary Prophet for Iſrael, or the ten Tribes chiefly. He ſpeaks indeed ſometimes of Judah; but that onely, as by the way, and occaſionally. Chap. 7. 12, 13. LXX here wrongly have Jeruſalem for Iſrael.

of Uzziah] Hoſ. 1. 1.

Jeroboam] In his days the kingdom of Iſrael did moſt flouriſh: as the kingdom of Judah did under Uzziah; yet then did this poor ſhepherd preach ſo terribly againſt their ſins; and prophecie ſo fearfully of their deſtructions: which argues Gods power and authority in him; Gods miſſion, and commiſſion to him. 1 Cor. 1. 27. 2 Cor. 4. 7.

earthquake] which, as Joſephus writeth, was when Uzziah would have uſurped the prieſts office, and therefore was ſmitten with the leproſie. Or, a little before the death of Jeroboam; which differs not much in time from the firſt. But Zach. 14. 5. Thus the beginning on made any where in ſcripture, but the end of it is leſt uncertain. If the of his prophecie is ſet down, but the end of it is leſt uncertain. If the continued not after Jeroboams reign, then the time of his prophecying was but a ſhort time.

V. 2. The Lord] The ſame words, Joel 3. 16. ſomewhat diverſly here applyed.

roar from Zion] Jer. 25. 30. According to the Predictions and threatnings pronounced in the midſt of his Church by his prophets, who ſhall vent his wrath upon his enemies. Some underſtand theſe words as a prediction of the earthquake, verſ. 1.

from Zion Speaking thus to the Iſraelites, he implies the true Jehovah, and his true worſhip to be there in Zion and Jeruſalem; and not at Samaria, or Dan, or Bethel.

the habitations] All ſtrength, wealth, & worldly greatneſſe ſet forth by theſe fat and fruitful places, ſhall through Gods wrath be brought to nothing; and a famine through drought ſhall come. See Chapter 4.

mourn] Gods roaring voice ſhall not be in vain, Jer. 5. 12, 13. but carry its effect in its mouth.

Carmel] The word ſignifies a fruitful field; whence it ſeems the place here meant took its name; being an high pleaſant fruitful mountain, and paſture. See Chap. 9. 3. Cant. 7. 5. The excellency of it is mentioned, Eſay 35. 2. and it is named with thoſe other famous mountains of Libanus, Sharon, and Bashan, Eſay 33. 9. Yea, Jokneam a city is ſeems on it, or belonging to it, had the honour to have a King; Joſh. 12. 22. There Elias vanquiſhed Baals prophets, 1 Kings 18. and Eliszeus dwelt there, 2 Kings 4. 25. There was a city called Carmel, belonging to Judah, Joſh. 15. 55. where Nabal had his poſſeſſions and ſheep, 1 Sam. 25.

V. 3. for three tranſgreſſions] If theſe judgements upon the neighbouring nations had not been foretold by the prophets, when the Iſraelites ſhould have ſeen the like befal to others, as did befal themſelves: they would happily have aſcribed all to fortune, and not to Gods hand: and ſo the prophets authority would have been weakned and ſlighted. He ſhews therefore, that God will ride Circuit, as it were, and judge and puniſh theſe Heathen Nations. And ſo indeed the Aſſyrian, the rod of Gods anger, Eſay 10. 5. and as it were the ſtaff, the Axe, and the Saw in Gods hand, verſ. 15. did ſcourge and cut down at the ſame time all theſe Nations, as well as Gods people; he came in as a deluge overflowing all, Eſay 8. 7. as other Prophets alſo did foretel, and the Hiſtory of the event did atteſt. Yet ſomo conceive thus; that he ſheweth firſt, that all the people round about ſhould be deſtroyed for their ſins: becauſe the Iſraelites ſhould more deeply conſider Gods judgements towards them; and be awaked and warned by their example, to look unto themſelves; ſeeing he ſpares not theſe uncircumciſed Nations for their ſins.

of Damaſcus] This is mentioned in Abrahams time, Gen. 14. verſ. 15. whoſe faithful ſteward and ſervant Eleazar was of Damaſcus, Gen. 15. 2. This was the head city of Syria, Eſay 7. verſ. 8. This ſtood on the North-eaſt ſide of Canaan; eaſt from Mount Libanus, was conquered and garriſoned by David, 2 Sam. 8. 6. Loſt again in Solomons time, and poſſeſſed by Rezon, 1 Kings 11. 23, 24. Recovered by Jeroboam the ſecond, 2 King. 14. loſt ſoon after. And in the dayes of Ahaz taken by the Aſſyrian Tiglath Pileſer, who ſlew Rezin the King thereof, 2 Kings 16. After the death of our Saviour, Paul going thither, was miraculouſly converted neer the city, and confirmed by Ananias in the city, and preached there: and was ſought to be apprehended by the Governour of the city under Aretas the King, Acts 9. 2 Cor. 11. 32. yet after that he returned to Damaſcus, Gal. 1. 17. See more on ver. 4.

and for four] or, yea for four, for their many and multiplyed ſins, which are meant by three and four which make up ſeven: their progreſſe in ſin without mean, or meaſure, hardned them to that obſtinacy, as left no more place or hope for repentance. And all this while God patiently forbare them, till at laſt there was no remedy, as to 2 Chron. 36. 16.

turn away the puniſhment] Or, convert it, or let it be quiet, and ſo verſe 6. Or I will not recal my threatning voice, ver. 2. Or that puniſhment, verſe 4, 5. I will not ſay ſome; turn my ſoft to mercy.

threſhed Gilead] This is the chief of the ſeven or many ſins. And God will not puniſh Damaſcus ſo much for many other ſins as he will for the cruelty againſt Gods own people. And if the Syrians ſhall not be ſpared for committing this cruelty againſt one city, or countrey, it is not poſſible that Iſrael ſhould eſcape puniſhment, which hath committed ſo many and grievous ſins againſt God and man.

the brotherly covenant] Heb. the covenant of brethren, which was between David, and Solomon, Kings of Judah, and Hiram King of Tyre, who called one another brothers, by a brotherly love, and covenant. See 2 Sam.5.11. 1 King.5.1. & 9.13. Others refer it to the brother-hood between Jacob, and Esau, and their posterities; and that the Tyrians had no regard of that brother-hood which ought to have been between the Israelites, and Idumeans, or Edomites, which came of Esau, or Edom, but the rather sold the Israelites captives to them, because they knew the Edomites, though brethren, yet most cruelly hated them.

V. 10. on the wall of Tyrus] Most likely by the Assyrians, and Babylonians; but most surely long after by Alexander the great.

Their countrey was mount Seir, where the Horims formerly dwelt. Their countrey is also called Edomea, and Idumea, and Dumah; by others Arabia Petrea. Bounds of it are Kadesh, and mount Hor, and Ezion-Gaber at the red sea, Numb.20. 16. & Chap.33.37. 2 Chron.8.17. Chief cities therein, Petra, or Jockteeh, 2 King. 14.7. For which they were forbidden to enter into the congregation of the Lord till the third generation, Deut.23.8. David, Joab, & Abishai destroyed and subdued them. Yet Hadad of the Kings feed in Edom was an adversary to Solomon. In Jehoshaphats time they had under him a Deputy for King, 1 King.22.47. called King, 2 Kin.3.8,9. whose son was burnt, v.27. In Jehorams time they rebelled, 2 King. 8.20. And though Jehoram, and after Amaziah, sorely smote them; yet they became not subjects to them. They triumph at Jerusalems destruction, by Nebuchadnezzar, but were after by him vanquished and destroyed. Psal.137. Jer. 25. 21. & 27. 3. See Gods judgements threated against them, Isa.21.11. & 34,5. Jer.49.7. Ezek.25.12. &c. & chap. 35. Joel 3.19. Obad.v.1.11.12. Mal.1.2.

kept his wrath] As Esau did against Jacob, Gen. 27.41. & 32.6. &c. So did Esau's posterity too like their father herein; & thereby were greater sinners, then the former uncircumcised nations were, whereas the Edomites retained circumcision. See Psal. 137.7.

V. 12. Teman] I will punish the posterity of Esau, and spoil his cities: for Teman was the metropolis of Idumea; so called of Teman the son of Eliphaz, the son of Esau, Gen.36.11.15. And Bozrah a city in the borders between Moab & Idumea; sometime ascribed to one people, and sometime to the other, for their vicinity. If there were not two of that name, one a prime city in Edom, and another in Moab, Jer. 48.24. This judgement is at large described, Obad.v.9,10. And of Teman, see Jer.49.7,20. And of Bozrah, see Gen.36.33. Esay 34.6. & 63.1. Jer.49.13.22.

V. 13. Ammon] The posterity of the younger son of Lot, nephew to Abraham, and of his family; yet they conspire with the Jews enemies against them. See Psal.83.7.

ript up] God rips up their chief & bloudy sin; and doth instance, and insist only upon that. The like cruelty in the Medes against Babylon, Isai. 13. 16, 17, 18. This here was acted by the Assyrian, though we have not the history of it. See Jer.49.1——7.

ript up the women] Or, divided the mountains. He notes th the great cruelty of the Ammonites, that spared not the women, but most tyrannously tormented them; And yet, as was said, the Ammonites came of Lot, who was of the houshold of Abraham. And indeed many, and at many times, were the cruelties of the Ammonites against the children of Israel, in the times of Ehud, Judg.3.13. of Jephthah, Judg.10. of Saul, 1 Sam.11. & 12,12. And other kings of Judah had many battels with them. And they assisted the Assyrian, and the Babylonian against the Jews, in the days of Hezekiah, Jehoiakim, and Zedekiah. V. 15. Their king] We read of their King in Jephtha's time, before there was any King in Israel, Judg. 11. verf. 12, 13, 14, 28. of Nahash in Sauls time, 1 Sam. 11. 1. & 12, 12. of Hanun the son of Nahash, in Davids time, 2 Sam.10.1,2. the huge weight of whose crown is set down, 2 Sam. 12.30. 1 Chron.20.2. of Baalis in Zedekiahs time, Jer. 40. 14. About which time their King went into captivity. See Jer.49.3. Others understand this of their idol Milcom, or Milchom, which hath affinity to the name of King; whereof 1 King.11.33. 2 King. 23. 13. supposed to be called Rempham, Acts 7.43. Other idols also the Ammonites had, Judg.10.6. as Chemosh, Judg.11.24. and Molech, or Moloch, haply the same with Milcom, 1 King.11.7. Acts 7.43. If here be meant the idol Milcom, then here is relation had to the custom of conquerours, which was to carry away the gods of conquered nations, 1 Sam.5.2. Esay 46.2. Jer.43.12. and 48.7. CHAP. II.

Verf. 1. OF Moab] The posterity of Lots elder son, Gen.19. Moab inhabited close upon the east side of Jordan, Deut.1.5. Numb.22.1. & 26.3. And all that was done in the land of Moab, which is recorded from Num. 22. till Josh. Chap.3.

and for four] Their manifold sins, and obstinacy, and impenitency in them; and Gods long patience all the while, till they came up to this heap and height. Many were their transgressions against Gods people: Balak King of Moab hired Balaam to curse them; and by Balaams counsel brought upon them that fearful plague, Numb.25.4,5,9. Eglon smote and subdued them, Judg.3. And many bloudy wars were betwixt them, and Gods people, in the days of David, and of Jehoram the son of Ahab, of Jehoshaphat, and others; and they joyned in arms with other enemies of the Jews, as the Assyrian, and Babylonian, to fight against them.

because he burnt] Here this one sin is singled out, as the signal sin of their cruelty; so odious a thing is inhumane cruelty in the sight of God; though upon an enemy.

bones of the King] 2 King.3.27. where the son of the King of Edom, was burnt by the King of Moab, so cruel was the hatred of Moab against Israel, that he dealt thus inhumanely against the King of Edom, because he joyned in arms with Jehoshaphat, whose feodary king he was, to assist the king of Israel, as his auxiliarie, against Moab. Others more at large take it for some terrible cruelty used upon the King of Edom, either alive, or dead; for which in particular, the Lord was angry with Moab.

V. 2. of Kirioth] A city of Moab, Jer.48.24,41.

die with tumult] Shall be destroyed by the fury of war. Their enemies shall not receive them upon rendition, yielding upon articles and conditions; but by assaults and stormings, wherein commonly extremities of rigour and out-rage are used.

V. 3. judge] Namely, he that bore the title of King, though he was no lawful King, having rebelled against Israel, 2 Kings 1.1.

slay all the Princes] And without Rulers, and Judges, what will the people be?

thereof] To wit, of the Moabitish nation.

V. 4. Judah] If the Prophet had not joyned Gods people to the rest in these threatnings and predictions, they might happily have promised to themselves freedom and exemption, though the heathens had been punished. The Prophet therefore joyns them to the rest, that they should fare no better then those heathens, be deemed & dealt withal even as they; or rather, being like them in sin, be the more severely punished, see ch.3.2. The judgements upon those Heathen Nations, were but as a prologue to the judgements upon upon Gods chosen people, Luk.12.47. The prophet himself was born in Judah, Chap.1.1. and though he were principally sent as a prophet to and against the ten tribes, and for that cause so joined amongst them, yet he spares not Judah; neither their sins, nor their punishments. There was then no cause to charge him with flattery, or partiality towards his own tribe.

will not turn away the punishment thereof] See Chap.1.3. seeing the Gentiles that had not so far knowledge were thus punished, Judah which was so fully instructed in the Lords will, might not think to escape, if they would not repent, when judgements were threatned and denounced against them.

despised] As contemptuous and pestilious Apostates, though not so bad as the Israelites.

the law of the Lord] The onely rule of worship, and obedience, yet they followed new inventions of their own brain.

and have not kept] Not failing therein, through negligence, and infirmity; but wittingly and willingly forsook them, upon the former pretences; and that God calls a despising of the Law: so grievous a sin is it, to swerve from the rule of it, and to prefer before it the wisdom of our own inventions.

and there lyes] Their idols, false worship, and superstitions; And also, Their new invention, and good intentions thereby to serve and please God, were but lyes and impostures, whereby they deceived themselves. Gods Law, and Commandments ever are the onely true and safe Rule, from which we must not decline either to the right hand, or the left.

their fathers] The disease then was hereditary; and so aggravated by their continuance and obstinacy therein; and not excused or lessened by the example of their fore-fathers, Acts 7.51. Ezek. 20.18,30.

V. 5. of Jerusalem] Most of all, and finally, accomplished by Nebuchadnezzar. Gods own Church and people may thus foulely fall, and be thus fearfully punished. Let us look to our selves.

V. 6. of Israel] If he spare not Judah, unto whom his promises were made, much lesse will he spare this degenerate kingdom. And thus he comes to his proper charge. And here he insists, not onely upon one sin, as formerly; but is large in the point; both of their sins; and of their punishments: they in both exceeding Judah. Yea, he prosecutes these two throughout his book.

sold] Chap.8.6. they buy them. Thus as in a Market they did buy and sell them. He begins with this grosse sin, and others the like, that could admit of no plea, or excuse. After their conviction in them, he comes then the more commodiously to their false worships, in superstitions, and idolatries, to declaim against them; for which he knew the would pretend their good intentions, and long customs.

righteous for silver] His right in judgement. Against the Law, Exod.23.6,10. This is the sin of their Judges, and Rulers, whose office and duty was, to defend the righteous and the poor.

a pare of shoes] For a matter of nothing, for a very small price; as Amos 8.6. Thus by degrees the wicked grow to this shamelessnesse in sinning, though at first they would stick at it; as a woman more hardly brought at first to lose her chastity, yet after will prostitute her self for the baseft hire.

V. 7. pant after the dust of the earth] Who inflamed with covetousnesse, greedily spie out all occasions to entrap the lowly, and weak, the poor, and miserable; and to do them hurt; such is their covetousnesse and cruelty. A term taken from serpents; as Gen.49.17.

turn aside] By their windings, like to the serpents, they do overthrow good mens rights, stiled in Scripture humble and meek men. Or, they hinder them in their businesses.

go in unto] Incestuously; with prodigious impudency in their filthinesse, against all light and Law of Nature. Thus where there is no fear of God, there is no manner of shame, no end or measure of sinning.

Maid] Or, young woman.

to prophane A thing ot forbidden; and oft complained of when committed. See it in Levit.11.44. & 8.19,20. and 22. Chapters Eze. 36.20.24. Mal.1.11,12 2 Sam. 12.14. Jam.2.6.

my holy name] With which they are honoured being called my people.

V. 8. they lay themselves down] They do use those things which they have violently taken from the poor and innocent, in their feasts, and feastivals, which they celebrate in honour of their idols, and by that means do heap up the sin of idolatry, upon the sin of violence.

laid to pledge] Contrary to the Law, Exod.22.26,27. See Deut. 24.6.10,11,12,13. Job.22.6. & 24.3.

by every Altar] The Israelites had many Altars, in many places; which was their sin, Hos.8.11. And their lying down upon those pledges there, aggravates their sin, in that they did and durst, so openly and with so high an hand practise it at their very altars, the places as they conceive where they worshipped God: But this is the manner of hypocrites and idolaters, to think any thing is lawful to them, and that God still is well pleased and pacified, if they be careful to perform the outward exercises of worship and service.

the condemned] Or, such as have fined or mulcted wine bought with such money as they have unjustly amerced and condemned the innocent in. Of these spoyls they make feasts to the honour of their gods; as if the true God, as they conceive, would be pleased with such feasts and sacrifices, (ce Isay 61.8. &c. ch.1.14,15. & Deut. 23.18. And thus they would make the house of God, as they account it, a den of thieves. The constant course of hypocrites thus to dally with God, and to delude themselves in their sinnes, secretely to think any thing is lawful to them, so they protestle and practice some kind of God's outward worship.

V. 9. yet] Here God recounts his benefits to them, the more to aggravate their ingratitude, and vile sins against him, and his laws, and the more to justifie the severity of his judgements upon them.

Amorite before them] Num.21.24. Deut.2.31. Josh.24.8.18. The destruction of their enemies, and his mercy toward them should have caused their hearts to melt for love toward him. And God to this very end, drave out the Amorite, to purge the land of his sin, being grown so full and ripe; and to bring in his people in their stead, purely to worship and serve him: And yet were they grown now as bad, if not worse then the Amorite, Ezekiel 16.3.45. 1 King.21. 26. Ezek.5. verf.6.

whose height was like the height of the Cedars] Num.13.28. and 32.33. And therefore they were not overcome by the strength of the Israelites, but by the arme of God, Deut.7.21.16.25. Josh.13.5. Psal.44.3.

fruit from above] A proverbial kind of speech to signifie an utter desolation, as Job 18.16. Isa.5.24. Mal.4.1.

V. 10. also] God's other great wonderful benefit to them, Exod. 12.51. Often recounted in Scripture, and needful so to be; men are naturally so unmindful of God's greatest benefits, and sleighting them being once past.

forty years] So wonderfully protecting of you, and providing for you; so patiently all that time bearing with you, and fitting you to enter that land, out of which you had barr'd your selves by your infidelity, and manifold rebellions: All this should have made them more grateful and dutiful: And doth render their sinfulnesse the more odious. See Deut.32.6. Micah 6.3,7. These forty years are reckoned, not from the return of the spyes to Kadish-barnea, but from their coming out of Egypt.

V. 11. for Prophets] See Exod.20.19. Deut.18.16. Gods further benefit; He sent many prophets, ordinary and extraordinary, as his Legats, Ambassadours, Angels, to his people.

Nazarites] Yet a further benefit; these being persons sanctified after a special manner to purity of life, and consecrated to works of piety, Num.6.3,22. small warrant for popish votaries out of this example.

V. 12. gave the Nazarites] Violating my law in this part of my service, Numb.6.3. neither obeying your selves, nor suffering others to obey my laws.

saying prophecie not] Isa.3.10. Jer.11.21. Micah 2.6. Amos 7.12, 13. and though not absolutely forbidden, yet under some limitations and restraints: some for prophecying, rebuked, imprisoned, endangered for their lives, and some others slain. See Jer.20.1,8,14. and Chap.26.8,23. Mat.23.37. Act.7.52.

V. 13. I am pressed under you] You have wearied me with your sins, Isa.1.14. Or, I will presse your place, as a cart full of sheaves presseth: Or, I will presse your place by the strict siege of enemies: I will presse and threth you, as a heavy cart presseth out the corn.

V. 14. Therefore the flight] Thus roughly he begins with the Israelites, his proper charge, knowing well their security and obstinacy in sin.

against the whole family] Both of Judah and Israel. Yet understand hereby the ten Tribes principally, if not onely: so called, because they were the far greater number, and sleighted small Judah, and counted themselves Gods chief people, to whom the Blessings, and Promises, and Priviledges belonged: these he summons here to judgement.

V. 2. You onely] This recounting of his favors redonnds to their greater reproach, sets out to the life the vilenesse of their ingrate re-have I known] Gods knowledge and providence is over all his creatures, Psal.147.9. Mat.10.29,30. yet you alone have I chosen of my free favour, and meer mercy, and no merit of yours, Deut.9. 7,8. 1 Cor.4.7. and accepted to be my peculiar people, by a singular gracious covenant; wherefore your ingratitude and disloyalty is so much the more to be condemned, Dent.7.6. & 10.15. and those sins of ignorance, when I passe over in others, are in you inexcusable, and proceeding from pure malice. See Ezek.20.32. Exod.19. 3,4. Deut.4 20. and 32.11.

of all] Passing by all other nations of the earth; which were so many and mighty. And yet no injustice done them: But the more is my free mercy magnified towards you, Exod.19.6.

therefore I will punish] Heb. Visit upon: your sins being so much the greater, in not walking up answerable to my mercies; but contrariwise justifying the Heathen nations in their sinnes, and surpassing them: as Ezek.16.47,48. Therefore your punishments ought and shall be accordingly; Ezek.16.59. Luk.12.47,48. The greatnesse of Gods mercies adds an aggravation to the greatnesse of their sins, and of their punishment.

V. 3. two walk together] Even as two travellers whose end of their journey is not the same, cannot long travell the same way, so it is impossible that God should continue his grace towards you, walking among you in visible signes, works, and wonders, and yet connive at your iniquities: seeing his service is not the only aim of all your ways, & walkings: nay, he will surely punish you. Others, not sowell, do apply it to God and the prophet, and their agreements; or to the prophet, and his fellow prophets; that they agree and walk together in the same way, in discharging their prophetical functions, in reproving, threatnings, &c. As if he should say, we do agree; and therefore you are the more to heed it.

V. 4. a Lion roar in the forrest] Will God threaten by his prophets, except there be some great occasion, and just cause for it? Or think ye that God will not at last bring all these threatnings to passe: though he hath had patience for a long time? See verf.8. and Amos 1,2.

if he have taken nothing] Have taken nothing. Or at least, if he have not a minde after his prey to take it. The lion it self will not do so, much lesse God by his prophets. Contrary to those prophane speeches, Jer.5.12,13. See Deut.32.47.

V. 5. a bird fall] can any thing come without Gods providence? Mat.10.29. much lesse do his judgements come by chance. There is a gin laid by the fowler, though the birds see it not; so Gods hand and secret counsel is in all afflictions, in all things though men see it not; but would ascribe it to chance or fortune.

shall one take up, &c.] Commonly he will not, till he have taken somewhat. Much more God will not take up himself, and his threatned judgements; till he have executed what he hath determined and denounced. And therefore the Israelites should not so sleight Gods threatnings thundred against them by his prophets, as if God did but dally with them. He will not take up his net, till he hath taken his prey. His threatnings shall not be in vain.

shall a trumpet be blown in the city] When the watchers give a signe, or sound an alarm, the people presently are terrified, and run together for help and succour. And what ought you to do at Gods threatnings, pronounced by his prophets, for your conversion towards him, from whom all these calamities proceed? See Ezek.3.4. and 33.3,7. Thus he reproacheth their stupidity and fascination, and dementation, being against common sense, without all fear and apprehension of danger; but resting still secure, even when God by his prophets blows his trumpet of war in the midst of them,

shall there be evil in a city] Esay 45.7. the evil of affliction and punishment.

and the Lord hath not done it?] Or, and shall not the Lord do somewhat? it is not fortune that doth tosse and tumble things in the world up and down; and God sits idle in heaven: no, he sits at the stern, and steers the affairs of the world; the Empery is his. Esay 45.7. Psal.94.7——12. And therefore they should be awakened at his judgements, repent of their sins, and turn to him, Micah 6.9. and not be as those Esay 9.13.

V. 7. will do nothing] Not that hereby the prophet would put an necessity upon God; he is free to do otherwise: and doth execute many judgements not revealed to men, or Angels: but heusually doth thus by his Prophets with his own people. And therefore the more shame for them not to take warning thereby, to prevent the same by timely repentance: His Prophets are Heralds proclaiming warre; yet with articles of peace and reconciliation open in their hands.

revealeth his secret] He likens the Prophets to watchmen which discover afar off the coming of the enemies: for so God ordinarily reveals unto his Prophets the greatest judgements which he will cause to fall upon his people to bring them to repentance, Gen.18. 17. Jerem.18.7. and 1.10. he deals not so usually with other nations.

V. 8. The Lion hath roared] The fear of Gods majesty doth enforce us to relate his threatnings faithfully unto you, though you hate and disdain us for it. 1 Cor.9.16. we must then do our duty; feare God more then men; roar against your sins, though you roar against us for it. See Acts 4.19. and 5.29. Galat.4.16. Jer.1.17. Ezek.2.6. and 3.8,9.

V. 9 Publish] Seeing they would not hear, and bear, and abide Gods judgements by his prophets.

Ashdod] Chap.1.8. He calleth strangers, as the Philistines, and Egyptians, even these Heathen nations, to be witnesses of their evil doings, and to judge of the justice of Gods judgements against them for their cruelty and oppression. This was a famous city of the Philistines, who lived on the west part of the land of Canaan, neare the mediterranean sea: and it was one of their five Lordships, Josh.13.3.1 Sam.6.17,18. This was assigned to the tribe of Judah, Josh.15.47. yet in, and after Joshuahs time, the Anakims dwelt there; Josh.11.22. The Ark of God was taken by the Philistines, and brought thither, and placed there in the house of Dagon. See 1 Sam.5.1,2,3. and Chap.6.17,18. After it was conquered by Vzziah, 2 Chron.26.6. and by Ezekiah, 2 King.18.8. and soon after taken by Sargon or Senacharib king of Assyria; Esay 20.1. and afterward by Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon; See Jer.25.20. Zeph.2.4. Zech.9.6. After the return from the captivity of Babylon, they were wroth at Nehemiahs building the walls of Jerusalem, Nehem.4.7. And some of the Jews took strange wives of Ashdod, as well as of other Heathen nations; and their Children spake half in the speech of Ashdod; But Ezra and Nehemiah caused them to put away both the wives and children; Ezra 10.3. Nehem. 13.23,24. And most think this city to be that called Azotus, where Philip was found: Acts 8.40. See more on Zeph.2.4.

upon the mountains of Samaria] As a Theator whereon to view, or Tribunal whereon to judge between God and his people, their sinnes and his Judgements. This might provoke to their greater shame the Israelites that were so proud of their prerogatives, and so scorned these nations.

tumults] That is, oppressions, tumultuously, impetuously, disorderedly, outragiously acted upon the poor and miserable.

oppressed] Or oppression.

V. 10. Know not] Will not know; but wilfully blinde themselves, that they may not discern betwixt right and wrong; they reject and extinguish all understanding and reason, that they may freely without any shame, take to themselves a liberty for their sinning.

store up violence] He instanceth in this palpable sin wherein those Heathen could not be so blinde, but rightly judge and condemn them.

robbery in their palaces] Or, spoil. The fruit and effect of their cruelty and theft appeareth by their great riches, which by those means they heaped up, and stored in their houses.

V. 11. Therefore] Now from their sinne he comes to their punishment.

an adversary] Meaning the King of Assyria, Shalmaneser, as appeareth by the next verse. For he took Samaria by force and led away the people captive, 2 King.17.6. See also Chapters 15 & 16.

round about] That there shall be no place left to escape; it were but in vain to think it.

thy strength] Thy riches, arms, forts, &c.

thy palaces shall be spoiled] wherein thou didst store up thy preys and spoils, verf.10.

V. 12. taketh] Heb. delivereth. A countrey comparison; such as Amos being a shepheard commonly useth, Chap.3.12. Chap.7.14.

or a piece of an ear] This doth not mitigate the rigour of the former sentence; but shews rather the extremity of their devouring destruction; They shall be but as a lamb to a wolf, nay, more to a lion: The shepheard shall not dare to approach him, till he be fully fed and gon, and leave the offal. And all this to take up their presumptuous confidence and security.

so shall the children of Israel be] In the sacking of the city a small number of the poorest sort of people shall escape.

in the corner of a bed] He hath relation to the hiding corners, that are sought for when a city is taken, that they hope will be least searched or suspected. See 1 Kings 22.25. Scarce shall one of 1000 there escape: though they think Samaria, and Damascus their fastest strengths or hiding places. Chaldee paraphrase hath it, in robore principatus.

and in Damascus in a couch] Or on, or in the beds feet.

V. 13. Here ye] This preface and preamble is somewhat more then usual; requiring from God such attention and attestation. And this the rather because the matter following is a thing which they could so hardly be convinced of. He directeth his words to the Prophets, and all true believers.

V. 14. visit] Or punish Israel for.

the transgressions] Of covetousnesse, pride, cruelties, oppressions, and other flagitious offences.

I will also visite] I will destroy all places and instruments of Idolatry; to shew the falshood of it, and make it known that it is the chief cause of the peoples ruine.

the altars of Bethel] See Annotations on Hos. 10.15. They thought thought that by their services of God, and sacrifices there, that they pleased him, and appeased his anger, expiating their sins by those outward services: they trusted in this, and counted it their shadow and shield; Bethel was their confidence, Jer. 48. 13. But the Lord shews, that their worship there was so expressly contrary to his word, and so odious to him, that it should be so far from pleasing and appeasing him, that it provoked his wrath the more, and that in the day of his visitation he would surely visit those idolatrous altars.

horns of the Altar] which were made upon the idols Altars like unto them which were upon the Altar of the true God, upon the four corners of it, Exod.27.2.

V. 15. winter-house with the Summer-house] He hath relation to the customs of great men, who are wont to have several rooms and houses for winter, and for summer, Judg.3.20. Jer.36.22. The meaning is, all manner of state lineſſe, greatneſſe, and commodiousneſs, shall be taken away; These their rich, strong, and stately houses, shall not help them, nor hinder Gods vengeance from seizing on them.

Ivory] Covered over with Ivory. 1 King.22.39. and 22.29.

Verſ. 1. Kine] Thus he calleth the princes, and governours, which being overwhelmed with great abundance of Gods benefits, forget God; and therefore he calleth them by the name of beasts, and not of men; cows and not men, and continues on his speech to them in the feminine gender, not vouchsafing them once the name of men; deals with them as if he were an herdman among his kine and cattel. Thus he slights their sinful greatneſſe, and emboldens himself upon his authority and calling; being faithful in the discharge of it. Call and count me an herdsman, yet thus from God I call and count you. See Psal.22.12. Ezek.39. 10. Hos.4.16.

of Bashan] Bashan was the Kingdom of Og, the gyant lay on the East side of Jordan, contained in it chiefly half Gilead, and the whole region of Argob; given to the half Tribe of Manasseh; wherein Machir, and Jair, the sons of Manasseh, had very many cities. See Numb.21.33. Deut.3.4,13,14. Ashteroth, Edrei, and Golan were chief cities there in: whereof Ashteroth and Golan were given to the Gershonites; and Golan to be a city of refuge, Deut.4.43. Josh.21.27. 1 Chron. 6.71. This was a special place for the breed of cattel, Numb.32.4. Deut.32.14. we read of the Buls of Bashan, Psal.22.12. And mention is oft made of the Oaks of Bashan. Hazael King of Syria smote them, 2 King.10, 33. And Pul and Tiglath-Pilneser Kings of Assyria, afflicted and captived them, 1 Chron.5.26.

that are in the mountain of Samaria] See the Annotations on Hos. 8.5. He likens the Rulers in Samaria to the Kine of Bashan, loaded with fatneſſe, secure, and drunken with worldly wealth and pleasures.

which oppress the poor] This sin onely he names, as being most commonly practised by rich and great oppressors, against such as are not able to relieve themselves against them; which makes God the more forbid it, and so pitty them that lie under it.

which say to their Masters] They encourage such as have authority over the people, to poll them, so that they may have profit by it. Others thus, not so well, which do perswade your Kings and Princes to all manner of excesse and dissolutenesse; and are teachers and advisers of the disorders of the Court; as Hos. 7.5. Or thus, to the Masters of the poor; to such as have the mastery of them, by engagements, pretended debts, circumventions, or otherwise have them in their lurch, these rulers, or judges call for bribes and rewards, and they will assist them, and sentence for them against the poor.

drink] Keep feasts upon the prey and spoil of the poor. See Gen.43.34. Cant.5.1. Joh.2.10. for drinking at feasts.

V. 2. The Lord] The punishment follows upon the sin.

hath sworn] The more to awaken these secure and sleepy sinners.

by his holinesse] Heb. 6.13,16.

upon you] Great ones. He thunders first against them; having formerly charged their sin upon them, with fish-hooks] Like fishes, as Jer.16.16. Hab. 1.14,15. diligently industriously caught, easily pulled up, and carried away, as fishes are with a fish-book, and you shall be no more like fat kine that abide in their pastures.

V. 3. at the breaches] Of your fenced Cities, and strong holds, no walls or ramperts shall defend you, your walls shall be as the walls of Jericho, Josh. 6.20. Being thus led into captivity after your Cities are forced and defaced. See Ezek.12.5,12. As beasts at a gap.

every cow] Thus still is pursued that similitude, verf. 1. to the shame of such beastly men.

before her] Any way; there being neither gates, nor walls whole.

ye shall cast them into the palace] Or ye shall cast away the things of the palace, that is, your jewels and treasures kept there. Or thus, ye shall be glad, to forsake your palaces and pleasures, and run away, as cows stark mad, seeking onely to escape with your lives. Some translate thus; projiciemini Hermonem. Theodotion. in montem Monam erroneously.

V. 4. Come] Go, Ironical terms, and full of indignation, that is, I do abandon you to continue in your idolatries, that you may heap up the measure of your sins. See Mat.23.32. Esay 1.11. Jer.6. 20. & 7.21. Ezek.20.39.

Bethel] Bethel, and Gilgal, were chief seats of the publique idolatry of the ten Tribes, 1 King.12.29. Hos.4.15. See the Annotations there. They thought in those places, by those religious services, and sacrifices, they did highly please God; and could not be beaten from this teaet, and principle. But the Lord tells them, The more they do so, the more they offend and provoke him; as being sacrilegious, idolatrous worships, and abominations to him; so contrary to the prescript rule of his Law.

transgress] Seeing by no means you will be recalled, but desperately rage, and are mad upon it. God doth not egge men on to sin; see Chap. 5. 5. But hereby he sheweth his extream dislike and detestation of it.

multiply] Heap sin upon sin. Thus sinners go on.

every morning] In imitation of the daily sacrifice, Num.28.3,4. Be diligent, omit nothing.

three years] Heb. three years of dayes. In imitation say some of the three solemn feasts appointed to be every year by the Law, Exod.23.14. at which certain kinds of tythes were spent in the sacred feasts. Or rather, alluding to that Law, Deut.14.22,28,29. and Chap.26.12. Wherein those two kinds of Tythes mentioned, Deut.12.5,6,7,11,12.17,18,26. See apart, as it seems for their journeys, sacrifices, and feastings at Jerusalem thrice a year; and therefore forbidden to be eaten elſ-where: were converted every third year solely and wholly to the use of the poor, the fatherless, widows, &c. And therefore might then be eaten any where in all their gates. Or else, every third year a third kind of tythes was set aside for the poor aforesaid; and thereupon this third year might be called the year of tything; see those places aforesaid, Deut.14. 22.28,29. & Chap. 26.12. And this Law of third-year tythes, which the Israelites in their idolatrous worship did imitate.

V. 5. Offer a sacrifice] Heb. offer by burning.

with leaven] In imitation of Gods Law, in sacrifices of thanksgiving, Lev.7.13. In other sacrifices leaven was forbidden, Lev. 2.11. Thus in formalities the Israelites were curiously precise; They strained at a gnat, but swallowed a Camel, in erecting another Temple, Altar, and Priesthood; which was the source and welspring of all their abominations.

proclaim and publish] Making it known by publique authority, that whosoever will offer any free-will offerings, besides those which God had expresly commanded, shall come and offer them, but yet in such unlawful places, and manner.

the free-offerings] Lev.22.18,21.29. & 7.16. & 23.38. Num.15. 3. Deut.12.17. those also prescribed in Gods Law, did the Israelites imitate and practise upon their false altars, by their unlawful priests, in their idolatrous temples, and high places. And these they did publish & proclaim with great pomp and solemnity. Careful, yea, curious, and vain-glorious in all things, save in the main. This is the manner of such sinners.

this liketh you] Heb. So ye love. You only delight in those outward ceremonies, and have none other respect, this liketh you, but not me, you thus audaciously frame new wayes of worshipping me out of your own brain; your will is your rule and law herein: and so you sacrifice and do service to your own will, not to me: I neither prescribed it, nor will accept it; I love obedience better then sacrifice: you should have consulted my mouth, and simply obeyed what I commanded. And thus God shews the sense of his former concession, v. 4. LXX corrupts this verse, and the meaning of it, far other-ways.

V. 6. And I also] God shewed what liked them, now he sheweth what liked himself; even for their sins to punish them.

cleanneſſe of teeth] That is, famine and dearth. See the famine, 1 King.17.18. Chap. & 2 King.6.28.

yet have ye not] So hardned were your hearts, and so obdurate in sin, that I have prevailed nothing by my chastisements: but ye still remain incurable, irrecoverable.

V. 7. And also I] Here is one cause of their famine, set out by it self; that they might more duely have pondered the beginning and progresse of the signes of Gods wrath, and in time better bethink themselves of their duty; when they saw, not one signe of his anger for one day; but many signes appearing still, one after another. This heightheneth their sin and senselesse stupidity, nothing regarding Gods hand herein.

three moneths] One moneth then without rain in that hot countrey should have affrighted them: two moneths should have astonished them: three moneths should have been as a prodigie unto them; yet all this while they take it not to heart to bethink themselves, and be bettered by it. I stayed the rain till the fruits of the whole earth were destroyed with drought; and yet you would not consider upon one citie] Thus varying his hand so visibly, that they might the better take notice of it, and not once entertain a thought of chance or fortune herein; unlesse they would wilfully blinde themselves, and renounce all reason.

V. 8. so two] So that rain waters, or springs known, or new digged, sufficed not the Inhabitants; but forced them abroad, as beasts to seek waters. See that 1 King. 18.5.6.

not satisfied] They could not finde water enough where they had heard say it had rained.

yet have ye not] See vers. 6. but continue still in your old superstitions and idolatries, and in the wickednesse of you sinful lives, amated nothing, nor abating any thing for my corrections; ye reject the remedy of your recovery.

V. 9. I have smitten you] Yet more means God used: and still all would not serve; they shut their eyes, and would discern nothing. God orders all these things in the whole course of nature: the seasons, weather, insects, and all by his special providence, that we may daily see in them the signes of his love to comfort us: or of his wrath, to humble us. All his creatures are his hoasts, obeying and executing his will, Deut. 28. 21, 23, 24. Hos. 2. 21, 22. Psal. 147. 8, 9. 16, 17, 18. Joel 2. 11. 25.

when your gardens, and your vineyards, &c.] Or, the multitude of your gardens, &c. did the Palmeworm, &c.

V. 10. The pestilence] He further shews, how yet by other punishments he sought still to tame their untowardnesse, and provoke and work them to repentance. And so he comes from famine, to the pestilence, and sword. See Ezek. 14. 19.

after the manner of Egypt] Or, in the way. As I plagued the Egyptians. Exod. 9. 10. chap. Or, when you went into Egypt, to seek aid from thence, Hos. 7. 11, 12. See Esay 10. 24. where also the same phrase is used. And a like phrase is used, Hab. 3. 9. 26. in these words, according to the slaughter of Midian, at the rock Oreb. God shewed his power for their fathers against the Egyptians plaguing them. Now they being turned as Egyptians to him, he turned that his power against them; used the same weapons of his wrath, and plagued them, as he did the Egyptians, those bloodthirsty uncircumcised people of old. See Deut 28. 60.

sword] See Ezek. 14. 17. 21. Jer. 15. 2. and 47. 6, 7. God still multiplies, and increaseth his judgements. See Levit. 26. 18, 21, 24, 28.

and have taken away your horses] Heb. with the captivity of your horses.

stink of your camps] By dead carkasses; and filth to infect, choak, and stifle you.

yet] By all these divers kinds of judgements God prevailed nothing; spent his rods in vain, he lost his labour, and should do so still, if he added more to the former. All these were so many arguments of their incorrigible contumacy.

V. 11. as Sodom] These are set forth for examples of wickednesse; and Gods chosen people are charged to equalize and exceed them, Esay 1. 10. Jer. 23. 14. Ezek. 16. 47, 48. They are also set forth for examples of punishments, to terrifie others, 2 Per. 2. 6. Jude 7. Thus are Babylon, Edom, Moab, and Ammon threatned, Esay 13. 19. Jer. 49. 18. & 50. 40. Zeph. 2. 9. And so also Israel, Deut. 29. 23. and the execution of the threatning bemoaned to exceed it, Lam. 4. 6. of Sodom and Gomorrah. See Gen. 19. 24, 25. Isai. 13. 19. Jer. 40. 18. See 2 King. 13. 3, &c. & Chap. 14. 26.

firebrand pluckt] So Esay 1. 9. See Zech. 3. 2. This is some exception from the former example, and a mingation of it. In Jeroboam the seconds time, there was some relaxation, and respiration from so direful a destruction; but woful and wonderful was their affliction before, 2 King. 14. 25, 26, 27. yet God still preserved a Remnant in remembrance of his covenant; which he ever would constantly maintain, Esay 4. 8. & 6. 13. & 30. 20. & 11. 11. 16. and 28. 5. Joel 2. 32. Zeph. 2. 9.

yet] What now then remains but your utter destruction?

V. 12. Thus will I do unto thee] Namely, as thy sins deserve, or as I have fore-told thee, vers. 2, 3. as formerly: yea, and more then so will I do: for remedies are no more to be used, where the disease is desperate.

prepare] This might seem to be spoken ironically, considering what went before: thus; Now go too, do what you can, try all your strength to meet with, and withstand my decreed destruction, and determined sentence against you. But seeing in the next chapter, God again exhorts them to repentance, that they might live, this may rather be taken literally, that Israel by repentance should seek to prevent their utter final overthrow, as Luk. 14. 31, 32. The sumth, since I denounce war against thee, as against my rebels and enemies, prepare thy self to do the best thou canst to bear me off, and keep me back, or to prevent and pacifie me by true repentance. See Ezek. 13. 5. and 22. 30. Luke 14. 31, 32. Though thou art in a desperate case, and I may seem to have shut the gate of grace against thee, yet turn, and try; as Joel 2. 14. Jonah 3. 9. to meet] By humiliation, faith, and repentance, 1 Cor. 11. 31. LXX have it, to invoke and pray.

thy God] By profession, though thy practise be so contrary; thine, by his covenant, though for thy part thou hast so much broken it.

V. 13. For lo he] He multiples so many titles of God, and so many wayes extols him, and his dreadful power, to gain thereby the more reverence and fear of God, specially at the hands of such refractory and obdurate sinners.

winde] Or, spirit. And indeed he creates both.

declareth unto man] That knows, and judgeth the most secret thoughts of man; overtakes the wise in their cunning: accuseth the consciences, and summoneth them to appear before him. Or, according to others, that revealeth his secret judgements to men; to call them to repentance, Chap. 3. 7. Heb. 4. 12. 1 Chron. 28. 9. Job 42. 2. Psal. 7. 9. & 139. 2. Jer. 17. 10.

maketh the morning darkness] Amos 5. 8. Joel 2. 2.

treadeth upon the high places] That is, exalted above all humane power. See Mic. 1. 3. Deut. 32. 13. & chap. 33. 19. Psal. 45. 8. Esay 58. 14.

CHAP. V.

Vers. 1. Hear ye] Their supine security wherein they pleased themselves, and their stupid contempt of God, and his threatnings by his Prophet, stopping their ears against them, makes him thus to call upon them for audience to hear their doom which they had deserved, and yet would not believe should fall upon them.

a lamentation] That I take up; and a lamentable word for you, as you shall finde the woful burden of it upon you. See Ezek. 2. 10 Jer. 9. 1. & 4. 19. Esay 22. 1, 4. They laugh at it now, but shall lament under it hereafter.

V. 2. The virgin of Israel] So are called in Scripture those states which subsist and flourish in their first liberty and splendor; or delicately please themselves in their prosperities and pleasures. See Esay 13. 12. So is Babylon called, Esay 47. 1. and Egypt, Jer. 46. 11.

She shall no more rise] The whole body of the kingdom and people never more rose to be a kingdom after their destruction by Shalmanefer, 2 Kin. 17. though God had his remnant among them. Or, we may understand it with this referred condition, except they timely repent.

forsaken upon her land] Destitute of men in her lands; as is shewed in the next verse.

V. 3. shall leave ten] The body of the wicked destroyed, to their terrour; yea a small remnant escape, to the comfort of the godly, that they might not despair. Here is a decimation. That chap. 6. 9. is in another sense.

V. 4. Seek ye me] Here must be understood, which ye have refused to do. Thus whiles they remained yet undestroyed, he calls them all in general to Repentance, to the good of some; and to render the rest the more inexcusable. Whiles a people remain under the name and notion of a Church, the doctrine of faith and repentance is to be vouchsafed unto them.

and ye shall live] See Gen. 20. 7. without promise of grace, and hope of mercy, no man would seek God, but flee from him, as much as ever he could. Therefore this is necessarily added to the former. God then doth thus graciously invite, as Ezek. 18. 3. 32. Jer. 13. 27. And though he effectually draw to him onely his elect; yet the destruction of the rest is only from themselves, they finde sufficiently the cause of obstinacy and refusal in themselves, Hos. 13. 9.

V. 5. But seek not Bethel] Chap. 4. 4. Namely, the idols which were in these cities; seek not by-wayes in coming to God; much lesse abominable wayes, as those at Bethel, Gilgal, and Beersheba; for those are odious to God, and damnable. If ye will seek God, ye must forsake them, to which you have been so much, and so long accustomed and addicted. True Religion and Idolatry cannot consist together. Conversion to God other-ways is but vain and counterfeit. See Gen. 35. 1, 2. Josh. 24. 22, 23. Jude 10. 16. 1 Sam. 7. 3. such mixtures mar Religion, and Gods pure worship. Of Bethel, see the Annotations on Hos. 10. 15.

Gilgal] See Annotations on Hos. 4. 15.

Beersheba] This was a City on the south border of Jury, Judg. 21. There Hagar wandered, going towards Egypt, and thither Elias came in his flight from Jezebel, towards mount Sinai, 1 King. 19. 3. There Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob sometimes dwelt: and there Abraham sist, and Isaac after, made a Covenant with Abimilech, and Phicol. It after fell to the lot of the tribe of Judah: and out of it was imparted to the tribe of Simeon, Josh. 19. 2. 9. 1 Chron 4. 28. Publike Idolatry was at last set up there, as appears in this Text, and Chap. 8. 14. Judah then is here also touched for idolatry.

Gilgal shall] Namely, the inhabitants thereof. In the Hebrew there is an allusion between the word Gilgal and the verb adjoyned. Gilgal signifies rowling, Josh. 5. 9. Here thus, Gilgal, i. e. Rowling, shall be rowled away into captivity.

Bethel shall come to nought] Bethel signifies the house of God; but but by reason of the idolatry that was used therein, it is called Bethaven, that is to say, the house of an idol, Hos. 4. 15. & 10. 8. and because Aven signifies an idol, or nought, and vanity; therefore her last ruine is also set forth by this name.

V. 6. Seek] He again doth repeat, and presse that, vers. 4. assuring them thereby, that whiles they retain their old superstition and idolatries, they do not seek the Lord, nor can do, whatsoever they pretend.

and ye shall live] If ye seek him truly, he will certainly blesse you; if you want his blessing, it is through your want of seeking him truly, which thing you can never do, till you abandon your false worships, and be regulated by his word and Law only.

lest he break] Like a devouring fire, break in pieces, and consume all.

the house of Joseph] Of the ten Tribes whereof the chief, was that of Ephraim, that came of Joseph.

Bethel] None of your idols which you serve in Bethel, and wherein you so much trust for help, shall shelter and succour you.

V. 7. Ye who] He comes now to the second Table, and chargeth them with grosse sins against it; so leaving them no wayes unconvicted. He chiefly chargeth the great ones, and rulers, who should have kept the rest within the bounds of obedience. But they being evil, corrupted the rest, as bad humours flow from the head to the body.

turn judgement to wormwood] Chap. 6. 12. ye corrupt justice: and whereas of it self it is a most profitable and pleasant thing, ye make it most bitter to those who are oppressed; and most abominable to God.

and leave off] Let it lie in the dust; yea, tread it under foot.

V. 8. that maketh] A magnificent description of God and his power. He is not like an idol of their imagination, to be pleased, and pacified with toyes and trifles, as children are. Hypocrites that think so of him, and deal so with him, shall finde him another manner of God. Therefore seek him otherwise then so. Thus the Prophet riseth, as it were, into some heat against those that entertained such childish thoughts of God.

the seven stars] Called Pleiades, and Virgiliæ; which rise with the Spring, and continue till Autumn.

Orion] Which in the moneth of December is to be seen in our Hemisphere, all the nights through, some translate this, Arcturus. The Hebrew words are Cimah and Chesil. And indeed neither Jew, nor we, are certain of their exact signification, as neither of the names of many herbs; and of the womens wardrope, Esay 3. 18. ——24. And Amos likely was but such an Astronomer, as herdmen use to be. He speaks of the stars, as the vulgar sort then used to do; and names two, then most noted. See Cha. 9. 6. Job 9. 9. & 26. 13. & 38. 31. LXX thus; ὁ ποιῶν πάντα ἐν μεγαλειότητι.

and turneth] This may be properly understood of the great and prodigious changes in the air: and figuratively of the alteration of States, and changes of the world.

calleth for the waters of the sea] Chap. 9. 6. by vapours and clouds.

poureth them out] By showrs and rain, yet some hereby conceive more likely to be meant, the deluges and inundations of the sea, then the vapours of it dissolved into rain.

the Lord is his name] Such is he; and not such an idol as you fancy to your selves, to be dallied withal, and deluded by your childish impostures.

V. 9. That strengtheneth the spoiled] Heb. spoil, strengthens them that were weak, and spoiled, and enables them against the strongs applying it to Israel, that though they counted themselves never so strong, in their fortresses, and otherwise; yet God would enable and strengthen a spoiler, a conquering destroyer against them, and their fortifications.

so that the spoiled shall, &c.] The weak strengthened by God shall do it.

V. 10. rebuketh] They hate the Prophets, which reprove them in the open assemblies. Particularly the Judges and Magistrates do, (who kept their Courts in or neer to the gates of the Cities) who cannot endure the censure of Gods servants, see Esay 29. 21. But they would be counted sacred, not to be touched, no wayes to be rebuked, though they were never so worthy of it. Or, as some, the People hate the Magistrate, that judgeth, and reproveth them justly in the place of judgement; see verse 12, 15. & Gen. 34. 20.

V. 11. your treading is upon the poor] Growing rich by oppressing them, as Chap. 4. 1. and laying burdens and impositions upon them, and ye take from him burdens of wheat] That little he hath to relieve himself, even his food and livelihood; and force him many times to beat and bring it to you; and so suck out of his veins his life-blood.

ye have built] Thinking to flourish and frolick thereby:

but ye shall] Ye corrupt Judges and Rulers, ye great and greedy oppressors, ye shall be disappointed of your hopes; and misse of your ends, Esay 33. 1. Jer. 25. 12, 14. Heb. 2. 8. Deut. 28. 30, 39. Esay 17. 11. Zeph. 1. 13. when you have sold your souls for gain; and bestowed much labour and cost on your desires, ye shall be deprived of them.

V. 12. For I know] Though you think to colour your sins; or care not for men; yet I know, and will judg; you cannot shake off my power and soveraign dominion.

mighty sins] Huge and heinous, and monstrous.

they afflict] He doth instance in palpable and heinous crimes, open and flagitious offences.

they turn aside] Turn him off for want of bribes; and spoil him of his right; even there where he should have been maintained in it.

V. 13. Therefore the prudent] For feare of their tyranny, who would endure no rebukes, vers. 10. Or, because it were in vain to speak to so forlorn a people, as Hos. 4. 17. or chiefly because the wise and true believers, which judge truly of the calamities, and of their causes, shall in silence, and with patience, worship God, and adore his justice, without any murmuring or offence. See chap. 6. 10. Jer. 8. 14.

V. 14. seek good] Seriously and studiously:

and not evil] As ye greedily do, and will so hardly be taken off from it.

that ye may live] The fault then is not in God, but in your selves, if you do not live happily. He is ready to blesse you, if ye hinder him not. And yet hypocrites are ready to clear themselves, and lay all the blame on God, for their miseries.

And so] And not otherwise, no otherwise; dream not of it.

with you] And for you; dwell in the midst of you; and blesse you, Lev. 11. 44. & 26. 12. 1 King. 6. 13.

as ye have spoken] As you have made your boasts that he is, you being his people. Or, as you desire, and continually pray that he may be, ye much boast of Gods promises this way; and promise much to your selves in his kind, what? is not the ark of his presence with us? hath he not chosen us to be his peculiar people? can he deny himself so, and his covenant? Presuming thus that God is still tied to you, though you be never so wicked, and break the covenant on your part. But they are vain words, your words and sayings shall then prove true, and then onely, when ye seek good, and not evil; when ye seriously repent and return.

V. 15. Hate the evil] The Prophet is again upon it, because he had to deal with a people so blinded, and so hardned, by long custome in sin. And in this order here set down, must Repentance be begun, and carried on; as to the effects and fruits of it. See Psal. 34. 14. & 97. 10. & 37. 27. Isai. 1. 10, 17. Rom. 12. 9.

and establish] Mend that fault, vers. 12.

it may be that the Lord God of hosts] Joel 2. 14. See Josh. 14. 12. The Prophet gives some comfort to some godly among them; that though they had been carried away with the common current, yet letting others run on to their ruine, they should not despair, but take care of their own safety, and seek to escape, as it were, out of the fire and flame, with an hope and expectation of Gods mercy. The Prophet here doth not cast into their minds perplexities, and nourish up distrust in God; but this he doth to increase their greater industry.

remnant] Chap. 4. 11. The most number then must not be looked after, nor followed.

V. 16. Therefore] Because you reject all my exhortations, and admonitions; and continue obstinate, and sooth up your selves in your sinful shifts and trusts.

the Lord] So many titles are again given to God, to make them sensible and apprehensive of him with whom they had to deal; and that it was in vain to cavil or dally with him, to whom the supream power and judgement did belong.

wailing] He now meddles little more with their sins; as having already sufficiently convicted them: nor much insists upon exhortations, and promises; having prevailed nothing thereby: But he falls mainly upon judgements, and the execution of Gods vengeance, in the residue of his Prophecie; onely concludes all with Evangelical promises of re-edifying and restoring the Church, and making it Catholique by, and under Christ, in the end of the last chapter.

Alas, alas] Wo, wo, now they talk merrily, and sport, and frolick it; as Chap. 6. 4, 5, 6. Isai. 22. 12, 13. But then they shall be wholly taken up in mourning.

husbandman] As to a publike and general, and most grievous mourning. See v. 17.

such as are skilful] Those teachers, and hired practisers of funeral mournings, whereof see Jer. 9. 17. 2 Chron. 35. 25. Job 3. 8. Eccles. 12. 15. A custom in the East countreys of old; and in some parts of Europe, and at this day in Ireland. Of the lawfulnes of it the Prophet speaks not.

V. 17. in all vineyards shall be wailing] Instead of the joyful songs in time of vintage, Esay 16. 10. There shall nothing be heard, but weeping and howling; because of the spoil of the countrey.

I will passe through thee] As it were to do a general execution of justice, Exod. 11. 4. & 12. 12, 23. nor dwell in the midst of thee, in love and favour.

V. 18. wo unto you] Jer.30.7. Joel 2.2. Zeph.1.15. Malac. 3.2. and 4.1.

that desire the day of the Lord] By a profane boldneſſe; as provoking him to bring that once to paſſe, which he hath ſo long threatned: or by an impudent boaſting of your own innocency, as if God coming to judgement ſhould finde you guiltleſſe, or at leaſt leſſe guilty then the Prophets report you to be. And preſuming on it ſtill, as hypocrites uſe to do, that they were Gods people and heritage, and God was tied to them, and could not ſatisfie his word, and deny himſelf, and abandon them. See Eſay 5.19. Jer. 17.15. & 5.12,13. Ezek. 12.22. 2 Pet. 3.3.

is darkneſſe] In the day of his appearing he will ſhew himſelf an enemy, armed againſt you, with the weapons of his wrath, to execute ſad, black, and diſmal miſeries upon you, without any light of comfort at all. See Iſai. 5.30. and 8.22. and 59.9. Jer. 30.7. No light ſhall appear in this dark night of black calamities, unleſſe it be as that of the lightning, which is accompanied with thunder: and leaves darkneſſe after it.

V. 19. As if a man flee from a Lion] Theſe Judgments of God ſhall be utterly unavoydable, and he that ſhall eſcape one evill, ſhall fall into a worſe, Job 20.24. Iſai. 24.18. Jer. 48.43,44. When one judgement is over, another, and a worſe ſhall come: no change ſhall miniſter eaſe, or relief. God hath more ſcourges then one, wayes enough to ſet upon you, to multiply, and aggravate his plagues, and puniſhments, by foreign enemies, civil wars, famine, peſtilence, &c. There is no way to ſhun him, and run from him, but penitently to runnento him.

or went into the houſe] For fear of the Lion, or Bear.

V. 20. no brightneſſe in it?] Or any comfort, eaſe, direction, or good counſel, verſ. 18.

V. 21. I hate] So far off from being pleaſed with them, and pacified by them, as ye imagine. Thus it is ſaid of the Jews feaſts and ſacrifices, Iſai. 1.11. Jer. 6.20. becauſe their perſons were notoriouſly ſinful: and to their ſervices, which ſhould have been exerciſes of their piety, faith, and repentance, being devoid of them, and nothing but bare externalls, bodily performances, were odious to God, Iſai. 66.3. But the Iſraelites feaſts and ſacrifices had this evil more, that they were directly contrary to Gods expreſſe Law, and his worſhip, tyed to Jeruſalem, and his Temple there. Theſe then in themſelves were prophane feaſts and ſacrifices.

will not ſmell in your ſolemn aſſemblies] Or, ſmell your holy-days. I will not accept of your ſacrifices, which you ſhall offer me, at thoſe times. See Lev. 26.31. 1 Sam. 15.22. Nor be pleaſed with them, See Gen. 8.21. Exod. 29.18. Levit. 1.9. 13.17. Ezek. 20.40, 41. If offered according to the Law, then God would count them of a ſweet ſmelling ſavour to him.

V. 22. burnt offerings] Of theſe kinds of offerings, commanded by God, ſee Lev. 1.2,3. chap.

peace-offerings] Or thank-offerings.

of your fat beaſts] Be they never ſo fat. The reaſons of refuſal were noted before. They were curious and punctual in the outward rites, but reſted therein onely. See Mal. 1.7,8.

V. 23. ſongs] There were ſacred ſongs, parts of Gods true ſervice among the Jews: whereof ſee 1 Chr. 25. 2 Chr. 23. 18. But theſe were in imitation of the Jewes, taken up by the ten Tribes, in their falſe worſhips. And herein they abounded, which proves as defiled with impiety and hypocriſie.

Viols] As formerly of ſongs. Many inſtruments of muſick were uſed in the Levitical ſervice.

V. 24. let judgement] Some refer this to the celebration of the abundant grace of Chriſt, which was to be manifeſted in the Goſpel. Others thus; Triſle you with me in frivolous ceremonies; but I will cauſe my righteous judgements as torrents to run down and overwhelm you, for your hypocritical worſhips, and flagitious lives. Others rather thus; do righteouſneſſe, and judgment, and juſtice in a firm, full, and invariable way. And then your righteouſneſſe ſhall ſhine as the morning, as it is Iſai. 58.8. And this ſeems beſt to agree with the context.

run down] Heb. rowl. Targum, and Vulgar Latine thus; ſhall be revealed.

V. 25. Have ye offered, &c.] Acts 7.24. your forefathers, even in the wilderneſſe, were idolaters; neglecting that part of the worſhip which I had appointed them: and you imitate them, and heap up their meaſure.

unto me] And not rather to idols and devils, Deut. 32.17. This the next verſe ſhews. And thus they leavened Gods pure worſhip from the beginning, with their own idolatrous devices. They intended it to, and for God: And ſo much God here teſtifies of his people, ver. 22,23. And this wil-worſhip ſo blinds their eyes, that they cannot or will not think otherwiſe. But God judgeth of them otherwiſe, and takes them, as not done to him, but againſt him; not to his honour, but diſhonour. And ſo generally idolaters think, and mind to ſhew their love to God, worſhipping him by, and before images; but God ſaith they hate him in ſo doing, Exod. 20.5. as the like is, John 16.2.

in the wilderneſſe forty years?] A prodigious thing it is, that even then they ſhould ſo fall from God, and his worſhip, to ſo foul idolatry, when he had ſo newly and miraculouſly brought them out of Egypt, given them his Law, and did feed, and noſſel them in the wilderneſſe; yet ſuch is the monſtrouſneſſe of mans natural corruption.

V. 26. But ye have born] Miniſtred unto, and ſerved.

the Tabernacle] The word is Siccuth. Theodotion renders it ἐφόδους, viſions. Aquila evanodeqeus. Saint Stephen, Acts 7.43. follows the Greek verſion of the LXX, which takes Siccuth for Succoth, and ſo tranſlate it Tabernacle. But Siccuth ſeems to ſome the name of an idol. The meaning is not much differing; thus, your forefathers, making ſhew of ſerving me, carrying my Tabernacle, and all things belonging to it, in the wilderneſſe, had notwithſtanding their hearts ſet upon their idols, and haply carried about with them ſome chappel or image of them.

your] Moloch. And ſo your god; which you have made to be yours, by your impious idolatry.

Moloch] And ſo Saint Stephen hath it, Acts 7.43. Aquila hath it Malchom, which is the ſame with Moloch, an idol of the Ammonites, 1 King. 11.5,7. And ſome think that Gods own Tabernacle is here ſo called, by way of contempt, through their idolatrous abuſing of themſelves, and it. In ſuch manner as Abraham and Sarah are called an Amorite, and an Hittite, Ezek. 16.3. The word ſignifies King. And ſome gather from it the high eſteem that idolaters have of their idols, calling them their King.

and Chiun] Or of Chiun, another imaginary god, or idol. After thought by ſome to be (by corruption of the word in proceſſe of time) called Remphan, Acts 7.43. or Raphon, 1 Mac. 5.37. ſome think Chiun to be Saturn, or Mars, and Siccuth, Venus; thoſe two Planets, which Stars, and heavenly bodies they held for gods, and honoured with images. The Egytians at this day call Saturn by the name of Rephan.

your images] Poſitively. He derides their madneſſe in thinking any Piety to be included in theſe images. The word images here ſignifies idols, contrary to the aſſertion of Papiſts. Tremellius tranſlates thus; baſin imaginum veſtrarum.

the ſtar of your god] It is thought of ſome that the idols in Scripture, and their images, do ſomewhat repreſent the planets, or ſtars. See 1 Kin. 11,5. and were images of the Celeſtial bodies. Some idolatrous Jewes thought the ſtars to be gods. See Deut. 4. 19. & 17.3. 2 King. 23.5,11. Jer. 8.2. Ezek. 8.16.

ye made to your ſelves] You had made the images of them, and had attributed Divinity to them, and had conſecrated and ſet them up, for the object of your worſhip. This is wil-worſhip to make any thing anſwer for Gods worſhip, to our ſelves, of our ſelves, without the warrant of God, and his word, we muſt be paſſive, not active here.

V. 27. Therefore will I cauſe you to go, &c.] Becauſe that after ſo many ſins of your forefathers, puniſhed by me, from time to time, you have perſevered in them, yea, and have gone beyond them; I will execute the final judgements upon you, in a total deſolation, and diſperſion in ſtrange Countreys. He will ſuffer them no longer to be in his land to poſſute it.

beyond Damaſcus] Beyond them of Damaſcus, further then they. The Syrians of Damaſcus were carried Captives into the place called Syromedia, next to Suſiana, 2 King. 16.9. But the Iſraelites were carried Captives far further, into Peruia, and Caſpia, or Caſpiana, Ezra 8.17. Others thus; That the grievouſneſſe of their captivity ſhould be greater, and beyond that which they endured in Syria, and was cauſed by Hazael, who reigned in Damaſcus. See 2 King. 13.3. Others rather thus; That whereas they counted Damaſcus, the chief City of Syria, as an impregnable fortreſſe, and frontire defence for all their countrey, that they might reſt ſecure under the ſafeguard of it, yet that ſhould not hinder, but God would cauſe them to go into captivity, even beyond it into Aſſyria, Acts 7.43. It is, beyond Babylon, wherein St. Luke ties not himſelf to the words, but expounds the meaning; for as much as Aſſyria was further then Babylon. Of Damaſcus, ſee on Chap. 1.3.

ſaith the Lord] To aſſure them of the truth of this threatned vengeance, however they might ſlight it.

whoſe name] See on Chap. 4.13.

CHAP. VI.

Verſ. 1. WO to them] Luk. 6.24. The Prophet threatneth the wealthy, which regarded not Gods plagues nor menaces by his Prophets.

are at eaſe] Or, are ſecure, and proudly confident. The wealthy and great ones, that give themſelves up to ſilek pleaſures, and are drowned in them, remain ſecure, and are not ſtartled at Gods ſevere judgements upon others, upon the vulgar ſort, and common people; whereas they ſhould be humbled at the ſignes of Gods wrath. See Eſay 22.12,13.

in Zion] Here by the way he toucheth Judah.

and truſt in the mountain of Samaria] The Citizens of theſe two heads head Cities, were more proud, wolf puous, and ſecure, in the midſt of Gods judgements, then other parts of the Kingdomes and countries were. Therefore the Prophet thunders wo againſt theſe confident contemners of him, and his anger.

chief] Exodus 23.5. Or, firſt-fruits.

of the Nations] Namely Zion, or Jeruſalem, of Judah: and Samaria of the ten tribes. Or the chief of all nations; more ſpecially of the nations of Canaan. Thus he taxeth their ingratitude to God.

came] To wit thither, into the poſſeſſion of them; not by their own arm and ſtrength, but becauſe God did drive away the former inhabitants from before the face, Pſal. 78.55. and 44.3. And thither after came to theſe cities, upon all buſineſſes and occaſions, as to the Princes courts, or courts of juſtice; and thither, as to the places of worſhip.

V. 2. Paſſ ye unto] Do but conſider theſe cities, which formerly were mightier and in greater proſperity then any of yours, and yet are decayed and ruined; to take example thereby, not to grow proud in carnal ſecurity, Nehem 3.8. Jer. 12. and 26.6. Pſal. 78.60. Or, thus. ye have received many and ample bleſſings, and ſuch as no neighbour-city or nation, though never ſo great, do enjoy; how vile is it then for you to abuſe ſuch bleſſings to inſolent pride and ſecurity. Do not therefore ſleep in your ſins, be not drunken and intoxicated with your preſent proſperous conditions; take leſſons for your own good out of the loſſe and deſtruction of others. Look into the glaſs of Gods judgements upon Heathen nations. Their great power, proſperity and confidence availed not them.

Calneh] A moſt ancient city in the Babylonian countrey, Geneſis 10.10.

Hamath] A mighty city, whence the countrey adjacent took alſo the name. The Hamathite deſcended of Canaan, the ſon of Cham, Gen. 10.18. famous in Scripture, ſeated at the foot of Libanus, nigh the tribe of Aſher, the north border of Judea, 1 Chron. 13.5. 2 Chr. 7.8. Lying north-eaſt of Libanus, and bounding north upon Damaſcus, Joſh. 13.5. Num. 34.8. Ezek. 47.15,16. and 48.1. 1 Kings 8. 65. Sometimes a kingdome of it ſelf, 2 Sam. 8.9. Toi king of it, 2 Kings 19.13. Eſay 37.13. Sometimes in the poſſeſſion of the kings of Judah, 2 Chron. 8.3,4. ſometimes of the kings of Syria, 2 Kings 17.24. Eſay 10.9. Their God was Aſhima, 2 Kings 17.30. In the territories of this city, or countrey, was Ribla, where the king of Egypt bound Jehoahaz, 2 Kings 23.33. And the king of Babylon did execution upon ſo many of Judah, 2 Kings 25.21. Jer. 39.5. Theſe famous places flouriſhed ſometimes, but were deſtroyed by the Aſſyrian, 2 Kings 19.12. Eſay 10.9. Hamath in Naphtali is another city, Joſh. 19.35.

Gath] One of the five Lordſhips of the Philiſtins, 1 Sam. 6.17. Recovered in the daies of Samuel, 1 Sam. 7.14. Loſt in the daies of Saul: in whoſe time David twice fled thither to Achiſh the king of Gath: and upon his danger there the firſt time, made thoſe Pſalms, 34 and 56. He had ſlain Goliah the gyant of Gath, 1 Sam. 17. And after, three other gyants were born of their race, deſcended of the gyant at Gath, fell by the hands of David ſeevants. In Solomons time Shimei his ſervants fled thither, and he after them: for which he ſuffered death. Afterwards in the daies of Joaſh of Judah, Hazael king of Syria took it, 2 Kings 12.17. And king Uzziah after that broke down the walls of it, 2 Chron. 26.6. This was an example nigh at hand to Gods people.

be they better] Are they, or have they been better, or greater, in a more firm and flouriſhing ſtate and condition?

then theſe kingdoms] Of Judah and Iſrael. Some underſtand this of Calne, Hemath, and Gath, Is their condition better? Some thus, Was it ever better then yours? Or be it ſo, yet now ſee their change and fall.

border greater] Their bounds had been great, and dominion large: but now cut off ſo ſhort, that the cities themſelves were become tributary to another. And why then are you ſo ſottiſh and confident? and fear not the like vengeance now threatned by me, and hanging over your heads? Nothing can withſtand Gods hand.

V. 3. that put far away the evil day] Chap. 5.18. and Chap. 9. ver. 10. the Chieftains put away far from you all thought and fear of Gods judgements threatned by his Prophets, ſleighting and ſcorning them, Ezek. 12.22,27. Eſay 22.13. and in the mean time draw neer to publick tyranny, as if ſins and their puniſhments could go the one without the other. See 2 Pet. 3.4.

and cauſe the ſeat of violence] Pſalm 94.20. Or, habitation.

to come neer] Ye haſten it, and ſpeedily haſten your ſelves to it, ruſh into all manner of miſchief and inhumanity, as the horſe runneth into the battel. Thus they put off the evil day, and yet by their ſins pull it upon them. As drunkards would put off a feaver, and yet, by inflaming themſelves with wine, pull it upon them.

V. 4. that lie] That drown themſelves in pleaſures, even in the midſt of Gods ſevere judgements: and heed them not, though they encompaſſe them about: whereas rather they ſhould then have layen upon the ground, and have humbled themſelves in duſt and aſhes. The things here mentioned, are not ſimply in themſelves unlawful, but unlawful at ſuch a ſeaſon, in thoſe miſerable times, when the fire of Gods wrath was kindled againſt them, and ſhould have ſtruck an horrour into them.

ſtretch themſelves upon their couches] Or, abound with ſuperfluities in their feaſtings. This alſo as the former is chiefly ſpoken againſt the great ones and rulers. And ſo is that which follows.

V. 5. That chaunt] Or quaver, Eſay 5.12. As men uſe to do at marriage feaſts, at the ſolemnization of their birth-daies, and other like occaſions; not duly weighing that of the Wiſe man, Eccleſ. 3. v. 4.

David] Who was a great inventer, and maſter of muſick, and muſical inſtruments, 1 Chron. 23.5. which he imployed in praiſing of God: whereas theſe did uſe them for a provocation of carnall pleaſure, and that at ſo unſeaſonable a time, as it they would outface God and his Judgements, and ſo they abuſe the example of David, as hypocrites commonly do abuſe the examples of Gods Saints in many things. LXX in their tranſlation of this verſe, do much vary and change the ſenſe.

V. 6. That drink] Their abuſe of theſe things doth not condemn the uſe of them.

wine in bowls] Or, in bowls of wine. By meaſure without meaſure.

they are not grieved] For their publick calamities; not affected, or affli cted therewith, on their own, or their brethrens behalf. This is it that makes out their ſin, and is to be applied to the ſeverall branches of this, and the two verſes afore, Jer. 30.7. This is contrary to that Pſalm 35.13,14,15. and 137.1.7. Lament. throughout. Jer 9.1.

affliction] Heb. Breach.

V. 7. they go Captive] They that are at eaſe in Zion, and live and lie in pleaſures.

I abhor the excellency of Jacob] That is, their riches and pomp, The bleſſings, benefits, priviledges and excellencies wherewith formerly he had adorned them, ſhould not hinder him now from abhorring them. For they had forfeited them all, and were become ſo much the more hateful and abominable.

all that is therein] Heb. the fulneſſe thereof, though it be never ſo much repleniſhed with men, and all manner of ſtore.

V. 9. If there remain] After a former plague and Judgement; wherein the greateſt number have already periſhed.

ten men] Suppoſe that ſome number do eſcape the enemies hands, yet they ſhall fall by the peſtilence; and if there be not men enough for to bury them, their bodies ſhall be burnt, which was not uſed among the people, but only in caſes of extream neceſſity. Great burnings were of odors, and ſweet ſpices, at the funerals of their Kings. See 2 Chron. 16.14. and 21.19. See alſo that 2 Sam. 31.12. The meaning is here, not one of them ſhall eſcape. This is more then the peſtilence uſeth to do: This is an act of Gods horrible vengeance; to cut off, as it were deſperately, ſo deſperate, forlorn, invincible, incorrigible a people, all ſuch ſinners ſhould fear and tremble.

V. 10. a mans uncle ſhall take him up] The neereſt of kin, who for the duty of conſanguinity, or to cleanſe the houſe which is fallen to him by inheritance, ſhall take care of theſe dead bodies; the ordinary, and mercenary officers, deputed to this ſervice and imployment, in this ſo general a mortality, likely being wanting. See Eſaech. 39.14.

that burneth him] Vulgar Latin, to burn him: becauſe the ſolemnity of expottation, and funeral in a time of ſich calamity, as was formerly ſaid, could not be had; which otherwiſe is uſual. See Eccleſ. 12.5. 2 Sam. 3.31.

the bones] More eaſily might they be carried out, the carkaſe being burned. To cauſe the houſe to be more eaſily and privately freed from this legal uncleaneſſe. Numb. 19.14.

No] No more: there is an end, all are dead, as verſe 9.

ſhall ſay unto him] He ſeems to mean the uncle, or him that had been imploy'd in burning theſe dead bodies, if any other were ſo imployed, that he ſhould ſay to him that is remaining ſick in the ſides of the houſe; one of ten, as chap. 5.3. or, to ſome other not of that houſe and family, yet crept in thither.

we may not] Or, they will not, or have not. This extream deſolation doth diſpenſe with us touching the laws of God concerning theſe pollutions, and the purifying of them, which were not obſerved even by the moſt ſcrupulous conſeiences in the greateſt extreamities. See Lam. 4.14,15. Others, upon the other tranſlation, thus; they were forlorn and deſperate ſinners that regarded not the Lord at all, nor once mentioned his name, when they were at their laſt gaſpings, yea, rather ſhunned it as an ominous name, that boded them no good luck, but all evil. Or rather thus, we formerly gloried so much in the name of the Lord, and made that a shield and buckler for our sins. But now we must cast away that false boasting; we see God is become our fierce enemy; now the very name of God is dreadful and terrible to us, we could wish to hear no more of him, and it. Luke 23.30. Apoc.6.16.

V. 11. For behold] This confirms the former sentence. All these things shall happen by reason of the utter extermination of great and small, high and low which God hath appointed, yea commanded the Assyrians, and Babylonians to execute, yet his command and word alone, of it self were sufficient to do it, if he so pleased.

the great house] And the little: none should escape from the greatest to the least; they were all such desperate sinners.

breaches] Or, droppings.

V. 12. Shall horses] Great variety there is in the understanding and application of these general words. Some thus; Shall we Prophets continually cast away our labours upon you, who are so desperately corrupted, and turn all the good which is presented unto you and bestowed upon you, into evil, as if a man ploughed or digged a hard rock: or, it is as impossible for such sinners as you are to stand out Gods judgements, and go free, as it is impossible for horses and oxen to plow upon a rock: Or thus; It is as impossible for them to do well, as it is for horses to run, or oxen to plow on rocks. Or thus; ye have so overturned all law and right, as if one overturned the very order and law of nature; such monsters are ye. Or thus; That the Prophet should no more prevail with them, then if one did sing a song to a deaf man, or should go to run horses, or plow with oxen upon a rock. Others rather thus; Can God be so unmindful of his covenant with you for your good, as you do so much boast and trust, when ye so break it on your parts, so highly and hainously? He can no more run on in the way of blessing you, and doing good unto you, nor manage and manure you with his gifts and graces, while ye are such, such rocks; even no more then horses can run on a rock, or one can plow with oxen there.

for ye have turned] He therefore must deal accordingly with you Psalm.18.26.

hemlock] Or wormwood. Chap.5.7.

V. 13. ye which rejoyce] That triumph and glory in your strength, as if you could therewith overcome your enemies. See 2 Sam.2.1. which indeed is a thing of nought. As also all your other lying pretensions whatsoever, wherewith ye delude your selves, and which swell you up to a wretchlesse contempt of me, and my judgements.

have we not] And thus, for this point, they did foolishly rejoyce in a thing of nought.

V. 14. But behold] He giveth a reason why he hath called all their hopes and means, things of nought: by repeating the judgement formerly denounced: and by more particularly naming the kinde and manner of it; by a nation of the Assyrians no doubt, as the sacred history sheweth, 2 Kings 17.

CHAP. VII.

Verse 1. THus hath the Lord] The Prophet in this Chapter shews how God did often take off his judgements begun to be inflicted upon them; and so punish them onely by degrees; to see if they would take off themselves from their sins; and make use of this his lenity and forbearance to repent. But all this prevailed not with them; but they rather grew the more obstinate thereby, and obdurate in their sins, and against Gods judgements, even to slight and contemn them.

shewed unto me.] This was then in a vision shewed by the Lord to Amos. The judgement it self was visible upon the people; but they had not eyes to see it to be Gods hand striking them, and to make use of it; Esay 9.13. Jer.5.3.

he formed grasshoppers] Or, green worms according to the letter. Here was shewn in this vision some great spoile done by these insects. See Amos 4.9. Nahum 3.15. Esay 33.4.

latter growth after the Kings mowings] It is thought that the Kings did take the first crop of hay to keep their war-horses, and for other services, leaving the latter hay for other cattel. A like reputation of time is that 2 Samuel 11.1. LXX here translate very strangely.

V. 2 made an end] This seems to relate to some Judgement begun before the time of Jeroboam, the second, and not to that inflicted after by the Assyrian. See that Joel 1.

forgive] Go not on to consume thy people by this means; spare, withdraw thine hand, He pleads no other argument, but onely Gods mercy. Thus the Prophet commiserates them, pities them, intreateth for them. So Jer.9.1. and 18.20. and 7.16. Thus must Gods Ministers tenderly compassionate their people, and pray for them: And yet be faithful to God, and their calling, in dealing roundly, and roughly with them for their sins, thundring Gods judgements against them; as this Prophet did. They must mingle these two affections; and not let the one hinder the other. And the people might hereby well perceive that Amos for all his sharpnesse against them, was no enemy to them, but in all things sought their good, reformation and salvation. Gal.4.16. Jer.17.15,16.

by whom shall Jacob arise] Or, who of (or for) Jacob shall stand? How shall thy people ever recover themselves, if thou dost overthrow them with this plague, after so many more that have already made them so weak? and he names Jacob, for as it were putting God in minde of his covenant with Jacob, and that these now were his people and heritage; not Egyptians or Assyrians, with whom he was thus dealing. See Psalm.105.6. and 135.4. Jer.3.14.

for he is small] In number and strength, 2 Kings 14.26. brought low and little. He pleads here not the peoples merit, but their misery. See that plea, Psal.25.11.

V. 3. The Lord repented for this] That is, staid his plague at my prayer. See upon Gen.6.6. Jer.26.19. changed not his Eternal purpose; but did herein, in suspending a while the further and full execution of his wrath, according to his own eternal decree, But in the phrase there is an application and condescension, to our capacity; it is spoken after the manner of men, See 1 Sam.15.29.

V. 4. called to contend by fire] Contending is the more used when we otherwise cannot get right. And this was Gods prefent ease and condition with his people; he was at this passe with them. This a more grievous judgement then the former. The fire of Gods anger was now more kindled. Upon further impatiency God further augments his punishments. Levit.26.18. as Nebuchadnezzar did heat his oven, Dan.3.19. By fire, Meaning, That Gods indignation was inflamed against the stubbornesse of his people. Or, it may be understood either of that extream drought which hath been spoken of: Amos 4.7,8. or figuratively, by extermination, by the fire of war, which had already consumed the Countrey. 2 Kings 14.26. And thus by fire is war signified, Chap. 1 & 2:

the great deep] It seemed to be so, by reason that the springs and streams, which rise from under ground, where the deep is, Gen.7. 11. Deut.33.13. were dryed up.

The Lord] See verse 3.

did eat up a part] To wit of the Land, for one part of the Land was watered with rain, Amos 4.7. Some rather understand this of Tiglath-Pileser war against Syria, 2 Kings 16.9. And afterwards against that part of Israel beyond Jordan, 1 Chronnicles 5.26. Isaiah 9.1.

V. 5. Cease] See on verse 2.

V. 6. So the Lord] See on verse 3.

This also] Thus God more then once spared his people, to see if yet at length possibly they would repent; but still their incorrigiblenesse rendred them the more inexcusable. And Gods Prophets are not to be accounted lyars, though God for a time suspend and take off his judgements threatned by them.

V. 7. the Lord stood upon a wall] A figure of Gods justice, who is the supream Master and chief builder, who examines all the actions of men; which are like a wall, that is to be built up by Masons; and if the work be right, God approves of it, and preserves it; if not, he reproves it, and overthrows it.

by a plumb-line] A perpendicular wall.

in his hand] Not then cast away out of his hand, as he would have it; unlesse they mean that after this time he cast it away, and medled no more with it.

V. 8. what seest thou?] To stirre up the minde of Amos, and consequently of the people to the more attention.

A plumb-line] But he did not so easily know what God meant by this, as by the two former visions of the grashoppers, and the fire. And this made him the more desirous to know, and the more attentive.

I will set] I will now actually execute my justice, which I have hitherto suspended, passing over the misdeeds of my people; And so exactly now destroy them, as formerly I did exactly build them up. This is my last measuring and scantling that I will take of them. See that Dan.5.25.

I will not] I will no more call back my judgements, passe by my people Israel, and spare them; but I will constantly persevere in the rigour of my justice, without any inclination henceforth to mercy, which they have hitherto so lewdly abused. Chap. 8.2. This at last they get by their contumacious obstinacy:

though they foolishly promised otherwise to themselves, out of his former indulgence.

V. 9. high places] All places dedicated by them to idolatry, under pretence of imitating Isaac, and their other forefathers, who formerly had sacrificed and served God in those places. In these they foolishly trusted, and gloried; which indeed did the more provoke Gods wrath against them.

of Isaac] This Patriarch mentioned, because they falsly pretended, and gloried in his name and example, as well as in Abraham, and Jacobs, these fathers were always in their mouthes; Joh. 4.20. The Fathers had Altars in those places and worshipped there; This was their armour of proof, and buckler of defence; they sheltred themselves under, these honourable names, and specious pretences.

and I will rise against the house of Jeroboam with the sword] 2 Kings 15.10. Zachary the son of Jeroboam and his whole family being destroyed speedily. Though God spared his person, and all things prospered and flourished in the time of his reign. This prophecie therefore was uttered in the time of this Jeroboam as appears also in the verses following.

V. 10. Then Amaziah] Here the Prophet is endangered for the faithful discharge of his office and function. And so Jeremiah afterwards: Jerem.11.19,21. and 12.6. and 15.15. and 18.18. and 26.8.

Thus Pashur dealt evilly against Jeremiah. Jer.20.2. And Shemaiah did likewise Chap.29.26,27. Acts 7 52.

sent to Jeroboam] Amaziah seeks to oppresse the Prophet by Regal power. 2 Kings 14.23.

Amos hath conspired] Pretends the Kings cause onely, makes it his cause, and to concern him. And the crime alledged is capital; conspiracy, sedition, and treason. And all to exasperate the King against the Prophet. See Acts 24.5. A bloody accusation if true.

in the midst] Not in a corner, but publikely before all Israel; even in Bethel, verse 13.

the Land is not able to bear all his words] That is, he will raise some great tumults, and seditions, and factions: or, the people will rise against him by their own private authority, if thou do not provide to the contrary, by thy royal power. See John 11.48.

V. 11. Jeroboam shall die by the sword] This wicked priest Amaziah for hatred he bare to the Prophet, thought this accusation sufficient to condemn him; whereas none other could take place: but it was falsly alledged, to incense the King against Amos, who had onely spoken of Jeroboams posterity, and not of Jeroboam himself, verse 9. No doubt but he watched still what Amos daily preached; and having got at length matter enough, as he conceived against him, he poures out his long-bred poyson in this double accusation against him.

V. 12. said unto Amos] When, it seems, his bloody message prevailed not with the King; whose answer is not here set down; nor doth he any thing against the Prophet, either out of fear, or some other politick respect. Now Amaziah turns from the Lion to the Fox: when this instrument of Satan, was not able to compasse his purpose by the King, he assayed by another practice: that was: to fear the Prophet, that he might depart: and not reprove their idolatry there openly, and so hinder him in his place and profit.

thou Seer] That is, the Prophet. See 1 Samuel 9.9. He gives him an honourable Title, to insinuate with him. So Matth. 21.16.

go] Thou freely mayest: none yet stops thee.

flee] Whiles thou mayest: and past speedily, if thou wilt save thy life, that canst not be here safe long: if thou stay, thou art but a lost man: a necessity then for thy preservation lies upon thee.

into the Land of Judah] Thine own Country: See Chap. 1.1 and the Annotations there. There such Prophets are better welcome, and better regarded both by the People, and their King Uzziah. Here thou art both a stranger, and odious amongst us.

and there eat bread] Thou mayest live there more safely, and plentifully: whereas staying here thou wilt starve, if worse doth not befal thee; being hated of all men.

and prophecie there] That is more proper for thee, to exercise thy function among thy kinred, and in thine own countrey; and not here. There is thy own religion, Preach it there as much as thou wilt. This is more then some persecutors will do, or suffer to be done.

V. 13. But] Chap.2.12. See the Annotations there.

again any more] I passe over what is past; I question it not, though thou hast been so faulty; but see thou do it no again any more. See Acts 4.17,18. and 5.40.

Chappel] Or, sanctuary. A place consecrated to the worship of the calves, 1 Kings 12.29. to which the King bears a singular devotion, and where he often makes his residence; wherefore it is not safe, nor fitting for thee to prophesie against him here. It is odious and dangerous to preach against the Kings religion here in his own Chappel, and Court. He hath right and zeal to his own religion; he may dispose of it as he list, and he hath power over thee; Here you must not cry out against this kingpom, and priesthood; this Court, and Temple. Amaziah hath an aim at his own Priesthood in Bethel, his power and possessions there, which Amos must not disturbe, nor shake him in the peaceable and quiet enjoyment of them.

Kings court] Heb. house of the kingdom: where civil affairs, and matters of state are handled.

V. 14. Then answered] He fears not to answer his imperious injunctions, and lordly prohibition. Dan.3.16,17,18. Acts 4.19. and 5.29.

I was no Prophet] Born, or bred. Thus he sheweth by his extraordinary vocation, that God had given him a charge which he must needs execute.

an herdman] Not brought up as Paul, Acts 22.3. or those at Bethel, 2 Kings 2.3. or Jericho, verse 5. or Gilgal, 2 Kings 4.38. But he was an herdman, Chap.1.1. brought up, not in the schools, the seminaries of learning, but in this countrey trade, an illiterate man.

sycomore fruit] A kinde of wilde figs called Egyptian figs. And so hardihip he had learned to endure, and turned not prophet for foods sake.

V. 15. And the Lord took me] He had a calling then; Heb.5.4. And that extraordinary, and miraculous; God calling him, and furnishing him with gifts thereto; as Christ did his Apostles, from being fishermen, and the like, to be his ambassadors, and fishers of men. This addes the more weight of authority to the Prophets calling.

as I followed the flock] Heb. From behinde, following that other calling, and not once dreaming of this. See Psal.78.70,71. 2 Sam.7.8.

Go Prophecie] He could not then cast off the yoak, God had laid on his neck; and obey the words of Amaziah. He did not go, and run unsent, of his own head; or by any humane ordinance take upon him this function. But as he sought not the office and employment, So neither must he forsake it. Thus he opposeth Gods command to Amaziahs inhibition.

V. 16. Now therefore hear] Thou hast had thy turn and thy word: Now the Lord will have his.

the word of the Lord] Not a vain word and ineffectual, as thine was; but clothed with power, and efficacie, working dreadfully and direfully upon thee, and thine. See 2 Cor.10.6.

thou sayest] Thou wouldest oppose thy self to God, take from him this right and soveraignty, curbe his spirit, that he should not freely by me reprove the sins of the people: This is a facrilegious audaciousnesse; and hereby thou doest double the vengeance for such a rash and raging attempt. See Acts 13.10,11. and Jer.29. 21,32.

and drop not] Ezek.20.46. and 21.2. Micah.2.6.

Isaac] The word likely that Amaziah used, implying therein his own and the Israelites glorying in the Fathers, and sheltring themselves under their wings. See Annotations on verse 9.

V. 17. thy wife] Thus God used to approve the authority of his Prophets by his plagues and judgements against them, which were malicious enemies. Jer.28.12,17. and 29,21,25,32. as this day he doth many times against them which persecute the Ministers of his Gospel.

shall be an harlot] Being by me disbanded to luxury, Hos.4. 13. or being forced thereunto by the enemies; as is too usual when cities are taken by storming.

in the city] And fight not all, publickly. This aggravates the anguish, and thy sons] Thus punished in his wife and children. See Jer. 29.32.

Thy land] Thine owne land, and that wherein thou livest, shall be alienated quite, and by line and measure divided out and shared to the possessions of strangers.

Thou shalt die] Namely, in Assyria, a land of infidels, far from the land of Canaan, which was the pledge of the Saints communion in life and in death.

and Israel shall surely go] That part of Amaziahs charge against Amos, was a truth. Amos so preached and prophecied; and it should assuredly be accordingly performed. And see this done by the Assyrians, 2 Kings 15.29. and 17.6,18,23,24. and 18.11.

CHAP. VIII.

Verse 1. IN this Chapter the Prophets goes on further to declare the final ruine of the people of Israel who by all the former judgements and chastisements could not be amended; but still resisted the remedies that God used; and so had proved themselves by many experiments to be irrecoverable and incorrigible.

the Lord God] He brings nothing of his own.

Powred unto me] In a vision; the more to assert the truth, and affect the peoples minde with it.

of Summer-fruit] Not as the hasty fruit before the summer, Esay 28. 4. not as that corn, 2 King. 19. 26. Esay 37. 27. But fully ripe. See Apoc. 14. 18.

V. 2. what seest thou?] Chap. 7. v. 8. Jer. 1. 11, 13. To stir up the minds of his people, to attend and expect some memorable and remarkable thing, upon such a conference and colloquie between God and his Prophet.

of summer-fruit] In the Hebrew there is a kind of affinity between the word summer and the word end which follows, which is the ground of this designe, and for to keep some mark thereof, the word [end] is joyned and used in the verse. See Jer. 1. 11. And this signifieth the ripenesse of their sin, and readinesse of Gods judgements. See the other type. Chap. 7. 7.

The end is come] The exposition of the vision. Seeing no former and lesser punishments would serve the turne, but still they abused Gods lenity; and hardned themselves in sin; God would no longer deal as a father or Physician; in vain should they hope for that hereafter. But he will now execute his last revenge upon them. Their sins were full and ripe; the precise time and term of final overthrow was now come. See Ezek. 7. 3, 3, 6, 7, 10, 12. Lam 4. 18. Jer. 2. 11, 12.

I will not] See Chap 7. v. 8.

V. 3. the songs] Namely the sweet melodie of great ones. See Amos 6. 5. Or rather, the melodious songs of the Temple, in their festivals, and at other times of divine service, as the next word shews.

of the temple] The idolatrous temples of the ten Tribes. And this may be extended to the Temple of Jerusalem, the Lords holy Temple. They pleased themselves in their prosperity, that they thought they were highly in Gods favour, and therefore sounded out his praises in their Temples, whereas the Prophet mean while thundred out his wrath and judgements against them.

Shall be howlings] Heb. shall howl, that is, be turned into howling. See verse 10. and Chap. 5. 23. Vulgar Latine thus; Stridebunt cardines templi.

Dead bodies in every place] The dead bodies shall not be buried honourably and with funeral pomp; but shall be thrown into pits and common graves, without any mourning. Psal. 78. 64. and 79. 2, 3. or shall want the right and rite of any sepulture. Though barbarous enemies, even in the heat of war, and bloody fight, use not to denie this one to another; but make ecclsations and truces to bury their dead.

they shall cast them] Chap. 6. 10.

with silence] Heb. Be silent. See Chap. 5. 13. and 6. 10.

V. 4. Hear] Though formerly he had convicted them, over and over again, of the justnesse of this severity of God against them; that he is not cruel in so doing, yet because nothing would serve their turn and satisfie them, he is at them, and at this point again; taking up their sin, the cause of it, and rating them for it. And he calls on them to listen and hearken; they were so deaf to hear the mention of their sins.

O ye] Great ones chiefly; and others also in their inferiour degree.

that swallow up] He instanceth in this one grosse and palpable, crying sin.

the needy] By staying of the sale of food and necessary things, which ye have gotten into your own hands; and so cause the poor to spend quickly that little which they have, and at length for necessity to become your slaves; or by any other means whatsoever. See Chap. 1. 6, 7.

V. 5. Saying] This was the saying and doing of the rich, and wealthy. And these presumed they could best escape Gods judgements in the common calamities; therefore the Prophet chiefly addresseth himself against them, and meets with them; to stop their mouthes, and tame their insolency and security. The vulgar sort of people had their other sins, sufficiently meriting their final ruine.

New moon] Or moneth, when the dearth was once come, they were so greedy of gain, that they thought the holy day to be an hindrance unto them; for on such days it was not lawful to buy or sell. Nehe. 13. 15, 16. They thought such days to be years, so long and tedious in passing; they thought every hour lost, every minute wherein they were not negotiating, latisfying, and sacrificing to their covetous, greedy desires; the fire of this furnace was still flaming and never gave them any rest. Hab. 2. 13. Or they thought and hoped; that upon some occasion the next moneth things would grow dearer then yet they were; some refer it to the moneth of intercalation, added to the 12 moneths of their year. Yet the word also is sometimes used to signifie the new-moons. Of the new moons, See Numb 10. 10 and Chap. 28. 11. Psal. 81 31. 1 King. 4. 23. 1 Sam. 20. 5. Esay 66, 23.

Sell corn] Then they will bring forth and make the advantage of their hoorded store.

and the sabbath] They had a sabbatical year; wherein things were usually dearer then in other years, because there was no plowing and sowing then. See Deut. 15. But this seems rather to relate to the Sabbath day.

set forth wheat] Heb. Open wheat.

making the Ephah small] That is, again st the Law, Levit. 19. 35, 36. Likely giving small measure in selling, and using great weights to weigh the money which they receive for payment. Ezech. 45. 10, 11. See the Annot. there.

Shekel] Ezech. 45. 12. See the Annotations there.

falsifying the ballances by deceit] Heb. perverting the Ballances of deceit. Prov. 11. 1. and chap. 16. 11.

V. 6. buy the poor] enfnaring the poor into fraudulent debts; to make them your bondmen, abusing the permission, Levit. 25. 39. which aimed only at a remedy for casual poverty. See Exod. 21. 2, 7. Deut. 15. 12. Jer. 34. 14, 15. Nehem. 5.

for silver] Chap. 2. 6. at any base rate and price.

pair of shoes] Chap. 2. 6.

V. 7. The Lord hath sworn] against these men; the more to affright and startle them, who usually so please and applaude themselves in their ways that they neither fear, nor care for God or man.

by the excellency of Jacob] By himself; Chap. 6. 8. who is the glorious God of his people, Psal. 106. 20. By whom Jacob, that is, Israel doth excel. See Deut. 4. 7, 8. And it may be this form of oath grates upon their ingratitude; avowing by all the excellencies, dignities, prerogatives, and priviledges which he had formerly bestowed upon them, that he would never forget to punish such crying crimes.

any of their works] None should be forgotten. Psalm 50. 21.

V. 8. Shall not the land tremble for this?] He appeals the consciences of all men: can it otherwise be? It is impossible that such sinners should not be so punished? Are not these wickednesses sufficient to cause the land to be destroyed and laid waste; as Egypt is overflown by the river Nilus? They confound Heaven and Earth, right and wrong, tumultuously disorder all; and shall not the Land be troubled at, tremble at, and under such inhabitants?

Every one mourn] None excepted, not one of these great and wealthy covetous oppressours, see James 5. 1. Jerem. 4. 28. Ezech. 7. 27. Hosea 4. 3.

as a flood] Chap. 9. 5. As an inundation and deluge; leaving no place of habitation for men.

and it shall be cast out Chap. 9. 5.

drowned] The land as it were swallowed up in a gulph; to drown the inhabitants, no surface of it being to be seen and uncovered.

as by the flood of Egypt] As Nilus makes Egypt like a sea. Here the reading of the Hebrew כאור sicut lux, and כיאור sicut fluvius, both according to the Kri, and the Ctib, amount to the same sense. Chap. 9. 5. כיאור only is used. Targum thus; The King [of Assyria] shall come against it, with his army which is great, as a river, and shall cover thee wholly.

V. 9. cause the sun to go down at noon] I will encumber the land with horrible and mournful calamities, when it shall be least thought of, and when a man shall think himself happy and peaceable; yea, with such calamities as shall not leave the least glimmering of light or hope of deliverance; I will turn your light into darknesse, your mid-day of prosperity into the mid-night of adversity. Here is no intendment of any Eclipse of the sun, but a total Eclipsing and darkning the clear and bright day and sun-shine of all their external happinesse and felicity; wherein they so much confided and triumphed. This God could and would alter and change, for their so extream abusing of it, into the contrary extremity of Calamity. Such Metaphorical and figurative speeches and expressions as this, are usual in all languages.

V. 10. Your feasts] of Jollities, yea, your holy feasts, wherein you so much please your selves, and think you please God too, by your sacrifices, and sacred ceremonies. Nay, these provoke me to further wrath.

all your songs] Both prophane, and sacred. See verse 3. These shall not be coolers to assuage; but bellows to kindle more and more the fire of my wrath.

bring up sackcloth] I will force them to put off their gorgegous attire, and costly raiments; and betake themselves to mourning weeds, to sack-cloth; a ceremony usual in Jury, and those Eastern Countries, Joel 1. & 3. Chapters Esay 15. 2. Jer. 48. 37. Ezech. 7. 18.

and baldnesse] They shall pull off their hair in sign of sorrow. Ezra 9. 3. See Esay 15. 2. and 22. 12. Jerem. 16. 6. and 48. 37. Micah 1. 16.

as the mourning of an onely son] Jerem. 6. 26. Zach. 12. 10.

a bitter day] Job 3. 5. Ezech. 27. 30, 31. Zeph. 1. 14. Jerem. 31. 15.

V. 11. Behold] A most dreadful spiritual judgement.

the days come] Very speedily.

a famine in the Land] This famine they had too much before; the sound doctrine of piety being so much poysoned with false superstitions and Idolatries reigning amongst the ten Tribes. Yet God in much mercy a long time strove, as it were, to master their impieties, & with strong hand held them back from turning tun-na-gates and revolters from him. But now seeing nothing availed any thing at all, he will now let his hand go; he denounceth his forest vengeance; he will utterly deprive them of the saving food of his Word, and send a famine of it.

not a famine of bread] This were a far lesser matter, and not to be named with the other. And yet the direfulnesse of this is fearfully set out in Scripture: See only Lam. 1. 11. 19. and 2. 12, 20. and 4. 4, 9, 10. and 5. 10.

but of hearing] This is famine indeed. Gods Word is the spiritual food of our spiritual life. The granting of it is a blessing indeed; Esay 30. 20, 21. John 6. 27. and 4. 10, 14. And the withholding of it is a judgement indeed, Prov. 29. 18. Hos. 4. 6. 1 Sam. 3. 1. Psal. 74. 9.

V. 12. And they shall wander] The meaning is, They shall then too late know what it is to want it, they shall bite upon the bit, trouble and torment themselves without any profit, as Esau did when he saw he had lost his birth-right, as those, Hosea 7. 14. Not out of any right and pious affection to it, or to convert and return unto the Lord by it. Theirs was but a blind, wandering, erroneous, distracting desire.

seek the word of the Lord] Whereby he sheweth, that they shall not only perish in body, but also in soul: for lack of Gods Word, which is the food thereof.

V. 13. In that day] Corporal judgments shall second spiritual judgments. And those shall seize even upon the fairest, and strongest, for that none shall scape.

faint for thirst] Namely, by the effects of my burning wrath, without any refreshment of comfort, Hos. 2. 3.

V. 14. They that swear] The cause of the punishment is adjoyned; their impious, and idolatrous superstitions. See on Zeph. 1. 5. Swear by the calves and other idols, which are the objects and instruments of their sin; as Deut. 9. 21. for the idolaters did use to swear by their Idols, as the Papists yet do by theirs: The Prophet by way of detestation calleth that their sin, which they called and accounted their God.

Samaria] See Annotations on chap. 8. 5.

Thy God] The manner and form of their swearing. Like to that, Gen. 42. 16. Judg 8. 19. Ruth. 3. 13. Jer 4. 2. and chap. 5. 7. & 12. 16.

Dan] Abraham pursued the four kings to Dan, Gen. 14. 14. Yet likely not that Dan, formerly called Laish, or Leshem, which is the Dan here meant, and is mentioned, Judg. 18. 29. This belonged to the Tribe of Dan, situated on the North border of Judea, Judg. 20. 1. Ezech. 48. 1. famous for that Jeroboam placed one of his golden Calves here, 1 Kings 12. 29, 38. yet was it smitten by Benhadad King of Syria, at the request, and upon the present, of Asa King of Judah: And this in Jeroboams daies. A gate for Dan was on the east side of that Jerusalem in Ezechiels vision, Ezech. 48. 32.

the manner] Heb. The way. Namely, the Religion, or worship, and manner of it, as Act 9. 2. and 18. 25. and 24. 14. of mans devising; but then in Common usage.

of Beersheba] See upon Amos 5. 5. In the south of Jury.

and never rise up again] This was such a deadly blow, and mortal wound, as should never be recovered. And the event was answerable: For after the three Tribes were carried captives by Tiglath-Pileser, 2 Kings 15. 29. And all the rest by Shalmaneser: 2 Kin. 17. they never rose up again.

CHAP. IX.

Verse 1. IN this last Chapter Amos sets down his last vision and prophecie of the ruine of Israel: And concludes all with an evangelical promise of their happy restauration and return under Christ.

saw the Lord] In a Prophetick vision. The more to confirm and seal the truth and authority of what he was to speak.

standing] As ready to depart; yet standing, and staying to pronounce his final sentence against them.

upon the Altars] Some understand this of some prime Altar in Israel, in Samaria, Bethel, or Dan. But likely God would not so countenance those places, as to shew any vision, or utter any oracle there. Rather then is meant here the brazen Altar of Gods Temple in Jerusalem, which being without the Temple in the inmost Court, it may intimate Gods beginning to leave and forsake his Temple, and people; as Ezech. 9 and 10 chapters. And also that there was no more hope of pardon left, seeing that the place of propitiation was by God converted as it were into a seat of rigorous and implacable justice.

and he said] To some Angel that was executioner of his judgements. See Ezek. 9. 4, 5.

the lintell] Or, Chapiter. Namely, of the door of the Temple. Heb. the knob; for they were wont to set great knobs or balls in frontispices or upper lintels of the doors.

that the Posts] The two cheek Posts that supported the upper lintel; and so the whole great Gate of the Temple. Of these see 1 Kings 6. 33, 34, 35. 2 Chron. 3. 7.

may shake] In this manner is represented the decree of the peoples desolation amongst whom God had chosen his abode, and of the destruction of the material Temple, and the annihilation of the outward service.

and cut them] Or, wound them. From top to bottom, from head to tail, from first to last, both Princes, and People. Let this act be a sign to them all, of what I intend to do to their persons. And if God begin thus with his Temple, and people, what shall become of Apostates from him and his worship, and of all prosane persons and people? And what shall befall the idolatrous Temples of the ten Tribes?

he that fleeth] Chap. 2. 14. Though he think, and hope, and attempt to escape, yet no wayes shall any deliverance be possible for him, for any of them. They being incorrigible, Gods revenge and vengeance must at last fall upon them, without any hope of escaping it.

V. 2. into hell] The center of the earth, to hide themselves. There shall be no hiding hole for them in hell, or heaven; in height, or depth; on land, or sea: All the elements shall not afford them one such place; strong lines, and expresstions, to drive them from that presumptuous confidence which they had in being the only people which God had chosen to himself out of all the world; upon which they grow so bold in their sinning, and so secure against Gods judgements for their sins. See Psalm 139. 8, &c.

Climbe up] Job 20. 6. Jer. 51. 53. Obad. 4. See Gen. 11. 4. Deut. 1. 28.

V. 3. top of Carmel] See on chap. 1. verse 2.

Serpent] Likely some Sea-serpent, as the Crocodile, or other like Sea-creature. He sheweth that God will declare himself enemy unto them in all places; and that his elements, and all creatures, shall be enemies to destroy them; notwithstanding all their utmost endeavours to escape his judgments.

V. 4. Command the sword] Jer. 47. 6. God is armed in all places, with all his creatures, to avenge himself upon his enemies, such vile sinners. And no syllable of all that which went before is superfluous, or too much; but rather too little, throughly to waken and startle sottish, senslesse, sinners. See Jer. 42. 16, 17, 18, 22. and chap. 44. 27.

mine eyes] As formerly for good: 2 Kings 9. 3. Psalm 33. 18. and 34. 15. Jer. 24. 6. So now for evil, Levit. 17. 10. & chap. 20. 3. Deut. 28. 63. Jeremiah 44. 11, 27.

V. 5. and it shall] That evil mentioned, verse 4.

like a flood] See chap. 8. 8.

V. 6. It is he that buildeth] See chap. 5. 8. The Prophet magnificently sets forth Gods glorious power, that they might the better bethink themselves with whom they had to deal, and learn to tremble at his Majesty, and at these his threatned judgements. He that thus wonderfully works in the frame and course of nature; what will he do when he bares his arm to execute his last vengeance decreed against the wicked?

floret in the heaven] Or, spheres. Heb. ascensions, Psalm 104. 3. He declareth by the wonderful power of God, by the making of the heavens and the elements, one above another, that it is not possible for man to escape his judgments, when he punisheth. See chap. 5. 8.

troop] Or, bundle. All the Universe, which is like the fabrick of a building, of which the earth being the lower part, and only immoveable, hath some resemblance of a foundation.

he that calleth] By his Word and Command; and they obey his beck and call. So in other cases, Psalm 105. 16. Esay 13. 3. & 40. 26. and 41. 2, 4. and 45. 3, 4. and 46. 11. and 48. 13. Jer. 25. 29. Ezech. 36. 29. Agg. 1. 11.

for the waters of the sea] Chap. 5. 8. Gen. 7.

V. 9. Are ye not] See Ezech. 16. 3, 4, 5. They without end or measure boasted that God had chosen them only, and tyed himself to them by Covenant; that they were the holy nation; and all the rest of the world as prophane, refuse, and cast-awayes: And therefore God could not cast them off. God here meets with them, and this foolish fancy.

as the children of the Ethiopians] Being degenerate, and having gone astray as you have done, I do hold you as Ethiopians, a base and accursed nation, as coming from Cham; and your deliverance out of Egypt shall be no more a pledge to you of my favour, then the deliverances which I have granted to these other prophane nations, mentioned in the words following.

unto me] No difference betwixt you and the Ethiopians, in your selves; and as to me, Deuter. 7. 6, 7. The difference that is, I freely put upon you. Take that which is meerly mine from you, and are ye not as other nations to me? my free favour to you binds you the more to me; not me to you.

brought up Israel out of Egypt] Where they were so base and basely used, as in a prison and iron furnace. A miserable being and beginning they had there; they were then of no account or reckoning.

and the Philistines?] If you brag of my bringing of you out of Egypt, as well you may in an holy manner, to be the more humble and obedient to me therefore; yet a deliverance not altogether unlike, I vouchsafed the Philistines from Caphtor; or, I do no more, nor otherwise esteem of it now, nor better bestowed, then I do that which I vouchsafed to the Philistines, and Syrians.

from Caphtor] There is mention made of this in Deut. 2. 23. and Jer. 47. 4. It seems these came of the same race with the Philistines, and dwelt near them, and had now overcome them.

from Kir] See on chap.1.5. It is to be understood most likely of the captivity of the Syrians, spoken of 2 Kings 16.9. Amos 1.5. which happened about Amos his time, whose deliverance, which it seems was yet to come, is here set down, as if it were come already.

V.8. Behold the eyes] See verse 4. God therefore will punish them, like other Heathen nations: they being double guilty by their impious ingratitude, making Gods benefits to them to be the shield to shelter them in their sins, from the stroke of Gods wrath.

the sinful kingdom] Continuing in its sin; whatsoever kingdom it be, yet some restrain the meaning of this to the kingdom of Israel.

saving that I will not] God judgeth and punisheth all kingdoms and nations alike, which are addicted to grievous sins; there is only this difference, that he will never utterly destroy his people, without leaving some remnant of them, Jer.30.11. and 31.36,37. and 10.24. and 46.28. and 25.29. Obad.16,17. yet some render this sense, I will not spare other kingdoms, which are lesse guilty in their kind; and should I not then utterly destroy thee? or should I not dare to destroy thee? They take the words as they lye in the text to be spoken ironically. See Ezech.16.52.

V.9. sift] Heb. I will cause to move, by the Assyrians, and Babylonians.

in a sive] Whereby the chaff falls through, and the good corn remains, some understand a skreen through which the good corn runs to the ground. The sifting and agitation is the things here aimed at.

yet shall not] Yet governing their dispensations by my providence, in such sort, that none of mine elect shall perish in eternal perdition, nor the remainders of my faithful be extinguished or overthrown. Some understand hereby; that not one good grain should be so found among them, but all should be found to be chaff, and light chaff; meaning this of the main body of the people: excepting yet that small remnant, that for all their sifting should not fall and perish; though it be as the good corn, which together with the chaff is beaten with the flayl on the threshing floor. Such grains were Jeremie, Ezekiel, Daniel, and his Companions, Ezra, Nehemiah, Mordecai, and other. The faitest meaning may be; That all Israel shall be so sifted; that for all this sifting, yet not the least grain of them should fall upon the earth, so to be free from this sifting.

V.10. All the sinners] All my sinful and flagitious people; as in the bulk they all are; though some not so, some few excepted.

which say] Chap.6.3. Which principally have this brand upon them, and are known by it, that they neither fear nor care for Gods judgments; but believe them not or contemn them.

nor prevent us] See Matth.24.50. not prevent our expectation, though we at all expect it not; it shall not come; or if it come; yet not upon us, we shall do well enough, Esay 28.15.

V.11. In that day] The former judgments threatned might have driven them to despair, if this contolation now had not been added. And this consolation is from the promise of the Messias, and a blessed restauration by him. And this course of proceeding is usual with the Prophets; After judgment denounced to joyn the comfortable promise of the Messias, in whom all the promises of God are Yea and Amen, 2 Cor.1.20. And so here; shewing that there being no hope of amendment left in the people, the only hope of redresse remaining, was in the Messias, and his coming and appearing; God being mindful of his covenant would in and by him shew abundant mercy to his people. After I have thus punished my Church, I will restore the kingdome of David by the Messias, changing it into a spiritual and everlasting kingdome.

I will raise up the tabernacle of David] Acts 13. verse 16. Though Davids house be now in the mean time but as a Tabernacle, mean and weak; yet then I will raise it up to royal estate. And David is here by name mentioned, because his name was of great renown in this promise. See 2 Sam.7.16. Psalm 89.19. 132,10,11. Esay 55.3. Acts 13.34. Jer.33.19. Ezek.34.23,24. and 37.24,25. &c. and Hosea 3.5. whence is all that in the Gospel, Matth.1.20. and 9.27. and 12.23. and 21.9. and 22.42. Apoc.22.16.

that is fallen] There was a sad ruine in that family, by the falling away of the ten Tribes; by the overthrow of the kingdome of Judah by Nebuchadnezzar; and the breaches and ruines wherein it lay still after that, till Christs time: but Christ the Son of David, repaired and raised up all, to the fulfilling of the Prophecies, being that everlasting King, of whose Kingdom there should be no end, Dan.2.44. and 7.14. Luke 1.33.

as in the dayes of old] In its most flourishing estate, in the beginning; and more then so appears in the next verse. Hence is that, Acts 1.6.

V.12. That they may possesse] Davids spiritual kingdom shall be now much enlarged, Esay 49.20,21. & 54.2,3.& 60.4,5. Obad.19.

the remnant] That shall remain after Gods fore judgments upon Edom; especially by Nebuchadnezzar.

Edom] Chap.1.6,9,11. meaning, that the very enemies, as were the Edomites and others, should be joyned with the Jews in one society and body, whereof Christ should be the head, Acts 15.17. or, that the true Israel according to the Spirit, joyned with Christ their head, may participate of the universal Kingdom, which he hath gotten over his enemies, such as the Idumeans were to the Israelites. See Numb.24.18. Esay 63.1. Of Edom, see on Chap.1.11.

and of all the Heathen] Besides Edom. See Psa.2.8. and 72.8.

which are called by my name] Heb. Upon whom my name is called. Some refer these words to the Jews, called by Gods name; yet they seem rather to relate to the Heathen, that the Church and Kingdom of Christ should possesse them, because they should call upon Christ, and be called and named Christians after his name.

V.13. that the plowman shall overtake] The blessed and prosperous estate of the people under the Kingdom of Christ is set out under these figures, alluding to Levit. 26.5. and applied thus to the weak and rude capacities of the Jewish people, being as children, Gal 4.3. Figurative promises of Gods spiritual graces and blessings to his Church. So Joel 3.18. See Levit.26.5.

and the mountains shall drop] An hyperbolical kind of speech usual in all languages. The meaning is, that such abundance of plenty shall be, as shall exceed the course of nature, and be beyond all belief. And these are to be understood according to the nature of the Kingdom of Christ; chiefly for the abundance of spiritual blessings.

sweet wine] Or, new wine, Joel 3.18.

all the hills shall melt] Into precious liquors, of honey, milk, oil, and Must, or sweet wine.

V.14. I will bring again] Their captivity at hand: and all their other breaches, oppressions, distractions, desolations shall not hinder, but God will bring to passe what he hath promised; and they shall return, inhabit, build, plant, prosper and flourish. These promises then must preserve, sustain, and hold up their hope in the midst of all those desperate calamities. A new face of all things shall then appear, when God shall begin to shew his chearful face upon his people. The full accomplishment hereof is under Christ, when they are planted in his Church, out of the which they can never be pulled, after they are once grafted therein, Esay 65.22.

V.15. And I will plant] They shall have a setled, sure, and secure habitation; and not be disturbed, distracted, dispersed, exiled any more. See Exod.15.17.

they] This is spiritually verified in every true Christian, according to that 1 Pet.1.5. In the Church of Christ Militant here, Matth.16.18. and most of all in the Church Triumphant.

which I have given them] My free gifts shall prevail more with me for them, then their demerits and misdeeds shall sway with me against them.

saith the Lord thy God] This is the assurance and the ground of all.

ANNOTATIONS on the Book of the Prophet OBADIAH.

THE ARGUMENT.

OBadiah threatneth and foretelleth the destruction of the Idumeans, who came of Esau, Jacobs brother, yet were they capital and implacable enemies to Jacobs posterity, the Church of God; not only vexing them with cruelties, but also assisting others therein; and rejoycing and insulting over them in the day of their calamity and destruction. The Prophet upbraids them for this, and reproves their pride, confidence, and confederacies, and violence against their brother Jacob, in the day of his calamity; and denounceth Gods judgment against them. And lastly, he promiseth deliverance to Mount Zion, Blessings, and enlargement of Possessions to the house of Jacob. The sum of this Prophecie is to tell, that Edom would and did help to destroy Jerusalem; and after that Edom should soon be destroyed; yet in time, Saviours from Zion, that is, Apostles, shall conquer all, and bring them into the possession of the Church; and the Kingdom shall be the Lords. The like against Edom, See Jer.49.7---22. and Ezek,25.12,13,14.

CHAP.

CHAP. I.

THe] This is not made up of many visions, and sermons; as the other Prophets are. But is one entire piece, prophecying destruction to Edom, and the Mount of Esau; Conquest over Edom, and others; and deliverance, and salvation to Mount Zion, and the house of Jacob.

Vision] Which God shewed him; no imagination, no dream of his own. See on Ezek.1.1. and on Hos.12.10.

of Obadiah] Not him, in the dayes of Jehoshaphat, 2 Chr.17.7. Or him in the dayes of Ahab, 1 Kings 18.3. This seems to be a much later Prophet, contemporary with Jeremy, and Ezekiel, about the time of the destruction of Jerusalem by the Babylonians; as appears by the argument of his Propheeie; and compared with Jer.49.7---13. and Ezek.25.12---15. and chap.35. Jeremiah and he in many things almost use the same words.

saith the Lord] He brings no words of his own. God only and his Word are to be heard in the Church, 1 Cor.11.23.

concerning Edom] Of Edom, See on Amos 1.11. Against them; because they were the bitterest enemies against the house of Jacob, who was Esaus brother; and they flourished, whiles the Jews were in miseries. Left Gods people then should take scandal thereat, God by his Prophet comforts them with this, that he would soon take vengeance on Edom, and vouchsafe to his people deliverance, and victorious conquests over Edom, and others.

we have heard a rumor from the Lord] God hath certainly revealed to his Prophets, that he will raise up the Heathens to destroy the Edomites, whereof the rumor is now published, Jer.49.14. like that Mark 13.7. God the Author of wars, Amos 3.6.

Arise ye] Thus the heathen encourage one another by their Ambassadors to rise against Edom. And this by Gods secret instinct.

V.2. Behold, I have made thee small among the Heathen] Jer.49.15. Some take this as a reproaching of Edom, that though God had made him small, and despised, shutting him up in Mount Seir, Mal. 1. ver.3. yet he grew so proud and insolent, arrogating so much to himself. Others make it a denunciation of judgment speedily to be inflicted upon him; that he should be made so.

V.3. The pride of thine heart] Which despiseth all others in respect of thy self; and yet art but an handful in comparison of others; and art shut up among the hills, as separate from the rest of the world.

that dwellest] Upon this ground they were so proud and confident.

in the clifts of the rock] A country full of clifts, and rocks, and mountains, usually called Arabia Petrea, rocky Arabia.

hath deceived thee] The LXX and vulgar Latine, hath lifted thee up: Reading belike not ט dextrum, but ש sinistrum.

who] Like that, Psalm 12.4. Isaiah 47.78. Apoc.18.7.

V.4. Though thou exalt thy self] Job 20.6. Jer.49.16. and 51.53. Amos 9.2. Isaiah 14.13. They thought themselves above the clouds, above all dangers. But it is meer madnesse in man, to trust in any strength against the Lord.

V.5. If thieves came to thee] God will so destroy them, that he will leave none; though thieves when they come, take but till they have enough: and they that gather grapes ever leave some behind them, Jer.49.9. God will not be content with such a punishment; He will openly clean out thee off, and leave nothing behind him. This was done by the Babylonians.

V.6. How] How wonderfully, incredibly?

hid things] They had strong hiding places in rocks and dens, which a spoiling and prevailing enemy would hardly venture upon, to get treasures there: and yet all should not serve their turn. See Isaiah 10.13,14. and 45.3. Jer.49.10.

searched out] By the greedy souldier.

V.7. All the men of thy confederacy] They trusted also in their Confederates. But God would turn their hearts against them, and make their Allies, with whom they were in leagues, to be the executioners of his vengeance upon them.

have brought thee] Have joyned their forces to thine, to go and withstand the enemies invasions; but just at the instant that thou hadst need of them, they have forsaken thee. Or, have brought thee out even to thy borders, and thence perfidiously have ejected and cast thee out.

the men that were at peace with thee] Hebr. the men of thy peace, confederates.

prevailed against thee] He seems to mean the Egyptians, who by powerful perswasions, and by reason of interest of state, had brought the Idumeans to declare themselves enemies to the Chaldeans.

thy bread have laid a wound under thee] Hebr. thy bread have they laid for a snare under thee. A term taken from hunters, who with baits draw the beasts unto their traps. The meaning is, the victuall which thou hast had out of Egypt, hath been as it were a bait to thee, to insnare thee in the league against the Chaldeans; which hath been the cause of thy ruine; the which with all thy famous wisdome thou couldst not perceive. Or, Hebr. the men of thy bread. And so rather the meaning is, thole that eat familiarly with thee, as Psalm 41.9. John chap. 13. 18. wound thee by secret cunning gulles, and fraudulent stratagems.

in him] Or, of it; no science or art in them, to understand, and help; or heal it.

V.8. Shall I not] They rested much upon their own wisdome, and understanding; were drunk with this conceipt: As many are. But God can, and will destroy their wisdome, turn it into foolishnesse, and infatuate all their counsels, 1 Cor.1.19,20. Jer.49.7. Isaiah 29.14. It is in vain then to trust in it against the Lord; or any way to abuse so excellent a gift, but even to joyn innocency with it, Matth.10.16.

in that day] Of my vengeance; however their wit hath served their turns before. They by their wisdome shall not be able to help and heal thee then.

V.9. And thy mighty men] As not their wise men, so neither their mighty men shall be able to help them; mans wit and strength are meer nothing against the Lord; it is a madnesse to think otherwise.

O Teman] The name of a City in the country of Idumea. See Amos 1.12. Vulgar Latine, hath the south, for Teman; thus, And thy mighty men shall be afraid from the south.

that every one] A general slaughter.

V.10. For thy violence] Here is the main cause of all that woful total destruction. And this cause is prosecuted at large in the verses following. And this was a main comfort to the Jews, when they should see Gods love and care so tender over them, as to revenge so severely the wrongs done unto them by their fierce enemies. See Gen.27.41. Psal.137.7. Ezek.35.5. and 25.35. chapters.

against thy brother Jacob] Namely, the Israelites and Jews which were descended from Jacob, brother of Esau, the father of the Idumeans: This aggravates the violence and cruelty. See Gen.13.8. Acts 7.26. Ezek.18.18. Amos 1.11.

cut off for ever] It should not be a Temporary plague, as that of Israels; but a lasting plague, never fully to be cured and recovered.

V.11. In the day] Therefore this Prophecie was after Jerusalems destruction by Nebuchadnezzar.

thou stoodest on the other side] Like an idle spectator, yeelding no assistance, nor pitying the Jews calamities; but feeding also thine eyes therewith, as with a pleasing object. See Psal. 137.7. and watching for the spoil, verse 13, of this chapter.

carried away captive his forces] Or, carried away his substance. The men of war taken with Zedekiah in his flight, Jer. 39.4, 5. Or, plainly, the whole multitude carried away captive into Babylon.

cast Lots] To part both the spoil and persons. As Joel.3.3.

Even thou wast as one of them] This taketh away all excuses and defences that the Edomites might pretend unto. Lesse marvel was it that the Chaldeans should so deal with the Jews. But that thou shouldest be as one of them, it is monstrous, prodigious, and deserves this utter extermination.

V.12. Thou shouldest not have looked on] Or, do not behold, &c. The Law of nature, and humanity should have taught thee this.

have looked] With delight, as on a pleasing spectacle.

thy brother] See on verse 10.

in the day that he became a stranger] Or, in the day of his strange chance and alienation; when the Lord deprived them of their former dignity, and gave them to be carried as strangers into exile and captivity. See Job 31.3. These words are taken as a reproof, or as a caveat, by some.

neither shouldest thou] An explication of the former words.

have spoken proudly] Hebr. Magnified thy mouth. By scoffing them, Psal.137.7. But yet their pride and cruelty transported them beyond all common bounds of nature and humanity; whereas barbarous nations use to thew pity to their enemies, when they see them cast down and lye prostrate under their feet; they insult not then over them, as the Sidomites here did; but begin then to mitigate and allwage their wrath, and change their cruelty into compassion. See Esay 10.25.

V.13. not have entred] As they did to assist the Chaldeans, and partake of the spoil; whereas they should rather, if they could not have helped them, yet have stayed at home, and bemoaned their miseries; condoling with them in a brotherly sympathy, and compassion.

have looked on] But rather have shut their eyes from seeing it. See Esay 23.15. Gen.9.23.

on their substance] Or, forces; sharing the prey and spoil; enriching themselves with it.

V.14. in the crosse way] Or, breaches to hinder the Jews from saving themselves by flight; and to cut them off.

delivered up] Or, shut up; delivered to the Chaldeans, those Jews whom they intercepted, and kept fast; or such of them as fled to them for succour. All which dealings are the grounds of Gods judgments upon them.

V.15. For the day of the Lord] When he will judge all the Heathen, who have destroyed all Gods people. He will shew himself to be Judge of the whole world. His Judgment beginning at his Church and house; 1 Pet.4.17. He will take a fit time to stretch out his hand upon all the Heathen Nations, none shall escape: And much lesse then, the Edomites, Jer.39.12.

as thou hast done] Ezek.35.15. A just retaliation shall be rendered to him, See the like, Judg.1.7. 1 Sam.15.33. Esay 33.1. and other examples many.

thy reward] See Matth.7.2. James 2.13. Jer.30.16. Levit.24.19.

V.16. For as ye have drunk] And revelled it, in sign of joy and triumph over my people: so shall all the Heathen revel it upon the Edomites, and swallow down their substance: yea all the heathen shall drink, (now in another sense) till they be dead drunk; and become and be as though they had not been. Or thus; as you my people have drunk of the cup of my judgments, so your enemies shall drink up the very dregs, and shall utterly be destroyed thereby. See Jer.25.29.

swallow down] Or, sup up.

as though they had not been] Their memory shall perish.

V.17. But upon mount Zion] Here is the restauration of the Church promised; and the consolation of the Jews included. This was their comfort and support in the midst of their desolations. And without this hope, the ruine and destruction of their enemies would little have availed them. And even upon Mount Zion it self, where the enemies so revelled, even there should this deliverance be, Jer. 46.28. Though his people seemed as dead dry bones, yet God could and would raise them up again, Ezech.37.

Shall be deliverance] Or, they shall escape.

and there shall be holinesse] Or, it shall be holy; It shall recover its holinesse; God will be mindful of his Covenant; he will be worshipped again, and hallowed there, by his people: he will have care of this mount Zion, which he of old had chosen, dedicated, and consecrated to his service. It shall be no more prophaned, polluted, as it was by the Babylonians, Psal.74.7. and 79.1. See the like Dan.11.31.

their possessions] Which they were dispossessed of by their enemies. A figure of the right of the eternal inheritance, which the devil and sin had gotten away from the Church, to which she was restored by Christ, others, their possessions, namely, the possessions of those nations which were their enemies.

V.18. And the house of Jacob] For, for their sakes it was, that God so severely took vengeance of the Edomite; to shew thereby what love he bare, and what tender care he had of his people; yea even then when they were in miserable exile and captivity.

Shall be a fire] God attributeth this power, to consume his enemies, to his Church, which power is only proper to himself, as Isai. 10.17. Deut.4.24. Hebr.12.29.

they shall kindle in them] The Church, by the power of Christ, and his spirit, shall as easily consume the enemies, represented under the person of the Idumeans, as fire doth kindle when it taketh hold of some combustible matter. See Judges 9.15,20.

not be any remaining] Of those impious and inhumane Edomites or Idumeans, yet a remnant according to the election of grace, should at last be joyned to the Church, and be saved by Christ, Amos 9.12.

V.19. And they of the south, &c.] Or, they shall possesse the south land with the mount of Esau, and the plain with the Philistines. Mount Esau, nor the Philistines, were ever possessed before by the Jews; no not in Davids, or Solomons time. Of Esau see on Amos 1.11.

the Philistines] See on Zach.9.6.

the fields of Ephraim] Ephraim, and Samaria; which formerly they had not; but the ten Tribes possessed it. And besides that, much more shall they possesse.

and Benjamin shall possesse Gilead] Or, and Benjamin with Gilead. That is, they shall possesse also the fields of Benjamin, with Gilead likewise. Or they of the south, Judah, and Benjamin, shall possesse Gilead, which the ten Tribes formerly had; which is according to the meaning of the former words. Of Gilead the Scripture informeth us thus; That it is a county East of Jordan: an excellent place, Jer.22.6. specially for cattel, Numb.32.4,5. for Balm, Jer. 8.22. and 46.11. There Laban over-took Jacob in his flight, Gen. 31. And in token of a covenant between them, Jacob made, and named an heap of stones there, Galeed and Mizpah. This country of Gilead was inhabited by the Amorites, and divided between Sihon and Og, Josh.12.2,5. And after between Reuben, Gad, and half Manasseh, Deut.3.10---17. And Machir, and Jair, the sons of Manasseh had large possessions here, Numb.32.39,40,41. Jair and Jephtha, Judges; Eliab the Prophet, Barzillai Davids friend, were Gileadites, Judg.10.3. and 12.7. 1 Kings 17.1. 2 Sam. 17.27. And so were Zelophehad his daughters, of the half tribe of Manasseh there, Josh. 17.3. Gideon and Absalom pitched their camps there, Judg.7.3. 2 Sam.17.26. Among other famous cities there, was Ramoth a City of refuge, Deut.4.43. among the Gadites. And Jabesh-Gilead, Judg.21.8.&c. whose inhabitants were refused by Saul from Nahash, who would have put out their right eyes, 1 Sam.11. who after gratefully got and buried Sauls bones, Ch.31.11. And at this City to rescue it out of the hands of the King of Syria, was Ahab slain, 1 Kings 22. and his son Jehoram wounded, 2 Chron.22.6. Hazael King of Syria did after smite Gilead, 2 Kings 10.33. And Tiglath-Pileser King of Assyria, last of all did conquer and captive them; 2 Kings 15.29 The general meaning of this verse is, That he describeth how the Church shall be enlarged, and have great possessions; whereof see Jer. 17.26. and 32.44. and 33.13. The meaning is the same as verse 17. But this chiefly is accomplished under Christ, when as the faithful are made heirs, and Lords of all things by him which is their head. See Ezek.37.16,&c.

V.20. of this host] See verse 11.

unto Zarephath] A City of the Sidonians, in the uttermost confines of the country of Canaan, 1 Kings 17.9. called Sarepta, Luke 4.26.

which is in Sepharad] Or, shall possesse that which is in Sepharad. It is thought to be a City in the country of Chaldea; some take this word to be an Assyrian word, retained here to note some place or country in Assyria. As some Latine words are retained in the Greek text of the new Testament, in some relation to the Romans that then were Lords of Judea, as the word Colonia, Acts 16. 12. Custodia, Matth.27.66. and Flagello, verse 27. and Prætorium, John 18.28. Others say it is a compound word signifying in the end of the dominion; meaning, that when the four beasts which have made havock of the Church shall be destroyed at the coming of the Messiah, then the Church shall receive its just and full bounds, be made Catholike, and the Gospel from Jerusalem shall be spread into all countreys, Esay 2.2,3,4. The bold fancies of the Jews concerning these places are frivolous.

V.21. And Saviours shall come] Like those in the book of the Judges. These are Saviours under Christ Jesus, the alone true Saviour, Matth.1.21. These Ministers coming from and under him, 1 Tim.4.16. James 5.20. This may according to the Letter, and in part be understood of the Maccabees, who subdued the Idumeans, 1 Mac.5.3. but spiritually and fully it is referred to the Apostles, and others of Christs Ministers, who were to preach the Gospel for the salvation of the Elect, and condemnation of the wicked.

to judge the mount of Esau] To revenge their cruelty against the Jews.

the kingdom] Luke 1.33. Christ, true God, shall by his Father be established everlasting King of his Church, and of all the world. See Psalm 2.8. Dan.7.14. Micah 4.7. 1 Cor.15.24,25,28. Apoc.11.15,17. and 19.6,16.

ANNOTATIONS on the Book of the Prophet JONAH.

THE ARGUMENT.

JOnah prophecied in Isiael, in the dayes of Jeroboam the second, or a little before. But, as other Prophets, so he profited but little; though he had prophecied of victories and a good successe unto them; as we see 2 Kings 14.25. Wherefore God gave him expresse charge to go to Ninevch the chief City of that great Empire of the Assyrians; both to shew, that the compassionate and infinitely merciful God had beems of grace to shine forth in the publishing of his blessed Word to the Gentiles; and also, that Isiael might have a visible reproof of their horrible ingratitude and stubbornnesse; who, for the space of many years, had not converted to the Lord; whereas Nineveh, by one Prophet, was converted in three dayes. At first, he withstood his calling, and fled to Joppa; likely being hopelesse to convert Nineveh, or fearing the calling in of the Gentiles, might be the casting off of the Jews, whereof he was loth to be the instrument, minding more the safety of the Jews, then the Glory of God. But when he had been three dayes and three nights in the whales belly. (in figure expressing how Christ should die, and rise again the third day) he went in confidence to Preach to the Ninevites. For after that miraculous deliverance, the Prophet cometh to that famous and populous City, and denounceth against it speedily approaching ruine, which threatning, produced a publick Humiliation and Repentance; for which, God did suspend suspend the execution for a time: Whereupon the Prophet discovered much humane frailty, in being troubled at the effect of God mercy; and is both familiarly reproved by the Lord, and with bowels of compassion better instructed. In this book, Jonah setteth down his Embassie to the Ninevites; first, imposed; secondly, undertaken; imposed, where the refractory Prophet is punished, Chap. 1. and upon his prayers delivered, Chap. 2. Secondly, undertaken; the effect whereof, is the sparing of the repenting Ninevites, Chap. 3. and the angry Prophet is reprehended, and better disciplined, by the merciful God, Chap. 4.

CHAP. I.

NOw] Heb. And intimating a connexion of this history with the course of his Ordinary calling, and Prophetical employment. So that we must not think that he was now first called to the Function of a Prophet; but now called to this extraordinary Embassie to the Ninevites.

Jonah] Called, Mat.12.39. Jonas after that he had preached a long time in Israel, among the ten Tribes about the time of Jeroboam the son of Joash, 2 Kings 14.25.

the son of Amittai] Of Gath-Hepher, 2 Kings 14.25. In the tribe of Zebulun, Josh.19.13.

Ver.2. Go] Nahum was not sent thither, nor went, but stayed at home, and soon after this time prophecied the burden of Nineveh, and the ruine of it, Nehem.1.1.

Nineveh] The head City of the Assyrian Empire. Built by Nimrod, or by Ashur, Gen.10.10,11,12. Likely repaired after, or enlarged by Ninus; of whom mention is made in humane stories. As likewise Babylon was enlarged by Semiramis; but first built by Nimrod, Gen.10.9,10. God seeing the great obstinacy of the Israelites, sent his Prophet to the Gentiles, that they by their example might provoke Israel to repentance, or at least make them the more inexcusable. That this should be a Type of the future calling of the Gentiles, is a conceit more subtil, then solid and found. And the same may be said of Naamans conversion, 2 Kings 5. And of others like, till Christs coming, that took place, and remained in force, which we have, Psal.147.19,20. He sheweth his word unto Jacob, his Statutes and his Judgments unto Israel. He hath not deale so with any Nation; and as for his Judgments they have not known them.

great City] For as Authours write, it contained in circuit about eight and forty miles, and had a thousand and five hundred towers; the height of the walls one hundred foot, the breadth such, as that Coaches might easily passe by one another upon the top of it, See Jer.51.58. and at this time there were an hundred and twenty thousand children therein, chap.4.11. See Jon.3.4. Herodotus, Diodorus, and others, write of it; but they have the credit onely of humane histories, and are in some things fabulous: The greatnesse of the City, and the doubtfulnesse of his good successe therein, or of the verification of his threatning expressly concerning it, must not hinder Jonahs obedience to Gods command. He is to look up to Gods will and power, against all seeming difficulties and impossibilities whatsoever.

cry against it] An odious office, unwelcome message to such a City, and yet Jonah must do it, cry with open mouth, and full throat, threaten, thunder. See Isaiah 58.1. Cry aloud, spare not, lift up thy voice like a Trumpet, and shew my people their transgression. So must Jonah do here to the Ninevites. He must do it seriously, as Eliah in mockage did bid the Prophets of Baal to do, 1 Kings 18.28.

for their wickednesse] Like to that of Sodom and Gomorrah, the cry of it is great, their sin is very grievous, Gen.18.20.

before me] See Gen.18.21. I see it, and will judg them for it; they shall not have so much to do and deal with thee, as with me, do thou come and summon them to my Tribunall: their greatnesse shall there avail them nothing, their wickednesse shall prevail with me against them, See Gen.19.13.

Ver.3. But Jonah rose up] Astonished no doubt, and troubled, as Ezekiel was affected, when he went away in bitternesse, in the heat of his spirit, Ezek.3.14. A strange thing no doubt it was for a Prophet to be thus sent to an Heathen-city. It confounded him. His diffidence to prevail, his fear of danger distracted him, and put him on this desperate course.

from the presence of the Lord] Jonah was not ignorant of the Lords omni-presence, Psal.139.7. saith David, whither shall I go from thy spirit? or whither shall I flee from thy presence? verse 8. If I ascend up into heaven, thou art there; if I make my bed in hell, behold thou art there, verse 9. If I take the wings of the morning, and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea, verse 10. Even there shall thy hand lead me, and thy right hand shall hold me, verse 11. If I say, surely the darknesse shall cover me, &c. Even hell is naked before him, and destruction hath no covering, as Job saith, Chap. 26.6. But the meaning is, that Jonah went from the Land of Israel, where God made his abode in grace and vertue, and where he appeared to his Prophets: Or it is a phrase taken from slaves, who by stealth run away from their Masters service; to shew that he did run away from the vocation whereunto God had called him, and wherein he would have assisted him. This sheweth his weaknesse, that would not promptly follow the Lords Calling, which is the rule of our life, and ground-work of all our undertakings, and actions: but he cast off the yoak, and gave place to his own carnall reason, which perswaded him that he should nothing at all profit there, seeing he had done so small good among his own people. See Chap.4.2. where he pretends moreover another cause of his flight.

Joppa] Or Japho a Sea-town of Judea. See Josh.19.46. 2 Chron. 2.16. Ezra 3.7. where Peter raised Dorcas, Acts 9. and whence he was sent for to convert Cornelius, Acts 10. This was the Haven and Port to take shipping for Tarshish.

Tarshish] To Cilicia, where the chief City Tarsus was: the place of Pauls birth, Acts 21.39. and 22.3. Some by Tarshish understand only the Sea: See Genesis 10.4. And indeed the Sea, but chiefly that Sea between Judea and Cilicia, is often so called in Scripture, because that was most of all frequented by Mariners and Merchants of the Jews. But Jonah here hath mind of some further voyage, then only to go to Sea.

from the presence of the Lord] These words repeated imply, his confession of this his foolish rebellious fault. It is not for us to seek vainly to excuse him.

payed the fare] To secure and expedite his passage unto Tarshish, that no question concerning his fare might delay or hinder it. He payes the fare before-hand, before he set foot in the ship, so diligent are men many times to remove all rubs out of that way which leads to their own destruction. All this shewes the perverse obstinacy, and setled wilfulnesse of his mind to go on in this sin; that all this while, in his way and journey thither, he relented and repented not, to submit himself to Gods call and command: but still holds out against all checks of conscience, and all occurrences whatsoever, that might have altered him: and resolves to persist, and to prosecute his open opposition and rebellion against the Lord. And surely all they that do not willingly obey, but wilfully reject God's commands, do in effect, with Jonah, flee from the presence of the Lord: they are fugitives and runna-gates from God, and turne the back upon him: 2 Chronicles 29.6. Nehemiah 9.26. Jeremiah 2.27. and 32. verse 33.

Ver.4. sent out] Heb. cast forth so suddenly and vehemently, that the Heathen Mariners perceived it to be some extraordinary judgments from God. God is the Lord of Windes, and Tempests, of Sea and Land, Psalm 147.18. and 107.25. Chance and Fortune are but the fictions of mens brains. Whether it be in a calm or tempest, in fair or foul weather, in prosperity or adversity, we should so carry our selves, as those that know both to be sent out by the same Lord.

was like to be broken] Hebr. Thought to be broken. See Mark 4.37.

Verse 5. Then the Mariners were afraid] Why should they be endangered by this Tempest, which was sent upon Jonah? Mariners and others likely were in the Ship, and other Ships too in this Tempest, why should they suffer for Jonah's fault? We see this usually in the course of Gods judgements. The Host of Israel suffered all in the course for Achans fault: The Kingdome suffered for Davids sin of numbring the people: Infants and Children suffer in common calamities for their Parents sinnes. This likes not the wildome of the flesh, that would square out Gods Judgements according to our carnall capacities, and shallow reasonings. But we may easily know, that in the best and most innocent sort of people that are wrapped in common calamities, there is matter of sin enough for Gods justice to work upon, and lesse do they ever suffer then they have deserved. The Mariners fear shews it was no small Tempest that so affrighted them, that were accustomed and hardned to dangers by Sea.

and cryed] Feare drives to prayer, extremity of danger to strong and loud cryes in prayer, Psal.78.34. Judg.10.10. Matthew 8.25.

every man unto his god] The barbarous and heathen Mariners forced to confesse a God, a Deity: All Nations, and all men, yea, the man called an Atheist in his kind, agree in this, but differ in the knowing what and who he is. The Poets feign Æolus to be the god of the Windes and Storms, and Neptune of the Seas.

forth the wares] So sweet and dear it life to man, he will lose sides] Into one of the sides. Plurall for the singular; so in the Gospel, the Disciples are said to murmure at the waste of that ointment, Mat. 26. 6. that is, as some take it, one of the Disciples, namely, Judas, John 12. 4. And so the thieves, which were crucified with Christ, Matth. 17. 44. that is, one of the malefactours, Luke 23. 39. is said to rail on him. Jonah did as one that would cast off his care and folicitude, by seeking rest and quietnesse.

fast asleep] Not in asslumber, as Matth. 25. 5. and Psalm 132. 4. and Cant. 5. 2. but in a found, heavy, deep and dead sleep, as that Acts 20. 9. as that 1 Sam. 26. 12. and Judges 4. 21. A wonder is this, and prodigy, that in all this stir and tumult and danger the Windes whistling, roaring, quadam potestuosunt, &c. the Sea working, raging, swelling, floathing, foaming, boiling like a pot, the waves mounting up to heaven, montes voluuntur aquarum, and sinking down again to hell; the Ship tumbling and tossing like a Tennis-ball, the Mariners running up and down, and at their wits end, that yet Jonah should thus sleep: yea, though none of all this had been, yet a wonder he could enjoy any quiet sleep, having such a guilty galled conscience within him. Surely a marvellous supine and desperate wretchlessenesse of himself and his estate had seized upon him, and benummed him. So dreadfull a thing it is openly to rebell against God; and thus it is spiritually plagued here.

Ver. 6. So the Ship-master] The rude Mariner schools the Prophet; and so did an Heathen King reprove Abraham and Sarah, Genesis 20. 16. Yea, the Asse reproved the madnesse of the Prophet, 2 Pet. 2. 16.

O sleeper] That canst sleep now, when all the rest stand so agast with the horrour of present death! are thou deprived of all sense and understanding?

call upon thy God] He knew God was to be called upon in this case. But not knowing the true God, he could not direct Jonah to him, but leaves him to the liberty of his own God. Heathens dreamed of a multitude of gods, and so had several gods in several Nations, see verse 5. As they then had called on their idolls, so he bids Jonah call upon his God: which declareth that idolaters have no stay nor certainty, but in their troubles seek they cannot tell to whom.

if so be] Though commonly there is no great piety among shipmen, yet he knew their lives were in the hands of God, and if he would be propitious, and his face shine favourably upon them, they should not perish in the sea. But doubtfull he was of Gods favour herein; and therefore tries all means and wayes for it. Thus it was with this heathen man and mariner.

Ver. 7. let us cast lots] No doubt this was not their ordinary course, thus to cast lots in tempests: But observing this tempest to be extraordinary, not without Gods secret providence, they conjecture that there was some body in the ship that was guilty of some grievous sin: wherefore they desire to discover the truth by lots, according to the Heathens customes; but God is president over them, Proverbs 16. 33. We may be sure they saw some extraordinary signe of Gods revenging hand in this tempest, which drove them to this unusual course of dealing. In Scripture we find lots used at Gods command by Joshuah, in dividing the land to the twelve Tribes; enjoyned, Numbers 26. 55. and performed, Josh. 14. 2. and 18. 6. And in distributing the fourty eight Cities to the Kohathites, Gershonites, and Merarites, Josh. 21. Aaron and his Successours were to cast lots upon the two Goats, Levit. 16. 8, 9. In Davids time we find the Priests distributed by lot into twenty four orders, or courses. And so the singers, and the doors of the Temple, and Courts among the Porters, 1 Chron. 24. 25, 26. Chapters: In Nehemiahs time we find lots cast for the bringing in the wood-offering; and for the men that should inhabit Jerusalem, Nehemiah 10. 34. and 11. 1. we find Saul chosen King by lot, 1 Sam. 10. and Matthias to be an Apostle, Acts 1. 26. We read wicked Haman had Pur or lot cast for the happy moneth and day of his design against the Jewes, Esther 3. 7. And so had the four souldiers for Christs seamlesse coat, John 19. 23, 24. And for the rest of his garments. And the enemies of Gods people dividing them and their goods for a prey, cast lots upon them, Joel 3. 3. Obadiah 11. And so was Nineveh dealt withal, Nahum 3. 10. The use of them is not to be common, but in cases necessary, where no other way or means is left; and when and where we have Gods command, or the equity of it, or some peculiar instinct.

for whose cause] They had all and every one cause enough in themselves, if they could have seen it: yet here they conceived, and that rightly, of some extraordinary cause of this extraordinary tempest, in some particular person. And this extraordinary cause every one of them was ready enough to put off from themselves; thinking themselves, though sinners, yet not such sinners as to deserve this extraordinary judgment: they could so well sooth up themselves and extenuate their own sins.

and the lot fell upon Ionah] Thus was Achan taken, Josh. 7. and Jonathan, 1 Samuel 14. 42. See Proverbs 18. 18. and 16. 33.

V. 8. Then said they] Nothing doubting of the truth of the lot, and of the discovery made by it; And as the Poet saith, Assensere omnes, & quæ sibi quisque timebat, Unius in miseri exitium conversa tulere.

Tell us] They require of him the grand cause, and other particulars incident thereunto. They thought they could not be too inquisitive in this exigent and extremity of danger.

what is thine occupation] They enquire of his trade, lest he should be an idle man.

what is thy country] He was then a stranger to them, and they to him. They would fit out any thing that might imaginably any way conduce to the main matter.

V. 9. I am an Hebrew] Of whom and whose Religion the Heathens had heard much, and many great things; though they believed little, and applied lesse to themselves.

and I fear] Worship and serve; for so is fear often taken: my Religion is to serve and worship him only.

the Lord, &c.] Not any false and feigned god and idol of the Gentiles. This he doth not to excuse himself, but to aggravate his fault. The confession whereof he adjoyns here, as appears in the next verse. Thus was Ionah now humbled, and his stubborn rebellious heart broken. Thus the tempest and fight of his desperate danger wrought upon him, when God applied this violent remedy to his diseases.

V. 10. exceedingly afraid] Heb. With great fear: deeply apprehending the God of Ionah to be the only true God, and a dreadfull revenger of sin and rebellion against him:

why hast thou done this?] What great fault hast thou committed? Or rather, why hast thou thus sinned in fleeing from the Lord? As the Ship-master reproved him before, so now all of them fall upon him. He that would not be subject to Gods command, is now lyable to the censures, conviction, and condemnation of the barbarous men, which he doth now patiently endure and undergo without any grudging or murmuring.

had told them] Freely now and fully confessing his fault, without pleading any excuse or mitigation of it.

V. 11. What shall we do?] They were brought by his word into a reverence of him, that they durst not touch him whom they knew now to be a Prophet of the true God; else no doubt, they would soon in that danger have cast him over-board, the lot lighting upon him.

unto thee] He it is whom they consult in this extream perill; the Prophet, and no other.

may be calm unto us] Heb. May be silent from us.

wrought and was tempestuous] Or, grew more and more tempestuous. Heb. went.

V. 12. take me up] This in Jonah was not the speech of a desperate man offering himself and egging others on to his death: but a patient submission and ready yielding to that sentence, which he was perswaded God had summoned him unto, and pointed him out as it were by the finger to undergo.

for I know] By discourse of reason more then by the lot; by the inward touch of mine own conscience, as by divine instinct and revelation. And this argues his faith and repentance: He murmures not against God for this severity: but is as David, Psalm 39. 9. as Levit. 10. 3. He willingly undergoes the guilt and punishment, gives God the honour of his justice, and takes to himself the shame of his sinne.

V. 13. the men rowed] Heb. Digged. They were so strucken with such an awfull reverence and regard of the Prophets person, and of his God; and seeing him so doom himself, and so willingly and humbly sue it thereunto, the more they fought in pity and commiseration to spare and save him; even with the venture of their own lives; They would try all means to the utmost to save him, before they would execute his own sentence upon himself, so full were they of humanity, and tender of a mans life.

but they could not] Gods power and providence over-ruled all. He had a further end in it; and hereby he would shew how hainous a sin it was to disobey his will, and rebell against his command.

Ver. 14. They cryed unto the Lord] To Jehovah the true God, to Jonah's God. Thus and thus soon they profited in the school of affliction.

we beseech thee] Thus earnestly they pray. So Mat. 8. 25. This declareth that the very wicked in their necessities fly unto God for succour; and also that they are touched with a certain fear to shed mans blood, when as they know no manifest sign of wickednesse.

innocent blood] Mans blood is dear to God. The shedding of innocent blood is a crying sin, Gen. 4. 10: and 9. 6. Apoc. 6. 10. The guilt of it galls and agasts the conscience by the light of nature itself. See Acts 28. 4.

as it pleaseth thee] Herein they excuse not themselves, by casting the blame upon God; nay, they ascribe to God the praise of his justice, the honour due unto him, thus; We do acknowledg in all this, expresse signs of thy power, justice, and supream providence; to which because we will not displease thee, we submit our selves to perform this execution. They meddle not with Gods secret will; but take his revealed will for the rule of their actions.

V. 15.

V. 15. and cast him] Thus God deals with his Prophet for his open rebellion, though formerly he had been faithful in his office and able thereunto, and otherwise would not now have been chosen out, designed, and sent to Nineve. This now must needs be a wofull case to Ionah.

and the sea ceased] Heb. Stood. It smooths its face instantly then, and not till then. A manifest sign of Gods hand in all this action. See Matth. 8. 26. Psalm 89. 9. and 107. 29. and 93. 3, 4.

V. 16. feared the Lord] The effect and fruit of this miraculous calm in the Mariners. This increased their fear, and holy reverence of the true Jehovah. They were touched with a certain Repentance of their life past, and began to worship the true God, by whom they saw themselves so wonderfully delivered, yet whether this were a servile feare only; and they fell away afterwards, we cannot determine; but may rather hope the best, that this feare did open them the doore to true piety.

and offered a sacrifice to the Lord] Heb. Sacrificed a sacrifice; Sacrifices were usuall and frequent among the Heathens in the service and worship of their idolls; And it may be first, and most derived from the Jewes; But here these Mariners sacrifice not to their idolls, but to the true Jehovah. The true God here gained at least of them this acknowledgement and testimony of him, and his glory and worship.

and made vows] Heb. vowed vows, of Praise and Thanksgiving for their deliverance and safety, which they would perform, when they came on shore. This we see the very light of Nature did lead them unto. And for vowes, we have much direction in Scripture; both what it is to vow, and who may vow, and what things they may vow, with many injunctions to perform the vows, and many examples of them that did it. Vowing is a voluntary service of a free-will offering to God. It is no sin not to vow, Deut. 23. 22. It is to be yeilded only to the Lord, Psalm 65. 1. To the most High, the mighty God of Iacob. It is a binding of the soul by an oath to the Lord, Numb. 30. 2. And this may any do, that are not under the power of another; as Maids and Wives; of whom, see Numb. 30. The things vowed must be lawfull, and good, as to afflict and humble the soul, Num. 30. 13. To get temporall blessings, children; substenance, protection, deliverance out of troubles and dangers, victories over our enemies; to destroy Gods enemies; to give beast, house, field, and the like, to the Lord; as also to build, dedicate, and the like, for the maintenance and furtherance of Gods worship and service; to give thanks and praise to God for his Blessings. And in the Levitical Law to offer voluntary Sacrifices, with caveats what they must be, and where offered; see Levit. 22. ver. 23. Deut. 12. 5, 6, 11, 17, 26. and 23. 18. Malach. 1. 14. And to be a Nazarite, Numb. 6. But base or sinfull things we must not vow unto the Lord, Deut. 23. 18. As Micahs Mother did vow, and dedicate silver, to make Idolls, Judges 17. 3. And the Idolatrous women of the Jews in Egypt, vowed to burn incense to the Queen of heaven, Jeremiah 44. 25. And those murderers in the Acts to kill Paul. And unlawfull, and ungodly, most an end, are the vows among the Papists. Just and holy vowes, which have gone out of our lips, and we have promised with our mouths, are strictly charged to be performed, and care hath been kept by Gods people accordingly. See Deut. 23. 21, 23. and Psalm 22. 25. and 50. 14. Psalm 76. 12. and 61. 8. Proverbs 20. 25. Eccles. 5. 3, 4. Nahum 1. 15. Examples of such as made vowes are many. Thus did Iacob; Gen. 28. 20. Israel; Numb. 21. 2. Iephthah; Judg. 11. 30, 39. Hannah, 1 Samuel 1. 11. Bathsheba, Prov. 31. 2. David, Psalm 66. 13, 14. and 56. 12. When he was at Gath; and Psalm 132. 2, 3, 4, 5. and 116. 14, 18. Our Prophet Jonah, Chap. 2. 9. Paul, Acts 18 18. and chap. 21. 23.

V. 17. the Lord had prepared] See Gods providence and power, in and over the Sea and the fishes in it, See Luke 5. verse 6. John 21. 6. God prepared the fish both to devoure him and preserve him.

belly of the fish] Heb. Bowels. Thus the Lord would chastise his Prophet with the most terrible spectacle of death; and thereby confirmed him also of his favour and support in this his charge which was enjoyned him.

three dayes] A most wofull time to him; all the while to be thinking of Gods terrours to him, and wrath upon him; and not to have that comfort in death, whereof Job speaks, Chap. 14. 13. and 3. 13.–25. Yet his case and condition, his Prayer, and hope, appears fully in the next Chap. His living all this time in the fishes belly was miraculous. To this time our Saviour relates and alludes, Mat. 12, 39, 40. and 16, 4. Luke 11. 30.

CHAP. II.

Verse 1. THen Jonah prayed] Then, in this desperate state and condition.

prayed] He did not so before, when he was at liberty, and fled from God. Here is now a change wrought in him. He wrestles against despair under this strange hand of God upon him; and recovers some hope; else he would not, and could not have prayed.

to the Lord his God] Here is the root of Faith, to run to God, and to lay hold on him as his God, when God thus strangely overwhelmed him with his heavy judgment.

out of the belly of the fish] Which he calls the belly of hell, or of the grave: Such a place of darknesse, out of this prison, and dungeon. This gave life and liberty to his prayer. See Psalm 130. 1. Being now swallowed up of death, and seeing no remedy to escape, his faith built out unto the Lord; knowing that out of this very hell he was able to deliver him.

V. 2, and said] Not the words themselves, as they in order follow; as appears verse 6, 9. But these were his thoughts, wishes, dilections, tentations, wrestlings in himself, and the substance of his desires to God, whiles he was in the fishes belly. He was firm in this, That God was able to be fought unto; and being seriously fought unto, that it would not prove to be in vain, Esay 45. 19. These things were see down in writing by him after his deliverance, with the addition of thanksgiving. See on Psalm 142. 1.

I cryed] The summe of all is see downe in this verse; and that twice over. That he prayed to God, and that God did hear him; That he was in distresse, and God did help him. His prayer earnest and ardent, wrestling with God against all difficulties, and impossibilities, and his deliverance wonderfull, beyond all reach of humane reason. And this it self shewes, that this was both spoken and written by him after his deliverance; see Psalm 142. 1.

by reason of mine affliction] Or, out of mine affliction.

hell cryed] Or, the grave. Heb. Sheol. For he was in the fishes belly, as in a grave, or place of darknesse.

Verse 3. For thou hadst] Here he amplifies his distresse, in many words, and easie to be understood. Such it was, as in all judgement of flesh and blood, might have drowned his Faith, and Hope; as well as his body. He looks not to the men that cast him over-board, but to God and his hand in it.

midst of the seas] Heb. heart.

Verse 4. Then I said] These strights brought him to these disputes of despaire; to these perplexities and agonies.

I am cast out] Considering his case, and the cause of it; his sin and Gods anger; both so eminent, and transcendent: This drives him into this sore and distracting Temptation. He remembred not that, Leviticus 26. 44. Nor was of that perswasion, Lamentations 3. 31, 32, 33. but rather inclines towards that of Cain, Genesis 4. 13, 14. Thus he laboured between hope and despair, considering the neglect of his vocation, and Gods Judgements for the same: But yet in the end Faith got the victory; as appears in the next words.

yet I will look] Though the gate of mercy seeme shut, the hope of pardon cut off, and mountaines of oppositions stand up against me, yet I will look up, and over-look all these. Thus his Faith wrestles and holds up its shield in all these conflicts, and against all these assaults, as Psalm 42. 5. 11. and 43. 5. He despaires not, but rather checks his own diffidence and distrust, wishing and hoping for mercy.

toward thy holy Temple] He animates himself to hope, by mentioning and remembring the Temple, and the promises made to it, by it; and his former interest in it, and the services of it.

Ver. 5. The waters] Againe he enlargeth himselfe upon the wofulnesse of his estate, which might have amazed him with terrour, and kept him from any hopefull addresse to God by prayer; knowing all this befell him for his open rebellion against God.

even unto the soul] Bringing me into danger of present death. See Psalm. 69. 1, 2.

the weeds] To wit, which the fish had swallowed; or, so deep was I in the bottom of the sea, as if the weeds that grow there had been wrapped about my head.

Ver. 6. to the bottoms of the mountaines] Heb. Cuttings off. Great Mountaines and Promontories are there along that Coast of the Mediterranean Sea; to the roots, and feet whereof he descended in the fishes belly.

barres] A terme taken from prisoners. The meaning is, I am in the sea as it were in a strong prison; shut up and barred from the earth, and land of the living on all sides, by those steep rocks.

for ever] Unlesse thou do miraculously relieve me. For upon all this, no lesse could restore him then a miracle.

yet] Thou hast delivered me from the belly of the fish and all these dangers; as it were raising me from death to life. Therefore this was indited after his deliverance; this being his thanksgiving for it.

corruption] Or, the pit.

O Lord, my God] He prayed in some faith. And here is the triumph of his faith, upon the hearing of his prayer. For by this means Faith groweth gloriously.

V. 7. fainted] Was so anxious and perplexed, that it fell as it were into a swoun; and all my thoughts and devices could not ease or dis-burden my cares; but they tormented me only, and recoiled and redounded back upon mine own head. See Psalm 42.4. and 22. 14. and 102. Title of the Psalm, Job 30.16.

I remembred the Lord] And his mercy of old, as Psalm 42. 6. and 77.5---12. Thus still he kept his ground, and held up his hope, hough with wonderful difficulty.

and my prayer] Whereby he now fled to him in hope, as formerly he had fled from him by rebellion. Thus prayer is our shoot-anchor in all storms and tempests.

came in] Was not shut out; as Lam. 3. 8, 44. but had entrance, and found acceptance; as Psalm 66. 19. and 88. 2. See Esay 65. 24.

holy Temple] To wit, in heaven, Gods dwelling place in glory: the representation whereof was in the Temple of Jerusalem; to which also no doubt Jonah had relation here, and to the promises annexed to it.

V.8. They] Jonah upon consideration of the premises, sets out the false, deceiving, vain courses of sinners; whereunto he secretly opposeth his own piety and practice.

lying vanities] They that depend upon any thing save upon God alone. Thus he calls and stiles all such dependencies whatsoever men frame and fancy to themselves.

own mercy] They refuse their own felicity, and that goodnesse which they should else receive of God, if they observed him alone, and can receive of no other; as himself finds by his present experience. See Jer.2. 13, Psalm 36. 9. Jer. 17. 13. and 18. 14. and Esay 46.7,8.

V.9. But I will] Though idolaters, to their hurt, do otherwise observing lying vanities, and ascribing their deliverances to their vain lying idols; yet I will apply and addict my self solely and wholly to God, in whom alone all hope of help and happinesse remaineth.

of thanksgiving] Psalm 50.14,23. and 116.17. Hos. 14.2. Heb. 13.15.

I will pay] See on Chap.1.16.

salvation is of the Lord] Psalm 3.8. It is to be ascribed to him and to no other, as Jonah doth in this present case.

V.10. spake unto the fish] Gods sole word made and commands all things, Gen.1.3. Psalm 105.31,34. and 107.25. Esay 43.6. and 44.27. and 7.18.

vomit out] A miraculous both preservation in the belly of the fish, and deliverance out of it. And this may serve as an image and type of our preservation in the grave, and our resurrection from the dead, by one and the same Almighty power of God.

CHAP. III.

C*Ame unto Jonah*] This is a great declaration of Gods mercy, that he receiveth him again, and sendeth him forth as his Prophet, which had before shewed so great infirmity.

the second time] Gods wonderful mercy without any merit of Jonah after his so foul a fall; freely to restore him to his Prophetical honour and office.

V.2. Arise] See on Chap.1. verse 2.

that great City] Though thou be a single man, a meer and mean stranger unknown, unregarded; yet go against that great City, the greatest City then of the world, so great and populous, as it might seem to be a region or countrey; a Heathenish, proud, sinful, secure City. He re-minds him of this, to forewarn and fore-arm him with invincible magnanimity against the seeming difficulties and dangers incident to his office and charge.

that I bid thee] Whatsoever it be. See Chap.1. verse 2.

V.3. So Jonah arose] Before, he arose to flee from his charge and vocation, from Gods call and command: Now he arose, and addresseth himself to it; consults not with flesh and blood, but by faith overcomes all obstructions, knowing he had God on his side who had so wonderfully saved him: with resolution therefore and boldnesse, he sets forward. Thus he profited under the Rod in the School of afflictions; and so good are chastisements to us, Psalm 119.67,71.

according to the word of the Lord] All he minded now was his obedience to God and his command; he gave up himself wholly to be guided and ruled by him. A good change.

an exceeding great City] Heb. A great City of God. For the Hebrews do extol the greatnesse of things, by adding the name of God to their ordinary names: as Cedars of God, Psa.80.10. mountains of God, Psal.36.6. the wrestlings of God, Gen.30.8. See Annot. on Ezekiel 40.2.

three dayes journey] In circuit, say some; and that going leasurely to go through the several streets, say others: in length and breadth, say others: and Heathen Writers most accord herewith. They mention 400 stadia. And a stadium contains 125 paces: and so 8 stadia our mile. See on Ch.1. verse 2. It is not so likely that those Authors should feign or fail in so notorious a thing as was the quantity of that so famous a City.

V. 4. into the City a dayes journey] Not going on straight forward, say some, but by pauses and at times, going on from place to place, as his charge required. But nothing hinders, but it might be that he went on straight forwards, and that day converted many. And after in the dayes following converted more, till there was a general conversion of the City.

and he cryed] He doth not make any stay, first of all to view the City, what were the manners and conditions of the place and people: how he might with best conveniency, and least danger, preach and publish his dreadful un-welcome message: But without any such carnal reasonings, as soon as he came to the gate of the City, he straight falls on without any respite of time to execute Gods command, and his duty. And that not fearfully muttering his messages, but with open cry and proclamation: such courage and boldnesse he had now attained to.

yet fourty dayes] Here is no sweet invitation, and allurement to repentance; no condition or exception expressed, nor promise of pardon made, or conditionally intimated: no such preaching as that Ezek.18.21. and 33.14,15,16. But Jonah is Boanerges, a son of thunder: his sermon as a thunder-bolt. The condition, it seems, God reserves to himself, and is here to be understood. See Gen. 6. 3. and Chap.20.3. And so are all the threatnings and promises of the Law conditional, 1 Pet. 3. 20. And if this condition were not understood, what needed the Lord to have sent the Prophet to them? He might have destroyed them without this sending, and warning, as he did usually deal with other Heathen Nations, as we read in the Prophets. But he thus sends Jonah to the Ninevites, that by his warning they might speedily provide for their own safety, by timely repentance. Herein vouchsafing them that favour, which otherwise was peculiar to his own people, Amos 3. 7. what danger in all humane reason might this preaching have procured to Jonah? But now he feared nothing, but disobedience to God.

V.5. believed God] Matth. 12.41. Luke 11.32. and his word preached by Jonah: for he declared that he was a Prophet sent to them from God, to denounce his judgments against them. See Exod.14.31. And they most likely had heard of his wonderful deliverance out of the Whales belly: which argument might work much upon them.

and proclaimed a fast] Being in all likelihood by Jonah told of their sins, and that God was the avenger of them. This fast the people seem voluntarily to undertake to keep; and after to be also authorized and enjoyned by the Kings command; who would also be partaker thereof. But yet more likely the command came first from the King himself, and his Nobles, v.7. Of Fastings, see on Joel 1.14. As we have this example of fasting here, so we have many more in Scripture, of David, of Daniel, Nehemiah, and of Anna, John Baptist, Paul, and others; of Iehoshaphat and his people: of Ezra, and his company; of Esther, and the Jews; of the people in the Babylonish captivity; yea, of wicked Ahab, and the proud Pharisees.

V.6. For word came unto the King] Here is a declaration how the Ninevites came to proclaim a fast, and put on sackcloth; not by their own power and authority, but by the Kings command.

and he arose from his throne] A rare example in the Monarch of the world, and the more rare, all circumstances being duely considered. And in all likelihood his hearing of Jonah's being in the Whales belly was a great inducement hereunto; besides that, God filled his Word in Jonah's mouth with his own Spirit, and clothed it with his own power.

Sackcloth] Gen.37.34. See Annotations there.

Sate in ashes] Job 2.8. and 42.6. 2 Sam.13.19. Esther 4.13. Esay 58.5. Jer.6.26. Lam.2.10. Dan.9.3. These ceremonies and outward rites, are only useful as they testifie the truth of the inward sorrow and repentance of the heart, and help and conduce thereunto; without that they are frivolous and hurtful, 1 Tim. 4. 8. And they are used only in extraordinary cases.

V.7. And he caused] See on verse 6. And so soon and suddenly he did it. He did not rage and storm at such words, at such a sermon. He did not as Ahab did, 1 Kings 18.17. or as Iehoiakim, Jer. 36. 23. and chap.26.23. Or as it is, Amos 7.10. But thus he humbled himself, published] Heb. Said, nobles] Heb. Great men.

nor beast] The threatning was against the whole city, And all things in it. All the creatures, as they were made for the use of man, so they suffer for the sin of man; and man is punished in them, and the losse of them: man, in their punishment, sees what he deserves. The meaning then is, not that the dumbe beast had sinned, or could repent; but that by their example man might be astonished, considering that for his sin the anger of God hanged over all creatures; and that their loughings and bellowings might the more excite the people to lamentations and howlings.

tast any thing] For a certaine limited time, which likely was a whole day at least.

and beasts be covered] It may be, according to the custom of those dayes; those dayes, the beasts they use to ride upon, and imployed for carriage, were wont to be covered and trapped: but in time of mourning they took those ornaments off, and covered them with hair-cloth, and ragged clothing.

and cry mightily unto God] The King of Nineve can resolve of no way for help, but prayer. And that must be strong prayer; as Heb. 5.7. 1 Sam.15.11. Psal.22.2, and 69.3. and 119.145. Luke 18.7. Thus far he by the light of nature. And so did the marriners. Chap.1.5. He commandeth that the men should earnestly call unto God for mercy.

yea, let them turn] He rests not in the external Rites, but comes to the true touch of Repentance, the effects and fruits of it; every one to turn from his evil course of life, to change his manners and become a new man.

and from the violence] He instanceth in one particular sin, which likely reigned much, if not most, in that city.

is in their hands] Whereof he is guilty, as if his hands were soiled therewith, Psal.7.3.

V.9. who can tell] The king then doth not utterly despair; but entertains some hope of help. Faith is mixed with doubting; yea even so in Gods true children. And this question here may note our difficulty, as well as diffidence. See Joel 2.14.

will turn] Towards us in grace and mercy.

that we perish not] He acknowledgeth that their safety, or preserving lay wholly and solely in the hands of God, in his favour, or displeasure.

V. 10. And God saw] This is called repentance, by our Saviour, Matth.12.41. But likely in a large acceptation. This may seem rather, by the sequent history of them, and their dealing against the Jews, to favour of Pharaohs and Ahabs repentance, then to be a real and found conversion to God. See the book of Nahum. They were like those. Psalm.78.34,36,37.57.

their works] That is, the fruits of their repentance which did proceed from their credence to the words of the Prophet. These are looked more after, then ceremonious rites. Not yet that their works merited their pardon, but that they shewed such a qualification to be in them, as is in such to whom God promiseth freely, out of his meer mercy, to give a gracious pardon.

God repented] by recalling his sentence which was but conditional in his decree, and minde; whereof he gave likely either litle or no notice by Jonah. See Genes.6.6. and the Annotations there; Gods dealing here with Nineve is not much unlike his dealing with Ahab, 1 Kings 21.27,28,29.

CHAP. IV.

Verse 1. B*Vt it displeased*] Not onely for fear of being thought a false Prophet; but also for the zeal of Gods glory, which he thought was wronged by this change; And for affection he bore to Gods People; who had then no greater enemy to fear, then the empire of Assyria; as by effect it appeared not long after. And hereupon some would excuse Jonah from all fault in this; but in vain: Should he be displeased with Gods doing? with his work of mercy? so great a mercy? and he therein so exceedingly displeased? so very angry? beyond all measure? Himself sets out his own sin, and God himself reproves him for it; both which will more appear hereafter. Thus the Prophet falls fowle upon God; and that so soon after so miraculous a mercy and deliverance vouchsafed him. He was it seems too litteral a Doctour, taking and pressing the bare words, without any restriction or reservation.

V. 2. And he prayed] A passionate disorderly prayer; expostulating and quarrelling with God, accusing him, to please and justifie himself, in his former open rebellion. Herein was some piety in that he directed his Complaint to God, in the name and nature of a Prayer, but mixed with much infirmity, and impiety. In this, he reteins some seeds of piety and obedience in his heart; and God mercifully vouchsafes the title and esteem of a Prayer unto it. And thus in much mercy God many times deals with the sinful weaknesses of his servants, yea our best services are tainted with imperfections and defilements.

was not this my saying?] Here is his grief and anger, That thus he should be found to be a false and lying prophet. See Jerem.20. 7,8. Thus prefering his own conceited credit, before the praise of Gods glorious mercy. But be it that herein he had a chief eye to Gods glory, and was most tender of it; fearing the prophane Ninevites would blaspheme Gods Name, and deride his Word and threatnings, when they saw them not to be accomplished, they knowing that God was the authour of his message, and Jonah was but his Ambassadour, sent with his word in his mouth, with instructions, and mandates from him; Take him thus at the best, yet he should have learned to subject his will and wisdom to Gods will and wisdom; not to arrogate to himself a censure of things passing his capacity; but humbly and wholly to submit himself to God, and to beg of him the Spirit of discerning in such high concernments. And the like must we do, when we see things fall out by Gods secret providence, which we think will redound greatly to Gods dishonour; let us grieve at the sin, yet wait on, till he bring forth light out of darknes, good out of evil: and mean while let us go on to obey his commands, though all the world oppose us in it. Verily here is a manifold example in Jonah of humane infirmity. He seems here to defend and maintain his former obstinacy and rebellion, aiming in all at his own credit and reputation.

therefore I fled] Chap.1.3. Not for fear of danger, or toil; nor out of a rebellious minde, or any sinister intent; but left the issue and event of my Preaching should minister occasion to these Heathen people to blaspheme thy Name, so deride thy Word, as if there were no truth in thee or it. Thus would he disobey God, out of a pretence of his love to God, and zeal of his glory. Let not such good intentions pretended, or real, draw us to the right hand, from the right path of Gods commandments.

a gracious God] This should rather have animated him to his duty. And happily would so have done; in his Ministry to the Jews. But this seemed to him to thwart, and to be quite cross to that peremptory ambassage, upon which he was sent to the Ninevites: and so he conceived, that upon their repentance, God would be merciful; and so both himself and God exposed to their derision; and that this made him flee. He could dream of nothing to the Ninivites, but their destruction. But God sifted his Ministry to a better purpose, and crowned it with better succesis then he imagined or any way deserved.

slow to anger] Psal.78.38. Hosea 11.9. See that James 1.19.

and repentest] Joel 2.13. Jer.18.8. and 26.3,13,19. Jonah out of a blinde zeal makes ill use of these excellent attributes of God, to make them a cloak for his rebellion, and disobedience to Gods Commandment. But he should have been lesse wife in his own conceit, and have committed the event and succesis of all to God, and have obeyed his call and command, though a thousand difficulties and absurdities had flood in his way.

v.3. my life from me] Not so much out of his desire of heaven; as for his present displeasure and anger, verse 1. see here again his great weaknesse and sinful infirmity in this his strange passion; And this so soon after he came out of the Whales belly; Yet is not this a voice of despair? he would not then have put it up in form of a Prayer to the Lord, but a passionate expression of his too great indignation at this event of his preaching, and Gods repenting mercy to Niniveh. He was too heady thus to wish for his death. And thus Elias, 1 Kings 19.4. Iob and Jeremiah were too hasty this way. They should have kept their standing, till God, who placed them in this life, had called them out of it. See the example of Paul, Phil.1.22,23,24. we must so love life, as yet willingly to leave it when God calls for it; and so wish for death, as yet patiently to wait till God brings us to it.

for it is better] Thus Jonah expresseth and confesseth his own folly and sin. So dangerous a thing it is for us, and audacious, to pass our censures upon Gods actions, and the passages of his providence. Ezek.18.25. Isaiah 55.9. Our wisdome and safety is wholly to submit and subject our selves to his holy will and pleasure.

v.4. Doest thou well to be angry?] Or, art thou greatly angry? wilt thou Judge when I do things for my glory, and when I do not? Others thus; thou hast great cause to be angry: and so it is an ironical reproof. See ver.9. and Numb. 22.17,29. Here God, the just Judge of the world, condemns his prepostterous zeal, for all his good intention. See Luke 9.54. Shall filly man thus chafe and fret at Gods proceedings? Let the portheard strive with the pot-sheards of the earth. Jonah did not modestly disburden himself of his fears and doubts before God, but straight became exceeding angry. And God here by putting this Interrogatory to him, would convict him by verdict of his own Conscience; as if he should say, do but look thy self in the glasse of thy own Conscience.

v.5. So Jonah went out of the City] Likely before the forty dayes were expired; not knowing yet of the Lords merciful minde to spare the City; and left if he had stayed therein, he might have been destroyed in it. Or if this be understood that it was after the forty dayes were expired, yet might he wait a while longer, expecting still the judgement threatned, though a little delayed, yet to be shortly executed. For we read not of any Revelation made to him, or understood by him, of reversing the judgement; but onely by the event. He therefore doubted at least whether God would shew them mercy, or no: and therefore after forty dayes he looke still what issue God would send.

v.6. prepared] Did miraculously cause this plant so soon and suddenly to spring and grow up to a great height; peradventure this happened when the booth began to dry up, and shadow Jonah no more.

a gourd] Hebr. Kikaion. A plant which is very common in those hot Countreys, and groweth up to a great height, and spreadeth out in great breadth, called commonly palma christi, as most conceive. Hierom was questioned for translating it an Ivie. God chose such a plant as naturally growes soon; but here he makes the growth to exceed far the ordinary course of nature.

to come up] Over the booth where Jonah was.

Ist grief] Namely, from the heat, which increaseth the grief of his minde. Or to give him by the meanes of this plant some wholesome document and remedy for his passion.

exceeding glad] Heb. rejoyced with great joy. Thus sensible we are of bodily comforts and refreshments.

v. 7. Prepared a worm.] Thus Gods providence is in and over the least creature. So for the winde, vers.8. See Matth. 10.29, 30. Luke 12.6,7. It is God that works ordinarily in the setled course of nature; and extraordinarily, when he pleaseth to vary from it.

smote] Namely, did gnaw the roote of it.

v.8. a vehement east winde] Heb. a silent or deaf winde. That is to say, a still hot winde, which redoubled the heat of the Sun. Others; a winde that made one deaf, it was so tempestuous.

and wished] 1 Kings 19.4. Jonah still is in extremity of passions upon all occasions; transported and over-born with them; with anger, joy, grief; They should be regularly moderated.

v.9. Dost thou well to be angry?] Or, art thou greatly angry? so angry for such a trifle; Is this well? God here is mindful of him, when he was not so mindful of God; but wilbed onely in himself to die; and so to run upon despair, without seeking to God for a remedy. Thus God prevents us in mercy, and expects not always, till we begin to seek to him first.

I do well to be angry] Or, I am greatly angry. Jonah is still in height of passion; and as these of a passionate spirit, blinded with anger, rather then with any expresse rebellion. This declareth the great inconveniences whereinto Gods servants do fall, when they give place to their own affections, and do not in all things willingly submit themselves to God. He sleights Gods admonition and reproof, stirreth up in a further animosity against it; proceeds on to a desperate degree of anger. Such wild heads are our furious passions, when we give them the reins. This case of such a Prophet should make us the more careful to curb in, and to regulate our affections in times.

v.10. Thou hast had pity] Or, spared. That is, thou wouldest have spared and dearly preserved it. God now applies the former case to his present purpose. He had pity on the gourd, for his own sake chiefly, and his own use.

came up in a night] Heb was the son of the night: was so sleight a thing; and he had no interest in it, or the making of it.

v.11. And should not I] Thus God more fully reproveth him, which would pity himself, and this gourd; and yet would restrain God to shew his compassion to so many thousand people of his own making, and for his own use; But that he must needs destroy them, and not suffer them to enjoy the common benefits of light and life. Every word of the Lord here hath its weight and emphasis, opposing himself to Jonah, and populous Ninivch to the Gourd. An argumentation somewhat like that, Matth.7.11.

Cannot discern] Little children that are not yet come to age of understanding.

and much cattle] To be much preferred before the gourd. And all this to make Jonah to be ashamed of himself, and his furious folly: who would prescribe rules to God, and his secret Counsel; and goes about to govern God by the dictate of his will and pleasure: that he should not spare the Ninevites, who yet so much indeavoured by their Repentance to prevent his judgment threatened against them.

ANNOTATIONS on the Book of the Prophet MICAH.

THE ARGUMENT.

MIcah prophesied in the dayes of Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, Kings of Judah. Some say upon probability, at least thirty years; at which time Isaiah also prophesied: and they two are like in the subject matter: and in their terms and prophetical stile, sublime and lofty. He declareth the destruction of both the Kingdomes of Israel and Judah, and their approaching dispersion by the Assyrians, and by the Chaldeans, because of their manifold wickednesses: but chiefly for their idolatry, impiety, and inhumanity, and all upheld & countenanced by their Princes, and Prophets. Then he maketh promises to the remnant of true Believers, of temporal deliverance from Captivity; and of Spiritual through Christ, who should bring Eternal salvation to the whole Church, gathering it out of all Nations: whose coming in the Flesh, or Incarnation, and place of his Birth, are described; so shut from him Herod might be told where Christ the true Bread of Life should be born; Namely, at Bethle-chem, The house of Bread, for so the Hebrew word signifieth. Furthermore, he joyneth excellent prophecies of the coming of Christs Kingdom: of the calling in of the Gentiles: and of the felicity of the Church, and the Benefits should come to it by the Gospel. His prophecie hath two parts or sermons: The first consisteth of threatenings to the wicked, Chapter 1, 2, and 3, and of consolations to the Church, by the Prophetical promises of Christ and his Kingdome, Chap. 4, and 5. The second part hath also threatnings, for their ill requiting of all Gods kindnesses, and their other sins, Chap.6. And, after the complaint of the Prophet, and all the Godly, concerning the paucity of good men, in every rank and degree: so that they could scarce finde, among their near friends and necessary acquaintance, piety and fidelity: he endeth his prophecie with the Churches consolation, in her patient expectation of Gods time to plead her cause, to the shame of her insulting enemy, and her own marvellous felicity, Chap.7.

CHAP. I.

MIcah] Jer.26.18. not that Micajah, 2 Kings 22.8.

Morasthite] Namely, of some city called Morasheth, either that verse 14. or that, Josh. 15.44. being a city assigned by lot to the tribe of Judah.

in the dayes] He was contemporary with Esay, save that he began later then he: and after Joel, Amos, and Jonah, had ended their prophecies. The time of his continuance in executing his office is not certain, because those years of Jotham and Hezekiah, in which he began and ended, are not set down. This knowledge of the time helps much to the understanding of the Prophecie; which in it self is somewhat dark and difficult. He hath a great concord and correspondency with Esay his Colleague, many times using the same words. God willing so by the mouth of two Witnesses, to have his Word confirmed to his people.

v.2. Hear all ye people] Heb. Hear ye people all of them. He doth not equally preach and intend all his doctrine to the use of all people as much as to the people of God, the Jews: But this is a figurative manner of calling all creatures, as it were, to a solemn appearance, and to be witnesses at the judgement, wherein God will judge his people. See Deut.2.26.and 30.19.& 32.1.Ps.50.1,4. Esa.1.2. Their sins shall be brought upon the publick stage, and themselves convicted and condemned of all, unlesse they repent.

all that therein is] Heb. The fulnesse thereof.

and let the Lord God] The Tribunal being erected, and the assembly gathered, the Lord God will appear.

be witnesse against you] Will convince you of your sins, O ye of Judah and Israel. Here then there will be no dallying with God, nor escaping his judgment; he will plead his own cause against you, before all the world; and take due vengeance, unlesse ye repent.

the Lord from his holy temple] Coming forth, as one should say out of heaven; or out of the temple of Jerusalem, where he is present in his signs of grace and vertue, Psalm 11.4. Hab.2.29. They never gave over boasting of the holy Temple of Jerusalem, and God in it; they gloried in their prerogatives: that they were such a sacred people, as not to be so roughly handled, and uncivilly dealt withall, by the prophets: so abusing Gods favours to shield and shelter them in their sins: Micah tells them, that for all this the Lord will appear, even out of that holy temple, to take due revenge on them for their sins.

v.3. For behold] To rouze them up to attend that which they could so hardly be perswaded to; that God was so angry with them, when they thought him well pleased and propitious.

forth out of his place] Esay 26.21. There against the enemies of his Church; here against his own people. Not quite to leave his Temple; as Ezek. Chap. 9. 3. and 10. 3, 4, 18, 19. and Chap. 11. 22,23. But to appear out of it; as in the end of the former verse; and to appear as a dreadful Judge against them. They thought he had been in the Temple quite and well pleased with their ceremonial Services and Sacrifices; not much unlike to the idols of the Heathens, in their Temples; But he will come forth and stretch out his hand of power and revenge further then so.

and tread upon] He shall shew himself exalted above all worldly greatnesse; or he shall tread under-foot all powers which shall offer to resist him, Amos 4.13.

the high places of the earth] Meaning thereby, that God will come to judgment against the strong Cities and holds: none of them shall keep him out, or stop his vengeance: nor yet those high and lofty men, that by their greatnesse would plead exemption from the condition of the vulgar sort, see the phrase, Deut.32.13.and 33.29. and Isa. 58.14.

v.4. And the mountains] The rocky mountains shall yet melt. All this is to affright these hard-hearted sinners, with the dreadful Majesty of this Judge, coming to judgment. See Nahum 1.ver.1.-7. Psalm 50.3,4. and 97.2.3, 4, 5. Yet this should not drive sinners to flee from God, but tame their pride, and humble them, in all submission and awful reverence, to approach unto him.

a steep place] Heb. a descent.

v.5. For the transgressions] Here is the cause why God appears so formidable. It is not without just cause; nor is he too severe to his people, more then is meet.

of the house of Israel] Of the whole body of the people; of his own people by Covenant.

what is the transgression] Where is the spring of all these Idolatries, and other sins of these two Kingdomes? Is it not in these two chief Cities? and in the Kings and Princes, and in their Courts, which are kept within those Cities? and in the Priests and Prophets that are there? And withall he may seem to speak this in the person of the hypocritical Jewes, that cried out, what, and where were there so great transgressions? as if they were unjustly taxed by the Prophets, when they dealt so roughly with them.

Is it not Samaria?] The Prophet meets with them, and stops their mouths; Their capital sins were not in their capital Cities; and thence over-flowed the whole land, even those named, ver.1. There is their sin, and the well-head of it; where the fountain should have been of all good government, and good example. Yea, there were their Idolatrous worships most reigning, wherein they so much pleased themselves, and from which they would not be beaten. The Prophet therefore in Gods name, as from heaven, thunders against them.

the high places of Judah?] Amos 7.9. High places of Isaac, high places were sometimes taken in a good sense; as Gibeon, when the Tabernacle was there; and Jerusalem, when the Ark was there, are called High places, 1 Kings 3.2.3.4. See also 1 Sam.9.12. and 10.5. Where the high place is called the Hill of God. But after the setling of Gods Levitical Worship at Jerusalem, and the building of the Temple, then and thenceforth high places are taken in the bad sense, as becoming Idolatrous places. So Jeroboam built high places, 1 Kings 12.31,32. Houses of the high places; and he made Priests of the high places, and images, and altars, and groves; where they burnt incense, and offered sacrifices in their idolatrous services. And his Successors multiplied these high places. And many Kings of Judah were not free of this sin. Yea, Solomon himself who built the Temple, was deeply guilty herein, for his idolatrous wives sake, 1 Kings 11.7. And many his successors, otherwise good, yet taxed for this, for not taking away the high places which their Predecessors had built: And Hezekiah and Josiah, are commended for destroying them, 2 Kings 23.5.---21. They were so called, because they were built on high mountains and hills, Jerem.17.2. See Ezek. 20.29. Heathen idolaters worshipped their heathen gods in them, Num. 22.41. and 33. 52. But the Jewes most usually would worship the true God in these unlawful places, and by unlawful wayes, 2 Chron.33.17.

is it not Jerusalem?] Even there were high places built, 2 Kings 23.5,6,7,10,11.

V. 6. Therefore I will] Chap.3.12.

and as planting] As a place fit for such a use, or as an heap of stones, such as they use to gather out of the place where they mean to plant a vineyard.

pour down the stones] A gradual exaggeration of the foresaid judgment; even the stones themselves shall be carried away as with a torrent. See Mat.24.2.

into the valley] Samaria was builded on an hill, 1 Kings 16.24.

V.7. And all the graven] Such as they had in their high places. These shall be destroyed. The images themselves God doth not so much heed, as the idolatrous worship which they yeelld to them: and by them, which is the thing that God so much abhors.

the hires thereof] That is, all the riches and goods which she had gotten, and which she thought to have gotten, by her unlawful treaties and leagues with prophane Nations, and as it were for a reward given her for consenting to idolatry. See Hos.2.5,8,12. and 9.1.

for she gathered it] basely, and by their idolatry, as Whores gather riches for their hire shall return] A proverbial kind of speech; as much as to say, those goods shall go away as they came, that which hath been gotten in the brothel, shall be lost in the brothel: or the Assyrians, who shall make prey of them, shall also take them as a reward, and gift of their idols, and shall adorn their idols with them.

V. 8. I will wail] Isa. 21.3. and 22.4. Jer.4.19. The Prophets words, having a feeling of the publike calamities. And by his example to awaken them out of that sottish security, wherein they so much pleased themselves, and to stir up in them the like passionate wailings as they saw in him.

and howl] Thus deeply did he compassionate and bear his share in the burden of their miseries. And yet at this time sensleſſe were they themselves. The like compassion is expressed, even for Heathen Nations; as Esay 16.9,11. Jer.48.31,32. But likely there the Prophet threws more what they ought to do, then what he did himself.

stript and naked] Namely, in my shirt, or without my outward garment, which was a fashion used in times of extreme sorrow. See Esay 20.2. and 32.11. 1 Sam.19 24. Or stript at least-wise of my Prophets weed. See 2 Kings 1.8. Zech. 13.4. Matth. 3.4. The Keri of the Massorites notes here, that the text must be read, שׁרוֹל Shollol, not שׁלל Shilal, with Vau, and not with Iod.

the dragons] Job 30.29. Because their flute should be like that, Esay 13.21,22. and 34.13,14,15. Jer.51.37. See Jer.9.ver.10, 11. and Chap.10.22.

owls] Heb. Daughters of the owl, Psalm 102.6. Jer.50.39.

V. 9. her wound is incurable] Or, she is grievously sick of her wounds, so in the plurall number; Here, that is, Samaria's. Whereby is meant the whole Kingdome of the ten Tribes. See v. 6,7. They are bitter, desperate: This is the cause of such his howling.

it is come] The wound and plague.

unto Judah] The Assyrians after they have conquered and laid waſt the ten Tribes, shall also lay Judah waſt, even to Jerusalem, 2 King.18 13. Esay 8.8. Jer.10.22.

he is come] The enemy.

the gate of] That is, to Jerusalem the Kings residence, and where Judahs Sovereign Court of Justice was held, which the Scripture calleth oftentimes gate.

V.10. Declare ye it] 2 Sam.1.20. The meaning is, the peoples calamities shall be so horrible, that it were to be wished that their deadly enemies, such as those of Gath, and other Philistins were, might never hear no news of it, for fear left they should make triumphs for it, and should aggravate the measure of them by their insultings. He speaks their minds, who if it had been possible, would willingly have their calamities and shame hid from the knowledge of forreign enemies.

weep ye not] Forbear making any shew of miseries, for fear of giving your enemies occasion of laughter. He shews they should willingly rather choose to smother their miseries, and perish in silence and secret, if it were possible, then to have added to their miseries the insultations and scoffs of their bitter enemies, who greedily gaped for that occasion.

Aphrah] That is, dust.

vowl thy self in the dust] Thou Nation of Israel, in signe of extreme sorrow do thus, Jer. 6.26. The name of Aphrah is not found any where else, and yet seems to signifie some noted place: some think it likely that it was framed by the Prophet, to make some allusion to the sense of his Prophecie; as instead of Ephraim, that is to say, fruitfulnesse, he saith, house of Aphrah, that is to say, of ashes, to shew that this tribe, which was so mighty, should be ruined and brought to ashes; Thou dust and ashes, roll thy self in dust and ashes, mourn so, as ver.12. instead of Ramoth, which signifieth altitudes or Heights, he saith Maroth, that is to say, Bitternesse, by reason of the great and bitter mourning and lamentation, which should be made in it. Some take this to be that mentioned, Josh.18. 23. in the tribe of Benjamin, and for the meaning to be that they should mourn thus far from Gath, and the bounds of the Philistins, and from places of great concourse of persons, going and coming: out of which place, when the Assyrians should over-run the country, one should not be able to come out. The Cetib of the Massorites hath it, I rowled my self in the dust.

v.11. Passe ye away] into captivity, loaden with reproaches.

Thou, &c.] Or, thou that dwellest fairly.

inhabitant] Heb. Inhabitresse.

Saphir] Is signifies fair: this may allude to Samaria; that instead of her fairnesse, she shall be exposed to foul ignominy, and shameful nakednesse. Some take the names mentioned in this and the next verse, to be appellative words, noting out the fair and fruitful, fruitfull, and the rough and barren parts and places of the Kingdom of Judah. Others to be proper names of neighbouring places, through which the enemy must passe, when he came against Judah.

shame naked] Isaiah 47.3. Jer.13.22, the inhabitant] 2 Kings 18.13.

Zaanan] Or the countrey of flocks, a place of coming forth: full of flocks, and pasture for them. Symmachus translates it, the abounding habitation. This some make to allude to Sion, some to some other place that used much to come forth abroad: yet contrary to her custome, shall not dare now to come forth, seeing the mournful miseries and captivities of her neighbours.

Beth-ezel] Or a place near, or a house of separation, because say some, God shall forsake it, as an unclean place.

his standing] Hebr. his presenting, meaning his defending. For the Hebrews when they would say defend one, did say, present himself for one. See Exod. 32.26. Numb.14.14. Isaiah 21.8. Others, the enemy shall not depart before he hath overcome you: and so you shall pay for his tarrying. Others thus, That the neighbour places shall learn of you, by your example, to stand and stay at home, seeing the calamities of others, and not dare to go forth to comfort and assist them. Others thus, that those barren rugged places shall receive and maintain their standing and subsistence from the more fair and fertile places. Such various interpretations do these two obscure and difficult verses admit. The translation may be thus: The mourning of the house of Ezel shall receive from you her standing. The Vulgar Latine thus: Domus vicina accipiet à vobis, quæ stetit sibimet.

V.12. of Maroth] Or bitternesses, or sharp rough places. Of this see on the 10 verse.

waited carefully for good] Or, was grieved for good, sick for it; which they lost, and carefully expected in vain, but were cast out of their former good and happy estate, by those publike calamities. And thus the Targum. LXX have the word begun, for waited.

but evil came] The evil of calamity and affliction, from] He the author of it, whosoever was the instrument.

unto the gate of Jerusalem] Rabshakeh shut up Jerusalem it self. And therefore Maroth might well be frustrated of her expectation, and mourn for her losse.

V.13. Lachish] Lachish had a King, who with his City were conquered by Joshuah, chap.10.33,32. and allotted to the Tribe of Judah, Josh. 15.39. It was fortified by Rehoboam. King Amaziah fled thither from conspirators, and was there murdered, 2 Kings 14.19. Sennacherib besieged it, 2 Kings 18.14,17. Nebuchadnezzar fought against it, before he took Jerusalem.

binde the Chariot] To flee with all speed before it were too late; for there is no abiding for thee in the City, by reason of the enemy, the Assyrian, who comes to besiege thee, 2 Kings 18.14,17. and chap. 19.8.

to the swift beast] That is, Horses, or Dromedaries, or other beasts which could run very swiftly.

she is the beginning] Hence it appears that Lachish was first infected with the ten Tribes idolatry, and that from thence it passed even to Jerusalem, some apply this to her confederacy with Jerusalem, against Amaziah, 2 King. 14.19. And not unworthily, the that would not suffer her king slying to her for succour and safety, to escape, should now her self, though she flee never so swiftly, yet not escape. Thus God revengeth rebellion and conspiracies against Kings and the murdering of them thus severely and surely at last, though defers'd neer a hundred years.

in thee] The conversion of the speech to Lachish sheweth her to be very guilty; and to have opened the door to let in the idolatries of Israel unto Judah.

V.14. give presents] To buy the friendship and assistance of the City of the Philistins, and of other Cities of that Nation, against the Assyrians; yet all shall be in vain.

to Moresheth-Gath] To distinguish it from another Moresheth; that verse 1. or that Josh.15.44. In the tribe of Judah.

Achzib] That is, a lye, it appears by Josh.19.29. Judg.1.29. That this City was one of those, out of which the Cananites could not be driven; and it seems that upon this invasion of the Assyrians, the Israelites had made a league with those Nations, by whom they were deluded, either through weakneste, or perfidiousnesse; and Achzib among those Cities hath made choice of Achzib, by reason of the signification of the name, which is a lye. This lying Achzib shall prove a lye: Their hired Auxiliaries should fail their trust, or not be able to help them. No succour, or resistance against God, and his judgments. And these particular addresses and occurrences thus foretold make Gods hand to be seen more clearly in the businesse, when these things should come to be accomplished.

V.15. yet will I bring an heir] I will cause the Assyrians to come, who shall make themselves Lords of thee, and thy goods.

to Mareshah] A City of Judah, Joshua 15.44. And this also seemes to have been chosen out by reason of the nearnesse which is between the name of heir, and Mareshah. A possessour shall possesse Mareshah. See 1 Chronicles 8.13. And if this be the Prophets own City where he was born, we see he is no accepter of persons; he spares not them.

he shall come] Or, the glory of Israel shall come, &c.

Adullam] A City of Judah, Josh.15.35. 1 Sam. 22.1. 2 Sam. 23.13. 1 Chron.11.15. 2 Chron. 11.7. To the Cave where David fled. And this was a City of note after the return from the captivity, Nehem.11.30.

the glory of Israel] Some understand this of Jerusalem, some rather of Adullam, appositively the glory of Israel. And this, some by way of scorn, that poor Adullam should then be the glory of Israel, the glory of Israel should be brought to that low estate.

Ver.16. Make thee bald] That is, O thou Nation of the Jewes, make most bitter lamentation. See Job 1.20. Isai.3.24. and 15.2. and 22.12. Jer.7.29. and 48.37. and 41.5. Lev.19.27,28. and 21.5 Ezech.7.18.

thy delicate children] Which by abusing my long patience and indulgence, thou didst bring up so delicately and daintily, swimming in thy pleasures, and drowned in thy delights, not heeding thy sins, or my judgments.

as the Eagle] When she changeth her feathers, or groweth bald, for they are gone] Captives and Exiles, so as the land remains desolate and waste. He speaks of the future time in the present or preter tense, for certainty of the prophecie.

CHAP. II.

Verse 1. WO unto them] From their idolatry the Prophet now comes to charge them first with inhumanity, and cruel covetous oppression of their brethren; to which he adjoyns Gods fore judgments threatned for it. And secondly, he chargeth them with impiety against God, and his Prophets, in prescribing to them what, and how to preach and prophecie, intermixing withall the former accusation of their cruel oppressing their brethren, and returnes the second time to renew Gods threatnings and judgments against them for these sins. He is vehement in his Sermon, and severe, because he saw the nature of their sins, and their boldnesse in them so required.

unto them] He distinguisheth not here between Israel, and Judah, but seems to comprehend both.

that devise] Hos.7.6. Our devisings, thoughts, imaginations, must be good and just.

iniquity] Fraud, force, wrongs.

V.3. against this family] Of Israel, and Judah. For God here distinguisheth them not.

do I devise] As ye devise evilly, verse 1. so I sleep not, but am watchful, and devising my devices against your evil doings.

an evil] Not of sin, but of punishment.

from which] Though hypocrites do ever promise impunity to themselves, and think to escape one way or other, yet they but deceive themselves, and shall be deceived: Their necks that would not submit to the yoak of obedience, shall lye under the burden of punishment.

haughtily] As now ye do: the Scene shall be changed, your pride abased, even that pride wherein ye sleight and despise all the threatnings of the Prophets.

is evil] Or, will be evil, to break them that would not bow and bend themselves to obedience.

V.4. In that day] Of Gods judgments and visitation. See Isaiah 2.10. and 7.17. and 10.3. and 13.6,9. and 22.5. Jer.30.7. and 46.10. Ezek.7.10,12. Amos 5.18.

turning away] Or, instead of restoring.

V.5. Therefore thou shalt] By reason of the sins set down, ver.1,2. you shall be put out of all right and share in the Church and people of God; whereof the driving out of the holy land shall be a sign.

cast a cord by lot] Deut.32.8,9. Num.34.13. Psa.78.55. & 105.11. Now, not they for themselves should do it, but strangers and enemies should divide their land and portion for themselves for their asse and possession. See Amos 7.17.

in the Congregation of the Lord] He may likely thus stile them ironically, and so sting them with remorse, in that they had forfeited the favour of this title, and lost the true right and interest in it.

V.6. prophecy ye not] Or, prophecy not as they prophecy. Heb. Drop, &c. See concerning this manner of speaking which is very frequent amongst the Prophets, Ezek.21.2. Amos 2.12. 8.7. 12.13,16. Esay 30.10. Jer.11.21. & 5.31. The contemptuous confidence of the Prophets of vanity of interpretations. Most take them to be words of profane men, who would hinder the free exercise of the Prophets office, and of his fellow-Prophets.

to them that prophecie] Some take this, as to imply a command of God to the Prophets not to prophesie, notwithstanding they were silenced by those wicked men.

they shall not prophesie to them] Gods reply: that is to say, they shall preach in despite of you; and if it be not for you ye rebels, which wrong them, yet it shall be for the salvation of mine elect, as Esay 8.16. And they shall not prophecy to you as your false prophets do, that no shame shall over-take you; some render the words and meaning thus, as if the wicked people should say, prophecy ye (true Prophet) not at all, let those prophecy, (meaning their false prophets) The other prophecy not, as these of ours do, That namely no shame shall befal us, verse 11. 1 Kings 22.8,&c.

that they shall not take shame] See the Targum. Or, Non retrocedit ignominia. Some expound thus, as was said, that the false prophets prophecied, that the people should suffer no shame, no blame, or harm. Others thus, that God will not have his true Prophets prophecy any more unto this forlorn people, who thus inhibit them, lest they should take and suffer shame, by losing their labour, and being lyable to their scoffs and reproaches. A most heavy judgment.

V.7. O thou that art named] A lesh sin were this in others, but a prodigious sin in the chosen named, but art not in truth, as Apoc.3.1. and Chap.2.2.

the house of Jacob] But deservedly may rather be named an Hittite, Amorite, of Sodom and Gomorrah; of their father the devil. See Ezek.16.3. Esay 1.10. John 8.44.

is the spirit of the Lord straitned?] Or, shortned. Is not this an execrable boldnesse in you, to oppose your selves against my Prophets? and the power and authority of my Spirit, which from time to time hath set my Prophets on to preach my Word? is it now lessened or weakned, that it should yield to your desires? See Jer.6.11. and 10. 7.9. Mic.3.8.

are these his doings?] The cause of all these evils and threatnings, which are denounced against you by my Prophets, is in you, and not in me; and therefore you wrongfully complain of my Prophets, as if they were the authors of all the evil that befalleth you. Esay 28.21. Lam.3.33. Or, are these the doings of the house of Jacob? are they such as those you do? your doings then being such as they are, no marvel if the Prophets deal so roughly with you. Yet some make all these words to be the sayings of the rebellious Jews, and so expound them, as animating one another by them to contemn Gods Words and threatnings in the mouths of his Prophets.

do not my words do good?] Quarrel not, that not at my word; as ye do. The fault is not in my word, in my Prophets speaking it, but in you. You may thank your sins for all the burdensome and threatning words of my Prophets. If you will be good men, and believe, you shall hear nothing from my Prophets but promises and assurances of graces and blessings; if you be sinners, but corrigible and capable of repentance, you shall have by them healthful means of conversion.

V.8. even of late] Yesterday, which sometimes signifies with the Hebrews the time past, though it be a good while ago.

my people] By covenant and profession, though sometimes not my people, through their sins, as Hos.1.9. And so here some render the words & sense thus; that was heretofore my people, under my hand and government, but now estranged from me, and renounced by me.

is risen up as an enemy] Against me, that is, against God, say some, in rebellion and disobedience. Against one another, say others. And here they bring in their conspiracies against their Kings, and their murdering one of another in both Kingdoms, and the mutual clashings of the one Kingdome against the other, which immediately preceded these times.

as an enemy] One against another, subjects against their king, one kingdom against another. See 2 Kin.12.20 & ch.14.13,14,19. & 15.

ye pull off the robe] Whereas your fore-fathers shewed their valour in just wars, you use nothing but thefts and murders against one another, spoiling one another, and so spoiling your selves of the honour of being my people, notwithstanding all your outward ceremonies and services.

with the garment] Heb. Over against a garment. For which God so tenderly provides, Exod.22.26,27. Deut.24 13,17. See Job 22.6. Amos 2.8.

from them that passe by securely] In deep peace, suspecting no danger, yet ye make a prey of them, as if it were in time of war.

as men averse from war] So peaceable they, and little expecting such hostile violence. Others thus, ye turn spoilers, as souldiers use to take preys and spoils returning from war.

V.9. The women] Or, wives; namely, the poor women, out of those houses where they had lived all their time in pleasure and ease, with their husbands and children. They spared neither sex nor age, neither women nor children, which yet are usually spared in time of war it self. See 2 Chron. 28.8.

my glory] You bring them into such a state of misery and slavery, that the splendour and honour of being my children, and members of my people, appears in them no more.

for ever] Ye ever continue on to do this, without repenting ever. The LXX do much corrupt the sense of this verse.

V.10. Arise ye] Go & depart out of this land into captivity. The land will bear you no longer, but spue you out; God will suffer you no longer in it, but drive you out. See Lev.25.18. Deut.28.63,64. Hos.9.3.

for this is not your rest] Canaan was called the rest of Gods people, and of God himself, Jer.31.2. Psa.95 11 & 132.14. Heb.4.3. It was as it were a nest covered with Gods wings, and given to Gods people for an inheritance. They could not be perswaded by the Prophets that they should be driven out of it. But Micah tells them otherwise, that because they had broken the condition and covenant by which they held it, God would not suffer them to dwell upon it, Lev.18.18. 28. and 20.22. ye have thought to settle your selves in your countrey, in fair and magnificent houses, in rest, but I will shortly drive you out into captivity.

it shall destroy] The pollution of the countrey by publike and reigning sins shall be a cause that ye shall not live in rest nor security, but that you shall be driven out and dispersed, as Jer.9.19. and 10.18. Ezek.36.12.

V.11. If a man walking in the spirit and falshood] Or, walk with the winde and lie falsly. Namely, false prophets, who say they have divine inspirations, and daily with the people, promising them good, and plenty, are those which they accept of, and hearken unto. See Esay 30.10. They love and like those Prophets that will cry peace, and speak pleasing things, and sowe pillows under their cry peace, and speak pleasing things, and sowe pillows under their elbows: they would be fostered and bolstered up in their sins, else the Prophets are no Prophets for them.

V.12. I will surely assemble] An Evangelical promise, say some, of gathering together the universal Church under the kingdome of Christ, Jer.31.10. opposed to the precedent dispersion: others take this as a mocking of the sayings of the false prophets to the people, making them such promises as these. But the truth of all he plainly sets down in the next verse, setting forth Gods fearful judgments against them, as if they were present before their eyes. Assemble and gather them, as it were into one place. See that Joel 3.2,11,12,13.

all of them] The whole multitude and body of them.

the remnant] That shall remain and escape out of former calamities and destruction:

as the sheep of Bozrah] Bozrah, the Edomites chief City Esay 34.6. and 63.1. Amos 1.12. Jer.49.13,22. This City and Countrey adjacent abounded in sheep. There was another of that name in Moab, Jer.48.24. abounding also in sheep, and other cattel, and pasture for them in that tract, 2 Kings 3.4.

in the midst of their fold] So the Targum: I will fold and pin them in there for slaughter and destruction.

great noise] Their multitude of men and people shall not deliver them, though they glory so much in them.

V.13. The breaker is come up] Some thus, I will take away all hinderances, which may hinder the spiritual deliverance of the Church; beating down, and laying plain all manner of oppositions, Esay 57.14. and 62.10. Others rather understand this of the Assyrian and Chaldean, to destroy them.

they have broken up and have passed] The gates shall be broken up, that they may passe in troops, and go out in multitudes, to be led away into exile and captivity.

and their king] Namely, Jesus Christ, Hos.1.11. Others rather understand Hoshuah, and Zedekiah led into captivity, 2 Kings 17. and 25.4,8. And this was a great aggravation of their misery. For they pyled themselves in their King and Kingdome upon their understanding of Gods promises, that their Kingdome should never fail. See that, Lam.4.20. yet he should passe before them captive, 2 Kings 25.9.

and the Lord on the head of them] As leader of the enemies armies, and he to execute by them his judgment threatned in the former words.

CHAP. III.

Verse 1. AND I said] This is the beginning of a new discourse of the Prophet, say some. But rather it is a continuance and and proſecution of the former, againſt the Princes, and againſt the Prophets; more fully ſhewing both their ſins of covetouſneſſe chiefly, and alſo Gods judgments for them. He tells here, not all he ſaid and preached in the whole courſe of his Miniſtery, which was for many years, but he tells the chief heads, and ſhort ſums of what he moſt ſtood upon.

hear] This ſhews they were loth to hear, they were ſo ſetled upon the lees of their ſins, which puts him upon this incitation.

of the houſe of Iſrael] This very often is underſtood of all the Jews of both Kingdomes, ſo much uſed becauſe of the honour that is in the name (prevailing with God) and to argue and aggravate the more their degenerate ingratitude and apoſtacy.

is it not for you] Whom God hath thus honoured to be Princes and heads over his choſen people? what ingratitude then were it in you, and how vile a ſin, to abuſe this power to the undoing of them?

to know judgment] Ye that are the eyes of the people, muſt know to guide others. See Ezra 7.25. And judgment is that thing which is juſt and lawful, both to govern my people aright, and alſo to diſcharge your own conſciences. See Jer.5.4,5. Deut.17. v.18. But ſee their ſin, ver.9.

V.2. who hate the good] Their doings clean contrary to their duty, as if purpoſely they ſet themſelves to wage war againſt all equity and humanity, ſuch covetous cruel oppreſſors themſelves were, Gods own Church and people were brought to this ſad eſtate.

pluck off their skin] Their furious rapacity ſurmounted all bounds of humanity, as if they had been not men, but Wolves, Lions, or ſuch ravenous beaſts. See Zeph.3.3. Ezek.22.27.

V.3. eat the fleſh] Pſa.14.4. The Prophet condemneth the wicked Governours, not only of covetouſneſſe, theft, and murder, but compareth them to Wolves, Lions, and moſt cruel Beaſts and Butchers. He ſpares them not, much leſſe flatters them; but with this boldneſſe of ſpirit he thus deciphers, exaggerates, & chargeth their ſins upon them.

and as fleſh] Ezek.11.6,7.

V.4 then ſhall they cry] Though now by their greatneſſe they think themſelves priviledged above other men, both from laws and from puniſhments, or judgments; yet ſuch calamities ſhall come upon them, as ſhall force them to cry out, wring from them clamours and cries, Pſa.18.42. Prov.1.28. Jer.11.11. & 14.12. That is, when I ſhall viſit their wickedneſſe by Judgments ſet down in the former Chapters. For though I hear the godly before they cry, Iſaiah 65.24. yet I will not hear theſe though they cry, Iſai.1.15. Ezek.8.8. James 2.13. 1 Pet 3.11,12. For their prayers are as thoſe, Hoſ.7.14. rather murmurings, complaints, and blaſphemies againſt God, then Petitions qualified with faith, and repentance in the ſight of God.

He will even hide] They ſhall be without all remedy: God himſelf will be implacable to ſuch deſperate ſinners.

V.5. thus ſaith the Lord] He ſpeaks out of Gods mouth, to add the more authority and weight to his word.

concerning the Prophets] He comes from the Magiſtrates, to the Miniſters; from the Princes, to the Prophets. Theſe two ſhould have governed and regulated all, but being corrupt themſelves, ruined all, Iſaiah 56.10,11. Ezekiel 22.25.

my people] So verſe 3. If Heathen Magiſtrates and Miniſters had done it upon an Heathen people, the matter had been leſſe; but this aggravates the fault.

Erre] They were Impoſtors; and ſuch Impoſtors as the next words ſhew. See Eſay 9.16. Jer.14.14. and 23.21. and 27.15. and 29.8,9. and 50.6. Mat.24.11.

bite with their teeth] Chap.2.11. have that given them that may ſerve their belly, and ſatisfie their gluttony: their covetouſneſſe and gluttony cauſed their ſin.

cry peace] They devour all their ſubſtance, and then flatter them, promiſing that all ſhould go well; that God will bleſſe them, becauſe they are ſo bountiful to his Prophets. Thus they ſell their benedictions: See Jer.8.11. and 6.14. But if one reſtrain from their bellies, then they invent all ways to miſchief. Thus under a falſe ſhew of goodneſſe and mildneſſe, they are ravening Wolves, both to ſoul and body, and welfare, Mat.7.15. See Ezek. 13.18,19.

V.6. therefore] Ezek.13.23. Zech.13.4.

night] As you have loved to walk in darkneſſe, and to propheſie lies, ſo God ſhall reward you with groſſe blindneſſe and ignorance; ſo that when all others ſhall ſee the bright beams of Gods grace, ye ſhall, as blind men, grope as in the night. See Iſaiah 8.20,22. And ye ſhall be diſcovered what ye are, even nothing leſſe then what ye boaſt your ſelves to be, even utterly blinde, without any viſion, and dark, without any divination, not having any dram or drop of a Prophetical ſpirit in you: and ſo ye ſhall become deſpicable among the people, ſpoiled of that honourable title that ye pretend to, and made ſuch uſe of.

that ye ſhall not have a viſion] Heb. from a viſion.

that ye ſhall not divine] Heb. from divining.

the Sun] So great ſhall their excœcation and blindneſſe be, that at noon day they ſhall ſee nothing, be blinder then the common people, and be noted by the people ſo to be.

V.7. Then ſhall the ſeers] Namely, the Prophets though they be falſe ones, 1 Sam.9.9. He explicates the former ſentence. Aſhamed of themſelves, ſhameful in the eyes of the people, that they ſhall not dare to pretend to what formerly they did, Zech.13.4,5,6.

all cover their lips] Heb. upper-lip, in token of mourning and confuſion, Lev.13.45. Ezek.24.17,22. when God ſhal diſcover them to the world, they ſhall be afraid to ſpeak, for all ſhall know that they were but falſe prophets, and did belie the Word of God. This ſhall be their reward and puniſhment.

for there is no anſwer of God] Verſe 4. It ſhall not be, as Jer.5.31. The people here ſhall ſee their groſſe impoſtures, and how devoid they are of all prophetical light and illumination, their ſhame ſhall be ſo diſcovered.

Ver.8. but truly I am] What they falſly pretend to be.

full] The Prophet being aſſured of his vocation by the Spirit of God, ſetteth himſelf alone againſt all the wicked; ſhewing how God both gave his gifts, ability, and knowledge, to diſcern between good and evil, and alſo conſtancy to reprove the ſins of the people, and not to flatter them, as the falſe prophets did, ver.5. This courage becomes the true Prophets in ſuch a caſe. And thus Elias, 1 King.18 22,25. and Micajah, chap.22,8,13,28.

of power] God doth furniſh his Prophets with extraordinary gifts where neceſſity ſo requires.

by the Spirit of the Lord] He acknowledgeth the author, he brags nothing of himſelf. This gift diſtinguiſheth him from the other Prophets, which had a common calling and vocation with him. In bare outward titles we muſt not reſt, nor be blinded with them.

and of judgment, and of might] Two neceſſary endowments of a Miniſter, Jer.1.18.

to declare unto Jacob] Iſaiah 58.1. both their ſins, and Gods judgments. He doth not then flatter the people for favour, as the other Prophets did, and as the people deſired to have it ſo: but he comes to convict them of their flagitious offences before all the world, to arraign, judge, and condemn them, if they repent not.

ye heads] He preſently makes proof how full he was of power, by the Spirit of the Lord: He ſets upon the Heads and Princes, really ſhews he fears them not, yet gives them their due titles, and acknowledgeth their rights.

that abhor judgment] He tells them their ſins to their faces, and tells them to the full, he minceth them not. Though Princes be Gods, Pſal.82.6. yet Gods Word is not tyed, but tyeth Princes, Pſa.149.8.

V.10. They build up Zion with blood] He changeth the perſon, as ot vouchſafing to ſpeak to them any more, but of them, and their ſins before all the world. Thus the Spirit convinceth the world John 16.8. Ezek.22.27. Zeph.3.3.

with blood] Heb. bloods. They do fill Jeruſalem wherein my ſacred Temple and Ark are, my holy City, with ſtately pallaces, but built by murder, rapine, and extortion. See Jer.22.13. Hab.2.9.

V.11. the heads thereof] He is ſtill upon the great ones, though they of all others would leaſt endure ſuch rebukes. Other ranks of people were naught too; yet he is ever and anon at theſe, and that boldly and freely without fear, becauſe their ſins were moſt exemplary and infectious, and the cauſe and fountain of corruption in others, which they by their places ſhould have curbed and corrected.

judge for reward] Of this, and the miſchief of it, ſee Exod.23.8. Deut.16.19. & 27.25. Ezek.22.12. Prov.17.23. Eſay 5.23. Hoſ.4.18.

and the Prophets] Both State Political, and Eccleſiaſtical, all corrupt, and given up to covetouſneſſe and bribery, chap.7.3. Eſay 1.23. Amos 5.12. They were all mercenary, and hirelings for money and hire, and that is the root of all evil, 1 Tim.6.10.

yet they lean upon the Lord] Groſſe hypocrites that yet would fain thus flatter, ſooth up, and deceive themſelves, that durſt thus dally with the Lord, and were not aſhamed thus to mock him. The godly cannot in true faith too much lean upon the Lord, and upon his Word. But this leaning here, is not that true leaning of the heart, but a ſeeming to truſt and reſt in bare and vain outward titles, and external ceremonious rites, as if theſe would ſerve the turn, though themſelves were never ſo wicked. Thus Papiſts lean upon the name of the Church, and the bodily exerciſe of their Religion, be themſelves never ſo lewd and profane; and thus they ſleep and rock themſelves in their ſecurity.

Is not the Lord among us?] Though they commit ſuch cruel and execrable ſins, yet they will preſume that God is for them, and that he will defend them from all evil, as if he were tyed to them, and could not go away from them. See Eſay 48.2. Jer.7.4. Rom.2.17. Theſe be their words, full of haughty pride and confidence. They ſpeak as if no doubt or queſtion were to be made of it; they inſult as if none durſt gain-ſay it, that God could not forſake them, unleſſe he would deny himſelf: Temple and Ark was with them, his promiſes paſt to them; mean-while nothing regarding the condition on their part, upon which the Lord promiſed the continuance of his reſidence among them. This is the manner of wicked Hypocrites.

none evil] Thus the falſe prophets bare them in hand, at leaſt no ſuch evil as Micah threatned ſhould befall them.

V.12. Therefore ſhall Zion] That glorious and holy Mount, Pſal.132.13,14.

be ploughed as a field] See that, chap.1.6. Like that of the Poet, Jam ſeges eſt ubi Troja fuit: laid ſo waſte, and ſo levelled, that no foot-ſtep ſhould remain of what it had been, Jer.26.18.

and Jeruſalem] The City of the great King, the praiſe of the earth; that city which lay under the ſafeguard of the Temple.

and the mountain of the houſe] He is as it again, becauſe this was a thing to them incredible; that Gods Houſe and Temple, wherein they ſo much gloried and truſted, Jerem.7.4. This throne, wherein he ſate between the Cherubins; where the Ark of his preſence was; the glory of Iſrael, 1 Sam.4.21. And of the God of Iſrael, to which houſe he had made ſuch glorious promiſes; 2 Chron. 33.7,8. Ezech.8.3. that this ſhould become as a mountainous foreſt and wilderneſſe; was all one to them as to bring and jumble heaven and earth together; to reduce all to the firſt Chaos; to overthrow Gods own Throne and Chair of State. Thus fixed they were upon the Promiſes, without any heed taken to the conditions annexed. Let us take heed of the like errour, in eying the glorious promiſes of the Goſpel, without hearkning to the conditions therein expreſſed. This ſame threatning of Micah here, is mentioned and made uſe of in Jeremiahs time, and caſe, Jer.26.28. And expreſly noted to have been uttered by Micah, in the dayes of the reign of the good King Hezekiah: which might raiſe a wonder and aſtoniſhment, that ſuch crying crimes ſhould reign among the Princes, Prieſts, Prophets & people, in and under the government of that pious Prince, notwithſtanding all he could do by his power and place, and good example to the contrary. But withall we muſt remember, that he had a moſt wicked father Ahaz, as he had a moſt wicked ſon Manaſſeh. And therefore it is, that Hezekiah took well this ſeverity of Micah, and Micah did well thus ſtrangely to threaten, in the dayes of good King Hezekiah. The good King was willing and glad to be thus aſſiſted by the ſtout and bold Prophet; And he humbled and behaved himſelf upon this ſame threatning, as we read, Jer.26.19.

CHAP. IV.

Verſ.1. BUt] The conſolation of the remnant by the promiſes of the Goſpel. An holy remnant in all deſolations and devaſtations God ever preſerved; being mindful ſtill of his covenant. Now leſt they ſhould be quite diſ-heartned by that former fearful threatning, the Prophet applies himſelf & his ſpeech to them; the reſt ſlighted the threatning, and contemned God & his Prophet, and that under the pretence of a ceremonious piety & Levitical ſervice, as if their legal ſacrifices were a lawful price and redemption for other ſins. They therefore needed not, nor yet were capable of any ſuch conſolation. But the Godly tremble at Gods threatnings, & at any ſign of his wrath; and therefore the Prophet for their ſakes ſtraight adjoyns this wonderful conſolation to that dreadful denunciation. As it is uſual with the Prophets to add promiſes to threatnings. And here Micah comforts the faithful of that age with ſuch evangelical promiſes, as that yet the bleſſing and benefits of them redounds moſt to us; This calling of the Gentiles, and conſequently our ſalvation, being included herein.

laſt dayes] See Eſa.2.2,3,4. whence Micah is not aſhamed to take this, when Chriſt ſhall come, and put an end to the ſhadows & ceremonies; to the Temple, and that Levitical ſervice and Adminiſtration; and bring in a new world, and renovation of all things, by his redemption & reſtauration of his Church. See Joel 2.28. Acts 2.17. 1 Pet.1.20. Heb.1.v.2. 1 Cor.10.v.11. 2 Tim.3.1. 2 Cor.5.17. Heb.8.8,&c. and ch.9.15. Mat.26.28. Joh.13.34. And by this phraſe is often meant the whole time between Chriſts coming in the fleſh, and his other coming in glory; as Iſa.2.2. 1 Joh.2.18. And in the interim between Micahs time, & the time of Chriſts coming, the Prophet intimates a long continuance of time, for the courſe and current of Gods anger before this conſolation come.

Luke 2.14. before, and without the Goſpel, men are as ſavage beaſts; one man is a Wolf to another, one man would devour another. But the Goſpel tames this cruelty and ferocity, and is the Goſpel of love and peace; which who want have the ſound, but not the power of the Goſpel in them, John 13:35. And too many ſuch there are, whereupon that remains alſo for a truth in them upon whom the Goſpel hath not its operation, whereof we read, Mat.10.34,35,36. ſword againſt] Not condemning the uſe of weapons, as Anabaptiſts do: but ſhewing how the hearts of Gods people ſhall ſtand mutually affected, whoſe peace and love begun in this life ſhall be perfected in the next, Acts 4.32.

v.4. ſit every man under his vine] A figurative deſcription of the Churches ſpiritual peace and ſecurity under Chriſts kingdom, Jer.30.10. Zech.3.10. See on Eſay 2.4. & 11.6. and ch.35. 1 Kings 4.24.

and none ſhall make them afraid] For every true Goſpeller ſhal leave off to be injurious, ſhall become peaceable; there ſhall be no cauſe of danger, no need of fear. That Lev.26.6. ſhall now more fully take place.

for the mouth] All this ſhall certainly come to paſſe, ſeeing God hath ſolemnly promiſed it; how incredible ſoever it may ſeem to be to carnal reaſon, and contrary to that, Chap.3.12.

v.5. For all people will walk] It is an uſual, and almoſt a natural thing for men to hold the ſame religion as their fore-fathers did: but under the Meſſias it ſhall be an eſpecial gift of Gods grace in all true believers, that being enlightned in the true faith, and knowledge of the true God, they ſhall never depart frō it. See Pſ 20.7. yea, though all the people of the world be divided into ſeveral Sects; and every one addicted to their ſeveral ſuperſtitions; though theſe diſtractions and other troubles might ſeek to weaken or overthrow the conſtancy of our faith, in adhering to God and his worſhip; yet we will not be overborn with theſe, or any ſuch difficulties or obſtructions whatever.

we will walk] We will live and perſevere in the faith, invocation and ſervice of the God which ſhall be revealed unto us, as it were in his own Name. See Luke 10.12. Zech.10.12. Or more largely thus: Though mean while before the coming of Chriſt, we ſhall ſee all kinde of confuſion and miſery upon our ſelves; though the Gentiles ſhall glory in their ſeveral ways of worſhip, and boaſt of the truth of them, and celebrate their gods, and triumph and inſult over us, counting us a loſt people; though univerſality & multitude make againſt us, though every ſect oppoſe their ſuperſtitions to us, and all together conſpire in one againſt us: yet we will not deſpond in our ſelves, nor heed them or their ways, we will not for all that be as a reed ſhaken with the wind: but truſting to the truth & power of God alone, and reſting upon the verity of his Word & promiſe, knowing God in his time will appear: This ſhall ſuffice us and ſtrengthen us with invincible magnanimity, to over-look and overcome all difficulties and oppoſitions, and render us firm and inflexible, conſtant in our purpoſe without any ſhrinking to continue in the unity of faith, and in the true ſervice & pure worſhip of the true Jehovah our God.

for ever and ever] This includes the time of the Goſpel. And that notwithſtanding all oppoſitions and obſtructions, yet they will perſevere in this worthy and magnanimous reſolution for evermore. The true Jehovah and his truth is their ſufficient ground for it.

v.6. In that day] Namely, in the Meſſias his time, I will gather into the ſheepfold of my Church, my poor diſperſed, afflicted & weak believers. He inſiſts ſtill upon that glorious promiſe of the reſtauration of all, both Churches, and Kingdomes by the Meſſias, becauſe this must support the hearts of the faithful, who otherwise with-this, in the midst of so many and mighty tentations, must needs have been swallowed up in many gusts of deep despair.

her that halteth] Ezek.34.16. Esay 35.6.

gather] According to the promises, Deut.30.3,4.

that is driven out] Into captivity and exile; as hereafter she should be. These her miseries without this promise might have caused her an hundred times over to despair. Therefore the Lord by his Prophet is so careful be rimes to meet with these tentations, by multiplying his promises in so many words,

I have afflicted] I can as easily gather her, as I have afflicted her. Both these are in my hand, and my doings.

v.7. And I will make her] Re-duplications of his foresaid promises, Zeph.3.19. my promises, word & grace shall be preserved in the reliques of those poor dispersed Israelites; who shall be as it were the seed of my Church; and the hope of re-establishment, which I will accomplish in its due time, with great increase. Gods power & pleasure can raise his Church out of the grave. And thus the state of the Church may be sometimes as dry bones, Ezek.37. And not always so conspicuous, and glorious in the eyes of the world. Hernew life often appears, as it were out of many resurrections from the dead.

a strong nation] That weak remnant that should be left, after all their dispersions and destructions; that lame God that could of stones raise up children to Abraham, would raise up to be a strong Nation. See Zach.8.6. Matth.19.26.

and the Lord] Christ, the eternal Head of his Church, who was shadowed out in that typical kingdom of David.

shall reign] Dan.7.14. Luke 1.33. not so obscurely as he did formerly under the type and shadow of the reign of David, and his posterity. But now more openly, in the person & spiritual kingdom of his Son Jesus Christ, the Son of David, God manifested in the flesh.

in mount Zion] Thence the Law went forth, verse 2. not the Law of Mount Sinai, but of mount Zion, Heb.12.22. and 13.2. The glad tidings and Gospel of peace, which there began and thence went forth, and filled the world; by which the Lord reigneth, and shall reign for ever.

v.8. O tower of the flock] It may seem to be the same place which is spoken of, Gen.35.21. and was afterward the tower of the sheepgate of Jerusalem, Neh.3.1,32. and chap.12.39. So called, because the sheep passed thorow it to the place of the sheep-market, which was neer this gate; and Bethesda neer to it, Joh.5.2. By this south gate the passage lay open to the Kings Palace, to the Temple, to the fortresse of Zion, and to both Jerusalems. This may well serve as a figure of the Church, into which Gods sheep from all parts of the world are gathered up in safety.

the strong hold] It seems to be the place called Ophel; that is to say, strong hold, 2 Chron.27.3. Nehem.3.26. to signifie the inviolable security of the faithful, gathered together into the Church. Here the vulgar Latine seems to read אדר for עדר cloudy for strong hold.

unto thee] And therefore fear not, but be full of hope.

even the first dominion] The kingdom as it first flourished under David and Salomon, though it may seem quite overthrown, and those promises, 2 Sam.7.12,13.16,29. Psal.72. utterly frustrated; yet shall be raised up again in thee, by the spiritual and everlasting kingdom of Christ.

v.9. why dost thou cry?] Why dost thou so afflict and torment thy self? O Church be comforted: thy King and kingdome is not quite perished, though it shall seem to be so, by the Babylonish captivity, and many other miserable calamities; for Christ thy true everlasting king shall appear in his time, and shall re-establish his kingdom in thee.

no king?] No King nor counsellour? See Lam.4.20. Esay 3.3. as Job 12.17.

for pangs] For want of king and counsellour.

as a woman in travel] This similitude is often used, to note out extremity of pain and anguish, Psalm 48.6. Esay 13.8. Jer.4.31. and 30.6. and in sundry other places.

v.10. Be in pain] Indeed for the present thou hast reason to be perplexed; and I hinder thee not from so doing; but take comfort in my promises, and bear it patiently, as John 16.21. See chap.5.3.

in the field] Wandering, and dispersed out of the country, prepare thy self to undergo these woful calamities.

there shalt thou be delivered] And repeats the word there emphatically, to prop up their faith and hope; that even their greatest extremities God would use as his fittest opportunities for their deliverance; even there in Babylon, there it self to deliver them.

v.11. Now also] The enemies of the Church, many and mighty, gather against it, Psal.2.1,2.

that say] Insult over her proudly, as being masters of their wishes, Ezek.25.3. and 26.2. and 36.2. As those against David, Psal.35.25. and 40.15. and 70.3.

Let her be defiled] Polluted with blood, and slaughtered. See Num.35.33. Psal.106.38. and 137.7. Sacked without any respect to her ancient holinesse; all her ornaments taken away from her.

our eyes look] Obad.12. The like, Psal.35.21.

v.12. But they know not] They judge but as blinde men do of colours, as Esay 59.9. They insolently brag and scoff and domineer, as if all were in the power of their own hands. But they are only drunken with their own foolish confidence; they reach not Gods mind. Gods people must not measure his mind & by their bragging blasphemies, but lift up their thoughts to him, whose counsel shall stand, who wisely ordereth the insolencies and insultations of the enemies, to his Churches good, and their own ruine.

his counsel] This is his thought, namely, to cleanse and chastise his Church by their means; and afterwards to bruise and thresh the enemies out, like corn in the floor. See Isa.10.7. and 21.10. and 45.4,5. Jer.51.33. And this is clean contrary to their minde.

v.13. Arise] From thy low and dejected estate; wherein thou didst seem to lie as a dead man in the grave. The power of Gods Word can thus raise the Church.

and thresh] They gathered themselves to thresh thee. But thou in the end shalt thresh them; and shall by me be fitted and enabled to this end and purpose; do thou consume and destroy thine enemies. He attributes to the Church that which Christ her Head doth for her; and sometimes also by her means. See Esay 41.15, 16. Judg.8.7. 2 Kings 13.7. Amos 1.3. Dan.3.34, &c.

horn iron] To push them down. See 1 Kings 22.11. Ezech.34.21. Amos 6.13. Dan.8.4. Zeph.1.19,21.

thy hoofs brasse] Alluding to the manner of treading out the corn with oxen, 1 Cor.9.9. As the manner is in some countreys at this day See Psal.44.5. Deut.25.4. See 1 Kings 22.11. Psal.44.5. Zech.1.21.

and I will consecrate their gain] Some make this relate to God; some to the Church that she shall consecrate. The words may seem to allude to the interdicts or devotings, whereby certain Nations were accursed, and all the people condemned to be rooted out, and their goods absolutely to be consecrated to God, Levit.27.28. Josh.6.17,19. God will subject to his Church Heathen Nations; to this end, that he may be glorified: And this end in those cases his Church must mainly look unto, and care for. This hath reference to all the time of Christs kingdom on earth, and hath its final accomplishment at the end of the world.

unto the Lord] Both the subdues and the subdued must both be subject to the Lord; themselves and their substance, consecrated to him, and his service. See Esay 18.7. and chap.19 18,19,23,24,25. Esay 23.18. and 60.6,7. Psal.68.31. Zeph.3.10. Mal.1.11. Zach. 14.16.

CHAP. V.

Verse 1. NOw] We have in this Chapter Christs Birth, Kingdom and Conquest.

gather thy self in troops] Some thus; O Jerusalem, which hast hitherto been filled with rapines, like unto those which are committed by robbers on the high-way; gather all thy forces together to resist the Chaldeans, if thou canst. Others rather understand it as a taunt used by the Church against her enemies, thus; O daughter of Troops, ye numerous Assyrians and Babylonians, gather your selves in troops, lay siege against us, basely abuse our Judges, Rulers, and Kings, yet know that out of Beth-lechem, Ephratah, &c. And thus the Church trusting in Gods former promise triumpheth over all the injuries the enemies could do unto her; and that specially by reason of that glorious promise in the next verse.

smite] Insult with all opprobrious base usage. See 1 Kings 22.24. Job 16.10. Lam.3.30. Matth.5.39. A proverbial kinde of speech this is; as that Psal.2.12.

Judge] The city being taken, the King and all the great ones shall be shamefully used by the enemies, 2 Kings 25.6,7,19,20,21.

v.2. But thou Beth-lechem] Here is their ground of their patience, the rise of their comfort and exultation, and insultation. The birth of the Messias, and the place where, expressed and prophesied of. See Matt.2.6. Joh.7.42.

Ephratah] Gen.35.16,19. Judg.17.7. To distinguish it from Beth-lechem, in the tribe of Zebulun, Josh.19.15. This, it may be, was so called from Ephrath, *Caleb*s wife, 1 Chron.2.19.

thou be little] Or, art thou little to be, &c. Though at this time thou be the least and weakest city amongst the Tribes of Judah, yet shalt thou be exalted by Christs comming in the flesh. And S. Matthew hath the same words to the same sense, with a negation. Thou art not the least, &c. Matt.2.6. After the said prophecie was fulfilled, the place was made famous by Christs birth. Some would read these words with an Interrogation, and so make the sense negative, to agree with that Matt.2.6. Others make S. Matthew onely to relate the words of the Priests and Scribes to Herod; and that they so varied the Text before him; and that not much amisse, as to the purpose in hand, eying the present state and turn of times.

among the thousands] The Tribes of Israel were divided into thousands, where of every one had a head or Prince, Judg.6.15. 1 Sam.10.19. 1 Chron.12.20. Zach.9.7. Whereupon S. Matthew, instead of thousands, saith, Head or Governour.

yet out of thee] Here God speaks. He comforteth the Church, which was deprived of her earthly King, by the promise of Christs coming, the heavenly and everlasting King, Isai.9.6. Both David, and Christ, the Son of David, was born there. And as out of that poor town God raised David, the youngest of his brethren, and contemptible among them, yet to be the famous King of his people, and founder of their felicity, and flourishing estate; so God would not so far cast off his people, or bring them to so low an estate, as that they should utterly despair, but he would still keep a care of them, and in their mean condition, out of poor Beth-lechem, he would likewise raise the true David, their Messias, Jer.30.9. Ezek.34. 23,24. and 37.24,25. Hos.3.5. Amos 9.11. And this should be their greatest consolation in their deepest distresse.

to be Ruler] Chap.4.7. Isaiah 32.1. Jer.23.5,6. Luke 1.33.

whose going forth] He sheweth that the coming of Christ, and all his ways, were appointed of God from all eternity. Or, he was from everlasting, come forth from the father by generation, and by an eternal decree, was by him appointed to be a Mediatour. See Col.1.15.

everlasting] Hebr. the dayes of eternity.

v.3. Therefore] Namely, to fulfill the prophecies aforesaid, of their ruine and restauration.

will he give them up] God shall suffer his people to be subject to foreign Princes and Lords, their enemies, to extreme miseries and calamities, that no face of Power, State, or Majesty shall appear. And this they must patiently bear before they can look for relief.

until the time] Then when they think themselves forgotten and forsaken of God and lost, then will he save them.

that she which travelleth] This some would make to relate to the blessed Virgin Mary, and her birth, or fruit. But it seems rather to reflect on that Chap.4.10. that the body of the people of the Jews should be in that travelling pain and anguish, and upon it, should not be as in Isaiah 26.17,18. but as that woman, John 16.21. An happy and joyful issue should follow upon it.

them the Remnant] Of the Jewes that shall remain and escape out of those afflictions; and the Gentiles converted by faith to Christ, and thereby made brothers to the true Israel in Spirit, shall be united with them in one body of the Church, under Christ their Head, Heb.2.11,12.

V.4. And he shall stand] Christ shall do the office of a good Shepherd, standing still on foot, continuing and persevering to rule, and feed, and watch for the safeguard of his, employing for their safety the divine power of his Father, whereby the Church shall rest secure, having the King of the whole world for her Protector.

in the strength of the Lord] What strength is in God, so much safety is to the Church by Christ. God anoints him and furnisheth him, as Isaiah 60.1. and chap.11.2. and 42.1. Psalm 45.7. John 3. Col.2.3,9. And Christ as Mediatour, and as the Head of the Church in his humane nature, is thus subject, and inferiour to God the Father, and receives from him: And so hath an omni-potent power to save his.

abide] And dwell constantly, and securely, under safe protection, like sheep in the Fold; so is further set out in the next verse. Targum hath it, they shall return out of their captivity. And so Jarchi in his Commentaries; Vulgar Latine, they shall be converted.

for now shall he be great] Namely, at the prefixed and appointed time, or within a short space.

ends of the earth] Not in Judea only, but among the Gentiles, unto the ends of all the earth.

V.5. And this man shall be the peace] Or, he shall be our Peace, first with God; the fountain and foundation of all true Peace, Eph. 2.14,15,17. Hebr.7.2. Isaiah 9.6. and 26.3. And then against all our enemies, he will be our peace, and defend us, that we shall not need to fear their rage and fury, being safe and secure under the shadow and shelter of his wings.

when the Assyrian] The Assyrian shall come, and the Babylonian, and other enemies, and tread in their Palaces. God will suffer it, his people need it for their castigation and humiliation. And this both before Christs coming, and after, chap.4.9. They must prepare their minds to patience.

then shall we raise against him] The sum is, Christ shall be the foundation, author, and preserver of the true spiritual rest of the Church; and if it be assaulted by the enemies, it shall from him have sufficient means to withstand them. As if they had raised seven Armies, under the command of seven Captains, against the Assyrians, who were the Seven ancient enemies.

seven shepherds] Having likened the Church to a flock of sheep, he calleth the Defenders of it, and all the Ministers of her preservation, shepherds, as servants to the great Shepherd, who in respect of Christ are also sheep, and members of the Church. In the calamitous condition of the Church none shall be found willing, and able to rule and govern, Isaiah 3.6,7. now Christ shall raise them up to such an estate, and furnish them with store of such men, and so qualified by him with the Spirit of wisdome and courage, as they shall be able to raise many such as will take upon them the care and charge, and governing, and defending them, even against their greatest enemies, yea, to over-rule and over-top the enemies by the power and authority of Christ.

principal men] Hebr. Princes of men.

V.6. And they shall waste] Hebr. eat up. These whom God shall raise up for the deliverance of his Church, shall destroy all the enemies thereof, as the Assyrians, and Babylonians, which were the chief enemies that time. See Isaiah 10.12. and chap 30.31,32,33. and 31.8,9. Principally they shall eat up, and destroy Satan, and the worlds Kingdome, by the sword of Gods Word, in the dayes of the Gospel.

Land of Nimrod] See Gen.10.10,11. Babylon.

in the entrances thereof] Or, with her own naked swords.

deliver us from the Assyrian] They must prepare to suffer in the mean time, and under-go all with patience: but yet with an expectation of certain deliverance, in its due time, appointed by God thereunto.

V.7. And the remnant of Jacob] Not the whole body of the people, but the holy seed and small remnant, which God shall miraculously preserve in those calamitous times.

in the midst of many people] Though the remnant be few, and on all sides encompassed with these multitudes, and invironed and endangered by them.

as a dew] By reason of its multitude, growen up as it were in an instant, and miraculously fallen from heaven, shall be like dew or rain, Psalm 110.3. Or, this remnant or Church, which God shall deliver, shall only depend on Gods power and defence, as doth the grasse of the field, and not on the hope of man. See 2 Cor.2. 15, where that effect which the word worketh, is ascribed to the Ministers of the Gospel.

that tarrieth not for man] Which doth not grow in gardens, nor tilled lands, watered by mens hands, but in deserts, mountaines, and wilde places, that hath no other water but what falleth from heaven, Job 38.26,37. Psalm 104.13. So the Church shall sprout and prosper, be sustained, and be safe, by Gods grace and power alone, though men yield no assistance at all.

as a lion among the beasts] The faithful shall be endowed with an invincible force of the Spirit of God, to overcome, and overthrow the devil, the world, and all their enemies, 2 Cor.10.4, 5,6. 1 John 5.4,5. This power they shall have, thus do, without resistance, but they shall not abuse their power. The similitude is not to be extended beyond its due bounds, God thus shall multiply and increase his Church, and defend it against all its enemies.

V.8. as a lion among the beasts] The faithful shall be endowed with an invincible force of the Spirit of God, to overcome, and overthrow the devil, the world, and all their enemies, 2 Cor.10.4, 5,6. 1 John 5.4,5. This power they shall have, thus do, without resistance, but they shall not abuse their power. The similitude is not to be extended beyond its due bounds, God thus shall multiply and increase his Church, and defend it against all its enemies.

V.9. Thy hand shall be lift up] A further explication of what was in the former verse. Enemies will never be winning; the Church must expect no other. But God will give succour and strength from heaven, that the gates of hell shall never prevail against her, that the utterly perish. The Remnant shall keep footing still under the Standard of the Crosse, beyond the hope and expectation of all the world, and prevail over their enemies.

V.10. I will cut off thy horses] I will take away all worldly strength and helps from my Church, which might otherwise prove hinderances and lets to my saving grace, and obstacles to my helping hand: And I will cause her to renounce all damnable and unlawful means to maintain her self, as forceries, and recourse to idols, and to idolatrous people, which the people had formerly made use of, because the may put all her trust and confidence, not foolishly and wickedly in them, but wholly in me, and that the may attain the victory over all her enemies, onely by the power of my Spirit. See Hos.1.7. Zach.4.6. and Chap.9. verse 10. Mans abuse of Gods good blessings is so deeply rooted in him, that he cannot be taken off it, but by taking away the blessings themselves which he so abuseth. So ingrateful are we for his blessings, and so good is God, to feed. So ingrateful are we for his blessings, and so good is God, to cast them away for our good, that he may make way for himself to bless us.

V.11. I will cut off the Cities of thy land] Namely, the walled & strong Cities, to bring them to live in villages and open places. See Ezek.38.11. The Cities wherein they so accustomed themselves to put their trust, and not in God. God therefore will take them away, that his sole hand of protection and preservation of them may the more evidently appear, when all outward means are gone. Thus his people are as Sheep in the midst of Wolves, that their safety and salvation may the more illustriously appear, as was said, to be only in the hand of God.

V.12. Witchcrafts] These were more then the other, not indifferent, or good in themselves, but vicious and abominable, forbidden in Gods Law, Levit. 20.27. Deut.18.10,11,12. yet practiced by the people, Esay 2.6. 2 Kings 17.17. Here is Gods mercy to remove their sins from them, and them from their sins, that hindered him from stretching out his hand of salvation unto them. Thus God prevents his Church with his saving mercy.

V.13. Thy graven images] Forbidden in the Law, Exod.20. Deut. 4.15, &c. and Chap.27.13. Esay 40.19. and 42.8.

worship the work of thine hands] This makes them abominable to God, when his worship is transferred to them. And this is prodigious in man to do worship to the work of his own hand, Esay 44. 9,15,17,18,19,20. Jer.10.14,15.

V.14. thy groves] Deut.16.21. 1 Kings 14.15,23. and 15.13. and Chap.18. verse 19. 2 Kings 17.10. and 21.7.

then will I execute the severity of my most terrible Judgments upon thine enemies, the Heathen folk.

they have not heard] It shall be so terrible, that the like hath not been heard of. Others say, he will plague itself, as have not believed and obeyed the Gospel, 2 Cor. 10.6. but have rebelled against him, and not hearkened to his words, to his power, promises and threatnings.

CHAP. VI.

Verse 1. HEar, &c.] This seems to be the second Sermon, wherein God by his Prophet convinceth the Jewes of his benefits to them, and of their sins against him; And threatens the rebellious. And for the small Remnant, he puts them in mind of their duty, and of his promises: In the comfort whereof they praise his mercies. Such a Preface as this here in the first words, is not so ordinary, but in extraordinary cases, as here when he shews the prodigious stupidity of the people, that he spake hitherto without any profit to them that were as deaf men, and desperate, forlorn, of whom there was no more hope.

Arise] O Micah, debate thou Gods cause against this rebellious and ungrateful people, as it were in judgment, calling all the creatures to be judges, seeing their consciences are more insensible then these creatures. See Deut. 32.1. Esay 1.2. Micah 1.2.

with his people] Not with the mountaines and hills, they are called on only as to be witnesses and judges in this his controversie with his people.

V. 3. O my people] This courteous appellation God voutchsafeth to this stubborn unworthy people. And this adds to their blame.

Testifie against me] I am ready to hear and answer, that so we may come to an issue, Isaiah 27.5. Job 22. 21. Thus God humbles himself, and deals with them, as one man with another, in the faireſt way.

V. 4. I brought thee up] I have not hurt thee, but bestowed infinite benefits upon thee. And a Narrative of them follows, from point to point. He did not begin only, but went on, and continued to heap his blessings and benefits upon them.

of Egypt] This Exod. 12. 51. and 14. 30. was a grand benefit; many a time and often mentioned in Scripture, as Deut. 4.20. Josh. 24.6. Judges 2.1. and in the Law, Psalms, and Prophets.

V. 5. remember now] God remembers to them some of his benefits done for them in the wilderneſſe. We are too apt to forget his benefits. See Deut. 7 18. & 8.2. & 16.12. Judg. 8.34. 1 Chron. 16 12.

Balak] Numbers 23.5. and 23.7. Deut. 23.4. 4.5. This benefit is specially named among many others in the wilderneſſe, And so Josh. 24.9, 10. mentioned Deut. 23.4,5. Apoc. 2.14.

counselled] A subtil and pernicious counsel was that of Balak, to have them cursed as it were in Gods Name, and from Heaven, by the mouth of a Prophet, indued with the Spirit of Divination extraordinarily, though a wicked man, and none of Gods people: See Numb. 22. 23, 24 chapters. This was more dangerous then to bring out all his Armies against them; thus to seek to make God their enemy, and set him against them.

and what Balaam] God restrained him, and made him bleſſe them against his will. For he had sold himself for hire to the wicked King, Numb. 22.12,33. and 23.11,25. & 24.1, 10. Of his pernicious counsel we read, chap. 25. compared with ch. 31.16. See 2 Pet. 2.15.

Yet I did endure thee, and brought thee into the land of Canaan, where I renewed my Covenant with thee in Gilgal, by circumcision. Of Shittim, see Num. 33. 49. Josh. 2.1. & 3.1. whether here grew that Shittim-wood, so much mentioned by Moses in the book of Exodus, is uncertain.

the righteousness] His faithfulneſſe in keeping his covenant and promises; Or his infinite mercies, and fidelity in performing them. And so that there neither was, nor is any unrighteousneſſe in the Lord, but that all the fault is in themselves.

V. 6. wherewith shall I come] Seeing then ye can finde no fault in God, nor any excuse for your selves, and the end of all is to bring you to repentance; what then remains but that ye enquire after it, and go about it? The Prophet bringeth in the people, desiring to know the true means to appease God, and to be reconciled to him. But they pretend to more then they do truly intend.

with burnt offerings] They were convicted in their consciences, that reconciliation with God was to be sought after, yet they would not take the straight way to him by faith and repentance, in sincerity and integrity of heart, but go about the bush, and seek to please him with shadows and ceremonies, oblations and sacrifices, keeping still their hearts close to their sins, and aloof off from him. Thus Hypocrites always would fain delude God and themselves, with these external shews and toyes.

thousand of rams] Thus bountiful they will be, and profuse; not spare for any cost, and expence, toil and travell, they will super-abound in these outward services, so they may keep their hearts inwardly to themselves, and their sins, and not yeeld them up to God, and his obedience, intirely and sincerely, which yet is the only thing that God regards and requires. But hypocrites still will part stakes with God in manner aforesaid, Isaiah 1.11. &c. See this abundantly among the Pspalms.

My first-born] Idolaters did so, both among the Heathen, and among Gods people, Levit. 20.2. 2 Kings 16.3. Psal. 106.38. Thus they will seem even to burn with zeal. Nothing shall be so near, and dear, and precious to them, that they will not part with to please, and pacifie God. Thus they will sacrifice to their own inventions, and good intentions, though in a way abominable to God. Mean-while at no hand will they sacrifice their hearts to God, psal. 51.16,17. which is the thing God looks for, Deut. 6.5. and ch. 10.12. and 26.16. Josh. 22.5. and throughout both the Old and New Testament, sacrifices in the Old Law were commanded, but to be exercises of their faith and repentance, that by them they might look up to that only sacrifice of the Messias, and offer up themselves spiritual sacrifices to the Lord. See Rom. 12.1.

V. 8. He hath shewed thee] Deut. 10.12. & 30.15. It is but childish to pretend ignorance, nay, an impudent lying against God, to make that an excuse and colour. For the doctrine of his word, the rule of his Law is plain, as that Hab. 2.2. unleſſe wilfully thou wilt shut thine eyes against it. He hath abundantly provided for thy direction and satisfaction therein, Psal. 119, 105. and 19.9. Prov. 6.23.

but to do justly] The Prophet in few words calleth them to the observation of the second Table, in the first place, to know if they will obey God aright, or no, saying, that God hath prescribed them to do this. See on Isaiah 1.17. This will be a visible trial of the truth of their obedience. This pulls them out of their corners of ceremonious sanctities, wherein hypocrites do hide and shelter themselves.

walk humbly] Hebr. humble thy self to walk. This relates to the duties of the first Table, which indeed are chief and principal, containing the spiritual worship of God, and the inward service of the heart, wherein humility of soul towards God beareth a chief part: But these inward affections being seen only to God, makes hypocrites the more bold to pretend so much thereunto before men, especially when they will be so curious and sedulous, in, and about the external Ceremonial Rites, and bodily exercises thereunto belonging.

V. 9. The Lords voice] The voice of the Prophets prevailed not, gained no audience: he therefore puts it here upon the Lord himself, cryeth] not softely to a few, but aloud, to be heard of all that want not ears to hear it.

unto the city] Jerusalem as the principal place and head of the reſt. Some so derive the word, as to bring it to this signification, To rouze up, or awake, namely, out of the sleep of sin and security: The Lord seeing what his people had deserved by their sins, doth admonish them by his Prophets, that they and the City particularly should take heed of his Judgments, which did hang over them, and by his predictions doth warn and instruct them, not to hold them to be meer casualties, but things proceeding from his providence and justice, that they might prevent them by repentance.

the man of wisdome] as Hos. 14.9. arguing so, the most to want this wisdome, and to be men of folly, in not hearing the Lords voice, however otherwise they gloried in their own wit and understanding.

shall see thy name] Shall see and consider, and ponder thy Name, and Majesty in it, that the voice comes from thee, not from man, and that they have to deal immediately with thee in it. Others translate the sentence thus; Thy Name shall see that which is, that is, Thy renowned Majesty, O God, sees every thing that is in

in the City, as the truth is: Thou thy self, as thou hast manifested thy self to thy Church by thy proper Name, doest judge rightly of the sins of the people, and of the punishments which they deserve therefore.

hear the rod] Wherewith ye are to be scourged for your sins, and the causers of it: The rod of revenge for your contempt of the Lords voice, and your other sins which follow.

and who hath appointed it] Your selves by your sins are the causers of it. The Prophets are but mortal men, and they are but the instruments and reporters of it; but God is he who is the appointer of it, and ordains it for the revenge of the quarrel of his Covenant.

V. 10. Are there yet] Or, is there yet unto every man an house of the wicked, &c. Here are the causes of the rod: I shall try it out, and finde it to be so; and then a wonder it is it should be so, after so many means and monitions against it.

Thy casting down] That is, Thou shalt perish like a building that sinketh, and is ruined by its own weight, having an evil foundation, or being built with bad materials, though no enemies come neer thee, no outward evils molest thee, nor any signs of my wrath appear, yet thy casting down shall be in the midst of thee, shall stick in thy intrails, thou shalt perish with the intestine and secret stroke of my curse.

And to excuse your doings, you alledge the Kings authority by his Statutes, and to pretend both power and prudence, and counsel in the making of them. Thus he returns to the causes of the strokes of this rod, lest his blows might seem too heavy. And he doth instance and insist upon their grand sin of idolatry, that grosse idolatry brought in by Omri and Ahab, as was said. And Judah at last fell to Israels idolatry.

CHAP. VII.

Verse 1. WO is me] In this Chapter the Prophet bemoans the universal corruption and wickedneſſe of the people, and yet concludes all with the consolation of the Church by promises of a great and glorious restauration and salvation, after the time of her afflictions. In these words is the Prophets lamentation, not for the punishments, but for the sins of the people, because godly men were decayed in the country, and none to be found: as if a thirsty and weary traveller could not find any fruit or grapes in the fields or vineyards. See Psalm 12. 1. and 14.2,3. 1 Kings 19.14. and Mar. 11. verse 12,13. and Job 6.19,20. And thus godly men are affected at the inundation of sin, and sinners, and at the extirpation and perishing of goodneſſe, and good men.

when they have gathered] Heb. the gatherings of Summer after harvest, when the fruits are gathered, and the fields are bare.

grape-gleanings] See Esay 17,5,6. and 24.13.

no cluster] See Jer. 6.9. As with Edom, Jer. 49.9,10. and Obad 5. yet God retained ever his small remnant, and secret seed. See Esay 65.8. 1 Kings 19.18. Rom. 11.4.

the first ripe fruit] Rare fruits, and therefore most to be desired, Isa. 28.4. Hos. 9.10. The meaning is, that he sought for a good man among the people, as for a very rare thing. Jer. 5.1. Esay 64.6,7.

V. 2. The good man] Or godly, or merciful. This clears the sense of the former verse, and see the Annotations there.

for blood] Sanguinary, bloody-minded, cruel men, implying, that the Prince, the Judge, and the rich man are linked together, all to do evil, and to cloak the doings of one another. See Prov. 1.11. and 12.6. Jer. 5.26.

they hunt] By frauds and perfidiousneſſe. See Hosea 5.1.

every man] So that in vain should one look and seek for a good, honeſt, and upright man amongst them all, yet this is spoken of the general body of the people.

V. 3. with both hands earnestly] Their greedineſſe and activity in sinning is such, see Eph. 4.19. Others thus: That to help themselves in doing evil, to get off clear, and be absolved from judgment for it, they take the way in the next words following.

the Prince asketh] Prince and Judge are mercenary, enquire not into the cause, but gape after bribes, to be corrupted by them in judgment, when will they absolve the guilty, and condemn the innocent, make of vice vertue, and of vertue vice; contound good and evil, light and darkneſſe. See chap. 3.11. Esay 1,23. Ezech. 22.12. Hosea 4.18.

the great man] That is the rich man that is able to give money, abstaineth from no wickedneſſe nor injury.

he uttereth] Boldly and openly, without fear, or shame, knowing he can corrupt the thrones, and Tribunal-seats of judgments.

his mischievous desire] Heb. The mischief of his soul. Those mentioned Chap. 2.1,2. And the like.

wrap it up] These men agree among themselves, and conspire with one consent to do evil: as by the twisting together of divers threads and strings, men do make a strong rope. Thus wrong, oppreſſion, and tyranny reigns, the great and rich men, bribing, and buying out a liberty and impunity, and the poor being left without remedy.

V. 4. The best] Those of the best name and fame, those that gained the best repute.

as a brier] Hurtful and scratching. And therefore naught enough, as Psa. 58.9. Ezek. 2.6. See the Annotations there. And what are the worst then? Esay 55.13.

the day of thy watchmen] The time of thy punishment fore-told by the Prophets, who are called the watchmen, Ezek. 3.17. and 33.7. Hos. 9.8. Or the time of the punishment of thy watchmen is come; of thy false prophets, that deceived thee with soothings and smoothings, and also of thy other Governours. They the first in punishment, as the first in sin.

and thy visitation] Thine with them, the peoples with their Governours. The watchmen are blinde, are sleepy, and secure, and so betray and seduce the people, and the people are willing to have it so, Jer. 5.31. see 2 Thes. 2.10,11. and so both justly punished and visited.

perplexity] That is, Confusion and extreme anguish, instead of the windings and practices of their deceits: see Nahum 1.10. Prov. 1.24. &c. Isa 22.5.

V. 5. Trust ye not] His intent is not so much to shew that we must not put our trust and confidence in man, as in Isa. 2.22. Psal. 146.3. but rather to set out the transcendent wickedneſſe of this people, that there is no faith and fidelity in them, no humanity left among them, no relations, though never so near and dear, will keep them within any bounds of duty or respect one towards another; but they pervert the whole order of nature, and cast off those affections which might seem impossible to be blotted out and extinguished: there is no more any faith or loyalty, no not even amongst the neereſt friends.

in a guide] So are they called in Scripture, who by reason of their degree, duty, or authority, are, as it were, the heads and directors of others, as the husband is of the wife, the Schoolmaster of his Scholars, and the Counsellour of the Prince, Psa. 55.14. Prov. 16. 28. and 17.9.

keep the doors] Discover not thy secret to thine own Wife, Deut. 13.6. for fear left the betray thee.

V. 6. The son dishonoureth] Mat. 10.21,36. Luke 21.16.

V. 7. Therefore I will look] Namely, I Micah, with all true believers, seeing all manner of hope of remedy of these evils, and of reliefs by men is past, I will turn to God by faith, expectation and prayer, that I be not drawn aside by these evil examples, or provoked to any impatience, or desire of revenge for such like wrongs and injuries; I will fix mine eyes upon God, and him only, and wait for his salvation, Psalm 119.166. and 40.1. and 52.9. Isa. 25.9. and 30.18.

my salvation: my God] The holy faith and confidence of the Prophet, and this will heat any touch of an heretical presumption, Rom.

Rom 5.3,4,11. the Scripture is full of it, and the nature of grown faith requires it.

will hear me] He would be frequent and fervent in prayer, and in affurance that his God would hear his prayer.

V. 8 Rejoyce not] Here the Prophet takes upon him the perſon of the Church, and enters upon the conſolation, which concludes all, and continues to the end of the Book. And here firſt, the Church encourageth her ſelf by the aſſurance of Gods grace, againſt all the taunts of the whole multitude of her adverſaries, the malignant Church: She being fallen into the deep and dark dungeon of diſtreſſe, her enemy inſultes over her; a thing too frequent with the wicked, Pſal. 8..6. Jer. 20. 7. Ezek. 36. 4. and a thing which ſorely wounds an ingenuous minde: ſee v. 10. Pſal. 42 3;10. & 79. 10. She directs her ſpeech unto them, and arms her ſelf againſt their ſcoffs and taunts. We finde the like ſpeech uttered by way of Irony and ſcorn, Lam. 4. 21, 22.

when I fall yet] Or, Though I be fallen, yet I ſhall ariſe: ſhe repels the reproach of her enemy, not onely with a kind of diſdain, but with this argument of comfort, That her fall ſhall not be finall, deadly, deſperate and irrecoverable, but ſhe ſhall recover again: ſee that, Prov. 24. 16, 17. Thus her faith and hope overcomes the world, and the cruell mockings of it, John 5.4. Heb. 11.36. and all tentations, inſultations and ſubſannations whatſoever, Nahum 1.12.

a light unto me] Even ſome glimmering and ſparkle of light in the darkneſſe it ſelf: and a full light to lead and deliver me out of it, Eſay 60. 19. 20.

V. 9, I will bear] With humility and patience.

becauſe I have ſinned] Thus ſhe acknowledgeth her own demerit, and Gods juſtice. The wicked ſometimes are convicted of their ſins, and deſpair, as Judas; or murmur at Gods judgement and juſtice for them, as Cain; But the godly are ſo affected and afflicted with the fight and ſenſe of them, as they are diſpleaſed with themſelves in them, and for them; and placing themſelves before Gods Tribunal, in all humility, and with all patience, they ſubmit to what chaſtiſement he pleaſeth to lay upon them. A true ſight of ſin, and this humble ſubmiſſion ever go together. The wicked that want the one do likewiſe want the other.

until he plead] Againſt mine enemies; who taking no care in their doings againſt me, to execute Gods judgements for my ſins, have wrecked all their own cruelty uponme, and withall blaſphemed God. She doth not caſt away her confidence of deliverance, but comforts her ſelf in her hope and faith in God; and ſtrengthens her patience by it, knowing God doth chaſtiſe her for her good. See Hab.3.2. And though ſhe confeſſe her ſin againſt God; yet ſhe ſtands to her cauſe, and the goodneſſe of it, againſt her enemie; ſhe was innocent in her carriage towards them; ſhe gave them no juſt cauſe of their taunting of her, and vile dealing towards her. And thus David often ſtands upon his own juſtification; not before God, but in the particular cauſe and quarrel between him and his enemies. Pſal. 7. 3, 4, 8. and 18. 20. and 35. 1. And he and Job often plead their own integritie and ſinceritie, againſt the imputation of hypocriſie, ſuggeſted againſt them, either by temperations within, or enemies abroad.

he will bring me forth] As it were out of the low pit of miſerie, in which I am. Thus ſhe foreſees with the eye of faith and hope an iſſue prepared for her out of her miſeries; ſhe ſees this light though afar off.

his righteouſneſſe] His deliverance, the effect&eſt of loyalty; and love towards me; and of his ſevere juſtice towards his and mine enemies. Not that ſhe pleads the merit of her own works; but the righteouſneſſe, truth, fidelity, and juſtice of God, in performing his own frank and free, gracious and merciful promiſe unto her.

V. 10. Then ſhe, &c.] Or, and thou will ſee her that is mine enemy, and cover her with ſhame: ſo turning her ſpeech to God. This adds to her joy, even the ſalving of that ſore verſ. 8.

and ſhame ſhall cover her] And the cover and hide her ſelf for ſhame; as much as ſhe rejoyced, and triumphed, and inſulted before. See Obad. 10. Pſal. 71. 13. and 140. 9. They may juſtly take up that Jer. 3. 25.

See Pſalm 50. 21. And if he ſo puniſhed his own, as now appears by his owning and delivering them, what then might the wicked juſtly think will become of them? ſee Luke 23. 31.

Before her walls were caſt down, and the as a field or vineyard, whoſe hedge was plucket up, the was laid waſte, and ſcattered among the nations But now the day ſhould come wherein her walls ſhould be re-built, her ſelf reſtored, repaired, protected againſt all aſſaults of her enemies. And Evangelicall promiſe: The meaning is, when in the Meſſiah his time I ſhall re-eſtabliſh my Church, which hath been as an excluded and an abandoned poſſeſſion, I will fet her in perfect liberty, freeing her from the commands of all others, but mine own, Acts. 15. 16.

in that day] Even then ſhall theſe bleſſings be vouchſaved to her.

ſhall the decree be far removed] That cruel tyranny which the Babylonians exerciſed over them, Eſay 9.4. that decree whereby they forbade the building of the Temple and City: and the Perſians likewiſe after them, Ezra 4. v. 5, 6, 21, 22, 23, 24, See Pſalm 102. 13, 14. Others render the words and the meaning thus, That the decree ſhall go far abroad: even that decree, verſe 14. of publiſhing the Goſpel among the Gentiles, ſhall go forth from out of the bounds of Jury, even to the ends of the earth. As Pſalm 2. 7, 8. and 110. 2, 3.

V. 12. In that day alſo] He inſiſts ſtill upon that happy and glorious time.

he ſhall come even to thee] Jeruſalem after her reſtauration ſhall become ſo glorious, her ſtate ſo flouriſhing, that the Jews and Iſraelites withall freedom ſhall have ready acceſſe unto her from all parts; yea, the Gentiles, and all nations ſhall flow in unto her Acts 15, 16, 17. V. 13. Notwithſtanding the land] Or, after that it hath been deſolate. The land of Judea before the coming of Chriſt in the fleſh, verſe 8. Thus before thoſe glorious promiſes ſhall come to be accompliſhed, he ſhews that Gods judgement ſhall be upon the wicked Jews, and their land in the mean-time, thundering as it were, againſt the body of the people for their deſperate and forlorn eſtate in their ſins; left they ſhould as is the manner of hypocrites, vainly preſume, and aſſume unto themſelves thoſe promiſes which belong not to them. And mixing promiſes of mercie to his holy remnant; that they may have wherewithal to ſuſtain and ſupport themſelves in the midſt of theſe ſad calamities: And extending thoſe promiſes, as the manner of the Prophets is, even to the glorious time of Chriſts coming, wherein the full accompliſhment of them ſhall be made good.

ſhall be deſolate] The land it ſelf, that ſenſleſſe and harmleſſe element, ſhall ſuffer in its kinde, as being defiled and polluted by the ſins of her inhabitants. How odious then were their ſins?

for the fruit of their doings] For the juſt recompence and puniſhment of their ſins.

V. 14. Feed thy people] Or, rule they people. The words of the Prophet, wiſhing and praying to God. Or rather, the words of God, preſcribing their duty to the Miniſters and Paſtors of Chriſt and his Church. Implying the calamity laſt mentioned to be ſo great, that if God took not this way and means for his peoples ſafety, they would ſurely periſh. Some make theſe to be the Prophets words to our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, that he would feed, and guide his Church which is deſtitute of all humane help, and is expoſed to many dangers, like ſheep upon the mountains, and in woods.

they people] Thine by covenant; Gen. 12. 3. See Rom. 9. 8, 27. and Chap. 11. 5. 7. This covenant was the ſureground whereupon Gods grace was ever referved to the Remnant.

the flock of thine heritage] Thus he fixes his eyes upon Gods free choice and adoption of them to be his own heritage; and not upon what they deſerved: Deut. 7. 6, 7, 8, 9. And this is the ground work of faith to Gods people, and holds up their hope againſt all tentations.

in the midſt of Carmel] As there: or, as in the midſt of open fields; ſo ſome tranſlate the word. See on Amos 1. v. 2.

Let them feed in Baſhan and Gilead] See Jer. 50. 19. Though now ſolitary and diſperſed; yet let them be gathered and fed in theſe fruitful places. He continues in the Allegory of ſheep. Of Baſhan we read, That taken largely, it was the Kingdom of Og, on the Eaſt ſide of Jordan; a land of Gyants, Deut. 3. 13. Conquered, and given to the half Tribe of Manaſſeh: wherein Machir and Jair, the ſons of Manaſſeh had large portions, and very many cities, Joſ. 13. 10 and and 17. 1. And out of it was Golan given to the Gerſhonites, for a City of refuge; Joſh. 21. 27. And Aſhtaroth likewiſe was given to them, which had been the Royal City of Og, 1 Chron. 6. 71. Joſh. 13. 12. Deut. 1. 4. A very fruitful Kingdome it was, and ſpecially for cattel and paſture. We read of the Bulls of Baſhan, of Rams of the breed of Bathan, Deut. 32. 14. There was in it a chief mountain of that name, ranked together with Carmel, and Sharon, and Gilead. The Oaks of Baſhan are mentioned in Scripture, whereof alſo they made Oars for the uſe of Tyre, Ezek. 27. 6. Of Gilead, ſee on Obadiah, verſe 19.

as in the dayes of old] As his benefits had been ſo bountiful to his people in dayes of old, even from the beginning, that ſo he would continue to be like himſelf, ſo bountiful even to the end.

V. 15. According to the dayes] Here the Prophet brings in God ſpeaking and promiſing as much as was in the Prophetical with and prayer of the laſt words. He promiſeth to be as wonderfull in his works of mercy, and favour, and deliverance to them, as he was of old, when he brought their fathers out of Egypt. That memorable deliverance is often mentioned in Scripture, as a monument ſufficient of Gods miraculous power and goodneſſe, for the ſaving of his: and to that end never to be forgotten by them.

will I ſhew unto him marvellous things] As then, ſo now. See Exod. 3. 20. and 15. 11. Judg. 6. 13. Pſal. 72. 18. and 78. 11, 12.

their ears ſhall be deaf] With the ſudden burſting forth of Gods wonderful and terrible works. They ſhall not willingly for fear hear of them.

V. 17. They ſhall lick] They ſhall be caſt down with all their pride at Gods feet, who ſhall reign in his Church, Pſalm 72. 9. Iſai. 49. 23. and 60. 6, 7, 16. They ſhall be abaſed and dejected in the loweſt degree.

fear becauſe of thee] O God, or, of thee, O Church, when thou ſhalt be reſtored to thy glory and ſplendor by Chriſt, dwelling and working in thee, Hoſ. 3. 5. Acts 2. 43. and Chap. 5. 11, 13.

V. 18. who is a God like unto thee?] Micah comes to a concluſion of the conſolation, with an exclamation and admiration of that pardoning mercy and compaſſion, which is only to be found in the true God toward his own people, whereby he overcomes their evil with his goodneſſe, and continues him in his free Covenant of grace and mercy made with them. There is no other God but he. And this his dealing with his people is a ſufficient character to diſtinguiſh him from all falſe gods. No like thing is to be found in all the idols of the Gentiles.

of the remnant of his heritage] Not of the body of his people which for the greater part were hypocrites and ungodly men; Here is no comfort for them: But of the Remnant of his heritage, in them ſhould the luſtre of his mercy ſhine forth.

This is our ſure ground of comfort, when we ſeek and lay the foundation of it, not in our ſelves, or any thing in us, but in God, and his nature only. God is the cauſe to himſelf of his mercy, by his nature he is delighted in mercy.

V. 19. He will turn again,] Thus the remnant of his heritage glory in his mercy, and triumph in the aſſurance of it: thus applying it to themſelves. Papiſts deny this Faith; aſſert perpetual doubting and hefitation.

V. 20. Thou wilt perform] The faithful confirm and comfort themſelves in the former bleſſed truth, becauſe God hath depoſited his Covenant of Grace and Mercy with them, which he will perform, and at no hand ſuffer it to be vacated, Rom. 11. 29. As if they ſhould ſay, we ſaigh, or preſume nothing of our ſelves, we only truſt to thine own gracious will revealed in thy Word; and ſo reſting on thy free favour, we perſwade our ſelves of thy merciful pardon of all our ſins, though many wayes multiplied againſt thee. This is the ſound argumentation of the faithful.

ANNOTATIONS on the Book of the Prophet NAHUM.

THE ARGUMENT.

NInevch that famous City, Head of that great Aſſyrian Empire, when Jonah the Prophet was ſent thither to preach, That within forty dayes it ſhould be deſtroyed, was moved to Repentance; and ſo the tranquility of that Empire was lengthened: But after a certain time, they grew ſecure, regarding worldly means to augment their dominion, more then the fear of God; and ſo, caſting off the further care of Religion, and Righteouſneſſe, returned to their former ſins; yea, increaſed them, through their oppreſſion of other Nations, and of Gods people. The Aſſyrians overthrew the Syrian Kingdome, took Damaſcus, and carried the people captive to Kir, and ſlew Rezin the Syrian King, 2 Kings 16. 9. And they brought Iſrael to be Loruchamah, that is, unpitied; and Loammi, No people; And now the irrevocable Decree of God (the ſetter up and puller down of King domes) for the final overthrow of that Empire, is foretold them by his Prophet Nahum. He prophecied of a ruine to Nineveh, and Habakkuk of the Chaldeans *to ariſe. CHAP. I.

The burden] That is, a Prophecy of threatnings and evils, Isa.13.1. and 15.1. and 17.1. Jer.23.33,36. 2 Kings 9.25. This word grew to be so common as to be abused by false Prophets, and prophane men, scoffing at it, which made the Lord threaten punishment to the abusers of it, and to change the use of it for that time, in Jer.23.33.40.

of Nineveh] Zeph.2.13. The head of the Assyrian Empire, which was conquered by Merodach Baladan King of Babylon, or by Nebuchadnezzar the great King of Chaldea, who also destroyed Nineveh, as some say, Isa.10.5. Ezek.31.3, 11. See more in the Annot. upon v.8. as also on Jonah 1.v.2. and chap.3.3.

the book of the vision of Nahum] The vision or revelation which God commanded Nahum to write, of a ruine to Nineveh. He is an Herald sent from heaven to denounce war and destruction against Nineveh. He comes not on his own errand, by his own authority, with a dream of his own brain, but with a vision from God, as Num.12.6. Gen 15.1.

the Elkoshite] Of a City, or Castle, called, Elcosh, which some ancient histories have affirmed to have been within the Tribe of Simeon; but the Scripture makes no mention thereof.

V.2. God] He prefaceth him from the Nature of God in general, but after applies it to his special use against the Ninevites; and so it carrieth with it more weight, the more to affect the hearers.

is jealous, and the Lord revengeth] Or, the Lord is a jealous God, and a revenger, &c. Who cannot endure such injuries done to his glory, and to his children, as the Assyrians have done to them, Exod.20.5. and 34.7,14. Esay 65.6,7. Deut. 4. 24. and 6.15. Josh. 24. 19. Jer.32.18. and Deut.29.20.

revengeth] See Deut.32.43. 2 Kings 9.7. Jer.5.9. and Jer.51.35, 36. Ezek.24.8.

is furious] Heb. That hath fury. With his he is but angry for a time, but his anger never aswageth to the Reprobate, though for a time he defer it. See of Gods fury, Exod.22.24. Levit. 26.28. Deut. 7.4. and 32.22. 2 Kings 23.26. 2 Chron. 34.25. Esay 30.27,28, 30. and 66.15. Jer.30.23. Ezek.5.13.

reserveth wrath for his enemies] The Assyrian. Sure it was to come, though the Jewes thought it too long in coming, Eccles. 8.11. But God hath his time, we must not prejudge him therein: He knoweth best when, and how long to delay, to spare, and forbear, Hosea 11.9. Mal.3.6.

V.3. The Lord is slow] Exod.34.6,7. Jonah 4.2. Psal.86.15. and 145.8. Esay 42.14. The wicked here would make Gods mercy an occasion to sin, and a bolster to uphold them therein, Ezek.13.10, 16,18 But the Prophet willeth them to consider his force and justice, his nature and office, as Judge of the world.

will not at all acquit] Exod 34.7. And therefore is no Patron to secure obstinate sinners.

the Lord] Psalm 18.8. Hab.3.5,11,12.

the clouds] He moveth the clouds of the ayr, even as a great cloud of dust would be raised by a great multitude of horsemen riding apace. See Psalm 104.3. Esay 19.1.

V.4. He rebuketh the sea] Esay 50.2. Psalm 106.9. Exod.14. Josh. 3. This may allude to that famous history, Exod. 14. 22. See Esay 50.2. Josh.3.16. Jer.5.22. Psal.65.7. and 93.4. Job 26.10. Even the most turbulent and unruly creatures obey him. See Mar.8.26.

Carmel] See on Amos 1. verse 2.

Lebanon] See on Zech.11.1. The fair and excellent Cedars and other trees of Lebanon. Or Lebanon which was so fruitful and flourishing.

languisheth] The strength and beauty of creatures is destroyed, when they feel his wrath, Psal.104.29,30.

V.5. mountains quake] Psal.97.5. and 29.6. 2 Sam.22.8. Job 9.5, 6. Jer.10.10. Ezek.38.19,20.

melt] As snow, or wax before the fire. He still goes on in this former dable description of God, as best suiting with the burden of his Prophecy against great Nineveh, and the Assyrian Empire.

V.6. who can stand] No sinner; not Nineveh, nor the Assyrian Monarchy.

who can abide] Heb. Who can stand up. If all creatures be at Gods command, and none is able to resist his wrath, shall man flatter himself, and think by any means to escape, when he provoketh his God to anger? See on verse 2.

like fire] Such is his fury, and the pouring out of it far and neer, even like the thunder and lightning.

the rocks] 1 Kings 19.11. what madnesse is it then in man, or all mankinde to trust in their strength against the Lord.

v.7. The Lord is good] For all his dreadful severity against forlorn sinners, yet is he good, and goodnesse it self, is good, and doth good, Ps.119.68.& 73.1. Mar.10.18. good, as the next words expres.

and he knoweth them] Psalm 1.6. Lest the faithful should be discouraged by hearing the power of God, he sheweth them that his mercies appertain unto them, and that he approveth of, favoureth, and taketh an especial care of them.

that trust in him] Lam.3.25,26. 2 Sam.22.31,32. 2 Chron.13.18. See Job 13.15. Psalm 9. verse 10. and 17.7. and 18.30. whom God doth not thus own and help, they do not truly trust in him, say what they will.

V.8. But with an over-running flood] Here he begins to apply all the former doctrine, to the consolation of Gods chosen people; shewing that Gods fore-said fearful wrath shall be executed upon their enemies, the Assyrians, to their utter destruction; signifying that God will suddenly, and at once destroy Nineveh, and the Assyrians with war, as with a flood, or deluge, which shall break down all defences and banks, and shall not be kept back, nor turned another way, as Esay 28.19. How the Assyrians were over-run, and Nineveh besieged and taken by Phraortes King of the Medes, and by his son Cyaxares, and by the Scythians, and destroyed by Astyages, Heathen histories do record. See Herodotus, Xenophon, and Diodorus Siculus. After these succeeded Nebuchadnezzar.

his enemies] Gods enemies, Psa. 35. 6. a dark and black desolation, an incurable and irrecoverable destruction shall over-take and seize upon them.

V.9. what do ye imagine] He turns his speech to the Ninevites and Assyrians, and sheweth that the enterprises of the Assyrians against Judah and the Church, were against God; as Acts 9.4. Zech.2.8. Deut.32.9. The Assyrians thought otherwise, that they had to deal but against Judah and Israel, a broken people amongst themselves, and by the wars of Syria. But God takes it as against himself, having taken the patronage and protection of them upon himself. And therefore that their enterprises were but vain, and to no purpose; and therefore that he would so destroy them at once, that he should not need to return the second time.

the second time] As 1 Sam.26.8. They which understand this verse of the Church, that God will afflict her, but yet in measure; he will not destroy her utterly, as he doth his and her enemies, but be content with one affliction, and not double his hand upon her, They misse of the Prophets meaning, and mar the current tenour of the context.

V.10. For while they be] Troubled and perplexed in their counsels and means of their defence, and also made drunken with wine and pleasures, and with pride of their greatnesse and power. Or, though they be folden together as thorns, and so dangerous to be touch for pricking; yet the fire of Gods wrath shall easily devour and consume them.

and while they are drunken] As drunken men bold without fear, and bragging, and unruly and troublesome, and yet then a man with his finger may overthrow them.

stubble fully dry] Which easily takes fire. See Exod. 15.7. Job 13. 25. Esay 5.24. and 47.14. Mal.4.1.

V.11. There is one come out of thee] He seemes chiefly to point at Sennacherib, who had plotted the total ruine of Jerusalem, under Hezekiah; yet with some relation to the former Kings of Assyria likewise, to Pul, Tiglath-Pileser, and Shalmaneser. Here then is the cause of Gods burning wrath against the Assyrian. They may thank themselves for their own ruine; the cause of it comes from themselves, they eat but the batch of their own baking, they reap the reward of their own merit, their evil imaginations, counsels, and plots shall return upon their own pates.

that imagineth evil against the Lord] And against his people. This is the cause, their evil machinations against the Jews, Gods Church, which he had taken into his patronage and protection. Thus God makes his Churches cause to be his own cause. And this is the comfort of Gods Church always against all her enemies.

a wicked counseller] Heb. A counseller of Belial, ver.15. See Deut. 13.13. Judg.19.22. 1 Sam.2.12. 2 Sam.16.7. 2 Chron.13.7.

V.12. Though, &c.] Or, if they would have been at peace, so should they have been many, and so should they have been shorn, and he should have passed away. Though they think themselves quiet in peace, and in most safety, to be never so many for number, and of greatest strength, by reason of the height which this Empire had attained unto; yet all this confidence shall not hinder Gods Judgements, but they shall be like to ripe corn, or grasse of the field, which seemeth to call upon the sickle and sithe, to cut and mow it down. Others expound the verse thus, If the Israelites would have been quiet, and at peace with me, and among themselves, so should they have been many and mighty; and so should the Assyrian have but shorn them only, and soon have passed away from them: That done by Pul King of Assur, 2 Kings 15.19. should have been sufficient. See Esay 48.18.

when he shall pass through] God in his judgment. Some refer this to the Angel and his slaughter made, 2 Kings 19.35.

though I have afflicted thee] God turneth his speech to the Church, and comforts her in the depth of her distresse, and supports her against despair.

V.13. For now I will break his yoke] The Assyrian Empire, which was as a yoke upon the neck of the Jews: the Lord will quickly break it, and deliver his people, that they shall enslave them, or tyrannize over them no more. They were but as the staff in the Lords hand, which he would break after he had beaten his people with it. See Esay 10.5,6,12,15,24,25,26,27.

no more of thy name be sown] Thou shalt no more come to. thy former estate, contrary to those fields, which after the corn is cut down, are sown again. Or, he intimateth the total extinguishing of the Royal Race of Assyria, the name and memory of it.

cut off the graven image] This is added according to the custome of Prophets, who in the description of the ruine of States, do adde thereunto the overthrow of the idols. And the rather so, because they usually put so much trust and confidence in their idols, and their protection.

I will make thy grave] He seemeth to have relation to Sennacherib, being murthered in his own Temple, 2 Kings 19.36,37. After he had been shamefully forced to go out of Judea. See Ezech.31.15. and ch.32.22,23, &c. And that the place thereby should be pollluted and profaned, and the idols removed out of the Temple.

for thou art vile] Some Hebrew Editions vary in this word. See Esay 14.10,11,12, 15, &c. Vile by thy final fall, and utter ruine. Targum, for it is vile; that is, the Sepulchre. LXX. for they are swift, and they joyn it to the word of the next verse.

V.15. Behold] A description of the Churches joy at the newes of the Assyrians ruine, by means whereof she might in peace, security, and mirth attend upon Gods service, and give him thanks. This shewes the end that God hath in the fall of Nineveh, and the Assyrian Monarchy, to testifie therein the care he had over his people, that it came not by any revolution of state, or destiny; but his hand did it, for his peoples sake, for their good, as the verse sheweth.

upon the mountains] That is, openly, and freely, without fear, or disturbance, not in corners secretly. See Esay 40.9. and 28.3 that publisheth peace] Peace from the Assyrian wars. That is an Evangelical peace that is mentioned, Esay 52.7. Rom.10.15.

O Judah] For whose sake all was done, as hath been said.

keep] Heb. Feast.

thy solemn Feasts] Mentioned in Moses Law, interrupted by the Assyrian wars, we read of the Passeover famously renewed by Hezekiah, and Josiah; see Exod. 23.14. Numb.10.10. Deut. 16.11,16. The end and use of our deliverances, and our peace, is to worship and serve God.

perform thy vows] See on Jonah 1.16. See also Psa. 116.12,13. Hosea 14.2.

for the wicked shall no more] Heb. Belial. See Esay 52.1. and 35.8. and 11.9. Apoc.21.27. But here the Assyrian or Ninevite is meant, as the word following doth shew.

he is utterly cut off] The Ninevite and Assyrian Empire shall be so, certainly, and shortly. The Babylonian after this did much harm to Gods people.

CHAP. II.

Verse 1. He that dasheth in pieces] Or the disperser, or, hammer, here are Gods judgments against Ninevch. This dasher is the Mede, Scythian, and Babylonian. Nebuchadnezzar is in a readinesse to destroy the Assyrians. And the Prophet derideth the enterprises of the Assyrians, which prepared to resist them, and save Nineveh; yet some would understand of Sennacherib the Assyrian, that he should come up against Judah, and Judah should strengthen himself against him, and God for his peoples sake should destroy him. Others, that Sennacherib should come up; and though the Jews did fortifie themselves against him, yet all that should nothing avail them. But the sense that was first set down doth best agree with the words and context.

is come up] Certainly shall; and that speedily, and openly.

keep the munition] Man thy holds, fortifie thy fortresses, keep watch and ward, stop the passages, stir up thy strength and courage, yet all shall be in vain to the Ninevite and Assyrian. These are ironical kinds of allocutions to the Assyrians, use what care about canst to defend thy self, but all shall be to no purpose. See Jer. 51. 11,12. Esay 8.9,10.

V.2. For the Lord hath turned away, &c.] Some understand this. That the Lord will cause to return again the excellency of Jacob, and settle his people in their pristine flate of excellent glory. And others somewhat differing, render the words and meaning thus; For the Lord hath turned again with the excellency of Jacob, (meaning Christ. See a like phrase, Amos 8.7. and 2 Sam.1.19.) as being the excellency of Israel, to stand for his people emptied, and marred, & wasted by their enemies, not to afflict them any more by the enemies, but to destroy the enemies for their sakes. But the words and context seem better to carry this sense; that the Lord hath turned away the excellency of Jacob, and sufficiently humbled the pride of Israel; And therefore it is now a fit time, and high time to destroy Nineveh. And this accords with that place, Esay 10.12. Seeing God hath punished his own people, Judah, and Israel, he will now punish the enemies by whom he scourged them. See Esay 30. ver.31,32,33.

the excellency of Jacob, as the excellency of Israel] Or the pride of Jacob; as the pride of Israel.

for the emptiers] The Assyrians have thus used the Israelites, See Psalm 80.13.

and marred] Signifying, that the Israelites were utterly destroyed.

V.3. The shield] A description of the Medes, Scythians, and Chaldeans preparation to assault Nineveh, though some understanding it of the last enemy only, the Chaldean.

of his mighty men] Of that dasher in pieces, verse 1.

is made red] A colour which was much used by the Babylonians, and others, especially in war. See Ezekiel 23.14.

in scarlet] Or, clad scarlet. Either for terror, or for honour, or that their own blood shed might the lesse be seen and terrible.

with flaming torches] Or, fiery torches. By reason of the glittering of the armour: Some take this in its proper meaning, for wilde fires, which should be thrown; Others thus, The Chariots shall run with that speed that the wheels shall be as if they took fire, and were on flames, as torches, with the swiftnesse of the motion. See the next verse.

in the day of his preparation] To give the on-set chiefly.

the fir-trees shall be terribly shaken] He doth seem by Hyperbole thus to call the great Lances, Spears, and other piked arms, made of fir-trees. They shall be forcibly and couragiously shaken in the hands and mannagements of the Souldiers, as trees in a forrest are shaken with the windes.

V.4. The Chariots] Of the enemies against Nineveh, and Assyria. All here serves to expresse the terriblenesse of the enemies preparations and approaches against Nineveh; that they shall be such as shall exceed the common custome of men, and be strange and wonderful. And this is to awaken Nineveh out of her deep security, and to assure her of that which the thought was utterly impossible. See the like, Esay 5.26,27,28,29,30.

they shall seem] Heb. Their shew.

V.5. He shall recount his worthies] The enemies of Nineveh shall encourage their Captains to the battel, calling them every one by his own proper name, according to the customes of Generals. Others understand it of Nineveh, that she shall recount her Worthies, her gallant Heroes, and men of War, and gather together all her strengths and means of defence to oppose her enemies; as is usual in Cases of greatest danger and extremity.

they shall stumble in their walk] There shall be such a throng, and they shall go on so fiercely, that they shall hardly be able to keep their ranks contrary to that, Joel 2.7 8. See that Esay 5.27. Some thus; That the Medes should stumble and be stopt at the siege of Nineveh by the Scythians, who in their expedition, which was like a walk or perambulation, did raise the siege of the Medes, like Nineveh themselves, and over-run Media, Assyria, and Asia, winning and losing all again within the space of twenty eight years. Others that the Worthies of Nineveh shall stumble: Fear shall so astonish them, that they shall reel, and stagger, and stumble like blinde men, and fall, and not be able to defend Nineveh.

to the wall thereof] Some thus; As if the Scythians shall hasten to the wall of Nineveh, as ready & prepared for the defence thereof against the Mede. Others apply this to the Babylonian assaulting, and others to the Ninevites defending themselves, though in vain.

defence] Heb. Covering, or coverer: This by most is taken to be some engine, or moveable defence, made after the ancient fashion, under which the assailants drew neer to the wall, either to dig through it with Mattocks and Pick-axes, or for to fight with them that stood in defence above upon certain wooden Towers.

V.6. The gates of the rivers] He seemeth to mean some violent means used by the other enemies, or the Chaldeans, to turn the river Tigris into the besieged City, whereby many great buildings were overthrown; others rather, that the ports and forts of Nineveh builded upon the river Tigris, & the streams of it, should be overthrown: Neither the swift and deep current of the river Tigris, nor any Palace and strong hold, shall be of force to keep out the enemy.

'diſſolved] Or, molten, ſome underſtand this Palace of the Temple of Jupiter Belus, that was in Nineveh.

V.7. And Huzzab] Or, that which was eſtabliſhed. Or, there was a ſtand made. That is, the Kings Wife and Concubines, which ſhall be ſhut up in the Palace, ſhe that lay hid there, and came not abroad out of her chamber, as delicate Dames uſe to do, even ſhe ſhall be brought forth, and led captive; ſome have taken the Hebrew word for the Queen of Ninevehs proper name. Others apply it to the ſtate of the kingdome that formerly was eſtabliſhed, and ſate down at eaſe in pleaſures, yet ſhould now be forced forth into captivity. And others thus, That the Scythians making there a ſtand, ſhould the firſt time lead away Nineveh captive. And laſtly, ſome underſtand all this of the Babylonians dealings againſt Nineveh. Thus various are the minds of Interpreters in ſuch dark and dubious places.

led away captive] Or, diſcovered.

brought up] Or, brought to nought; vaniſh to nothing.

and her maids] That uſed to cheer her up with mirth and muſick.

ſhall lead her] Now accompany her with mournful notes.

as with the voice of doves] Weeping, groaning, and lamenting. All this to aſcertain Gods people for their comfort, of the ſpeedy overthrow of Nineveh; which ſeemed to them a thing incredible.

tabring upon their breſts] An eloquent and excellent expreſſion.

V.8. But Nineveh is of old] Or from the dayes that ſhe hath been. Is of ſuch antiquity, as if it had been eternal. And antiquity gains ſtrength, credit, and authority to Kingdomes, yet this ſhall not hinder her overthrow.

like a pool of water] It hath alwayes been a place of eaſe and reſt, of plenty and pleaſure to her inhabitants; who after the taking of it, ſhall run away, ſome here, ſome there, and ſhall no more come, nor be gathered together, like fiſh taken out of the pond which is emptied and drawn out.

ſtand] Thus expreſſing their fear and flight, that nothing could ſtop their flight and fear, and cauſe them once to look back, thinking there was no way, any hope of ſafety left, but only in flight.

look back] Or cauſe them to turn.

V.9. Take ye the ſpoil] This is not the ſpeech of the General to his Souldiers, but of God, or the Prophet from God, commanding the enemies to ſpoil Nineveh; and he promiſeth them infinite riches and treaſures. The enemies thought not that they obeyed any command of God herein; yet were they led thereto by his ſecret inſtinct. As the caſe of the Aſſyrians was, Iſaiah 10.7. and of Cyrus, Iſaiah 45.3,4,5 God by the enemies puniſheth Nineveh for their wrongs to his people. Neither yet are the enemies thereby any whit excuſable or faultleſſe in ſo doing, they minded their own ends, But Gods people were inſtructed hereby, that Gods hand was in it, and that he vouchſafed to take upon him the cauſe of his afflicted people, to their comfort.

for there is none end of the ſtore] Or, and their infinite ſtore, &c. It is a bottomleſſe gulph of ſtore.

glory out of all the pleaſant furniture] Hebr. veſſels of deſire, take all the glory of that wherein they ſo gloried. They had made a prey of all others, themſelves were now to be made a prey. See Iſa.33.1.

V.10. ſhe is empty] That is Nineveh. And it is repeated for certainties ſake. Gods power and truth is joyned with his word: It ever hath its effect, Iſaiah 55.11. and 45.23. Ezek.12.25.

the heart melteth] See Iſaiah 13.7,8. and 19.1. Pſa.22.14.

the knees] With terrour, as Iſaiah 13.7,8. Dan.5.6.

the faces of them] See Joel 2.6. before they were full ſtout, ſtrong, haughty; but now the caſe ſhould be clean altered: an eaſie work of the hand of the Almighty.

V.11. Where is the dwelling of the Lions?] What is become of Nineveh, the ſeat of ſuch a powerful, terrible and violent Empire? The words of ſuch as bemoan Nineveh, or mock her, and inſult over her. They thought themſelves all Lions, or Lioneſſes, old or young Lions, of that power and authority, as to over-power and over-rule all others; and as Lions they behaved themſelves, to ravin and prey, to make and take ſpoil, and that without all fear of any: But now where are they, or their dwelling place, their walking or feeding place? Pſa.37.10,35,36. and 103.16. All their fierceneſs ſhould be gone, their ceaſing to be men, and turning to be ſavage beaſts, brought the rather this judgment upon them.

V.12 Filled his holes with prey] Laid up ſtore of prey for after times, ſo greedy was he, and ravenous, and covetous.

V.13. Behold] The Prophet brings in God himſelf ſpeaking, that they may attend the more, and his Word the better take.

I am againſt thee] God will awake, ariſe, and act his part. He takes upon himſelf the execution of all this vengeance upon Nineveh.

I will burn her Chariots] Chariots were much uſed in war, Exod. 14.7. Joſh.11.4. and 17.16. Judg.4.3. 1 Sam.13.5. 1 Chron.18.4. and 19.7. 1 King.10.26. The meaning is, I will conſume her Forces and war-like Power. Thus, as was ſaid, God makes himſelf the author of all thoſe judgments executed by the enemies againſt Nineveh.

in the ſmoak] Suddenly, ſo ſoon as my wrath begins onely to kindle. Or, into ſmoak: that is, utterly, even into nothing.

and the ſword] There is an often change of perſon in this ſhort peech, the better to expreſſe Gods wrath and rage thereby, as a man paſſion uſeth to do the like.

thy prey] Thy courſe and cuſtome of preying and ſpoiling: or, The prey which thou haſt already gotten, all thy wealth, and riches, and treaſures, gathered up together by thy oppreſſions and violence.

and the voice of thy Meſſengers] Signifying the Heraulds which were accuſtomed to proclaim war: or, Ambaſſadours imployed to forreign Nations. Some read, Of thy cheek-teeth, wherewith Nineveh was wont to bruiſe the bones of the poor. Others ſay, He ſeemeth to have an eſpecial relation to Rabſhakeh his blaſpheming Embaſſage, 2 Kings 18.17,19.

CHAP. III.

Verſe 1. WO to the bloody City] Hebr. City of bloods, Nineveh, Ezek.24.9. Habakkuk 2.12. In this chapter are Ninevehs ſins and Judgements chiefly, and others.

the prey departeth not] She never ceaſeth to ſpoil and rob; theſe are cauſes of her ruine.

V.2. The noiſe of a whip] A ſcourge driving and laſhing the Charet-horſes of War; this expounds the woe, ver. 1. He ſheweth how the Chaldeans ſhall haſte, and how couragious their horſes ſhall be in beating the ground when they come againſt the Aſſyrians.

ratling of the wheels] Of the Charets of War, being ſwiftly driven, like to Jehu's march, 2 Kings 9.20.

V.3. The horſe-man] Thus is the Tragedy repreſented of Nineveh's ruine, by the enemies dealings againſt her.

the bright ſword, and the glittering ſpear] Hebr. The flame of the Sword, and the lightning of the Spear.

they ſtumble upon their corpſes] All wayes are ſo filled with them, that none can go, but he muſt ſtumble or tread on them, ſee Iſa. 34. 3. Jer.33.5.

V.4. Whoredomes] That is, cunning devices, and fraudulent plots to draw in people, and to become Lords over them, as it were, by intereſt of ſtate, as Whores uſe all enticing wayes, all cunning crafts, and witch-crafts too, to inveigle and intangle lewd men, This word is often uſed in this ſenſe among the Prophets, Iſa.23.15, 17. Rev.17.2. and 18.3. And this may have relation to their idolatries, which are ſo uſually ſet forth by this metaphor of Whoredomes in all the Prophets, which ſin they practiſed, Ezek.23.7. and propagated abroad, 2 Kings 16.10.

well-favoured harlot] Great and glorious was Nineveh, and the Aſſyrian Empire.

of witchcrafts] This term may alſo be referred to the ſame ſenſe, it being the cuſtom of harlots to uſe ſorceries and witch-crafts. It may alſo be underſtood in its proper ſenſe, as Iſaiah 47.9,12.

that ſelleth Nations] Under the colour of protection, favour, courteſie, and the like, ſhe ſeiſeth on Kingdomes and States, and doth ſubject Nations unto her. By her cunning artifices every way ſhe ſo won and over-powred the Nations, that ſhe ordered and diſpoſed them, bought and ſold them at her pleaſure. And theſe practices of Princes, and States, which they call Policies, and juſtifie as neceſſary for the governing and maintaining of States, are here called Whoreſ-crafts, and Witch-crafts. And yet they applaud themſelves in them, which themſelves will condemn and deteſt in the practices of private, honeſt, moral men; as if that were a vertue, and an high point of wiſdome in a States-man, which is wicked and abominable in a private man, as to lye, flatter, and deceive, to ſwear and forſwear, and the like.

V.5. Behold] See on Chap.2.13.

I will diſcover thy skirts] Iſa.47.3. Ezek.16.37. Jer.13.22. I will expoſe thee to ſhame and ſlavery. A term taken from the injuries done by the ſouldiers to poor women which were taken priſoners in the war, Iſaiah 47.2,3. Jer.13.22. Ezek. 16.37. I will pluck off that luſtre and grandour, and garb, wherein now thou doeſt ſo much glory, and whereby thou makeſt thy ſelf ſo eſteemed and admired of others; I will ſtrip thee of it, and leave thee ſtark naked.

V.6. abominable filth] All manner of filth, as they uſed to throw upon people that were publikely diſgraced.

a gazing-ſtock] A wonderment, for my Juſtice upon thee; and an example for others to take heed by thee. See Numb.5.21. Deut.29. 24. 1 Kings 9.8. Jer.22.8. and 48.39. Ezek.5.15. and 14.8.

V.7. Shall flee from thee] Through deteſtation and horrour.

Who will bemoan her?] Or, who can ſufficiently bemoan her? Her ruine ſhall be ſo great, that no lamentation can equal it, no comforters can be ſufficient for her, ſee Gen.37.35. Pſa.77.2. Iſa.22.4. Jer.31.15. Some conceive that Nineveh had made her ſelf ſo odious to all by her tyranny, that all fled from her in her need, none would come to aid her, or comfort her, Lam.1.16. Pſa.69.20.

V.8. Art thou better then populous No?] Or, Nouriſhing, Hebr. No Amon. A famous City of Ægypt, called in following Ages Alexandria; which it is likely had been greatly ruined before the Prophets time, not mentioned in Scripture, yet ſee Jer.46.25.

among the rivers, &c.] In Ægypt, where there were divers branches of Nilus cut out into channels, for otherwiſe Alexandria was not ſcituated by the River it ſelf, but upon the Mediterrane Sea, neer the Iſland Pharos, where was that famous Tower with lights to direct the ſhipping to the Port, and the Lake Mareotis was on the South-ſide of it.

V.9. Æthiopia) It may ſeem ſhe had been a free City, having all for confederates that are mentioned in this verſe: of Æthiopia, ſee on Habak.3.7.

Put and Lubim] People of Africa.

thy helpers] Hebr. In thy help; he turns his ſpeech to No.

V.10. Yet was ſhe] For all her ſtrength in numbers of men and munitions, and confederates, and auxiliaries.

carried away] Her Inhabitants expelled, captivated, the City waſted. This muſt have been before the time of Nahums Prophecy, and ſerve as an example for Nineveh to look upon: this ſome think to have been done by one Sabacus King of Æthiopia, mentioned in Herodotus: Sure it is that it was afterward repaired, and again over-run by the Aſſyrians, and Chaldeans after, as appears in Jeremy and Ezekiel, and long after that re-built or repaired by Alexander the Great.

daſhed in pieces] A cruelty which was uſed in Cities taken by force of arms, ſee Pſa.137.4. Iſa.13.6. Hoſ.13.16.

caſt lots] For to part them as a prey, ſee Joel 3.3. Obad.v.11.

great men] Uſed as the baſe vulgar.

V.11. Thou alſo] Here he begins to apply the former example of Gods judgment upon No, or Alexandria, to Nineveh; Nothing can hinder God from dealing with Nineveh, as he did with No; he is the Judge of all the world, and he is ever like himſelf, one and the ſame.

ſhalt be drunken] with the cups of Gods wrath, Jer. 25.15,17,27. Iſa.51.17. Pſa.75.8. Job 21.20. Pſa.11.6. Apoc.14.10.

thou ſhalt be hid] For fear and ſhame, and brought to nothing.

ſeek] Forced ſo to do, but all in vain.

V.12. Fig-trees] Shall be eaſily taken by the enemies. An apt ſimilitude.

V.13. In the midſt of thee] In the ſight of all, in the midſt of thy Cities and ſtrong holds.

Women] Effœminate and weak, not able to endure the ſight of the enemy: in their walled towns they ſhould have weak and trembling hearts; God would ſtrike them with terrour, ſee Deut.7.20. Levit. 26.16,17,36,37.

thy gates] All ſhall be opened to the enemies.

thy bars] Thine incloſures and defences, nothing can with-ſtand Gods hand.

V.14. Draw thee waters] Make all needful preparations and proviſions for to hold out the ſiege, repairing the breaches of thy walls with bricks. An ironical kind of ſpeech, as Nahum 2.1. Iſa.8.9,10.

tread the morter] To make bricks, to make and ſtrengthen thy fortifications and defences, ſtones were not there in plenty; Bricks were the more uſed. See Exod.1.14. and 5.7.

V.15. There ſhall the fire] Namely, in thoſe thy ſtrong holds, ſo well repaired and fortified. No means of defence can any wayes be uſed by thee, which ſhall be able any thing at all to avail thee againſt Gods judgment upon thee.

like the canker-worm] Even as thoſe deſtroying creatures gnaw and ſpoil the plants ſuddenly; or, as they themſelves are quickly deſtroyed in any place by fire, or rain, or tempeſt, and change of weather, or otherwiſe.

make thy ſelf many] Another Ironical or ſcoffing ſpeech; like the former. All ſhall not help them.

V.16. Thou haſt multiplied thy Merchants] Merchandiſe and Merchants were ever in great uſe and requeſt. Great men and Princes were Merchants. As the Venetians at this day. See Apoc.18.23. Ezech.27.3,12, &c.21. Eſay 23.8. Nineve had wonderfully multiplied them, as the ſtars in number; as the Canker-worms, and Locuſts, which are very numerous, and they gloried greatly therein. But all this ſhould not avail her.

the Canker-worm ſpoileth, and flyeth away], This is well known in the Canker-worms, Locuſts, and Graſhoppers; they ſoon come and ſpoil fruits, and fields; and after ſoon flee away. See Joel 2. 25. And ſuch ſhall your Merchants be, and their doings, both in their ſpoiling, and in their fleeing away; they ſhall ſtand thee in no ſtead, to help or defend thee.

ſpoileth] Or, ſpreadeth himſelf.

Ver.17. Thy crowned] Namely, the Princes, and great Lords, wearing Diadems and Wreaths, in token of dignity: or vaſſal and confederate Kings. Thy Keepers (and Guardians) ſaith the Vulgar Latin.

in the cold day] In cold weather, and in the night ſeaſon.

but when the Sun ariſeth] When their opportunity ſerveth.

they flee away] So ſhould their Merchants, Princes, and Captains ſerve them, when they moſt needed them.

and their place] See on chap.2.11.

V.18. Thy ſhepherds ſlumber] Thus he derideth the King of Aſhur, and his confidence in his Counſellors and Peers, ſee Jer. 23.1. and 10.21. and 22.22. and 50.6. Ezek.34.2. They are not watchful enough to provide for the ſafety of Nineveh. Thy Heads, Governours, and Officers are dead, or aſtoniſhed, and out of heart, Exod. 15.16. Pſa.76.6. Thus he ſpeaketh to the King of Aſſyria.

Nobles] Or valiant ones.

ſhall dwell in the duſt] As Jer.51.30. lye down, and not be able to riſe up againſt the enemies to help thee.

thy people is ſcattered] There ſhall be ſo great a diſſipation of Nineveh, and the whole Empire, that there ſhall remain no hope of its recollection and reſtauration.

V.19. There is no healing] Heb. Wrinckling or contracting: no piece of help or healing in the leaſt degree. See Jer.8.22. and 46.11.

thy wound is grievous] Dolorous.

ſhall clap their hands] For joy to ſee thy tyranny overthrown, as Pſa.47.1. Lam.2.15. and applauding Gods juſtice in it.

for upon whom hath not?] Meaning that there was no people to whom the Aſſyrians had not done hurt, none free from their tyranny and oppreſſion.

continually] God then in patience forbore them long. And the Aſſyrians were the more inexcuſeable. And Gods people muſt not take offence at his patience, or at their own ſufferings, but leave all to God, who beſt knoweth when and what is beſt to do.

ANNOTATIONS on the Book of the Prophet HABAKKUK.

THE ARGUMENT.

THis Holy Prophet being in extreme grief that Gods own people ſhould ſo abuſe his patience, and run to the extremity of wickedneſſe; he addreſſeth his ſerious and ſad complaint to God, againſt ſuch cruel and curſed practices; and then upon Gods anſwer turneth his ſpeech to tell the Jews in Gods Name; That in the preſent Age wherein they lived, they ſhould, (for the ſuperlative ſins of that ſtubborn and rebellious Nation againſt the Lord and his Law) ſee their Common-weal deſtroyed by the Chaldeans. Afterward, he falleth to wonder and admire that God would advance to height of dignity and Empire, a Nation ſo bitter, haſty, proud, violent, vicious, cruel, and inſatiably covetous, as the Babylonians were; ſuffering them to be Executioners of his judgments, and ſcourgers of his own people. And leſt the Godly, ſeeing the viſion of theſe horrible and laſting Troubles, ſhould deſpair, this muſt be their comfort, that the juſt ſhould live by Faith. And therefore the Lord putteth the Prophet, and every Believer, upon the exerciſe of Faith and patience, the chiefeſt cordials in every calamity, ſtrengthning the heart to ſtay for the effect of Gods Juſtice, both to free his people, and to puniſh the enemy; which puniſhment upon the Chaldean enemy, for their manifold grievous ſins, the Prophet from God doth largely fore-tell. Laſtly, the Prophet maketh a wonderful prayer, celebrating Gods mighty power in ancient deliverances, and terrible executions on Enemies in former times, deſiring that in the midſt of the yeares, God would revive his work, and in wrath remember mercy; and by Faith, he triumpheth even in the midſt of deſperate dangers and miſeries, rejoycing in God, and expecting deliverance from them; and that the glorious God, who had ſhaken the Canaanites, would alſo ſhake the Chaldeans, & bring his people to walk on their high-places again. After he had done his prayer, he ſaith, To the chief ſinger on Neginoth; that is, ſing this ſong with an infinite luſtineſſe and courage; for you ſhall ſee the power of God marvellous in Babylon; and then you ſhall return to Jeruſalem: In this Book, the Prophet expoſtulateth with God, Chap. 1. complains of the Chaldeans, and their ſins, Chap. 2. directeth his prayer to God, Chap. 3.

CHAP.

CHAP. I.

The burden] A Prophecie, with expresse Commission of God, denouncing threatnings and curses, Isaiah 13.1. Nahum 1.1.

which Habakkuk] Of the notations of this name, and why it should be given him, as also, of his parentage and Tribe, of his life and death, there are uncertain guesses, and groundlesse traditions, but no certain verity; but the argument and matter of his Prophecie shewes, that most likely he lived in the dayes of Josiah, or his sons, chap.1.5,6. and chap.2.8. and therefore that he is not that Habakkuk mentioned in the Apocryphal additions to Daniel.

did see] That is, received from God in a Prophetick vision, concerning whom is not here expressed, as usually it is in other Prophets, but it seems to be, first, against the Jewes and wicked men, and oppressors, whom God will punish by the Chaldeans: and after, more at large against the Chaldeans, whom God threatens to destroy for their manifold sins.

V.2. How long] It seems the Prophet before this had preached long, and had proof of the refractorinesse of the people, of their contumacy and obduration in their sins, and seeing now no hope of better, but that things rather grew worse and worse, he burning with the zeal of Gods glory, and hatred of their sins, with-draws himselfe from the people, and privately deals with God, and seeks remedy of him, complaining of their sins, and some way of Gods so long patience in tolerating of them, without redressing it: He doth not in cruelty so much provoke God to punish them, as he cryes to God to amend them; and in his function he must be true and faithful, as to the people, and their salvation, so to God and his glory.

shall I cry?] Lamenting, complaining, seeking to thee for some way of remedy and redresse.

and thou wilt not hear] By chastisements, or some way else, to amend their manners, and abate the deluge of sin, which still encreaseth through impunity, to thy dishonour.

cry out] He was much with God upon this point, somewhat like to the importunate widow; his righteous soul was vexed, as Lots, 2 Pet.2.8. Psa.119.136. and no doubt but this was the common complaint of all the godly at this time.

of violence] Either general against good men, or particular against the Prophet, Gen.6.11.

and thou wilt not save] And help, but holdest still thy peace, Psa. 50.21.

V.3. why dost thou shew me] Suffer them so to sin, and that in my sight, before my face: Jeremy was more passionate, too passionate, chap.15.10. and chap.20.14. &c. see 1 Kings 19.4,10,14.

greivance] among them, whereby they violently grieve, vex, and spoild one another, and specially the wicked so grieve the godly.

raise up strife] As amongst themselves, one against another, so chiefly against those Prophets which reproved them: see Jer.11.18. &c. and 12.6. and 15.10. Hos.4.4. they could not, they would not endure their holy admonitions; see Prov.29.1.

V.4. The law is slacked] Neglected, trodden under foot, hath no authority or reverence among them, but is sleighted, contemned, cast behinde their backs: This shews that the Prophet is not thus passionate in any carnal respect, for any private and personal grievance, spoil or violence done to himself, but for the violation of Gods holy Law, and his honour thereby; the custome of wicked men is clean contrary.

judgment doth never go forth] All judgment and justice is oppressed and suppressed, Isa.59.4,6,7,9,14. none dare call for it, the wicked do so sway and domineer, and thy great patience, O Lord, causeth thy Law to be, as it were, disarmed of her terrour, and to be of no strength or authority with these wicked men, and also to be no more publikely used.

doth compasse about] If any good man be left with any spark of righteousnesse in him, he dare not come abroad, or be seen; or if he do, the wicked presently beset him round about, and, as it were, besiege him, that he dare not oppose himself against them, and their doings, Psa.12.1,8. and 22.13. Isa.59.15. they so prevail by reason of their multitude, of their credit and power, that justice suffereth violence, and is not exercised with liberty and righteousnesse.

wrong judgment proceedeth] Or, wrested judgment. All the course of publike Justice is broken off, where remedy should be had, there the malady it self reigneth; the Tribunals and Judgment-seats are dens of thiever, instruments of oppression; see Psa.94.20. Amos 6. 3,12. and 5.7.

V.5. Behold ye] Gods answer to the former expostulation; Or, his answer in the mouth of his Prophet, fore-telling their speedy destruction; that God by the wonderful administration of his providence will beat back their violence, and repay it with another violence, the violent invasion of the Babylonians.

among the heathen] Seeing ye will not learn in Gods schooll, out of his sacred mouth.

and regard] Thus he would awaken their sleepy souls, by this restitution for their attention.

and wonder] Thus he would raise them up to admiration and marvellous astonishment, and that at the horiblenesse of the judgment following, seeing they would not be gently tutor'd in Gods School, but had now rendred themselves intolerable, unfit table any longer to God or good men; and therefore it was high time now that such a judgment should fall upon them.

a work in your dayes] They had been often warned of Gods vengeance, but they put off the evil day, and Gods patience so lulled them in security, that they began to deride the Prophets, Isa.28.15. Jer.5.12,13. and contemn Gods judgments: they are told therefore that even in their dayes the judgment should come, it should be no longer delayed, see Joel 1.15. Ezek.7.5.&c.

ye will not believe] Ye would not believe my words, and my Prophets, neither shall ye believe this judgment; incredible to you was the one, and so incredible shall be the other, it shall exceed all belief: yet both shall prove true, and ye shall finde and feel this latter to be so, to your amazement and astonishment. This whole verse Saint Paul cites, Acts 13.41. yet with some variation, and somewhat following as may seem the translation of the LXX, even where it varies from the Hebrew text, as in the second word. And the Apostle makes use of it to his present purpose, and applies it to those judgments that should befall the Jews for their contempt of the Preaching of the Gospel in his time.

V.6. Loe, I raise up the Chaldeans] He begins to declare that incredible judgment, and nominates the very thing in particular, he dwells no more upon Generals, the Chaldeans are the men that should fight under his Banner, by his secret instinct, and be his executioners of this judgment.

that bitter and nasty nation] See Isa.5.26.&c. God that can bring light out of darknesse, and good out of evil, can make good use of the sins of men, use them to a good end, to the accomplishment of his just judgments.

which shall march through the breadth] Heb. breadths, so terrible shall they be, and without fear spread over all the land; nothing shall withstand them, Jer.15.38.

V.7. Their judgment, &c.] Or, from them shall proceed the judgment of these, and the captivity of these. They shall receive no Law, nor assistance from any; their reason and lust is their will, and execution is in their power. Or, from the Chaldeans shall the judgement and captivity of those sinful Jews proceed; and so they shall be payed in their kinde, with violence for their violence.

dignity] Or exultation, or deportation and captivity; or burden, as some translate the word.

V.8. swifter] Though the Chaldeans be far off, yet speedily and swiftly shall they come.

Leopards] See Hosea 13.7. Jer.5.6.

evening wolves] That want their prey all the day, and are so at that time the more fierce and ravenous. See Zeph.3.3. Jer.5.6. Psal. 104.20. Jer.39.5. Ezech.22.27.

spread themselves] Being many and numerous.

as the Eagle] Jer.4.13. and 48.40. Lam.4.19. Dan.7.4. 2 Sam.1. 23. Job 9.26.

V.9. for violence] Or the prey, see that chap.1.2.

their faces] Or, the supping up of their faces, &c. Or, their faces shall look toward the East, Heb. The opposition of their faces towards the East they shall overthrow, and diffipate all whatsoever shall come against them, as this tempestuous winde doth. See Jonah 4.8.

as the sand] See Gen.22.17. Josh 11.4. This similitude is often used in Scripture.

V.10. And they] Heb. he; the King Nebuchadnezzar.

at the Kings] To wit, at the Kings of the Jewish people, as King Zedekiah, 2 Kings 25.10. And at their confederate Kings and Princes, 2 Kings 25.6.7.

heap dust] Make Mounes and Rampiers. Peradventure he meaneth to shew the easinesse of the conquest, as if the Chaldeans should do it as it were in a pastime, as little children do make trenches and forts in their dirt. Thus the Prophet leaves them no hope of escaping, that they might thereby be humbled, and repent, or else left the more inexcusable.

V.11. Then] When Nebuchadnezzars greatnesse is come to the height.

shall his minde] Heb. Winde; that is, his felicity.

change] He shall be drunk with his victories, felicity, and prosperity, that shall so alter and change him, as to deprive him of that seeming modesty, and reasonable carriage, which he used before, and put him up above mortality. Or, he shall leave off forreign expeditions, and further conquests; think rather to enjoy the felicity he had already atchieved. But his felicity shall then also change, Dan.4.30. Thus the Prophet begins to comfort the Elect and faithful ones among his people, with fore-telling the issue and down-fal of this their mighty and mortal enemy, that so they may hope for an end of their miseries procured by him.

offend] Thus his prosperity should lift him up to make way for his down-fal. Thus Gods secret providence, and judgements do worke.

imputing, &c.] Thus sacrilegiously robbing God of his honour, and ascribing his victories, even over the Jews, and their God, unto his idols, which provokes God to take his own, and his peoples cause into his own hands, to his ruine, Jer.25.14. And thus inconstant will that potency be which is set upon the vanity of idols, whereby the Prophet comforteth the faithful, that God will also destroy the Babylonians abusing this victory, and becoming proud and insolent, attributing the praise hereof to their idols. See the five first Chapters of Daniel.

V.12. Art not thou from everlasting?] The Prophets words to God, in his own name, and in the name of the godly, triumphing in God, and gloriously boasting, as it were in, and by their faith in him, and in the affurance that he is their God by Covenant; and therefore they shall be safe and be happy, notwithstanding all these sharp chastisements. The interrogation is stronger then a single asseveration. And he converts his speech to God, not to wicked men. It were in vain to contend with them. But then best may we oppose their blasphemies, and courageously contend with them, when we first make good this Covenant between God and us, and firm our faith in it. Then may we out-brave their carnal boastings with our spiritual boastings and rejoycings.

from everlasting the Lord our God?] Eternal in thy self: and for many ages of old by Covenant our God. Thus they remember themselves of the gracious Covenant, not newly made with them, but four hundred years before their ancestours came out of Egypt. And they have found in all ages and generations how faithfully God hath still kept his Covenant: And by this they strengthen their faith in their present extremities.

mine holyone?] The only sacred Deity which I adore; him whom I only acknowledg to be holy amongst all other gods, which are but impure idols that pollute the soul. And I one of thy holy ones, by thy gracious adoption; and so under thy safe and blessed protection.

we shall not die] Thus he and they raise up themselves as Conquerours over these calamities. They are under Gods tuition, therefore they cannot perish. Gods defence, and their safety, are things that cannot be separated. All the defence that all the world can give, cannot give this assurance. But they know that death it selfe shall not destroy them, 1 Cor.15.54.&c. but be their out-gate to perfect felicity. And Gods Church shall ever be preserved in this world by his power; the gates of hell shall not prevail against it. Thy Church cannot perish seeing it is joyned to thee, who art everlasting, by a covenant, which importeth communication of grace, life and glory. See Psalm 102.28. and 118 17. Lam.3.19.20 Mat.22.32. Thus faith gloriously triumphs in the midst of afflictions, resting upon Gods Covenant of life, and quietly submitting to his chastisements in the mean time. Here the Chaldee Paraphrase substituteth these words instead of the former, holy in the works of faith, referring them to God.

thou hast ordained them for judgment] It is true that thou hast established that great Empire to punish thy Church, 2 Kings 19.25. Esay 10.5,6,7. but not to destroy it, as it endeavoureth to do by an exceeding tyranny, contrary to thy nature and will: what the Chaldeans reason, and guidance we are not wholly left to his lust and pleasure. This holds up our hope against despair, and gives us light in this dark night of afflictions, and is our buckler against all tentations, that thou wilt order all for our good, for our chastisement, though in truth for his judgment.

mighty God] Hebr. rock, Deut.32.4. He and his Counsel change not in all the changes of the world, but remain firm and stable, as a Rock. In him is strength, Isa.26.4. and 28.16.

established] Hebr. founded, grounded him, for perseverance, and continuance in this to the end.

for correction] This is the end why God used so sharp a whip as the Chaldeans, yet did moderate it by his secret providence. All is not to destroy his people, but to correct them for their sins, and to amend them.

V.13. Thou art of purer eyes] The Prophet layes this down for a principle, as according with the nature of God. And this he makes his stay and prop in this conflict and tentation following: takes this for granted. So Jer.12.1. And this must curb his turbulent affection, so ready to expostulate the matter with God.

wherefore lookest thou?] Patiently, without punishing it? He doth not impiously deny Gods providence, as the man, Job 22.13, 13,14. Psal.10.verse 11. and 73.11. and 94.7. He doth not ascribe all to fate, or fortune. He speaks as flesh and blood would prompt to him: he speaketh doubtingly, and conflictingly: he contests rather with himself, then with God, he complains rather of himself, then of God, still sticking to this principle of piety, That God governs the world, and that God and his justice cannot be divided asunder; he righteously governs it, though our blinde eyes cannot see it to be so, nor could he satisfie himself and his doubts therein.

wicked] The Chaldeans, who are unjust in oppressing thy people, who never offended them, and are inordinate in the execution of thy judgments, which they do not regard; and are more wicked then those whom thou punishest by them. This stumbled the Prophet: He would fain be resolved in it. See Job 21.7. Psal.37.1. and 73.3. Jer.12.1.

V.14. And makest men as the fishes] Hast thou forsaken nations, and states, like fishes, and such like beasts, which are his that can first take them, and so as a prey devour one one other? Thus he proceeds in his complaint, conflict, and expostulation, secretly wishing that God would stop these flood-gates of sin, and curb the rage of these outragious men.

V.15. They take up] The Chaldeans thus deal with all promiscuously, with good and bad alike, inhumanely with Gods people, as well as with others, violating all Laws by their unjust tyranny; yet in all this hesitation, and tentation, wherein he wrestles so strongly, he still makes his addresse to God for redresse and remedy: he acknowledgeth Gods hand in all this, and applies himself to God, to unloose these knots, to help him out of the briars of these perplexities, and his own foolish and absurd imaginations, that he might be able to see Gods straight steps in these crooked paths: his order in these confusions. Athiests and blasphemers do otherwise.

therefore they rejoyce] Glory in their mischiefs, triumph in their tyrannical exorbitances, and thou sufferest them. This was his wonderment and amazement.

V.16. Therefore they sacrifice] Instead of acknowledging all their greatnesse to come from God, and giving him thanks, and serving him, they attributed it to themselves, and to their industry, understanding, and valour. See Esay 10.7,13. and 45.4,5. and Chap. 37.24 &c. They sacrilegiously rob God of his honour, and would deifie themselves; they suffocate, stifle, and extinguith the right knowledge of God, and put themselves in his place, arrogating that to themselves which is only due to him. They pretend much to their idols, verse 11, yet in effect they reduce all to themselves. And most do so now in these dayes: Generals in wars magnifie themselves and their own parts, though for shew sake they appoint and solemnize Thanksgiving dayes to God. And private men in their own affairs are not free of this fault.

their portion is fat] Thus their prosperous successes do blow them up, and in fatuate them, Prov.1.32.

V.17. Shall they therefore] Shall the Chaldean alwayes do so? how long wilt thou suffer it? wilt thou, O Lord, suffer them, after so many faults and impieties, both against men, and against thee, to enjoy their oppressions, and endlesly continue in them?

empty their net] And spread it anew to take more preyes, that their succeeles past shall egge them on, and make them more eager for new exploits.

to slay the nations] See Jer. 25.9. Ezek. chap. 25. &c. And thou not stop them, but suffer them still to go unpunished. Hitherto his complaint and expostulation.

CHAP. II.

I will stand] Heb. I did stand. The Prophet was deep in doubts, swallowed up in a gulf of tentations, as if the world were ruled by chance, by fate, or by fortune, and no wise guided by Gods providence; and he could finde out no office to rid himself out of this perplexity. But here he begins to recollect himself: And he speaks not in his own person only, but in the person of all the godly: he represents their like affections, and conditions. And he saith, I will stand; and after again, see me, importing his settled resolution, and constant purpose so to do. And the cafe did so require it, a case of so difficult inquisition, and so great consequence. The phrase is taken from watchers, which were in strong and guarded places, as Esay 21.6,7,8. The meaning is by prayers, meditations, and lifting up of my minde, I did desire of God some Prophetick Revelation, whereby I might be taught how to answer to that which profane and weak persons might oppose against Gods providence, which doth so far favour those wicked Chaldeans.

my watch] And after, tower or fenced place. He relates not to his Propheticel Office, nor yet to the Word of God immediately, but to the recesse of his own careful and anxious minde, to bethink himself, and cast about every way; and he settles upon that which followes.

and will watch] This is his Resolve. He will be attent, he will be as a watchman or scout; and that is a vigilant and careful office: He must be quiet, and silent, and watch when others sleep, and not disturbing any without great cause: And he must be perseverant, without wearying. See Isaiah 21.6,7,8.

to see] And hear: All his senses must be imployed, and all little enough in this case.

what he will say] Nor what the adversaries will object in this case, and calumniate; They will be open mouthed enough; nor what the world will say, what will be the dictate of carnal reason, what the sense and censure of flesh and blood, the speculations and imaginations of mans brain, the judgment of his heart. Nor what Satan will suggest. All these will multiply distractions, and heap up confusions in the soul. And they that yeeld up themselves to them, undoubtedly and worthily perish in them. But I will see what he will say, Psal.8.5,8. I will rise up above the world, I will renounce the judgment of man, I will break through these snares of Satan,

And in my minde resolve to see what God will say unto me, in this point. He and his Word shall be all in all unto me. And indeed this is the only way, there is no other remedy to these tentations; this is the way we must fight against them. Gods Word will be as a ladder, as wings, to raise us up aloft above the world, that from such an height we may the better discern and judge of the passages here below. Let that obtain its authority with us, and we wholly depend upon it, and this will suffice us abundantly; nothing better for us then so to do.

unto me] Or, in me. Or, God would speak unto me; namely, by inward revelation. See Hos. 1. 2. that I might answer to the people in Gods words.

and what I shall answer] Then I can, and not till then. When I have heard the voice of God in his Word, I shall be then and there-by sufficiently instructed what to answer in this intricate perplexity.

when I am reproved] Or, when I am argued with. Heb. Upon my reproof or arguing. And also upon that denunciation, Chap. 1. 5. &c. These reproofs are the assaults of Satan, the blasphemous speeches of wicked men, and our turbulent passions that rise up in us, and are our own Tempters. The sum of all is, That no judgment can be made of Gods providence in the government of the world, but by the light and verdict of God in his Word. Unlesse we subject our selves wholly to him, rashnesse and arrogancy will blinde us, and lead us into the ditch. See Psalm 73. 17.

V. 2. And the Lord answered me] Gods answer to the last expostulation and complaint. God in time will not fail to answer and succour his thus waiting on him.

write] This relates to his Prophetical Office, and is for the use of the Church, and the edification of it.

the vision] Even that admonition which hereafter follows; and that sentence against the Chaldean, which from thence is denounced against him for his sins, to the end of the Chapter; which sentence is satisfactory to the Prophets greivance and complaint in the latter part of the former Chapter. Yet some upon weaker grounds extend and expound the meaning thus; I have not yet taken away the gift of Prophecie from my people, by which I will cause you to know not only such accidents as do trouble them, but also what shall happen until Christs coming, which is called the end of the time of the Law. See Dan. 10. 14. Or thus, The matter of this vision is not to take effect presently, but in Gods due time.

plain upon tables] See Esay 8. 1. &c. and 30. 8. 2s Deut. 27. 8. in great Characters, that at the first view with one blench of the eye a runner may read it. So plainly must this be written, that there might remain no doubt or difficulty in the meaning and truth of the vision: and the matter of it be the more memorable, remarkable, and regardable.

V. 3. yet for an appointed time] We must wait and hope: God will try and exercise our faith and patience. We are too hasty and hot upon the execution and accomplishment. But God must have liberty left him to delay and defer it to his own time, and we must depend upon his power and pleasure.

but at the end it shall speak] It shall be sure, though slow, experience shall prove it: mean while we must not mistrust the truth of it.

though you tarry] And yet in the end of the verse it will not tarry. The meaning is, though it seem to tarry in our hasty expectations, and God seem slow, yet it doth not tarry at Gods time, nor is he slack, Heb. 10 37. 2 Pet. 3. 9. we must not tye God to our rules, nor regulate him by our moody passions, but give that honour to his Word & promises as absolutely to rest in them, knowing Truth it self will be sure to compleat the truth of them. And this indeed is the true nature of Faith. We have need of patience, Heb. 10. 36. we must not cast away our hope.

surely come] Heb. 10. 37.

V. 4. Behold his soul] He is not right and upright, who lifts up himself, and seeks to shift some other way; to strengthen himself and gain safety and security by some other means. He shall misse his end, and be broken in his enterprise; he shall never be safe and quiet; he doth but torment himself in vain. The LXX and Heb. 10. 38. thus; My Soul shall have no pleasure in him: wherein the Apostle is rather an Expositor, then a Translator, not tying himself to the termes of a Translation.

But the just shall live by his Faith] This faith in God, his Word, and promise is the only true Port and Haven wherein he may safely and securely anchor himself, against all the storms and tempests formerly mentioned. See Esay 30. 7, 15. and 7. 4. and 28. 12. It is not the inherent fidelity and integrity of his own heart and conscience that doth it; but his faith in God, emptying himself of all mundane means, helps, and strengths, and trusting only by his faith to the faith of God in his Word and promises; This man shall live by it, and live too eternally, for otherwise all the blessings of this life were but poor things in themselves, if they related but to this short life only: but these blessings are pledges and pawns of eternal life to the faithful. This text is famously alledged in the New Testament, Rom. 1. 17. Gal. 3. 11. Heb. 10 38. S. Paul extends the meaning from this life to eternal life, and argues from eternal life to justification, because they two are things ever conjoyned, never separated; and that both are freely by faith, without the works of the Law. He proves there is no justification by the Law, or our works of the Law. And therefore it must be revealed in the Gospel, and be by Gods sole mercy, and so by faith believing it: as he proves out of this testimony of Habakkuk. And in the Epistle to the Hebrews we are exhorted not to cast away our confidence of heaven, and of our reward there, but patiently expect the receiving of it, for as much as the just in this world do live by faith, which shall cease when fruition comes in stead of it. And thus in this verse the Prophet opposeth the fact of the proud hypocrite, to the act and office of the just in those troublous times. Some make the former part of the verse to relate to Nebuchadnezzars person, and his lifting up himself, Dan. 4. 30. And others render the sense of the whole verse thus; The remedies against these calamities of the Church, is not to seek out places to secure themselves from Gods hand, as the Jews did, when they went into Ægypt, and other places, and there perished, nor much lesse to separate themselves from the Communion of the Church by Apostacy: these are only damnable errours of carnal sense, which God reproveth. But good souls having no other help, shall by a lively faith in God be maintained in the true spiritual life, which is the conjunction with God, and the feeling of his grace; and shall be defended from any thing which may hurt their salvation.

his faith] The particle his is omitted in the Apostles citations, Rom. 1. 17. Gal. 3. 11. Heb. 10. 38.

V. 5. yea also] Or how much more.

he] The Babylonian, of whom he complained, Chap. 1. 12, &c. He shall be punished; and so the Prophets greivance satisfied, and God be seen justly to govern the world.

transgresseth by wine] The Babylonians sins for which he is sentenced; drunkennesse, pride, and insatiablenesse: Or he is drunk with pride, and insatiablenesse. Others thus; If I blame my people, that think so fave themselves by their cunning, how much more shall I condemn the Babylonians, who drowned in pleasures, and made drunk with prosperity, do boldly contemn my threatnings? he seemeth to have relation to Belshazzars drinking feasts, Dan. 5. Or to the taking of Babylon in a night of great dissolutenesse, Isai. 21. 5 Jer. 51. 39.

who enlargeth his desire as hell] Prov. 27. 20. and 30. 16. The Babylonian hath been inflamed with an unsatiable desire and ambition, See Esay 5. 14.

but gathereth to him all Nations] Bringeth them into his subjection, and maketh a prey of their goods, Isai. 10. 13.

V. 6. shall not all these] People whom he gathered and heaped to himself. Here his punishment begins, and not in the former verse.

take up a parable] They shall taunt him with tart and bitter jests and scoffs, mock him, deride him. See Esay 14. 4. Jer. 24. 9. 2 Chr. 7. 20. Such Taunts are lawful where the case and cause deserves it.

and say] It is in the singular number, he shall say, rather the Taunter, or happily the just man that lives by his faith, ver 4. And thus Faith triumphs afore-hand; the nature of it being such as is described, Heb. 11. 1.

woe to him] Or, Ho he, which best agreeth with a scoff. The many sins of the Babylonians, are reckoned up again, their unstatiable ambition, covetousnesse, bloodinesse, tyranny, inhumanity, riot, luxury, idolatry; as the causes of Gods judgments against them.

that increaseth] Conquering unjustly, and spoiling other nations, that he had no right to.

How long] Signifying that all the world shall with the destruction of Tyrants; And that mean while they are endured with much grief and irksomnesse, as the troublers of the world, the perverters of all order and justice, by their ambition, covetousnesse, and oppression. And nature it self dictates so much unto them, that they cannot still continue so to do, it must have an end. And all this though we see it, and say it of others, yet we cannot see it, and say it, in, and of our selves, in cases that are alike, so blinde are we at home, though quick-sighted in other mens sins.

thick clay] Namely, with earthly riches, the desire of which is the souls ensnaring, or a burden which overcometh and smothereth him alive. See 1 Tim. 6. 9, 10. They burden him, and make him a burden to himself.

V. 7. Shall they not rise up?] That is, the Medes and Persians, that should destroy the Babylonians, Jer. 50. and 51. Esay 13. 14, 21. Chapters. The interrogation adds to the undoubted certainty of it.

suddenly] Though they thought themselves so safe and sure, that no sudden mischief could possibly befall them, but that they might timely withstand it.

bite thee] A phrase taken from hunting dogs.

V. 8. Because thou hast spoiled] Another cause of Gods just judgement upon the Babylonians: and that by way of retaliation: See Esay 33. 1. Jer. 25. 12, 14. Mat. 7. 2. Apoc. 13. 10.

all the remnant] Among the nations which thou hast spoiled; or the remnant of the nations which thou hast not touched.

blood] Heb. bloods: implying multitudes of bloody actions.

and for the violence of the land] Or, oppressing the land, ver. 17. the violent oppression thou didst bring upon all the world.

of the City] Babylon, that used the violence, or Jerusalem specially; and other Cities that suffered and indured the violence.

God the just Judge of the world, will in his time take due vengeance on all such men, on all such Kingdoms. Psal. 94. 1.

Another cause of the judgement.

to his house] To encrease and establish his estate, so that he might be out of all danger: so to enrich and settle himself, and his posterity. But this evil covetousnesse, and wealth so evil gotten, shall prove evil and pernicious to him, and his house; as the next verse doth further avow.

his nest on high] Thus wealth pusts up with pride, and security; They make their riches their strong Castle. See Psal. 49. 5. 6. and 52. 7. Prov. 13. 8. delivered from the power of evill] Heb. palm of the hand; alluding to that, Gen. 11. 4. Thus riches do intoxicate him.

V. 10. Consulted shame to thy house] In stead of advancing and setting it up, see Prov. 11. 28. and 22. 16. Eccl. 5 13, 13, 14. He speaks here to the Babylonians; signifying that he, and so the covetous man in general should thus speed; The glory they hoped for, God shall turn to their shame: Their consultations, and agitations, and machinations, wherein they were so active and industrious, day and night, shall have no better end.

by cutting off so many people] Though the Babylonian by this means thought to gather wealth, to raise his name, to become glorious, being so victorious; and that it was impossible it should prove otherwise; yet for all this his hopes should be frustrated and he should reap shame in the end.

sinned against thy soul] God shall return the evil upon thine own head. Thus wicked men hurt themselves most in hurting others.

V. 11. For the stone shall] as it were to witnesse that thou hast built thy house with violence and rapine.

and the beame] Or, piece, or fastning. Heb. The fragment: or fastening in brick wherewith they ordinarily built their houses in Babylon, with timber among it; Gen. 11. 3. Others the morter, which comes almost to the same sense.

answer it] or, witnesse against it; He may seem to allude to Responsories; as in Quires, and Musick; so the stone and timber shall answer one another, every part of the building accord, and bear concord in this, that it was built in blood; and that wo and shame shall be to him therefore.

V. 12. woe to him] Thus may be the cry and answer of these senseless creatures: when the Prophets of God, and God himself by their lesse creatures: when the Prophets of God, and God himself by their cries, admonitions and threatnings could not be heard. See Luk. 19. 40.

with blood] Heb. bloods. See Jer. 22. 13. Ezech. 24. 9. Nahum 3. 1. Covetous cruel men suck the blood of the poor by their oppressions.

V. 13. Is it not] Who can make any question but that the ruine of Babylon, to the foundation, and increase of which, so many nations, for so many ages, had contributed their labour, is a singular work of Gods vengeance. And that it is a righteous judgement of God, that such a people should so toyle, tire, weare and weary themselves, for their vain and worldly greatnesse, and should so perish in it, and with it. God will have his turne; his hand shall be in it; that such men as will so labour to be rich, with an evil conscience, shall lose the fruit of their labour, though they had all the world on their side.

in the very fire] Jer. 51. 58.

V. 14. For the earth shall be full with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord] Or, by knowing the glory of the Lord, by the just and powerfull punishment of his enemies. Gods glory was clouded and darkened before, when his people, holy City, and Temple, were destroyed by the Babylonians: the knowledge of him, and his glory was then obscured and I lay hid. But when he shall destroy Babylon, and take vengeance on it, for his people's sake; then shall the knowledge of him, and of his glory be openly known, and fully manifested. Psalm 9. 16. Then it shall be clearly seen that he governs the world; and is the just judge of it Psal. 58. 11. and 9, 8. That place Isaiah, 11. 9. mentioneth the knowledge of God in general, omitting this particular of his glory: And that hath reference to the abounding knowledge of God in the dayes of the Gospel, more then in the time of the Law, whereof, See Jer. 31. 34. Joel 2. 28. 1 John 2. 27. Heb. 8. 11.

as the waters] Most abundantly. See Esay 48. 18. and 8, 7, 8.

V. 15. Wo] Another cause of Gods judgement upon Babylon.

to him] To the King, or Kings of Babylon, speaking of the Empire.

that giveth his neighbour] His fellow Kings, or neighbour Princes and confederates.

drink] In such manner as follows. The whole speech is metaphorical, or allegorical.

that puttest thy bottle to him] This may be understood in the proper sense, of the dissolutenesse of the Babylonian courtsin the which they did filthy and dishonest acts. Or, rather figuratively of the dishonest practices, by which the Babylonian drew in other Princes and Nations for to joyn with him in his wars, upon hopes of sharing in the victories, spoiles, and prey, or upon other fair pretences bringing them to the same desires with him. Some translate it, not bottle; but thy heat, or thy wrath, or anger.

and makest him drunk also] With the like covetous and ambitious desires.

that thou mayest look on their nakednesse] Fail them in the end, and spoil them, and bring them into ignominious slavery.

V. 16. Thou art filled with shame for glory] Or, more with shame, then with glory; abusing thy glory to thy shame. Or, exposing others to shame, to augment thy glory; not much heading their shame, that they have sustained, for thy sake, so it may serve to the furtherance of thy glory.

drink thou also] Of the cup of Gods wrath, Jer. 25. 26, 27. Beare thou the same judgements.

uncovered] Be a shameful spectacle, uncircumcision was counted opprobrious among the Jews.

spewing] A term taken from drunkards feasts; which do spoil the most adorned, and beautifull places. The meaning is, Gods judgements shall carry thee into most unworthy and infamous acts; Jer. 51. 57.

V. 17. For the violence of Lebanon] As he that fells'th trees in a wood, is often-times crushed by them: so thy oppression and violence will cause thy ruin. See Esay 14. 8. Ezek. 31. 16. Or, rather thine enemies shall hunt, pursue, and take thee, as the hunters in Lebanon with all eagernesse and violence hunt the wilde beasts. So that the violence which the Babylonians used against the Jews, and Jury should be requited with like violence used by their enemies against them. The meaning of the words is obscure. Of Lebanon. See on Zechary 11. 1.

and the spoil of beasts which made them afraid] This likewise is obscure, and subject to various senses. The most likely is this, That as oft times wolves and other ravening beasts, are surprized in the greatest heat of their slaughter; which blindeth them; and they terrified thereupon; so the like shall happen to thee.

violence of the land, &c.] See on verse 8.

V. 18. what] Here is another cause of Gods judgements upon Babylon: and with all a close intimation that all these judgements denounced against Babylon shall come, not from vain images, and imaginary deities of the Heathens; as their Nemesis, or Astrea; But from the true Jehovah, the Lord God of the Jews, dwelling in his holy Temple.

profiteth] A scoff at the Chaldeans vain confidence in their idol. It profiteth neither it self, nor its worshippers; But fills them, and deludes them, with a false expectation of help by it.

that the maker thereof] What deity can the maker and graver bring to such materials? what deity can arise from the handy-craft of man? He can grave the meetre, wood, or stone; but cannot change the nature of them. It is still but a graven image, and no more.

teacher of lies] Idols are so called, Jer. 10. 8. 14. Zach. 10. 2. because that according to the opinion of Idolaters, they are remembrances, and visible documents of an invisible deity: and in the mean time, they cause mans minde to go astray from the true and saving knowledge of God revealed in his word: imprinting false opinions of God in him; bringing him down to sensible things; and not raising him up to spirituall ones. See Isaiah 44. 10, 20. Men herein so bewitch and blinde themselves with false and foolish imaginations; as if purposely they meant to deny their own reason and understanding; their prejudicate opinion, false fancys, and meere illusion, must prevaile against it. See Isaiah 40. 18, 19, 20, 21. and 44. 18, 19, 20. yet Papists call them Lay-mens books.

trusteth therein] A prodigious errour, a stupendious stupidity, to give divine worship, to put trust, and affiance for help, and succour, in the workmanship of his own hands. Psal. 115. 8. and 135. 18. Jer. 10. 14.

dumb idols] It is but mettal, flock, or stone still; it cannot speak; the work-man with all his skill cannot change the nature of the stuffe and matter, whereon he works. Psalm 115. 5. and 135. 15, 16, 17. Jer. 10. 6.

V. 19. Wo] He sharply enveighs against this blockishnesse in man to have such conceits of blocks, as if any divine vertue lay hidden in them. It is but wood, but stone still, for all that.

Awake] To help me. See 1 Kings 18. 27. Thus prayer proper to God, they exhibit to idols.

it shall teach] That is, counsell and direct thee. Though otherwise it be a teacher of lies, yet it self shall suffice to teach thee this, that it is dumb and senseless. There needs no other; there can be no better teacher. But they are bad scholars, their superstition sets them a madding.

Behold] Calls them to consider; to shew themselves men; and to see the grosse cozenage of Satan.

laid over] Foolish idolaters think the better of their idols, if they be finely garnished. Papists have finer cloathes for their images on their greatest festivals, no breath] See what they are within, Psalm 135. 17. Look to that.

V. 20. But the Lord] Opposing the true God, and the worship due to him, to those false Idols, and the trust put in them. Having overthrown the errour, he then establisheth the truth.

is in his holy Temple] Not included in images: neither was there any image made of him in his Temple. But such manner of worship in types and ceremonies, as his holy Word and Law warranted and prescribed; expressly forbidding images, Psal. 11. 4. Deut. 4. 12.

The meaning is, He liveth and reigneth in heaven, in glory; and is present in grace and Spirit in his Temple: and it is fitting that all the world should submit to him, in all humility. Thus he sheweth the Churches happines and duty in these troublous times; by meditation, of Gods presence, and glory; thereby comfortably to expect deliverance in his time, and mean-while to possess their souls in patience.

let all the earth] Heb. Be silent all the earth before him, Zeph.1.7. Zech.2.13. Though all men rage against him, yet he can soon silence them. Psal.2.1.2.3.4.5. The Jews therefore should fear nothing; for all the fury of their enemies; but know they are safe under his protection; and in silence submit to his power, and judgements; and subject themselves to him in patience, and obedience.

CHAP. III.

Verse 1. A Prayer] He prayes himself; and instructs his people to pray unto God; and so herein prescribes them a form of Prayer: fet formes not unlawfull. Herein he sets forth Gods glorious greatnesse, and wonderfull acts; against his enemies, and for his Church. Whereupon he concludes with the triumph of his faith in the midst and height of all afflictions.

of Habakkuk] For himself, and the people; for them it was penned; that thereby they might preserve and exercise their faith and piety, in the times of their captivity and misery; and not fall away to Heathenish superstitions.

upon Sigionoth] Or, according to variable songs, or tunes, or Musicall instruments, called in Hebrew, Sigionoth, The meaning of this term is not certainly known. See Psal.7.1. Heb. wandering or ignorances.

V. 2. O Lord, I have heard thy speech] Heb. Thy report, or, thy hearing. Namely, thy voyce in the precedent prophecie concerning the ruin of the people, and the ruin of Babylon.

and was afraid] At the threatnings of such grivous judgements. See Esay 19.16. Amos 3.8. This is a signe of humiliation and penitency: as not to fear Gods threatnings in his word, is a sign of Atheisme and Infidelity.

revive thy work] Or, preserve alive. Continue thy Church, and thy work of grace in thy Church. See Esay 45.11. Though they seem destinated to death and destruction, yet revive the state and being of thy Church and people. And this he calls Gods work in a singular and eminent way. Esay 60.21. and 61.3. The works of his wisdom, mercy, goodnesse, is more seen in his Church; then in the creation of all the world besides in the midst of years] During the seventy yeers of captivity; which is the midst of years between two equal compasses of 490, so many being before the 70 from Samuel to Saul the first king, and so many after the 70 till Christs death and resurrection who is the Prophet, Priest, and King eternal of his Church. Thus some. Though others much rather forbear that partition of the midst of years, between two four hundred and nineties, as lesse warrantable: contenting themselves which this, that when the years draw neer, as Aquila hath it; in a fit time of his appointment; even in the midst of those troubles and years of troubles (in the captivity specially) God would preserve alive his Church, & revive his work of grace in it; and not take it away, as it were in the flower of her age, coming on towards maturity at the coming of Christ. LXX very corruptly thus, in the midst of two beasts; whence the erroneous opinion sprang, That our Saviour was born between an ox and an asse.

make known] To thy Church, and others, by thy word, and works; Let it be actually seen, that it is thy work; and leave not off thy work in the midst, before thou hast brought it to perfection.

in wrath] Thou art justly angry for our sins. Thus he maketh confession: And yet this wrath relates rather to the sins, then to the persons of his faithfull people; and shews rather their sense and apprehension; the his affectiō, who corrects them as a father for their good.

remember mercie] Thus he falls to prayer. And pleads only mercie and free grace; according to his own merciful promises in his gracious covenant. And thus he reconciles together these two contraries, wrath and mercie. A famous sentence, and useful is this against tentations to despair.

V. 3. God came] Deut. 33.2. Judg. 5.4. Psalm 68.8. He describes the glorious bringing in of Gods people into the land of Canaan under Joshua: inferring thereby, that as God had miraculously brought his people into that countrey; so he might bring them in again; notwithstanding all lets and hinderances.

from Teman] This word signifieth the south; and a place in Edom, which was upon the south part of Jury, Amos 1.12. within whose territories lay a great part of that wildernesse through which the people passed, Judg. 5.4.

Paran] Meation is made in Scripture of the plain, mount, and wilderneſſe of Paran. It likewise is on the south coast of Judea. Here Ismael dwelt, Gen. 21.21. And Hadad took it in his way when he fled from Solomon into Egypt, 1 Kings 11.18. It is neer mount Seir, Gen.14.6. And the third station from Mount Sinai, Numb.12.16, and 33.16,17. Whence is that Deut. 33.2. The Lord came from Sinai, and rose up from Seir unto them, he shined forth from mount Paran, and he came with ten thousands of Saints; from his right hand went a fiery Law for them. To which text the Prophet here alludes. Kadesh was in the edge of it; whence Moses sent the spies, Num.13.26. And David sent to Nabal, 1 Sam.25.1.4,5. The Prophet here mentions the famous history of Gods glorious manifestation of himself, and giving his law to the Jews, and taking them into his covenant and care at mount Sinai; to confirm thereby the faith of his people, that they should still be safe under his protection. And that he who did such famous things for their ancestours, would still be mindfull of his Covenant then so gloriously made, and not suffer them to perish in the midst of their calamities amongst their enemies. See Judg. 5.4,5.

Selach] See on Psalm 32. and 9.16. Some make it a note of perpetuity, some of verity, some of musick and melodie, for the elevation of the voice.

His glory covered the Heavens] He insisteth upon this famous history at large; that they should call it to their mindes in their extremest miseries; and thereby assure themselves that God would not forget, what then he had so graciously and glorioſusly done of old for them; and not once imagine that he would now utterly forsake them.

ful of his praise] Of his noble acts, worthy to be praised in all ages, and at all times. Others, of his brightnesse.

V. 4. As the light] Of the sun or moon. See Job 31.26. Esay 30.26.

horns out of his hand] Or, bright beams out of his side. Whereby is meant a power omnipotent, that was joyned with his brightnesse; which was hid to the rest of the world, but was revealed, and yet but in part, in mount Sinai to his people.

hiding of his power] Or laying up of it. There his secret power lay hid. As Psal.31.19. yet in some kinde hid from the world. Aquila and Symmachus, thus; and he put an hiding.

V. 5. Before him] These scourges went before him, and behinde him; as his officers and executioners of his vengeance, where and how he pleased, whithersoever he went. And this he applies to his present purpose; Gods arming himself for vengeance on his enemies; and for the defence and salvation of his people, verſ. 12, 13. See Psal. 18.7, &c.

burning coals] Or, burning diseases. The Devil saith the Trent translation.

at his feet] As his progresse, when he went forth.

V. 6. He stood] He openly shewed himself, as a man doth standing upon his feet.

and measured the earth] Some thus, He stood as it were in the frontier, to mete out the countrey of Canaan, for his people, Exod.15.17. Others extend it to all the world; as being the supreme king of all the earth, to mete out, and distribute it to whom and what nations he will, Acts 17.26. He shewed then his right and power so to do, as being the Creator of all.

And drove asunder the nations] The Canaanites, say some. See Exod.15.15. Josh.2.9. and 5.1. Others thus; such a power of God then appeared, as was able to shake all the world.

and the everlasting mountains] All worldly heights, which seemed immurable melted before him.

perpetuall hills] Which have never changed either place or form, since their creation. See upon Gen.49.26. Deut. 33.15. some understand here the Canaanites that where the inhabitants of mountainous and hilly Palestine; so restraining the words to the present point in hand. By all this the Prophet would lift up the hearts of the faithful to this affiance; that the same hand and power of God would be seen for their deliverance, which their fore-fathers had experience of in days of old.

his wayes are everlasting] To him onely belongeth to move everlastingly in the actual exercise of his power, to do whatsoever he pleaseth; either in an ordinary way, or in an extraordinary, strange, and wonderful manner, for the preservation of his Church and people.

V. 7. I saw the tents] That is, all the neighbouring nations; as the Arabians dwelling in tents, were terrified at the peoples passage through the wilderneſſe. See Exod. 15.14,15. Num.22.3,4. Josh.2. 9,10,11. Others think he hath relation to the discomfiture of Cushan-Rishathaim by Othniel, Judges 3.10. And of the Midianites by Gideon, Judg.7.21,22. And thus also, by recording these other histories of Gods deliverances of his people; the Prophet would perswade them that God is still the same and will be ever like himself, in keeping his covenant, and saving his people; and therefore that in their greatest extremities, yet they never should despair; but lift up their heads, by cherishing their faith and hope in so great and good a God.

Cushan] Or Ethiopia; so named of Cush the eldest son of Cham, or Ham. This Ioy most-what between Arabia, and Egypt? Rich with Topaz, ad other merchandise, Job 28.19. Zera their king came against Asa, with an army of a thousand thousand, and three hundred (thousand) Charets, 2 Chron. 14.9. Tirhakah their king comes up against Sennacherib, 2 Kings 14.9. The Assyrian first, and the Babylonian after subdue them, Esay 20.3. Ezek. 30.5. Ebedmelech the Ethiopian helped, Jeremie, Chap 38, and 39. And the Eunuch which was treasiurer to Candace, the Queen of Ethiopia, was baptized by Philip, Acts 8. some understand some of the former texts of Ethiopia beyond Egypt, south of Egypt, called now Prester Johns countrey, and that Zera Tirhakah, and Candace reigned there.

in affliction] Or, under affliction, Or vanity.

the curtains of the Land of Midian] This land was thus named from Midian, the son of Abraham, by Keturah, Gen.25.1,2,4. and 1 Chr.1.32,33. It lay between Judea and Egypt, and had for its borderers the Ishmaelites, (the posterity of Abraham by Hagar;) the Edomites, and Amalekites, both which came of Esau, And the Moabites which came of Lot. It abounded with Dromedaries, and exercised Merchandise. Hadad king of Edom smote them, Gen. 36. 35. In the time of Moses, he fled thither, served there, and married Tziporah the daughter of Jethro, or Hobab, a Prince and Priest of Midian, son of Reuel. Here was Mount Sinai, and the burning bush. Yet the Elders of Midian joyned to the Moabites against the Israelites, in the wilderneſſe, Numb.22. And for beguiling them in the matter of Peor, and in the matter of Cozbi, the daughter of a Prince of Midian, upon the counsel of Balaam, Joshua by Moses's command slew five Kings of Midian, and wofully destroyed the nation, Numb.31. And the land was given to the Tribe of Reuben, Josh 13.21. In the time of the Judges, Gideon delivered the Israelites out of their hands, and slew the two Princes, Oreb, and Zeeb, and Zebah and Zalmunna, the two Kings of Midian, Judg.6.7, and 8 Chapters, whence is that Psalm 83.9, and Esay 9.4.

V.8. was the Lord displeased against the rivers?] The Red Sea, and Jordan, when he divided them? The interrogation adds weight; that is, was nothing lesse then so, that such a displeasure and anger had been against all sense.

thou didst ride] As a General, marching in the head of his army, and so didst use all the elements as instruments for the destruction of thine enemies. The meaning is, that God was not angry with the waters of the Red Sea, nor Jordan; but that by this means he would destroy his enemies, and deliver his Church, Psalm 114. 5. In like, thus; Every time that thou hast shewed thy self, as it were in battel array, it hath always been for the deliverance of thy people. These were testimonies of thy grace and favour towards thy Church and people, to deliver them out of extreme dangers, and to provide for their safety. And therefore, from those examples his people now being their posterity, and within the same covenant, may have strong hope and expectation of sufficient help and deliverance in like times of need.

thy Chariots of Salvation] Or, thy Chariots were Salvation.

V.9. Thy bow] A figurative term, taken from that in those countryes the Archers did use to carry their bows in certain cases, and it signified that Gods power was manifested, himself armed for war against his Churches enemies, and for their defence, which should still heartten his people to expect his aid in the greatest dangers. Some translate thus; By thy Bowe the channel (of the waters) was made naked, or bare, that is open to be seen.

oaths of the tribes] For the promises which by oaths thou hast confirmed to the Tribes. For he had not only made a Covenant with Abraham, but renewed it with his posteritie, that the posterity might as well trust to it, as the Patriarchs themselves, they being alike interested in it. Others by oaths understand, terrible curses and threatnings against the enemies.

thy word] Firm and irrevocable; Thy word given and passed for it, as we say, said, and done, no place left for any doubting.

Selah] See on verſe 3. and Psalm 3.3.

Thou didst cleave the earth with rivers] Or, thou didst cleave the rivers of the earth. A Poetical hyperbole. That is, thou didst cleave the earth, and causedst waters and streams to come forth every where. Relating chiefly to that, Exod.17.6. 1 Cor.10.4.

V.10. The mountains] Psalm 114.4.5.6,7,8. In all the elements God lets marks of his fatherly love and care for his people; that nothing should hinder, but all further the passage of his people.

the over-flowing of the waters] Thou pouredst down from heaven a strange and fierce rain, Psalm 77.17. This hath chief relation to the waters of the Red Sea, and Jordan; they passed by, and hindred not the Israelites to passe through them.

The deep uttered his voice] A Poetical representation, as if the sea had required mercy and pardon of God, feeling it self strucken by his hand; Or rather, the sea made a noiſe, when it lift up his waves on high, and divided it self to make walls and banks, that the people might go through between them on foot, and testified, as it were, by voice and sign the readinesse of its obedience to God, for his people to passe through it.

V.11. The Sun and Moon] This refers to that which was done by Jehoiah, Joshua 10.12,13. Or it may be a continuation of the foregoing representation.

stood still] Otherwise more then wonderful is the swift motion of that great body of the Sun.

at the light of the, &c.] Or thine arrowes walked in the light: Some thus; At the light of the Sun so standing and shining; thy arrows, those hail-stones, Joshua 10. verſe 11. and those speares, and weapons of thy people, went apace among, and against thine and their enemies. Others refer this to the pillar of fire, that went among the Israelites; though not so likely, or futable to the words; Nay, rather the Sun and Moon stood still, as amazed to see, & give way to Gods warning for his people against the enemies.

arrowes they went] Joshua 10.11. Namely, of thy delightings.

V.12. Thou didst march through the land] Of Canaan. Here now follows what God did for them in the Land.

in indignation, &c.] In Indignation and anger against the Canaanites and Amorites, and all the enemies, God did march against them, tread them down under their feet, as the mire in the streets, and thrash them, as with flailes. Thus God did it. They got those wonderful victories against those war-like Nations, not with their sword, or their bow, but by the arm of the Lord, Josh.24.12. Psalm 44.3. As the promiſe was, Exod.23.23,27,28, Deut.7.20. See the like, Isaiah 41.2.

Ver.13. Thou wentest forth for the salvation of thy people] Here he shews the direct end of those his former great and glorious doings, even the salvation of his people. And so this is appliable to his people now; his people, by the same free grace of choice and adoption.

for salvation] Repeated the second time, as the thing principally, or only intended, by all those miracles and wonderful dealings. And therefore the faithful now have no cause to despond or despair; having so many monuments and documents of his faithful covenant and Love.

with thine Anointed] Or, of thine Anointed. Expounding thus, that thou mightest redeem Christ from death, by his resurrection. Or, for thine Anointed, Jesus Christ. So the sixth Greek edition. However, Christ the ground of the Covenant, and of Gods Love to his people, and care of their deliverance. God in and through the person of the Mediator did all those former great things for them. In a subordinate way this may be understood of Moses and Aaron, or Joshua, persons consecrated by God, to be instruments of his peoples deliverances and victories. See Psalm 77.20. Isaiah 63.11. Signifying yet that there is no salvation but by Christ, typified by those anointed ones. Some stretch this to David, and his time: as that also which followeth.

Thou woundedst the head] Thou destroyedst Pharaoh, King of that wicked countrey, Egypt with all his army, even as a man wounded in the head, or an house which was overthrown to the very ground, or from the top to the bottom: so thou hast destroyed the enemies. There was no Power, no Potentates that were not overthrown in favour of his people.

Selah] See on verſe 3?

Ver. 14. Thou didst strike through with his staves] Causing his enterprise, and the preparation which he made to follow thy people, to be the occasion of his own ruine, striking him through with his own weapons. As Pharaohs pride was the occasion of his own fall, Exod.14. Or, as the Midianites set their swords one against another, Judg.7.22.

the head of his villages] Namely, of all the Land of Egypt, (and Canaan also, as some think) inhabited, as the most part of Affrick is in Castles, and Villages. See Isaiah 18.2. striking through the several Provinces, even to the Hamlets, and Villages, so as no place or corner was left safe and free. Some translate thus; Thou hast cursed his Secretaries, and the head of his Villages, meaning of the enemies.

they came out as a whirl winde] Heb. were tempestuous, when the enemies set on thus furiously, ragingly.

to scatter me] Thus the Prophet takes upon himself the person of the people of God.

their rejoycing was] As coming not to fight, or battel, but to take the spoil, and prey.

as to devour the poor secretly] To swallow up them that were so poor in strength, not able to resist them, but seeking rather to hide themselves from them; being far from any relief, or assistance. A term taken from high-way robbers, Psalm 10.8. when all humane help failed them, God from heaven defended them: And so his power was the more evidenced thereby.

Ver.15. Thou didst walk through the sea] Or, thou didst tread upon the sea.

with thine horses] Whereby are meant the Winds, or the clouds, as Psalm 104.3. Or, the Hoast of Angels, who are Gods horsmen, Psalm 68.17. Or rather this refers and relates to that miraculous passage through the red sea, a miracle so memorable, and oft to be recorded, sufficient to fix their faith on Gods power, for their future deliverance.

heap] Or mud.

Ver.16. I heard] The denunciation of thy horrible judgments upon thy people, so different from those thy ancient deliverances, hath quite dismayed me. This takes up again that verſe 2.

quivered at the voice] Not of thy glorious judgments upon the enemies of thy people formerly recounted, but of thy fearful threatnings against thy own people. See chap.1.

rottenneſſe] My spirit is grawn and consumed therewith; variously expreſſions how deeply he was affected, and afflicted at Gods threatned judgements and vengeance against his people for their invincible obstinacy in their sins. How should the sinners themselves have trembled?

that I might rest in the day of trouble] The faithful can never have true rest, except they feel before the weight of Gods judgements: they fear before trouble, that they may be quiet when it comes. Others thus, hearing that I must rest satisfied in the day of trouble; that it will not be prevented, but will certainly come, and I must be contented therewith.

invadeth them with troops] Or cut them in pieces, cut them off. 2 Kings 24.2,3. &c. and 25.1.

V.17. Although the fig-tree] The conclusion of this Prayer, wherein in his own example, and for a pattern to the faithful, he elegantly sets forth the triumph of his faith, in and over all these most sad and fearful calamities.

Shall not blossome] He sets forth at large the greivousnesse of the judgments impendent. All fruits shall fail, all cattel shall be cut off, famine and sword shall devoure all, the Land shall be waste. See the Lamentations of Jeremiah throughout.

V.18. yet I will rejoyce in the Lord] For all that, yet there is matter enough of joy in the Lord. The faithful both may be, and will be, not only patient as Aaron, Levit. 10.3, and Eli, 1 Sam.3.18, and Job, chap.1.21. and David, 1 Sam.30.6. 2 Sam.16.10. Psal.39.9. But will rejoyce also in these tribulations, Rom 5.3. Acts 5.41. Heb. 10 34. James 1. verse 2. Rom.8.35. &c. Knowing they come from a loving Father, and work together for their good, Heb. 12.6,7,8. Apoc.3.19. 2 Cor.4.17. The Prophet declareth wherein standeth the comfort and Joy of the faithful, though they be never so great afflictions prepared, namely, in Gods most certain promises of deliverance, ch.2 4. This is the triumph of Faith. See Psal.46.

in the God of my salvation] Here is the firm faith and anchorhold of the godly, and a cause more then sufficient of their joy, against all the miseries of the Lord, and malice of Satan. Psal. 3.5, 6. and 27.1.

Ver. 19. The Lord] He seeks not his comfort and incouragement elf-where; He needs not, Gen.15.1. Psal.16.5 6. Lam.3.24,34.

like hindes feet] He will at last do his people that favour, as to let them scape, and save themselves in the Church under Gods protection; as the Hinde hunted and followed by Hunt-smen, retireth into her covert. See 2 Sam 22 34. Psal.18.33.

mine high places] See Isaiah 33.16. and 58.14. Deuteronomy 32. 13.

To the chief singer on my stringed instruments] See Psal.4.1. The chief singer upon the instruments of musick shall have occasion to praise God publikely in the Church, for this great deliverance of his Church. Yea, and I will sing this also on my stringed instruments, even in the midst of these calamities.

stringed instruments] Hebr. Negineth.

ANNOTATIONS on the Book of the Prophet ZEPHANIAH.

THE ARGUMENT.

ZEphaniah threatneth Jerusalem and Judah with utter desolation; and that for their notorious sins, which therewithal he chargeth upon them. Then he exhorts them to Repentance to prevent the judgements, before the decree bring forth, and the fierce anger of God come upon them. And he warnes them of it by denouncing Gods judgement upon many of their neighbouring Nations and enemies, whom he names, to serve for examples to them; and to serve also for their comfort, in that many of them are thus plagued of God for their wrongs done against his people. And after taking up, again a sharp reproof of the sins of Jerusalem, of her Princes, Prophets, and Priests, and their impudent obstinacy in them notwithstanding the examples of judgements upon others; He yet concludes with a Promise of deliverance and restauration at the last; bidding them to wait for it, and his great and gracious dealings in it against their enemies, and for his remnant, and to sing and rejoyce at it, as serving but for a Type of the glorious Promises of Evangelical Blessings in Christ. Generally thus; He threatneth, in Chap. 1. Exhorteth, Chap. 2. And after a reproof, he comforteth, Chap. 3.

CHAP. I.

ZEphaniah] Of the Notation of his Name; of his Tribe, Life, and Death, there is no certainty.

in the dayes of Josiah] This shews his time, that he was co-etaneous to the Prophet Jeremiah, and a little before the Babylonish captivity: and so hath the last place among the small Prophets that preached before the captivity. It is not expressed that he preached after the dayes of Josiah, as Jeremiah did, chap 1.3. But it seems he began after the Reformation by Josiah, verse 4. and 7. concerning whom, and what he preached, appears in the argument formerly set down.

the son of Amon] The pious son of an impious father. And haply to insinuate, why the Prophet and the good King could so little prevail with this people for Reformation; they being so long hardned in the custome of sin under the reigns of Amon, and Manasseh.

V.2. I will utterly consume] Hebr. By taking away I will make an end. A threatning of the countryes desolation by the Chaldeans. Either he began with doctrine and exhortation before, or seeing and well knowing the for-lorn estate of the people in sin, notwithstanding all that good Josiah could do for their reformation; He joynes with Jeremiah, even to begin thus roughly, to threaten & thunder against them for their sins: And notwithstanding their invincible wickednesse, yet neither the good King, nor he desert their station, or slack their pains: but faithfully discharge their duties and functions, in their several places.

all things] He specifies the several sorts and kindes in the next verse.

the land] Heb. The face of the land.

V.3. man] The wicked man: for him only he mentions in all the judgments following throughout the Chapter. See ch.2. ver.3.

and beast] And he adds the fowls, and fishes. A kinde of amplification very frequent amongst the Prophets. See Jer. 4. 25. and 12. 4. Hos.4.3. This to some seems unreasonable: see Ezec. 18.20. But we are not rashly to judge of Gods judgements. And these creatures were made for the use of man, Psal.8. Why may not God justly punish man in taking them away? The Apostle tells us, they do suffer in a kinde for the sin of man, Rom.8.19,20,21,22. But then if these plague-tokens of Gods anger be thus fer, and appear upon these creatures for the sin of man, what burning wrath abides the sinners themselves?

and the stumbling blocks with the wicked] Or, idols, the idols and all the objects and instruments of idolatry, by which men were induced to sin, even to their own ruine. See Deut.7.25. Ezek. 14.3,7. Hab.2.18. some thus; that the rubbish and remainders it self shall not escape this vengeance. Others, that the consuming of these creatures in this manner shall be a stumbling block to the wicked, they shall take scandal and offence at it; they reading the words thus, And they shall be stumbling blocks to the wicked.

cut off man] This repeated here, and prosecuted in the verses following, as being the main intent of the Prophet, and the cause and occasion of Gods anger upon the other creatures.

V.4. I will also stretch out my hand] This phase expresseth Gods more then ordinary manner of dealing in wondrous judgments. See Exod. 3.20. and 7. 5. and 15. 12. Deut. 4.34 Esay 5.25. and 14. 27. and 25.11. This should have startled these sinners so much the more.

upon Judah] The Kingdome of Israel and Samaria were now destroyed and captivated. And Judah escaping them, thought it self now safe and secure, yet that the old not serve their turn.

Jerusalem] That holy City, that thought her self so safe, as being the seat of the Kingdome of David, and of Gods worship, having in her the Temple, Ark, Altar; yet all this was but vain confidence. Her inhabitants were those wicked men, verse 5.

the remnant of Baal] That which remained since Josiahs reformation, 2 Kings 23.3,4,5. which they had kept so close, that he could not spy out. This Prophecie then was after Josiah's reformation. Thus they doted on, and acted idolatry closely, when they durst not do it publikely, for fear of the good King; he having destroyed the means and monuments of idolatry out of the Temple, and all open known places. Of Baal, see on Hosea 13.1.

Chemarims] Which were an order of superstitious Priests, appointed to minister in the service of Baal, and were as his peculiar Chaplins, read 2 Kings 23.5. Hos.10.5. They were somewhat like to Monks or Anchorites in former times. Though Josiah put them down, 2 Kings 23.5,20. yet some would remain. So hard it is to make a through reformation, which should make Magistrates and Ministers so much the more diligent therein.

with the Priests] Idolatrous Priests, Jer.8.1,2. 1 Kings 12.32. and 13. 2, 33. and 2 Kings 17. 32. Or Levitical Priests, but corrupted by idolatry: 2 Kings 23. 8, 9. or by a wicked life. Zeph. 3.4.

V.5. And them that worship] Here he chargeth the whole people, who were so far from gratefully and joyfully imbracing the reformation by Josiah, that they would not be brought from their idolatrous worshippings.

the hoast of heaven] Sun, Moon, and Stars. They sinned not only in Baal, but multiplied other idolatries. In these heavenly bodies for their excellencies, Heathens thought some Deity to be in them. The Sun was accounted God. The Persians worshipped him. The Sun or Moon called the Queen of Heaven. God forewarns the Jews of this idolatry, Deut.4.19. See Job 31. 26,27. yet see how they fell into it, 2 Kings 23.11. Jer. 19. 13. and 7.18. and 8.2. and 44.17,19,25.

upon the house-tops] See 2 Kings 23.12. Jer. 19. 13. And so upon hills, and generally the places of their idol-worship were called high-places, as 2 Kings 12. 3. Be like grossly imagining that those places were nigher heaven, and that their gods might the sooner see their care in serving of them.

that worship, and that swear by the Lord] This singly considered in it self is commanded, Matth. 4. 10. 2 Kings 17.36. And swearing is a kinde of his worship, Deuteronomy 6. 13. and 10. 20. Isaiah 45.23. and 65.16. Thereby we acknowledge an omniscience, and omni-potency, which are proper to God, calling him in an oath, to witnesse, and to revenge.

by the Lord] Or, to the Lord. This comprehendeth the whole profession of true Religion, Psal. 63.11. Isa.19. 8. and 45.23. Some think that swearing to the Lord may have relation to the renewing the Covenant by Josiah, 2 Kings 23.3.

and that swear by Malcham] Milcom, or Molech. This was the idol and abomination of the Ammonites, 1 Kings 11.7. 2 Kings 23. 10,13. and Jer.49.3. So called likely, because they reputed him as their King, Molech signifying a King. See Amos 5. 26. and the Annotations there, and 1.15. Jer 49.3. Now to swear by idols was expressly to bidden, Josh 23.7. Jer. 5.7. and 12. 16. Amos 8. 14. This were to impart divine worship to them. But here is their further sin, they would joyn these two together. They would joyn light and darknesse together, God, and Belial; the Temple of God, and idols. This was death in the pot. They would not seem clean to renounce the true God, and his Worship, but would add thereunto, and mix therewith this idol-worship; yea, they would worship God in this idolatrous way, as the Israelites did, and as Papists do; they pretend, and haply intend this way to worship the true God, but he counts it abomination, when any part of his worship is imparted to idols or images, they would divide the worship, some to God, some to idols; as the pretending Mother would have the Child divided, but God will have all, or none at all. They devise will-worships out of their own brains, without and against his Word and Law; but obedience to his Will and Word is the thing which he absolutely requires, without any warping to the left hand, or to the right: see Hos.4.15. 2 Kings 17.33,34,41.

V.6. And them that are turned back] Frecherous Apostates.

not sought the Lord] Proud contemners of him: He and his worship was easie to be found, if they would have sought and inquired thereafter, as being clearly set forth in his Law: but they willingly and maliciously blinded themselves, fought to extinguish all true piety, and to bury his spiritual worship in and under their own outward superstitions, active in the one, and dead in the other. And such men chiefly are those forc'said idolaters, and their like.

V.7. Hold thy peace] Zechariah 2.13. Let every one in humility adore Gods Judgements, without any murmuring or contradiction, Psalm 39.9. Or thus, Thou idolater think not to plead thy cause, or help thy self by any thing thou canst say or do, the matter is at an end: Do thou now prepare thy self to undergo the doom and judgement. See on Hab.2.20. The Prophet then tells them, That he doth not seek to terrifie them in vain, they were not to despise the judgment threatned, experience would soon school them in the contrary.

at the presence of the Lord] In whose presence all things are naked, and lye open, Heb.4.11,12.

is at hand] The execution is in hand, and at hand: It is but a foolish fancy to hope for delayes, or to think to put it off: No way left but speedily to prevent it with serious repentance, or quietly and patiently to submit and undergo it, This day began at the death of Josiah.

hath prepared a sacrifice] Differing from their sacrifices, wherein they so much trusted. This is more just in it self, and more pleasing to God, Isa.1.24. Jer. 46.10. A great slaughter, as it were, to prepare a banquet which he intends to make for the Chaldeans, who are, as it were, Guests: Or, for the Fowls of the air, and for the ravening Beasts, as Isa.34.6 Jer.46 10. Ezek.39.17. Revel.19.17.

he hath bid his guests] Hebr. sanctified, or prepared; the Ægyptians first, the Babylonians most, 2 Kings 23,24,25. Chapters. These prophane enemies then must the Jews acknowledge to be, as it were, the Lords Priests and Sacrificers, to slay and devour them for their sins, that were by Gods Covenant and Calling, an holy and Royal Priesthood to him: See Isa 61.6. 1 Pet.2.5,9.

V.8. In the day] ver.9,10,11,15,16,18.

punish] Heb. Visit upon; see Exod 32.34. Levit.18. 25. Isaiah 13.11.

the Princes] Not the vulgar sort only, but the great ones, Princes and Peers, which think themselves exempt, and out of reach, and abuse their place and power, and instead of governing their inferiours, are ill examples unto them, and so do most hurt; for Magnates are Magnetes: these shall not go unpunished.

and the Kings children] See this executed, Jer. 39 6.

clothed with strange apparel] Courtiers, Matth. 11. 8. Gallants and others, which did imitate the strange apparel of other Nations, to win their favour thereby, and to appear glorious in the eyes of all others: read Ezek. 23. 12, 14, 15. sumptuous men, such as Dives, Luke 16.19 and those proud Dames, whose Wardrobe is inventoried, Isa.3.16.&c.

V.9. That leap on the threshold] This was indeed a very frequent superstition amongst the heathen idolaters; upon many occasions; as 1 Sam.5.5. 1 Kings 18,26. But because that agreeth not with this place, it seemeth to be a proverbial kinde of speech, to signifie great mens Officers, who by an absolute power went into other mens houses, and injustingly preyed upon the poor, spoiled and abused them at their pleasure. See Hos.5.10.

violence and deceit] The two wayes of undoing and oppressing the poore, for their Lords advantage, Jeremy 5. 27. Micah 6. 10.

V.10. There shall be the noise] Heb. Voice: signifying, that all the parts and out-sides of the City of Jerusalem should be full of out-cryes and clamours, by reason of the Chaldeans, who should assault it on all sides: See Jer.39.3.

from the fish gate] The City Jerusalem is thought to consist of three Townes, whereof one belonged to the Tribe of Iudah, viz. the south Town, and was won by David, and called his City, 2 Sam. 5.6, &c. The other common to Iudah and Benjamin, and the third to Benjamin only, wherein were the Castle or Tower afore said: See on Judges 1. 8. This Fish-gate seems to belong to the City of David: of this Gate, see 2 Chron. 33. 14. Nehem 3.3. This may seem to be called the first Gate, Zech. 14.10. to make a difference between it and this second Gate.

the second] This seemsto denotate the other Town of Jerusalem, 2 King. 22.14.

from the hills] As the hills of Gareb and Goath on the North and West-side of Jerusalem, where the Fort and Temple was, and the Dung-gate on that side of the City where it did seem the Chaldeans did also endeavour to force the City: see Jer. 31. 39. and Neh. 3.13. and 12.31.

V.11. Maktesh] Or rather the low place: This is meant of the street of the Merchants, which was lower then the rest of the place about it, in the hollow of the three Townes; and was between the sheep-gate, and the gate of Ephraim: and where also were the Gold-smiths & Apothecaries, Nehemiah 3.8,31. Those might think themselves the safest there, being within the bosome of the whole City, yet that should nothing avail them: On all parts, in all places, Jerusalem should be full of out-cries, and howlings: being taken by the Chaldeans: no place should be left for any refuge or escaping.

merchant people] The word also bearers an allusion to the Canaanite; and may intimate that they, or their Merchants were no better then the Canaanites, nor more to be regarded.

bear silver] Hereby is signified the rich trading, which was in that place, to which money was carried in great burdens. But their riches and coin, likely gotten, as Merchants much do, not the fair-est way, should not now avail them, verse 18. See Isaiah 2.20. and 13.17. Ezek.7.19. Prov.11.4.

V.12. search Jerusalem with candles] I will search out their sins with narrowly, that their closest sins shall not escape me, and I will punish them as throughly. God seeth all things; but this is spoken after the manner of men, the better to expresse what is needfull for us to know. Or, I will cause the Chaldeans to seek out the most hidden things that be in Jerusalem, and that most exactly. As Luke 15.8.

settled on their lees] Hebr. curdled, or thickened. A phrase taken from such liquors as grow thick, when being poured out of one vessel into another, they stand long, Jer.48.11. To signifie, either the gathering together of riches in Jerusalem, which for many yeares before had not been taken, nor pillaged; And their abundeu delight in them, and careleſſe supine negligence, which they had conflicted by them: Or the stupidity and carnal security of the inhabitants, fitly sticking in their sins, boldly scorning God and men. To which seems to be referred the following words of the profane men, who denied Gods providence, or took no notice of it. See Psal. 119.70.

that say in their heart] This expounds the former words. Though they are ashamed to say it openly, yet such are the thoughts, reasonings, and resolutions of their hearts. See Psalm 10. verse 11. 13. and 14. 1. and 53. 1. and 35. 25. Ecclesiastes 2. 1, 3. 15.

The

The Lord will not.] This is in effect plain Atheisme, to deny him to be the Governour and Judge of the world, or to heed mens actions; This makes him a meer idol. And this opens the sluce and flood-gate to let in a sea of sinne; drownes all conscience, and sense of right or wrong, good or evil. This is a devilish sinne; and that in Gods own people: no marvail then if God be so fierce and furious against them.

V. 13. Therefore their goods] All shall easily fall into the enemies hands.

not inhabit them] Deut. 28. 30, 39. Amos 5. 11. See the Annotations there.

V. 14. The great day of the Lord] The grievousnesse of the judgement is here more largely set forth; and God asserted to be the Author of it. And good is it to see and consider Gods hand in all judgements and punishments; and well to weigh the terriblenesse of them.

is neer] This is much and often pressed against the foolishnesse of those that would still put off the evil day. Though they could see no signes of it yet appearing or approching; yet it could and would come, as lightning; as Matth. 24. 29.

the voice] The Chaldeans shall come so suddenly, that the first news that shall be heard of it, shall be the terrible eyes of the tumult of the Captains and Souldiers, being already at the gate. Or the noise, of that fearfull day of the Lord is very neer.

the mighty man] Who now boasts of his might and strength. Now the Prophets cry to them, and they will not hear: But then the Scene shall be changed. As Proverbs 1. 20 ——— 29. Micah. 3. verse 4. Even the mighty, shall cry mightily Jer. 6. 26.

V. 15. That day is a day of wrath,] Strong expressions of Gods vengeance. Not good for man to sleight or extenuate the weight of his wrath. See Jeremiah 30. 6, 7. Joel 1. 15. and 2. 11. Amos 5. 18. and the Annotations there. All this makes against the vain confidence of the profane contemners of God: Against those who have so long abused his patience. He will now make bare his arm, and make known the power of his wrath. See Esay 33. verse 14. Deut. 4. verse 24. Malachi 3. verse 2. As also against those whose Hypocrisie is their Religion and Sanctity; and yet willingly delude themselves to think God in a sort tyed to them; and so sooth up themselves in a pleasing hope of pardon: They shall now finde and feel the wofull experience of the contrary.

V. 16. Against the fenced Cities] They hoped by these to make good a defensive war. But these should not be able to shelter or succour them.

high towers] Or, Angles which are the places of the City most fortified; and built usually upon corners of the walls. See chap. 3. verse. 6. No way left but by speedy and hearty Repentance to prevent all this.

V. 17. And I will bring distresse] To assure them still that God was the Generall in the armies of their enemies.

like blinde men] They shall be amazed and unprovided of counsell and advice; no more knowing what they do, or how to escape, then blinde men. As Genesis 19. 11.

against the Lord] The quarrell is the Lords: the quarrell of his Covenant. The enemies are but his instruments.

as dust] In most abundant and base manner.

and dung] See Psalm 83. 10. Esay 5. 25. Jer. 9. 22.

V. 18. Neither their silver] See on verse 11. Mountains of gold and silver shall not stop the current of his justice.

devoured by the fire of his jealousie] Chap. 3. 8. Fire devours all before it; the more matter, the greater flame. All their hopes should fail them, and be as the spiders web; as the brooks of Teman; as the reed of Egypt. See Ezech. 36. 5. Prov. 8. 34.

CHAP. II.

Verse 1. Gather your selves together] All your assemblies whereby you shall endeavour to defend your selves, shall be but like great bundles of stalks and flax, to be consumed altogether by the fire of Gods wrath, Chap. 1. 18. for preventing whereof hee exhorteth them to other manner of Assemblies; for humiliation and repentance, Joel 1. 14. and 2. 15. Or thus, Gather your selves together in Assemblies to examine your selves, and your sins, to mourn and repent; as 1 Sam. 7. verse 6. search your selves, recollect your selves, your thoughts, wayes, and works; your state, and present danger; sift and fan your selves, Matthew 3. 2. 10. 12. A seasonable exhortation to repentance to prevent the execution of the judgements, So that God thunders in threatnings; but it is that he might spare his hand in the execution. In his threatnings he shewes the more care of us, and the more mercie towards us. And he doubles the exhortation to drive it home.

not desired] Or, not desirous, not desirable; not as Daniel was, Chap. 9. 23. and 10 verse 11. not worthy to be desired: This the more sets out the freenesse, and greatnesse of his unwearied mercie, that deals thus with such a nation. See Deut. Chap. 9. and Jer. 3. 4. A great comfort to the sinfull sons of men.

V. 2. Before the decree bring forth] This verse may be joyned with the next, thus; Before Gods decree against his people be put in execution, you believers shall flie to his grace; by prayer and conversion. Or rather relating to the former verse, the nation not desired thus; Gods threatnings by his Prophets are not words of course, words of winde; but things decreed; yet so as they are but in breeding, (a pregnant similitude is this) as the fruit in the wombe; yet there is hope and remedie, yet he holds his hands; yet the birth and bringing forth may be prevented. And this [before] is thrice taken up in this verse, to make them look to it in time; to lay hold on the acceptable time; before the door of mercy be shut. See 2 Corinth. 6. verse. 2. Matthew 25. 10.

the day passe as the chaff] The day come that shall fann and winnow you as the chaff; do ye therefore first fann your selves: the day wherein the chaff shall be scattered; and ye as chaff, by the blast of the Lords anger, shall soon and suddenly be dispersed; as Thistle-downe upon the mountains. See Esay 17. 13. and 40. 24. Psalm 83. 13.

come upon you] And again repeated. For come it will; though for a time delayed; a time to wait for your repentance. Rom. 2. 4. Esay 30. 18.

V. 3. Seek ye] Thrice repeated in this verse. To shew the earnestnesse of the Prophet; and the necessity of the duty incumbent on them.

the Lord] His will, pleasure, favour.

all ye meek of the earth] He knew, and saw the most did not so: as Isaiah 1. verse 5. The most still the worst: yet the Prophet not discouraged thereby in his calling. He knew there was still an holy seed. He turns himself to this small Remnant. As in a case somewhat like, Jeremie 5. verse. 4, 5. These must not look after the multitude: That were to harden, and hearten them in their sinnes: They must doe otherwise. The meeke is a Title which is ordinarily given to good men, Psalm 25. verse 9. and 37. 11. Matthew 5. verse 5, He counsels and exhorts them for their good. See 1 Pet. 5. verse 6. They are men flexible; especially upon chastisements; Jeremie 31. verse 18, 19. The wicked are otherwise, even hardened by them; Jeremie 6. verse 29, 30.

which have wrought his judgement] Which have framed your lives according to the righteous judgements and statutes of his Law; which have lived uprightly and godly according as he prescribeth by his word.

seek righteousnesse] Even these meek godly ones, must persist and persevere, must increase in so well doing. We are imperfect all, and lyable to the Lords corrections; the best must increase in goodnesse; and specially when Gods judgements are impendent. And thus they must seek the Lord in righteousnesse, not in ceremonious superstitions; as the manner of Papists and hypocrites is. They must go on as they began, in the reall points of righteousnesse and meeknesse.

it maybe] This notes rather a difficulty, then a doubt; and that rather in the thing it self, then in the love of God. And this the more commends Gods grace and mercie towards his; whiles in the same word he thunders still against the wicked. See Exodus 32. 30. Joshuah 14. 12. 1 Samuel 14. 6. Joel 2. 14. Jonah 3. 9. Amos 5. 15.

hid] Saved and defended under the wing of his protection; or more gently dealt withall. See Ezekiel 9. verse 6. Esay 27. verse 7, 8. Hab. 3. verse 2. Jeremie 10. 24. and 30. 11. Job. 23. 6. Ezek. 9. 13.

V. 4. For Gaza] Gaza with her towns and villages, was a Citie, and Lordship of the Philistines, 1 Sam. 6. 17. alotted to the tribe of Judah, Joshuah 15. 47. yet Anakims left in it, Joshuah 11. 22. Judah took it, after Joshuahs dayes, Judges 1. 18. yet it seems soon after lost it. Samson went thither when the Philistines had re-gained it; and upon his shoulders carried away the doors, posts, bars of the gate of the Citie, Judges 16. 1. 3. He was after bound and imprisoned there, and did grinde in the mill; and it seemes there was an house of Dagon there. Pharaoh smote it, Jeremie 47. 1. And Hezekiah in his time, 2 Kings 18. 8. And Nebuchadnezzar after; Jeremie 25. 20. and 47. 4, 5. Zecharie 9. 5. And in the New Testament, neer unto it Philip baptized the Eunuch, Acts 8. 26. By the examples of the judgements of God upon Gaza and the neighbouring Nations that hereafter follow, which were to be inflicted upon them before Jerusalems overthrow, The Jews are moved to repentance. Or, as some take it, this is a consolation to the Church, that God will revenge their wrongs upon these nations, and utterly destroy the Philistines, and all other enemies of the Church, without hope of being restored; but he will preserve some feed and remainder of his people to re-establish them in the appointed time. And therefore every one should endeavour to be of that blessed number.

shall be forsaken] The word alludes to the name of Gaza. And the like allusion is used to the names of the places following. It was laid waste in manner formerly shewed.

Ashelon] Another of the five Cities and Lordships of the Philistines. See 1 Sam. 6. 17. alotted to Judah. And though gained after Josuahs death; yet soon lost again. Samson went thither, and slew thirty Philistines to compasse so many changes of raiment, Judges 14. 19. It was made a dest-lation, most-what as Gaza was, See Jer. 25. 20, and 47. 5, 7. Amos 1. 8. Zech. 9. 5.

Ashdod] Another of the five Cities and Lordships. There Dagons head and hands were cut off before the Ark of the Lord, 1 Sam. 5. 14.

Ekronite took it, 2 Chron. 26. 6. and Tartan under the king of Assyria. In other things the case of it was, as that of Gaza, and Ashkelon. See Joshuah 11. 22. and 15. 46, 47. Jer. 25. 20. Amos 1. 8. and 3. 9. Zech. 9. 6. This likely is that Azotus, Acts 8. 40.

at the noon-day] Openly. The citie forced and taken by assault and storming: and the inhabitants led into captivity.

Ekron] Another of the five Cities and Lordships: Gath is omitted. From Ekron the Ark was sent to Bethshemeth, 1 Sam. 5. 10. and 6. 16. Beelzebub was their god, 2 Kings. 1 Samuel, and Saul afflicted them. They were in the same state, and did undergoe the same changes and conditions, as the former cities did. See Joshuah 13. 3. and 15. 45, 46. Judg. 1. 18. All these were neighbour-cities, and lay between the sea coast] Verse 6. Where the Philistines land was, 1 Sam. 30. 14. 16. Ezek. 25. 16.

Cherethites] They lay between the Amalekites, and the south part of Judah, and of the Philistines, 1 Sam. 30. 14. Ezek. 25. 16. These are usually coupled with the Pelethites; Both sorts being valiant men like the Prætorian souldiers; and seem to be chosen by David for his guard, and Benajah was captain over them. See 2 Sam. 8. 18. and 15. 18. and 20. 23. 1 Kings 1. 38.

the word] As formerly against his own people. Ye shall not go free for your wrongs done to my people. The Prophet, and the people were to asswage their sorrowes with this consideration of Gods plaguing their enemies.

Canaan the land of the Philistines] Of which the Philistines were a part. But unjustly possessed by them, Josh. 13. 3. See Gen. 10. 14. 19. Of the Philistines, see on Zech 9. 6.

V. 6. Sea coast] Verse 5. Waste and void of culture; and fit only for sheep and shepherds.

V. 7. Remnant of the house of Judah] Remnant, that should flee into neighbour-countreyes, and so escape from being carried into exile and captivity; and so might more easily and speedily return again. Of these God will have a care, for all their paucity. A seed and remnant he will still preserve, to be his flock; and he will provide for their secure feeding; even in the countreyes, and by the ruines of their enemies. Some thus; He sheweth why God would destroy their enemies, because their countrey might be a resting place for his Church, as their returne from Babylon. Some apply this, and the last words of the ninth verse, to the Jewes possessing of those places in this sense, that they should belong to the Church, and be ees; in this sense, that they should belong to the Church, and be ees; in this sense, that they should belong to the Church, and be joyned unto it in the spirituall kingdome of Christ.

for the Lord their God, &c.] Or, when, &c. Thus he mitigates their wo all sorrows with this salve of their returne, as Nahum. 1. 12. His grace and mercy should over-power all obstacles and impediments that might stand in the way of their returne. Let them but patiently wait Gods own time for it.

V. 8. I have heard] Now he comes from the Philistines to the second example, viz. of the Moabites, and Ammonites. These were borderers on the south, and south-east part of Judea.

the reproach of Moab] See on Amos 2. 1. God took notice of it, though they though not so.

the revilings of the children of Ammon] See on Amos 1. 13. Though these two nations came of Lot Abrahams Nephew, yet were they ever bitter enemies against their kinsmen the Jews, Jer. 48. 27. Ezek. 25. 3. Whence is that, Deut. 23. 3, 4. and magnified themselves against their border] These nations presumed to take from the Jewes that countrey which the Lord had given them. Jerem. 48 and 49. 1. See Deut. 38. 8. and 27. 17. God peculiarly assigned to Abraham, and his posteritie the land of Canaan. They would repeal Gods decree.

V. 9. Therefore, as I live, saith the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel] He not onely hears and sees, but he revengeth also: and he sweares by himself to be; and a God of power to defend them, and avenge himself and them, of his and their enemies.

Moab shall be as Sodom] Esay 15 and 14 Chapters. Jer. 48. Ezek. 25. 8. Amos 2. 1.

Ammon] Jer. 49. 1. &c. Ezek. 25. 2. &c. Amos 1. 13.

breeding of nettles and salt-pits] Waste and barren. See the like expressions, Esay 5. verse 6. and 34. 13. Prov. 24. 31. And Judg. 9. 45. Ezek. 47. 11.

the residue] And he addes the remnant. See on verse 7.

V. 10. This] This is an explication of that verse 8.

for their pride] Esay 16. 6. Jer. 48. 29. Their pride should have this fall, Prov. 16. 18. and 11. 2. and 18. 12.

against the people] Thus tender is God of his people; their reproaches thus take with him. They need not fear that in their calamities he doth or will forsake them, Isaiah 43. 2.

V. 11. The Lord will be terrible unto them] To the Moabites, and Ammonites; however now they sleight him, and his people too.

famish] Make lean, shall melt away like fatnesse.

all the gods of the earth] Taking away their worshippers, and their sacrifices; that name and fame which now they have, in the trust which the idolaters put in them.

and men shall worship him] Gods rising glory shall cloud them. The chief end of all these terrible judgements shall be to root out those peoples Idolatries, and to cause the true God alone to be worshipped. Which hath been accomplished under Christ Jesus.

all the Iles of the heathen] Far Countries, especially beyond the Sea. So greatly shall Gods glory appear in the reduction and restauration of his people; and avenging them of their enemies, that the fame of it shall spread abroad to the out-most Nations, and cause them to give glory to him; to the fleighting of their own idols. And this makes way to that which follows.

V. 12. Ye Ethiopians] Likely the Ethiopians neer Moab; and Ammon. Some take it for the Ethiopians beyond Egypt; and make here an argument thus, if the Ethiopians so far off, much more Moab, and Ammon, that were nigh at hand.

North] Assyria, and Ninevé, were North of Judea.

V. 13. Assyria] Esay 10. 5, 12. Ezech. 31. 3. Nahum 1. 8. & 2, 10. & 3. 15. See on Hos. 7. 11.

Nineve] See on Nahum. 1. 1. And on Jonah 1 verse 2. The destruction of Ninive, and the Assyrian Empire, happened, as is thought, in the time of Jehoiachim. after Zephaniahs prophecies. See Nahums prophecie.

a desolation] As is largly set forth in the next verse.

V. 14. And flocks] The building of Cresiphont is thought to have occasioned this utter ruin, as Authours report it. Here are various and vehement expressions of the dreadfull face of her desolations; Thus God staines all worldly glorie.

Cormorant] See Esay 13. 21. 22, & 14. 23. chap. 34. 11, 13, 14, 15. Apoc. 18. 2.

lodge in the upper lintels] Or, knops. Or, Chapiters. See upon Amos 9. 1.

for he shall uncover] Or, when he hath uncovered. Her roofe, and all her timber-work being burnt down, there shall remain nothing but walls of ruined houses.

V. 15. This is the rejoycing City] So Populous, and pleasant before, now left to this desolation, to these inhabitants. The Jewes then should patiently bear their miseries when God would thus avenge them, 1 Thess. 1 6, 7. He prizeth them far above other Nations, Esay 43. 3. Nineve, rejoycing so much of her strength and prosperity, should be thus made waste; and Gods people delivered.

I am] Esay 47. 8. 10. Apoc. 18. 7. Like cases to this. But for all this the Jews were no wayes to doubt of her future ruin. Pride did swell her up, and made her as the swelling in a wall, which portends the downfall of it. See on verse 10. Kingdoms must not glory too much in their own potency; but be sensible how subject they are to mutability and change, and make their main dependency upon God, and his favorable protection.

how is she] Men should wonder at it, as a thing almost incredible. But God would deal wonderoufly against her.

shall hiss, and wag his head] In scorn, horrour, and disdain, 1 Kings 9. 8. Job 27. 23. Jer. 19. 8. and 49. 17. and 50. 13. Lamentations 2. 15, 16. Ezechiel 27. 36. She should be an ignominious spectacle to all people. Thus deer to God is the salvation of his people: now all people. Thus deer to God is the fall of the enemies thereof is, and shall be to the end of the world. See it in the downfall of spirituall Babylon, Apoc. 18.

CHAP. III.

Verse 1. WO] The Prophet returns to Jerusalem; And threatens and thunders wo against it; against the sinfull forlorn body of the people. And adds Promises full of consolation to the holy Remnant.

Heb. Craw. Or crop.

to her that is filthy and polluted] Or, gluttonous.

to her that is filthy and polluted] Or, gluttonous. The same word is used, Levit. 1. 16. Jerusalem is thus here stiled. For all that she is so oft called the holy city, Psalm 15. 1. Jere. 48. 2. and 52. 1. Yet she is thus changed; as Esay 1. 21, Jer. 2. 21, 23. Polluted, for all her ceremonious washings, cleansings, purifyings, polluting Gods pure and Spirituall worship.

oppressing City] That is, Jerusalem. Oppressing by force and fraude; breaking the second Table of the Law; aswell as the first. The Trent Translation is usually so erroneous, as neither here, nor elswhere, do we use to mention it. See Levit. 19. 13. Deut. 28. verse 29. Jer. 21. 12. Ezech. 22. 29.

V. 2. She obeyed not the voyce] Namely, Gods voyce, calling her to repentance, by his servants. Here begins the enumeration of her sins, the causers of Gods wrath. She yeelded not docility, and submission thereunto, Gods voyce and word had not its due power and authority with her. And this was the root of her rebellion. See Nehem. 9. 26. Jerem. 2. 27.

received not correction] Or, instruction. Verse 7. Neither by Reprehensions, nor Punishments: They were incorrigible. And thus evilly it was with a people professing themselves to be the people of God, See Psal. 50. 17. Prov. 5. 12. Jer. 2. 30. & 5. 3. & 7. 28. & 32. 33. and 35. 13.

their called not] Diffidence and Incredulity. Another title and in her cotin. She trusted in man, in the reed of Egypt, in her own ways, wildome, riches, and strength, in vanity, lies, falshood, rather then in the Lord. See Jer.17.5,6,7,8. 2 Chron.20.17,20.

drew not nee] He tyed himself by Covenant to her. And in that not on gave her his law and ordinances, only desiring her to cleave to him. Deut.10.20. and 13.4. Yet she fell from him, and Apostatized, estranged her self from him more and more, shunned him; like a wilde beast she would not be tamed and manmaged by him.

to her God] As he offered and tyed himself to her, and she made a profession of him in words, though in works she denied him so to be. A most honourable title for her then she now deserved.

V.2. Her Princes] He comes now from the body of the people, to the Heads of them, to the King and Courtiers, to the Princes and Peers.

are roaring Lions] Prov.28.15. Micah 3.9,10,11. Ezech.22.27.

her Judges are evening wolves] Jer.5. ver.6. Ezech.22.27. Hab.1. 8. Psalm 104. 20. Inraged then with hunger for want of prey all day. And if the Governours and heads were thus, what then were the body of the common people?

the bones till, &c.] Or leave not, which are even raging with hunger, being so greedy that they eat up bones and all, and that especially, presently, such is their voracity.

the morrow] Or, in the morning.

V.4. Her Prophets] As the Princes, so the Prophets and Priests were. See Jer.23.11. &c. Ezech. 22.25,26. and 34.2. &c. Hosea 9. 7,8.

light and treacherous persons] Or bold, in feigning prophecies of their own inventions, uttering them, and boldly maintaining of them. Unmeet things were these for men in their places.

her Priests] Gives them the Titles they were known by, though they deserved them not. The more was their shame appearing by these titles. The like title gives we to undeserving persons.

the sanctuary] Gods Temple, and the service of it; and so all sanctity, whatsoever was holy.

violence to the Law] Ezech. 22.26. The Tribe of Levi was by Gods gracious providence dispersed to teach it, Gen.49.7. Compared with Deut. 33.10. See Levit.10. ver.11. 2 Chron. 30.22. and chap. 35.7. &c. Yet see how they degenerated here. And so Malachy 2.4-10. And Chap. 1.6. &c. And thus deeply and freely the Prophet chargeth the Prophets and Priests ordained by God in their offices, that they overthrew and destroyed the Law by their evil examples, and corrupt doctrines, wresting the Law: we see then Church-men may erre, and are to be reproved. And alike boldly he deals against the Princes; neither are they exempted from the Prophets rebukes and condemnation. And he speaks against them all, he opposeth his single self against all their multitudes. But where then was Gods Church upon earth, when the common people, the Heads in the Common-wealth, the Prophets and Priest in the Church were thus corrupted among the Jewes? yet God preserved his Remnant, his holy seed, Esay 65.8. The faithful still do and must continue faithful for all that; as Elias, 1 King.19.14. and Joshua resolved, Josh. 24.15.

V.5. The just Lord is in the midst thereof] The Hypocrites brag'd much of this, of his being and dwelling amongst them, in his Temple and Ordinances, and of his Word and Promise to that end, Jer.7.4. Psalm 132. 13,14. The Prophet grants it, but to a far other end then they made an account and use of it. He is in the midst of them, a just Lord, nigh at hand, and ready to revenge their sins, he will not do iniquity] He will not deny his justice, his nature, for their sakes; he will not subscribe to their iniquities, though he wink at them a while, yet he will not be like them; he will not do iniquity. God who hath chosen Jerusalem for the place of his residence, and manifestation in the world, cannot in justice suffer these sins to escape punishment. This indeed should make the people not to do iniquity, because the Lord among them is just. But if they do, he is just, and hath just causes to punish them.

Every morning] Heb. morning by morning. As Exod. 16. 21. That is, every day, even in the morning (which seems to have been the ordinary time for the Prophets preaching) he doth denounce to them his judgments to come, and represents unto them those which he had already executed upon other Nations, to call his people to repentance. See 2 Chron. 36 15,16. Jer.7.13. and 11.7. and 25.3,4. &c. 29.19. and 32.33,35,15. he will speedily get upon the bench, and proceed in Judgment against them.

he faileth not] For his part, both to admonish and reprove them, and also to correct and chastise them, Esay 5.4. He still useth both the word, and the rod.

but] Matt.23.37. Jer.5.3. Esay 9.13. For all that, they are still for-born and desperate, See Jer.6.15. and 8.12.

V.6. I have cut off the Nations] By the destruction of other Nations he sheweth, that the Jews should have learned to fear God, and that God intended so much in making these Nations to be examples to them. This should have been a schooling to them.

Nations] Not one, but many. He gave them many Examples one after another.

their towers] Heb, Corners. See Chap.1.16. Because Towers were set in corners of City walls. The Hebrew word may also be taken for Princes and Lords, Judg.20.2. 1 Sam. 14. 38. He sets forth the greivousnesse of these judgements upon these nations, the rather to move his people thereby to repent. These were not common judgments, nor common examples, but extraordinary.

that none passeth by] See Esay 33.8 and 34.10. and 60.15. Jer.51.43

V.7. I said] I looked, I expected; as Esay 5.4. Wherefore when I looked? Luke 13.6. Nor, but that God is omni-scient: all things are present with him, he knoweth mans heart, and his thoughts long before: He is never frustrate or disappointed in his expectation. But he speaks here improperly, takes upon him the person of a man, speaks after the manner of men, as men would do in this case, the better to expresse the justnesse of his expectation; and the inexcusablenesse of these sinful Jews, what man would not expect as much in the like case? This then relates not to Gods secret knowledge and counsel, but to the nature of the thing it self.

surely thou will fear me] Learn by their examples, and by the Prophets often pressing and applying of them. And great reason for this assurance, when our neighb ours house is on fire, we fear. By other mens harmes we learn to beware. And yet more, Judgement doth use to begin at the house of God, 1 Per. 4. 17. Yet here it is otherwise. And these Heathen Nations had lesse light, and were lesse guilty. And if it were thus done to the green-tree, what will be done to the dry? And if a Father beat his servant before his childe for a fault greivously, and to warn the childe, if he will take no warning, what may he expect?

thou will receive instruction] Else we kick against the pricks. And else it were stupendious stupidity, prodigious obstinacy, like that Esay 1.5. Jer.6.28,29,30. They are past all hope.

so their dwelling should not] So, upon her repentance, so long, and so many wayes expected, she should have been spared; God was ready to do, however they delerved otherwise; Or if chastised, yet but sparingly at most, Esay 27.7,8. God changeth or retracts here nothing of his unchangeable will, but shews the constancy of it, that he was reconcilable upon their change and repentance thus. Though I brought Jerusalem into great miseries, by reason of their sins, yet will I save Jerusalem from final ruine, if so be she will be converted.

but they rose early] He was slow to punishment, but they speedy to provoke him, and hasten on the punishment, they instantly and incessantly corrupted themselves, and all their wayes more and more; They were most earnest and ready to do wickedly, notwithstanding Gods judgements, Isai.1.5.

V.8. Therefore wait ye upon me] Some take this as spoken to the wicked Jewes, thus; I have hitherto wooed you, born patiently, and dealt mildly with you. But now, seeing all is in vain, I will send Prophets no more, I will not word it with you any more: Expect me to come armed against you, to be amongst you as a salvage Bore, or Bear, your last end is come upon you. Others, as spoken to the godly remnant, the faithful among them, thus; do ye at least-wise patiently bear the calamities coming, and fix your affiance and waiting upon me, who will destroy all these Nations your enemies, ver.8. And after gather in all people, and convert them to me, that together with you they may call upon my name, and serve me, ver. 9.10.

rise up to the prey] As the Lion rouzeth up himself to the prey.

for my determination is] My right, my decree.

to pour] See Jer.6.11. Lam.2.4. and 4.11. Esay 42.25.

for all the earth] And then surely the Jewes among them. Others thus; when first this whole land of the Jewes hath been devoured.

with the fire of my jealousie] Chap.1.18. Deut.29.20. Psalm 79.5. Ezech.16.38.

V.9. For then] Then, after those judgements executed, and sin punished, will I turn] This seemes spoken to the holy remnant, for their consolation in the midst of all these calamities. As his threatnings are directed to the body of the wicked.

to the people] Gentiles, as well as Jewes, as after appears. So that no fear for all those judgments, but God will still have his Church.

a pure language] Heb. lip. This seems to reach to the time of the Messias, when the face of the earth shall be changed, by the conversion of the Gentiles, and by their sanctification in heart and tongue. See Esay 18, 19 Chapters. By communicating my Spirit unto them, I will change them in the spirit of their minde; that being purified by faith, in word and work, they shall purely serve me.

call upon the name of the Lord] Prayer is a peculiar gift and grace of God, a special part of his worship and service. The Prayer of all Heathens, and all wicked men, is not true Prayer.

with one consent] Heb. with one shoulder. A phrase taken from oxen, which are yoked together. See Zech.7.11. Jer.32.39. 1 Tim. 2.8. Seeking and studying to help and assist one another in Gods service. See Esay 2. verse 3. Psalm 122. 1. Zech.8.20,21,22,23. Jer. 31.6. Matth.11. verse 12.

V.10. From beyond the rivers of Æthiopia] This seems to be understood of Ethiopia beyond Egypt. Of Ethiopia, see on Habakkuk 3.7. This Ethiopia hath two very great rivers; And hence Nilus comes. Meroe is it, or part of it, or adjoyning to it: thus Geographers differ. See Strabo, book 17. and Pliny in his natural History, book 5. chap 9 Zera in the time of Asa: and Tirhakah, in the time of Sennacherib; and Candace mentioned, Acts 8. are thought to have reigned here. See Esay 18. 1,2.

my [suppliants] Some understand by this the Gentiles to be called and converted: thus, even by the farthermost countryes, which have least knowledge of me, and of my grace, will I be served and worshipped. See Isaiah 18.7. Acts 8. 27. Others, of the dispersed Jews: that they shall return to their land, and there worship the Lord: and make one body with the converted Gentiles.

the daughter of my dispersed] This most properly agrees to the Jewes, though some stretch it to the Elect, as well Gentiles, as Jewes, dispersed throughout the world.

shall bring mine offering] Describes Gods Spiritual Worship by those legal ceremonies then in use, as other Prophets also use to do.

V.11. In that day] The happy state of the Church in that day where set forth: in that the wicked shall be taken away out of the midst of them; and themselves shall be holy and happy.

shalt thou not be ashamed for all thy doings] O my Church, I will take away that ignominy from thee, under which thou hast suffered for the shameful evils done in thee, whereby the very name of Jews is become odious and reproachful. The shameleste evil-doers I will purge out of thee, and take them away. This stands well with that Rom.6.21. Jer.31.19.

wherein thou hast transgressed against me] When there are but a few godly left, and mixed among multitudes of grievous sinners, they lye under the imputation of the common infamy and reproach with the rest, as if alike faulty with them. We call a City and Nation sinful, as Isa.1.4 where the most do cover cloud the few that are godly therein, that they lie hid, as if were, and buried among them, that they appear not.

for then I will take away] Then, by my forefaid heavy judgements, I will take them away, that thou shall not be ashamed for al their ill doings, cleanse thee of them, as chaffe with a fan, and leave thee as pure Wheat, Mat.3.12. & Chap.13.30. Mal.3.18. & 4.1,2.

that rejoyce in thy pride] Pride themselves to be the only people of God, had commonly in their mouths that, Jer. 7.4. Exod.19.6. no other Temple of Gods worship in the world, they the only people, God had no Church without them, smoothing up themselves, and thickering their sins under this pretext, as if thereupon they might live and do as they list.

haughty because of my holy mountain] Haughty in their pride, puft up with it, swollen big, because of my Temple, and their many prerogatives by it, Psalm 48.2,3. and 46.4,5. and 68.16. Esay 8. 18. and 27.13.

V.12. I will also leave] God will still leave a remnant, preserve his Church.

an afflicted and poor people] This is many times the state of Gods Church, God tames his Church by the Crosse.

and they shall trust] This should comfort them against their paucity, and the destruction of the rest; They shall be holy, as gold purified in the fire; They shall trust in God, rest and rely only upon him, and his grace, and not trust to that proud and vain boasting of the haughty hypocrites: They shall faithfully serve him, and be freed of that shame which by reason of those transgressors formerly lay upon them. Some more largely expound the verse thus, Out of the carnal and rejected Israel, and out of lost mankinde, will I deliver mine Elect, and Believers, which are poor and wretched in the worlds esteem. See Esay 14.32. Zech.11.11. & 13.9.

V.13. They commit] Though few, yet not to be the lesse esteemed, Luke 14.32. And the purging of the Church, whereby they were brought to this paucity, is a matter of great worth and moment, to have the transgressors taken away that abused and profaned Gods holy Name.

shall not do iniquity] Perfection not intended: but integrity and sincerity.

nor speak lies] Instanceth in one kinde for all the rest, verse 9. See James 1.26. and 3.2. 1 Per.3.10. Apoc.14.5. & 21.27.& 22.15.

None shall make them afraid] Safety and security is promised, temporal blessings. See Levit.26. Jer. 46.27. Job 11. 19. yet this is promised not so much simply and absolutely, as comparatively and conditionally, as all temporal blessings are. Some more largely expound the meaning of the verse thus, The true believers chosen out of all the world, being regenerated by the Holy Ghost, shall live in purity, sincerity, and innocency, like Christs true sheep, fed by the word of truth, and kept safe under his protection, without any other devices or cunning.

V.14. Sing] The Prophet exhorts this holy and happy Church to rejoyce and prase God for these his spiritual blessings. He after doubles and trebles the exhortation, because it is hard in the black night of calamities, to spy out the light of comfort; and this appearing but afar off. And yet it is necessary for our present suppose, and meet that we should be thus affected at Gods mercies, and be answerable in joy, and thanks and praise thereunto.

O Daughter of Zion] Esay 12. 5,6. and 54.1. and 65.9. and 66. 10. Jer 31.7. Habak.3.18.

V.15. hath taken away thy judgements] That is, the punishments and visitations for thy sins; & consequently thy sins, the causers of them, thine enemies] As the Assyrians, Chaldeans, Egyptians, and other nations. They were but as rods in Gods hand, Isa.10.5,7.

the King of Israel] The Lord God, and Jesus Christ the King of his Church, Psalm 149.2. Isaiah 44.6. Zech.9.9.

in the midst of thee] Sometimes he stands afar off, Psal. 10.1. & 22. 1. Ezek.8 6. But here in the midst of thee, present and ready to bless, protect, and defend thee under the shadow of his wings, and in the power and grace of his Spirit, to comfort and strengthen thee, Ezek.39.29.

evil any more] Jer.23.4. Amos 9.15.

V.16. It shall be said] By way of common congratulation of all.

Fear thou not] Afore they were in fears and troubles, but now the case was changed. See Esay 10.24. and 35.3,4. and 40.9. and 41.10. 14. Jer.46.27.

Let not thine hand be slack] Or, faint, be not discouraged, strengthen thy self in faith, and in perseverance, in all the duties of thy calling, not fearing any thing which may happen to thee; nor flack, without vigor and agility: As fear makes them but drive rather in well-doing.

V.17. The Lord thy God] The reason of that in the former ver. He will not be slack or idle, but able and active to save thee.

he will rejoyce over thee with joy] These expressions concerning God are taken from men, to make known his mind unto us. Words full of comfort to the Church, shewing the infinite love of Gods tender love and condescension to us, Psa.103.11,13. Esay 49. 15. And all little enough to raise up our faith, hope, and love in him. The blessings here, and in the former verse took their rise at their return from Babylon, but are carried on to Christs full and second coming.

he will rest in his love] Heb. will be silent.

He will joy] His delight shall be in thee, in loving thee, and in doing thee good, Jer 32.41. Ezek.36.40.

V.18. that are sorrowful for the solemn assembly] For the losse and want of their solemn assemblies, upon the Sabbaths, and other feasts, and times of Gods worship. These they most highly prized, and joyed in; and the want of them was their sorrow and lamentation. See Psal.42.& 84.& 137. Lam.1.4.& 2.6,7.& 4.1.& 5.18. And the more, because the adversaries in their exile mocke at their Sabbaths, Lam.1.7.

who are of thee] Thy true and genuine children, as 1 John 2.19. This sorrow for the lack of Gods holy ordinances, and want of his worship, is a sure sign of a true childe and member of the Church.

the reproach] Hebr. the burden upon it was reproach.

a burden] As Psalm 42.3.10.

V.19. at that time] My appointed time. Not so long haply as your hasty desires would have it, to whom speed it seems a delay. But I know mine own time best, ye must stand upon your tower and watch, and patiently wait for it.

I will undo] Think not this impossible to be effected, all obstacles I will remove, all thy persecutors I will persecute. See Esay 10.25,26.

save her] I will deliver the Church, who now is afflicted, as Micah 4 6,7.

that halteth] Ezek.34.16. Micah 4.7. Even the weakest, and unable to help her self, Ezek. 37. This restauration shall be like a resurrection from the dead.

get them praise and fame] Heb. I will set them for a praise, I will make them celebrious and famous, and that even in the lands, and in the mouths of their enemies that had reproached them; yea, a praise to himself, Jer.13.11. and 33.9. Esay 61.7.

in every land] As among the Assyrians, Chaldeans, and Grecians, which did mock them, and put them to shame.

where they have been put to [shame] Heb. Of their shame.

V.20. will I bring you again] See Nehem.1.9. Zech.10. 8, 9, 10. Micah 4.6. into your country, which is the type of the Church. But he will gather your enemies as sheaves into the floor, Mic. 4.12,13.

a name and praise] See on verse 19. Repeats it for their assurance, because in the eye of flesh and blood it was a thing so incredible, Esay 60.15,18. and 61.7. and 62.7.

captivities] Plurally. They were so greatly dispersed and scattered, as if there had been many and many captivities. See Esther 8. verse 9. and 9.2.

before your eyes] They should be eye-witnesses of so great a restauration and glorious salvation.

ANNOTATIONS on the Book of the Prophet HAGGAI.

THE ARGUMENT.

After the seventy yeers Captivity, fore-told by Jeremiah, were expired; and the Jewes were returned from Babylon; and yet the Temple for many yeers un-built; God raised up some Prophets, among the rest, Haggai and Zechariah; to exhort them to re-edifie the Temple, and to re-establish his pure worship. Haggai sharply reproveth them for regarding their private commodities, more then the publick good; building their own Houses, with neglecting the Lords House; and foreweth, that the plague of famine sent amongst them, was a just recompence of their grosse ingratitude in omitting that work, to effect which, God mightily wrought their deliverance from Babel. Yet if they will up and build, God would be with them, with his Word and Spirit. And albeit that House they builded were far lesse stately then the former built by Solomon, and nothing in comparison in their eyes, who had seen both; and for which many were grieved; the Prophet comforteth them, and all the Elect, in assurance that the glory of this latter House should be greater then the glory of the former: For Zerubbabel the signet, that is, Christ (who was to come of Zerubbabel) should be born and come into their re-edified Temple, and by his presence advance it to greater glory then ever the former had; who by the Father is appointed king of his Church yea, King of kings: and Lord of lords; and who also should shake the Heaven and the earth: the Heaven of Jewish ceremonies, and earth of profane Empire, by setting up his Kingdom in spiritual worship: bringing all Nations under his Power: and subverting all power contrary to his. Haggai expounded by Daniels sevens, that the Jewes should build a Temple, Chap. 1. that Christ the desire of all Nations, should come into it: and so, by his presence there, make that Temple more glorious then Solomons, Chap. 2. His whole Prophecie is within the compasse of somewhat lesse then four moneths. And was upon four severall dayes within that time: Namely in the second year of Darius, moneth six. day first, Chap. 1. 1. and day. 24. Chap. 1. 13. 15. And moneth 7. day 21. Chap. 2. 1. And moneth 9. day 24. Chap. 2. 10. 18. 20.

CHAP. I.

IN the second yeer of Darius] Ezra 4. 24. and 5. 1. Zech. 1. 1. Who was the son of Hystaspis, and the third King of the Persians, as the most, and best think. Others take him to be Darius Nothus, the sixt King of the Persians, that succeeded Artaxerxes Longimanus, being his base son, and was father of Artaxerxes Mnemon. See Annotations on Dan. 9. 25. This man whether the sixth King, or rather the third, knew that Gods wrath was upon his predecessors for hindring the building of the Temple. In his second, the Temple is taken in hand again, and finished in his sixth, Ezra 4.24.& 6. 15.

sixth moneth] See the end of the Argument of the Book.

Luk. 3. 27. yet he seems to be the son of Pedajah, 1 Chron. 3. 17, 18, 19. and grand-child of Shealtiel or Selathiel: Grand-children are sometimes called by the names of sons in Scriptures, and one man sometimes by two names.

governour of Judah] So v. 14. & 2. 1. 21 Or, Captain of the people of the Jews, by the King of Persia, after their return out of captivity, likely called the Tirshatha, Ezra 2. 63. as Nehemiah is called, Neh. 8. v. 9. & c. 10. 1. Thus though the Kingdome was gone, Ezek. 21. 26, 27. yet the government remained in that Tribe, according to the prophetical promise, Gen 49. 10.

son of Josedech] Or, Iehozadak, which Jehozadak went into captivity, 1 Chron. 6. 15. His father Seraiah the high Priest being slain by Nebuchadnezzar at Riblah, 2 Kings 25. 18, 21.

the high priest] So v. 12, & 14. & 2. 2. Zech. 3. 1. 8. he was the twenty fourth in number from Aaron, 1 Chron. 6. 3, 4—16. These two, both Governour and high Priest, were good men, yet needed incitation and encouragement; and the Prophet is directed to them, as being by their places and persons the best Directors to the people. Some make them to be very long lived this people say] They were but a parcel that came in respect of the rest that stayed behinde; yet these that were forward to come, were backward in the building of the Temple: the fault is laid upon the people.

The time is not come] Some think the seventy yeers of captivity not ended till now. But that is a grosse errour, Ezra 1. 1. Dan 9. 1. 2. Isa. 44. 28. This indeed is the excuse of the Jews, arising out of diffidence and difficulties, pretending, no doubt, the many inhibitions of the former Kings of Persia, against the building of the Temple, Exra 4. v. 5, 6, 7, 8. 21—25. Neither yet that they had heard any thing from the new King Darius to warrant them to build, so that they feared they might be charged by their enemies with rebellion against the King, if they should set upon the work without his leave and authority; and that they had formerly begun to build too soon, and were inhibited for their haste, Ezra 3.8. with chap. 4. 1. 5. And having already the Altar for sacrifice, they might now well enough build their own houses, and expect a fitter time to build the Lords Temple more sumptuously: and as if by those lets, which had been an hinderance to them, God had shewed that he would have the work put off till another time. Yet all this frees them not of their carnal affection to their own ease, & of the neglect & contempt of Gods worship; in that they sate down so quietly and contentedly so long a time under these interdicts, without due labouring to have them removed.

V. 4. Is it time for you?] The Prophets reproof of that pretence, verse 2. A sharp pointed reproof by the interrogation.

O ye] Silly worms; ye ungratefull wretches; ye so lately and graciously delivered from exile; and brought back into your own countrey; and that for this very end, as appears in Cyrus his own Edict, Ezra 1. verse 2.

to dwell, &c.] To dwell and delight your selves in your seeled houses; to adorne them; to be thus addicted to your own private commodities, and pleasures, and to be so ungratefull to God, as not to let him have his House, but to let it lie waste: shewing thus, that they sought not onely their necessities, but their very pleasures before Gods honour. David did otherwise, Psal. 132. 2. — 6. 2 Sam. 7. 2. Let not us be so ungrateful for our deliverance from our spiritual captivity under the Romish Babylon, as not to build up an house and spiritual Temple to God in our soules.

V. 5. Consider your wayes] Hebr. Set your heart on your wayes. Deceive not your selves, but weigh the matter better, ponder and seriously consider, verse 7. and 2. 15. 18. See Ezek. 40. 4. and 44. 5. Dan. 6. 14. and 10. 12. weigh your wayes, your work: your thoughts, ingratitude, and profanenesse: your carelessnesse, wherein by you have provoked my judgement: weigh Gods works and dealings with you hereupon, 1 Cor. 11. 31.

V. 6. ye have sowen much] Deut. 28. 38. Mich. 6. 14, 15. Consider the plagues of God upon you, for preferring your policies, and carnal desires, to his Religion; and because ye seek not him first of all. If God, and his Word, and Authority prevail not: not the Prophets sent by him, yet let experience, the Mistresse of fools, school you.

ye eat, &c.] These things come not by chance, but Gods hand and curse is upon you, and all your affairs. God promised to multiply these earthly blessings upon them at their return, Hos. 2. 21, 22. and by the general promises in his Law, Deut. 28. 3, 4, 5, 8. But now he denies them the fruit of the earth, or else denies his blessings, on them, takes away the natural vigour and strength from his ordinary blessings, chap. 2. 16.

he that earneth wages] You have not reaped any profit or benefit by all your labours; see Zech. 8. 10.

with holes] Hebr. pierced through. A Proverbial kind of speech: thus Gods malediction and curse was upon all their wayes, and the works works of their hands, Deut. 28. 16, 17, 18, 20. and Chap. 1. 17. See Amos 4. 6, &c. All this should have been a warning to them; a sufficient warning or Gods anger gainst them for this very cause.

V. 7. Consider] See on v. 5. see Phil. 3. 1.

V. 8. Goe up to the mountain] God comes, as it were, with sword in his hand, to punish your contradiction and contempt: the end of his punishing is, to turn your careless slacknesse into an industrious diligence; meaning that they should leave off their own Commodities, and go up to the mountain, and go forward with the building of Gods Temple, in the setting forth of his Religion, and build the house] God is so earnest for the Temple, because besides the exercises of piety in it, and many promises made to it, it had in many things relation to Christ, and to the Temple of God in heaven.

and I will take pleasure in it] That is, I will hear your prayers according to my promise, and be propitious to you and your services therein: See Zeph. 3. 17. Tit 2. 14. 1 King. 8. 29. & 9. 3. The cover of the Ark had the name of the Propitiatory.

and I will be glorified] In my services there, and I will shew my glorious power and goodnesse in blessing you and your affairs, and in defending you, and will give you cause to honour and serve me, and my enemies to fear me, 1 Sam 2. 30.

V. 9. Ye looked for much] You hoped for a great harvest, by reason of the great likelihood that was of it; but your hopes were vain, ye were eager after much, but had little; God cursed their blessings and expectations, as Mal. 2. 2. & 3. 10, 11. They were pinched and pined away in their wants, because they defrauded God of his due worship.

blew upon it] Or, Blowit away: As the winde scatters the chaff and thistle-down; as ye do snuff and puff at my services, Mal. 1. 13. so I blast your own endeavours and acquisitions.

why] Not that he doubts, but that they might not doubt of the cause wherefore they should be monitors sufficient to themselves: but this implies and argues a stupidity and blockishnesse in them.

because of mine house] Here is the cause.

And ye run] Eagerly pursue your own private ends and affairs. Every one is most careful of building his own house, and looking to his own particular businesses: run after them: and are so slow for my house, and worship. This shews their little care of serving God.

V. 10. Therefore the heaven] Levit. 26. 19. Deut. 28. 23. Heaven, and Earth, by their dew, and fruit, heed not mans sustenance: but God useth them as his ordinary instruments, whereby to provide for the sustenance and relief, or for the punishment of man.

V. 11. And I called for a drought] See Jer. 14. 3, 4. He brings droughts, and rain: He restrains, and pours out his bottles of the clouds at his pleasure. As he dealt with Gideons fleece, Judg. 6. 37. 40. See 1 King. 17. 1. 2 King. 8. 1.

V. 12. Then Zerubbabel, &c.] His Ambassage had its effect. These two Heads were good men; and good Leaders to the rest, who were the more willing to follow so good guides.

obeyed] And went freely about the re-edifying of the Temple, Ezra 5. 2.

the voice] He insists the longer upon this: the more to asseer the authority of his calling. And some what the rather, because they had wanted Prophets a while before.

and the words of Haggai] He distinguisheth not between Gods Word, and his, as if he brought any thing more or lesse then Gods Word: but between the Author and Minister of the same word. As in that, The sword of the Lord, and of Gideon, Judg. 7. 20. And the people believed God, and his servant Moses, Exo. 14. 31. And so Act. 15. 18. And not as some Papists would thence collect, that God thereby leaves some part and power to his Church, to add of their own, beside & beyond the warrant of his word: Against that wherewith he shuts up all, Apoc. 22. 18, 19. See Deut. 5. 32. So often repeated, and 1 Cor. 11. 23.

God had sent him] God is heard in the voice of his Messengers, when he speaketh by the mouth of man.

and the people did fear before the Lord] At the word of the Prophet, as if God had appeared to them face to face, and spoken to them, mouth to mouth.

V. 13. Then spake] This seems to be on the 24 day of the sixth moneth, verse 15. till when they continued building, for the space of about three weeks. But then likely at the discouragement given by Tatnai and others, Ezra 5. 3. they began to faint; whereupon this encouragement and promise is renewed. Or else, these 23 days passed since that v. 1. before they could unanimously fit & prepare themselves to the building; and now began first to set upon it. And yet the foundation of the Temple is said to be laid on the 24th day of the 9 moneth, Chap. 2. 18. It may be, then finished, not then began to be laid. And he animates them the second time, that their alacrity might increase in the work, by this promise thus renewed.

the Lords messenger] Or Angel. Not that he was so by nature, but by office, Mal. 2. 7. He asserts the right and authority of his calling: requires reverence and obedience to be yielded to him, not as a private man, but as Jehovah's Messenger and Ambassador.

I am with you] God offers and promises his help. Without his assistance, all is vain; Psal. 127. 1, 2. But his help is all-sufficient; as if he should say, ye shall go through with it, notwithstanding any obstructions and opposition whatsoever. See Exod. 3. 12. & 4. 12, 15. Matth. 28. 20. 2 Cor. 12. 9.

V. 14. And the Lord stirred up] As resh, to go on in the work: which declareth that men are unapt and dull to serve the Lord; neither can they obey his word, or his messengers, before God reform their hearts, and give them new spirits, John 6. 44. The word and all outward Ordinances are in vain, unlesse God cloath them with his power, and fill them with his Spirit, 1 Cor. 3. 7. he subdues us unto him, and makes us docible and pliant, by the secret instinct of his Spirit. He gives to us, and freely works in us by his grace both to will and to do, to endeavour and persevere, Phil. 1. 29. and 2. 13. yet he pleaseth to work ordinarily, by his Word, and Ordinances: And therefore on them we are to attend; or rather on him in them. The first rise of new life, and saving grace is not in our natural powers and strength, in our dead estate in sin: but meerly in his purpose and pleasure, Rom. 9. 16.

of Zerubbabel] See on ver. 1. The highest powers are not exempt; but the Prince and the High Priest himself, submits and subjects to the Prophet.

and did work] Jam. 1. 25. 1 Jn 13. 17. and finished it with speed, Ezra 4. 24. & 6. 15.

V. 15. In the twenty fourth day, &c.] Twenty three dayes being now past since that, ver. 1. See Annotations on verse 13. yet some conceive this to be the day, that they first began to set upon the work. See also Chap. 2. 18.

CHAP. II.

IN the seventh moneth in the twenty first day] That is, 27 dayes since the second message, Chap. 1. 15. and 51 dayes since the first message, Chap. 1. 1. in the second year of Darius his reign, chap. 1. 1. see the end of the argument of this Book.

residue of the people] But a remnant or small number of them did then return. Another number after with Ezra, Ezra 7, 8 Chap. And yet multitudes behinde, as appears in the Book of Esther. So slow they were to return, so little zeal and piety was in them.

V. 3. who is left] Here he meets with a new tentation that hindered them in the building. Satan will cast in the way of wel-doing more rubs then one. The former was their neglect and contempt of Gods worship, preferring their own covetous desires, and carnal pleasures before it. Here is pretended a Religious zeal of Gods glory; thus Solomons Temple was glorious: And the promises of the Prophets, Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, &c. That the second Temple to be built after the return should be rather more glorious. But that which they began now to build was far inferiour. And therefore sure they were not in the right way, but should desist from going on in this building. Thus cunning a crafts-master is Satan.

that saw] Haggai by the judgment of all Commentators spake of men that had seen the former Temple, in age of discretion. See Ezra 3. 12.

as nothing?] In comparison of Solomons Temple, Ezra 3. 12. So then; and so here now; Their present proceedings were like those poor beginnings. A much like tentation is now a-days, when some forsake the Church because of the high perfection, which they require, but do not see in it. They insist upon that Ephes. 5. 27. They fancy a new world here wherein the Church must be thus glorious; and otherwise they will separate, & break the unity of the Church, forsake the Assemblies. See Zech. 4. 10.

V. 4. Yet now be strong] We see how needful it is often to renew exhortations and encouragements, Joth. 1. 6. 7. 9. & 23. 6. Deut. 31. 6, 7. Ezra 10. 4. Isai. 35. 3, 4. Zech. 8. 9 13. we must simply and manfully obey God, and his Word; and so exercise and inure our hope as patiently to expect Gods own time to fulfil what he hath promised; though the effect of them do not yet answer our present desires.

and work] That is, go forward in building the Temple.

I am with you] He graciously repeats it again. See on chap. 1. 13. This shews that this strength is to be sought of God. The promise of his presence is to be joyned to the Precept. The Precept of it selfe shews not what we are able to do, but what we are bound to do; and the Promise directs us to whom, and where we are to seek for strength to do it.

V. 5. According to the word] Some would understand this of that eternal Word, Joh. 1. 1, 2, 3, 4. 1 John 1. 1, 2. Prov. 8. 22. And so that 2 Sam. 7. 23. And these would deduce from this verse a testimonie for the Trinity of persons. But this seems more accute then sound.

The plain meaning appears in the words following.

that I covenanted with you] According to my promise made at that time with your fathers, & you in them. So that here in effect he promiseth no new thing: but will perform what he promised of old. He calls them back to the ancient covenant, as to the fountain, whence all particular promises, as rivolets, do flow: as the manner of the Prophets is to do. God redemed not their Fathers, to cast off the children, but to continue his grace in them to the end: which end is made up in Christ. Seeing then they were to hope for, & expect the accomplishment of that felicity, which God by his covenant had promised them; either God and the Covenant should fail and disappoint them, or else they must cheerfully go on in the work to build the Temple.

my Spi it remaineth] My power to strengthen you, and carry you on against all tentations, and obstructions; my Spirit of grace, light, vertue, and holinesse. See Isaiah 43.11. Neh.9.20.

V.6. For thus saith] This sentence depends upon the foresaid Covenant: And thereupon it begins with a particle causal.

it is a little while] Some refer it thus, to the time, that God will soon change the face of things to the better, they must give place to patience for a while. Some to the present state of things, and case that is but a little matter, let them not judge of it by the present view and shew, but cast the eye of their minde to that hidden glory not yet appearing, but in time shall. Those magnificent promises and Prophecies touching the Temple of God, and the Kingdome of David, though neither appeared now in any lustre, yet in their time should have their due and full accomplishment. Others refer it to the Covenant of God, and his dealing then with his people when he brought them out of Egypt; That though that was great and wonderful, yet but little to this, to his bringing of Christ, to his coming, and the Administration of his Gospel. Compare Rom. 8. 3. and 2 Cor.3.6,7. and Hebr.7.19. with 2 Cor.3.6,18. Hebr. 8. ver. 9. &c. Jer.31.30.&c. Ezek.36.26.&c. This one onely renewing of my Covenant by the Gospel of Christ shall be needful. That Covenant with you, when ye came out of Egypt, was not available. And to this meaning it seems the Apostle bends, in alleaging this place, Heb.12.26.

and I will shake the heavens] He shook the earth, when he brought them out of Egypt, and Babylon. But now he will do something greater then that. As if he thou d say, rest not upon these poor and weak beginnings, the day of small things, but consider rather how great the Lords power is. He hath done much formerly for the deliverance and restauration of his people: He will do greater things; he will shake heaven, and earth, and all, rather then your enemies, or any thing else should hinder him in his time from that full and glorious restauration of his Church, whereof the Prophets so much Prophecied. In the coming of Christ, and the preaching and administration of the Gospel, the power of God doth much more illustriously appear, then formerly it did; He now speaks from heaven unto us, and that by his own Son, Hebr.1.1,2. and 2.2,3,4. and 12.25. Some expresse the sense thus, not much differing; As formerly when I gave my Law, I appeared in terrible Majesty; so in the Messias his time, I will manifest the mighty power of my Spirit, by the preaching of the Gospel; from whence shall follow great commotions, to the ruining of the devils Kingdome, and confirming of Christs, by removing of the leaven of ceremonies under the Law, by calling and gathering together all mine Elect. See Joel 3.16. Hebr.12.26,27.

V.7. And I will shake all Nations] By the power of my Spirit, and the preaching of my Gospel. I have the minds of all mortals in my hand, to turn as pleaseth me. And this shaking, if not perhaps taken litterally, like that Matth. 24.6,7. and verse 22. of this chapter, seems to import a super-natural concussion of their minds, whereby he drawes and drives his Elect into the Sheep-fold of Christ. Great is our natural averssesse, obstinacy, and hatred against the spiritual Kingdome of Christ. God shakes the will, and subdues, and changeth it, and then we willingly follow Christ, and receive his yoak.

And the desire of all Nations shall come] Namely, Christ, desired of the faithful in all Nations. Though some, not so well, understand this of the elect of all Nations, the desirable ones among them. Or, their desires all shall be to come; they of all Nations with all their desires shall come.

And I will fill this House with glory] By Christs bodily presence, Or by the glory that the accession of the Gentiles shall bring unto it; ver. 9. See Isaiah 66. 11, 12, 22. Or thus, to the like effect. This re-edified Temple shall be honored with Christs bodily presence; and the spiritual Temple, which is the Church, shall be honoured by my presence in Spirit, and by the abundance of my graces, by the light of my Word, and vertue of my Spirit.

V.8. The silver is mine] If I pleased, it were an easie matter for me to beautifie this Temple with precious ornaments like unto the first; for all silver and gold is in my power, and at my disposal; but I do prepare endlesse glory, far greater then that, for it, when the full time is come.

V.9. The glory of this latter] He sixeth upon this conclusion, and relates principally to the excellency of the gifts and saving graces of the spirit that should then abound in the dayes of the Gospel. See on Joel 2. 28. The Lord by his Prophet here hath no reference to Herods new Temple, more large, sumptuous, and magnificent, then that of Solomon, if the story of it be true. Such outward splendour dazles the eyes of the minde, and by the cunning of Satan withdraws men by such carnal and grosse imaginations, from the due regard and esteem of those heavenly spiritual ornaments of the Temple, which God here aims at. The Disciples and Apostles themselves were too much led aside that way, Mark 13. 1. Acts 1. 6. and rested too much in an earthly Temple, and Kingdome.

I will give peace] Peace and prosperity, but chiefly the preaching and enjoying of spiritual peace, Phil. 4. 7. founded upon the reconciliation of men with God through Christ, who is our peace, and did thew himself in this house. All shall be after a-while, when Christ shall bring with him the fulnesse of glory, when God the Father in the person of his Son shall appear therein.

V.10. In the twenty fourth day of the ninth moneth] Sixty three dayes since the last message, in the 1 verse of this chapter. And all that follows relates to this, verse 18. and 20. to the beginning and ending of Haggai's Prophecie, or of Gods Word, and speaking to him, is contained within the compasse of little more then one quarter of an year, viz. of three moneths, and three weeks, and three dayes, or one hundred fourteen dayes. See the end of the argument of the Book.

V.11. Ask now the Priests] Whose office was to teach the Law, Levit.10.10,11. Deut.33. 10, Mal. 2.7. Matth. 8. 4. And to whom it belonged to answer in doubtful cases, and concerning questions of the Law. Ask them this question, concerning this ceremony.

Concerning the Law] It was not in their power and pleasure to answer what and how they list; They were tyed to the Law, Isaiah 8.20. Deut.17.11. and 21.5. and 24.8. Ezek.44.24. All authority in the Church must be subjected to, and regulated by this rule.

V.12. If one bear, &c.] The first question: whether shall it be holy that is so touched? or the person that bears that holy flesh, or piece of a sacrifice, be holy thereby?

Shall] Not thus; shall the holy flesh so touching become profaned thereby?

No] A right answer. For that holy flesh or sacrifice was not ordained by God to that end, by the touch of it to hallow that which before was common and prophane. Sacrifices and their flesh were ordained to another end and use.

V.13. If one that is unclean, &c.] If a person legally unclean shall touch any thing that is not unclean, shall it by that his touching of it become unclean legally?

it shall be unclean] A knowing and true answer, according to the ceremonial Law. See Levit. 15, and chap. 22. 5, 6. Numb. 19. 22. Hence is that saying of those proud hypocrites, Esay 65. 5.

V.14. So is this people] The Prophet applies the former doctrine, to his present purpose, even in the same manner, because this people is of an unclean conscience, all that they do in my outward worship is also unclean, Titus 1.15. Or thus; As by carrying or touching an hallowed thing according to the Levitical ceremonies, a man or the thing touched is not made holy thereby: but if a man that is Levitically unclean do touch them, they are made unholy thereby. So this people were not made holy by use of these holy ceremonies; but rather the holy ceremonies polluted by them, by reason of their personal uncleanneſſe. The issue and end of all is this; That they might see and be convinced hereby that all these ceremonious services of God, and all their actions are unholy, and defiled, unlesse they proceed from a pure and sincere affection of the heart, from persons purified by faith, and sanctification. From an impure fountain nothing can flow but what is impure; James 3. 11, 12. 1 Tim. 1.5. The fountain whence, and the end wherefore, determine the nature of our actions, and services. The very Heathen, both Poets, and Philosophers, saw and acknowledged, That the wickednesse of the worshippers defiled the sacrifices, and services of their idols; and made them unacceptable.

offer there] Even upon that altar which they have built, Ezra 3. 2, 3. And so when they have built the Temple; they must chiefly look to this necessary admonition and doctrine; That they stick not in outward ceremonies, and Levitical services, and rest only in them; themselves mean-while being unholy: but that by them they rise up higher, principally to have a care of Gods spiritual service, and that he being a Spirit be served by them in spirit and truth.

V.15. and now I pray you] Verse 18. and Chap. 1. 5. He insists so much upon this point, because they were so much addicted to these earthly commoditics; and therefore this argument likely would best work with them: and yet they were for all that so dull of apprehension, and so blinde, that they could or would not see these manifest things; Gods plain judgements upon them, upon the fruits of the earth, and the labours of their hands, for their neglect of building Gods house. He calls therefore upon them for consideration. And to consider, not any deep mysteries of religion; He speaks wisdome among them that are perfect, 1 Cor. 2.6: He speaks wisdome among them that are carnal worldly men in a way suitable to their slate and capacity, 1 Cor.3.1.

from before a stone] Namely, before there was any hand set to the work of re-building the Temple, interrupted for many years after their return from Babylon. See Ezra 3. 8. and 5. 2. the foundations laid, but then the building left off.

V. 16. since those dayes] Or that since, since you have discontinued building, and taken no care of my Temple; and have profaned my service, all your hopes of abundance and prosperity have failed you; and ye received a curse in stead of a blessing.

when one came] Usually they could guess neer upon the point. But now they were so far deceived, that they might easily discern thereby that Gods extraordinary hand was in it, and his malediction and curse lay upon their basket and store. Chap. 1. 9. Zech. 8. 10.

V. 17. I smote you] Or, that I smote you, that is, your fruits.

with blasting] Deut. 28. 22. 1 King. 8. 37. Amos 4. 6. Gen. 41. 6.

and with hail] God sited divers judgements, that they might have lesse cause to attribute them to fate, or fortune; to the stars, or any secondary causes.

yet ye turned not] God still hath his finger upon this sore. Complains of this; as here: so Esay 9.13. Jer. 3. 10. and 5.3. and 8. 5. Hos. 7.10. Amos 4. 6. And he often requires the amendment of this fault; makes many promises to them if they will, Jer. 3. 1, 7, 14. 22. And threatens if they will not, Jer. 15. 7.

V. 18. from the four and twentieth day] He is at it again, because of their dulnesse and blockishnesse. See on verse. 10. and on verse. 15. It seems then on this day they first began to build upon those old foundations laid, Ezra 3. See on Chap. 1. 13. 15. It is our bounden duty diligently to mark and observe Gods judgements in, and upon the world; specially among his own people, the Church.

V. 19. Is the seed yet in the barn?] Either in the blade; or rather not yet sown, being the ninth moneth, about our November, in winter time, which agrees well with all that follows in the verse; when nothing yet appeared, and when between that and harvest time there might come and intervene blastings, and droughts, and wett, and vermine; as verse. 17.

from this day will I bless you] Yet for all these casualties he forctels, now five moneths afore harvest; that from the time they began to build the Temple, God will bless them; albeit as yet the fruit was come forth, yet in the gathering they should have plenty: thus suddenly, and beyond their hope and expectation, God would turn their dearth to plenty, and abundantly blesse them. This should be a signe and assurance to them; as that Judg. 6. 21. 37. 1 Sam. 10. 2. 8. And thus God by his temporal blessings gives encouragements to us for well doing. We have need of all helps: And godlinesse hath the promise both of this life, and that to come, 1 Tim. 4. 8.

V. 20. And again] The second time, on the same day. See on verse. 10.

of the moneth] Namely, of the foresaid ninth moneth.

V. 21. I will shake the heavens] God by his Prophet now proceeds further to a gracious and spiritual promise & prophecy, which properly belongs to the kingdom of Christ. The sum is, That God will overcome all enemies, and remove all difficulties and obstructions, which Satan and all the world can possibly lay in his way when he comes to restore his Church, & constitute Christ the Head of it. Under the term of shaking here, God speaks not of his ordinary power and might; nor simply challengeth to himself the rule and command of heaven and earth: but he signifieth that he is in hand with some memorable work which shall astonish with wonder the minds of men, and be enough to shake heaven and earth. The beginning and preambles of it did but then appear when he brought his people back from Babylon; They were then in effect but in a weak, poor, and almost miserable estate: but the full end and perfection of this here spoken of, could not then be seen; It was afterwards to be effected. The Jews then at this time were to conceive more in their minds, then what they saw with their eyes; the time of their compleat Redemption was not yet come.

V. 22. And I will overthrow] Nothing shall stand in his way: the throne of kingdoms] All power and height, contrary to Christs kingdome, which I have established for ever, over all the world. Others thus, there shall be no let or hinderance when God will make this wonderful restitution of his Church, but he will rather overthrow, destroy, and bring down all crowns, kingdoms, nations, strengths, then that his Church shall remain in that low and base estate.

by the sword of his brother] Hereby is signified the conflicts of the kingdoms of the world, stirred up one against another by Gods providence and judgement, Matth. 24.7.

V. 23. In that day] Of that glorious restauration of my Church Here is the reason of that former wondrous action of God.

will I take the O Zerubbabel] Plain it is that this was not performed in the person of Zerubbabel; or but very poorly, as in the type. In his person is Christ defigned, as under many like figures in the old Testament.

as a signet] Account thee precious. The meaning is, I will appoint Christ, who shall come forth of thee according to the flesh, Luke 3. 27. and whose figure thou art, Zech. 4. 12. to be my sacred King, whom I will inviolably keep by me, and love, which is the signification of this proverbial terme, of making and keeping as a signet, Cant. 8.6. Jer. 22. 24. See Isai. 42. 1. And by and under him I will make up this glorious restauration of my Church. By the power of the Gospel, and the breath of Christs mouth; 2 Cor. 10. 5. 2 Thes. 2. 8. I will make a change, and renew all things in Christ, of whom Zerubbabel here is a figure: for in the Messias his times, not onely the earth and earthly Emperours were shaken, but also the Heavens, or the old Ceremonies, that figured and typified out the doctrine of the Kingdom; that such as should not be shaken might be setled, Heb. 12. 26. I will shake other Kingdoms, to establish this eternal Kingdom: Heaven and earth shall yeeld reverence to this Kingdom of Christ. And surely his coming brought, and wrought a wonderful change; made, as it were a new creation: He reconciles all things in heaven and earth, Col. 1. 20. He overcame the devil, brought life and immortality to light, and gave out such documents and demonstrations of the grace and power of God, as might fill heaven and earth with wonder and astonishment; who could have imagined such a change?

for I have chosen thee] The free election, and sole goodnesse of God, in his free Covenant with mankind, and Abraham, and David, establishing in him as the type, this eternal and spiritual kingdom; and as the ground and means of all, the choosing of Christ, is the reason of all this. Of this choosing of Christ, see 1 Chr. 23. 6. Isai. 43. 10. Mat. 12. 18. Luk. 23. 35. 1 Pet. 2. 4. 6.

ANNOTATIONS on the Book of the Prophet ZECHARIAH.

THE ARGUMENT.

ZEchariah was sent of the Lord to be Co-partner with Haggai, to confirm the same doctrine, and to help on the worke of building the Temple, and setling Gods service. The Holy Ghost spake by Haggai in a plain way of preaching; but altereth his style in Zechariah; who hath many visions of high and mysterious meaning, whereby to set out the doctrines and prophecies he was to declare: How marvellously the Son of God, Head of the Church interceded with his Father; And had formerly saved his Church in all Tryals and Troubles, and punished her enemies. And being consulted about their present Fasting, He answers, that God requires good works and holinesse. And he shewes that their fasting should be turned to feasting and joy in the Lord, upon the promises of such mercies as they might hope for, being truly penitent, and constantly pious, as well in Temporals, until the Messias; as in Spiritual ones, after his coming. Whose coming is plainly and particularly specified; as also his Death and Passion; his Kingdom and Priesthood; the coming of the Spirit; the power & spreading of the Gospel; the calling of the Gentiles, and establishing of his universal Church. But the carnal and unbelieving Jews, unthankful to God, and enemies to his Christ, would cause the desolation of their Citie and Nation by the Romans; and for killing the Lord of Life, they should be cast off from the Covenant of Grace, until the appointed time for their conversion.

To open some difficulties of this Prophet, and to make him more easie, observe that Zechariah telleth; Christ is an Angel and Jehovah, whom Angels attend, Chaldeans chiefly, had been horns to push and scatter Judah, Israel, and Jerusalem: Persians were Carpenters to fray them, and to beat down their strength; that scattered Judah might come to

Chap. 4. The Ephah, and woman, shew the sinfulnesse of Babel, Chap. 5. By four chariots coming out of mountains of brasse, and horses of divers colours, are meant Gods armies, and attendance of Angels, diligently running up and down the earth, and executing his commands. Mountains of Brasse are signes of the most powerful and unsearchable providence; from whose secret, most firme and inevitable counsels and decrees do proceed: Horses represent swiftnesse and speed: Divers colours, divers sorts of administrations for Judah at home, and yet in Babel to comfort and keep them, lest they should seem cast off. So that in God we see Fore-sight, Power, and Readinesse to help and keep them wheresoever they are, Angels being his Ministring Spirits, for their good, who are Heirs of salvation, Heb. 1. 14. and for to plague their enemies. And so Persians, who had conquered the Babylonians, (as they of Babel had mastered the Assyrians, who had formerly brought under them the Syrians) should be plagued by Javan, that is Greeks: And then after Javan, that is, Ezekiels Gog-magog, in two Kingdoms, Syria and Ægypt, the Seleucidæ and Lagidæ, should be plagued by the Romans for their wrong done to Judah: the pride of Assyria should be brought down, and the sceptre of Ægypt depart away, Chap. 6. & 10. Babel had been as a pit without water, whence God had brought up Israel, prisoners of hope, calling on the rest to return, Chap. 9. Christ the King of his Church will come lowly, riding upon an Asse, Chap. 9. yet strengthening his people to tread down their enemies, Chap. 10. shall be sold for thirty pieces of silver: and breaks his Shepherds staves of Beauty and Bands, Chap. 11. shall be pierced: and they that do it shall mourn when they consider it. And lastly, a new Jerusalem shall be built, whither all Nations shall come from year to year, to worship the King, the Lord of hosts, and to keep the feast of Tabernacles: and as Isaiah also foretold, Esay 66. 23. from one new Moon to another, and from one Sabbath to another shall all flesh come to worship before me, saith the Lord. And this could not be properly at Jerusalem, but in every place, where God was purely worshipped under the Messiah. This is the sum of Zechariah. He prophecied (as Haggai did) in the reigne of Darius, (in whose sixth yeare the Temple was builded and finished, Ezra 6. 15.)

CHAP. I.

IN the eighth moneth] Haggai began in the sixth moneth; Hag. 1. 1. See Ezra 5. 1. When as the Jewswere in ill state through famine, and the work of the Temple but newly taken in hand.

in the second yeare of Darius] See in Hag. 1. 1. For the other dayes, and years of the Prophecie of Zechariah, when they fell out, see on verf. 7. and Chap. 7. verf. 1.

came the word] To him as a Prophet, to preach it to the people. And this phrase and expression is common among the Prophets.

unto Zechariah] This is most likely to be that Zecharias mentioned, Mat. 23. 35. Luk. 11. 51. Though his death, and the manner of it, be not recorded in the Old Testament; he being contemporary with the last Prophet, and his fathers name the same here and there; and the Temple built in his dayes, Ezra. 6. 14. Whereas that Zecharias, 2 Chron. 24. 20, 21. was the son of Jehoiada the Priest, and was slain by the command of Joash King of Judah, many ages before this Prophets time.

the son of Iddo] Ezra 5. 1. & 6. 14. Not that Iddo the Seer and Prophet, 2 Chr. 9. 29. and 12. 15. and 13. 22. For this lived many ages after that time.

the Prophet] This relates not to Iddo, but to Zechariah.

with your fathers] He speaks not of forraign Nations, but calls them home to domestical examples; and seeks to affright them with Gods judgments, that they should not provoke him as their Fathers had done, whom he so grievously punished, Heb. 10. 30. Of this sore displeasure the Babylonish captivity was an history sufficient. The intendment of this narrative follows in the next verse.

V. 3. Thus saith the Lord of hosts] This name is thrice taken up in this verse, to add the more force to his doctrine and exhortation; to gain it the more entrance into their hearts: as giving them thereby well to know with whom they had to deal.

turn ye unto me] Turn from your sins. They did not build the Temple; they had strange wives; they were grown secure and careless; notwithstanding all their plagues in the Babylonish captivity, they had little Religion or piety left among them. Now God exhorts them to repent, to turn from their sins to him, as Mal. 3. 7. Thus God seeks and sues first, and would prevent them by his grace; and he would have his former sore displeasure to school them to it. They and their fathers had sufficiently tasted thereof; Their sense and experience should learn them better obedience, and to make better use of Gods rods and punishments, Heb. 10. 30. And thus should Gods judgments upon our fathers, or us, work with us, else God complains the more, as Amos 4. 6, &c. and we are left inexcusable the more. But the question is, can we our selves, of our selves, turn unto God? Answer, God requires nothing of us, but what natural reason it self doth tell us that he justly demands, and we in duty ought to perform. But if all this were now in our own power, then the grace and assistance of the Holy Ghost were in vain and superfluous. The use of the Law in such like precepts, and exhortations, is not to shew us our own strength, power, and ability, but our disability; to shew us our duty; to reveal sin, and increase it, to work wrath, to be our Schoolmaster to whip us to Christ; to make us look out abroad for a Physician; to seek strength and help else-where.

else-where. But then, saith the Papist, God in his Gospel promiseth help, if men by their natural endeavours prepare themselves to it, and so in a kinde of congruity do merit it. Ans. So the rise and original should be in mans free-will, not in Gods free grace; and the main work of conversion likewise should be the act of man, not the work of God, or gift of his grace: God according to them never giving or working more by his grace in us, then the ability only, and the act it self, after that ever left to the power and pleasure of man himself. A thing contrary to the doctrine of Gods free Election, Grace, and Glory; to the nature of him, and his decrees, and the whole current of the Scriptures; Rom. 9. 15, &c. Phil. 2. 13. Joh. 6. 44. 65. Act 13. 48. Eph. 2. 8, 9. 2 Tim. 2. 25. Briefly the meaning of these words is this, let your fruits declare that you are Gods people; and that he hath wrought in you by his Spirit, and mortified you, for else man hath no power to return to God, but God must convert him: as Jer. 31. 18. Lam. 5. 21.

and I will turn unto you] I will again make you feel the effects of my grace and favour, Mic. 7. 19. I will be reconciled unto you, and bless you. After their return from Babylon, for their renewed sins, he renewed his wrath, and punished them with famine and otherwise; Hag. 1. 6, 9, 10, 11. and ch. 16. 17. Now upon their turning to God, he would turn away those punishments, and turn unto them in much favour, and manifold blessings upon them.

V. 4. Be ye not as your fathers] They boasted much of their fathers: And they would do as their fore-fathers had done, Jer. 44. 17. In deed: custom of sin by continuance derived from our fore-fathers and their example, makes it become almost a law unto us. But this is no good shield or shelter for us, Psal. 95. 8, 9. 2 Chron. 30. 7, 8. Nay, rather it kindles Gods anger the more. They are much reproved for it here, unto whom the former Prophets have cried] Here was Gods love and care in sending them; and the Prophets faithfulnesse in discharging their duties. 2 Chron. 36. 15. Jer. 7. 25. 8. 25. 3. and ch. 32. v. 33. and 35. 15.

turn ye now from your evill ways] Isai. 31. 6. Jer. 3. 12. and 18. 11. Ezek. 18. 30. Hos. 14. 1.

but they did not hear] So greatly were the Prophets, and Gods word in their mouth, contemned. Such was their ingratitude in not answering Gods love, and care of them. Though they could not deny, but were convinced of the evilnesse of their wayes, yet they shut the gate of Gods grace, and turned their back from him, Jer. 2. 27. and 32. verf. 33.

V. 5. Your fathers where are they?] Some understand these words as a reproach against their fathers, and against the false prophets, in the next words. Others, as Gods insultation over the Jewes, in these words; and the answer in the next words, that the true Prophets were dead, as well as their fathers; and Gods reply in the 6 verse. But the plainest meaning, is to take all in this verse by way of confession, both your fathers, and also the true Prophets, are dead and gone; but mark what follows.

V. 6. But my words] Though they are dead, yet they took not away with them the memory of my words and doings. The remembrance of them should not fall out of your minds.

did they not take hold of your fathers?] Were my words dead? was I vain in my threatnings? did I not put in execution what I spake by my Prophets? felt not your fathers the effect of my words? why then do not ye take warning by them? we must not obliterate the memory of Gods judgements, but make our use of them, as 2 Pet. 1. 15. and 2. 6. as Heb. 11. 4. Such monuments of Gods exemplary judgements speak out for our amendment.

take hold] Or overtake. That is, overtake and catch them: as hunters-men the prey; or one enemy another in flight, though they sought means to make their escape. The accomplishment then of their prophecies after their death hath them sufficiently that their words dyed not with them: and your fathers in their calamities acknowledged as much, and began to turn to God; and it is fieting for you to follow them therein, and to accomplish it.

They returned] It may be, repented, or were better advised, and came to the right knowledge of their estate, as Mal. 3. 18. at leastwise were brought to that confession following.

like as, &c.] Lam. 1. 18. and 2. 17. Or, at the worst, this confession God extorted and wrested from them, forced them to acknowledge thus much; God, not fate or fortune to be the Author of their punishments; and secondary means to be but his instruments, God by them doing the thoughts of his own counsel and will; and that they did deservedly endure them, and were broken by them. And might not all this be sufficient instruction to their posterity, good lessons for their children?

V. 7. The twenty fourth day of the eleventh moneth] In the third moneth after the former date, verf. 1. And this moneth containeth part of January, and part of February. And this date here continues and contains all that follows to the seventh Chapter; all being but several parts, one after another, of a various vision continued. And was that day two moneths after Haggai ended, Hagg. 2. 20.

V. 8. I saw] A vision here goes with the prophecie, as an explication of it, and a seal of the certainty and truth of it. The particulars follow after.

by night] The usual time for visions. Yet some apply this to imply the obscurity of the vision: as also the myrtle-trees, a black or dark wood, and a shady tree; and likewise the bottom, or profound and deep place. But we must not too particularly allegorize or descant upon each syllable in this vision; and then the general meaning will be plain enough. The place of this vision where it was, is not set down: yet it appears that Zechariah was now in Jerusalem, Chap. 6. 10, 11. Ezra 5. 1. and 6. 14. though likely this vision might seem to him to be in Babylon.

a man riding] The Son of God appearing in humane shape; as Chap. 3. 1. Captain of the Lords host, Josh. 5. 14. in likenesse of an horseman, ready appointed to make out for his; who as Archangel, Jude 9. and captain of their host or chief, sendeth his Angels, and they give him an account, verf. 11. He is called an Angel, verf. 9. 11, 13, 14. 19. and the Lord, verf. 20. and he stands hard by the Prophet, verf. 10.

upon a red horse] Why red? in the same sense that this colour is given to his garments, Isa. 63. 1, 2, 3, &c. and to the Angels horse, Rev. 6. 4. Some interpret it to be of a fiery colour, to signifie Gods fiery anger against the enemies of his people, the execution of which he came to tell the Prophet of.

Among the Myrtle-trees] Which represents the Church, compos'd of low and weak plants, but holy and precious ones, as the Myrtle-tree is, Rev. 1. 13. See Neh 8. 15. Isai 41. 19. and 55. 13.

in the bottom] By this property of the Myrtle-tree that delighteth in valleys, and sea-shores, and rivers sides, is signified the lowly and abject condition of the Church in this world; and particularly the subjection it was then in under the Persian Empire.

behinde him] That is, behind the man riding on the red horse, as attendants, captains, and scouts.

red horses] With horsemen upon them which were created Angells, Ministers, and Warriors under their head. See Psal. 68. 17. and 34. 7. Job 1. 6. and 2. 1. Now by these colours, it seems, may be understood the Angels several services; the red ones for punishment, the white ones for grace, and the speckled ones for chastisement in visitation.

speckled] Or bay. Some by these understand the various estate of the people of the Jews, mixed of gladnesse and sadnesse, as it then stood.

V. 9. The Angel] The same as was among the Myrtle-trees, namely, the Son of God, who appeared in this vision in both these qualities, of Head of the Church on horse-back, and of her Prophet in shape of an Angel, verf. 13, 14. 19.

V. 10. These are they] Angels whom God pleaseth to use as his Ministers.

whom the Lord hath sent] God the Father hath sent them by me, the Word of God, and revealer of his will to all his creatures, and the mediator of his Church. The Lord sits not idle in the heavens, but sends, and sees, and orders the affairs of man-kind; useth these as his Messengers, Posts, Curritors, Scouts, to walk too and fro] Diligent in their employment, Heb. 1. 14. and so is Satan in his sinful way: Job 1. 7. and 2. 2. 1 Pet. 5. 8.

through the earth] The whole earth, to search and see the state of all heathen nations, as well as of the Church, and to make relation to God of it. Not yet that God omni-scient is ignorant of any thing, Heb. 4. 13. or needeth the ministry of Angels, as Kings on earth do need the service of their officers and attendants; But that he pleaseth to use them as witnesses and Ministers of his will; And here taking upon him the person of man, the more familiarly thereby to impart his minde unto us; and to assure us of his care of human affaires; and to shadow out ther by in some sort the greatnesse of his Majestie, by the example of earthly Kings, whose glory is in the multitude and magnificence of their attendants.

V. 11. And they answered] So ready are the Angels un-askt to answer the minde of Christ, and to give account of their service and employment, we have walked] An example of obedience, Matt. 6. 10.

all the earth sitteth still] All other nations, the Eastern people, and all other countreys about Judea, are in peace and prosperity: onely thy people cannot recover themselves of their late calamitie.

is at rest] Or is inhabited.

V. 12. The Angel of the Lord] Namely, the Son of God, who is Intercessor to the Father for the safety of the Church. This shews the tendency of the vision, whence is eatie to gather the whole sum of it.

How long?] A complaint in prayer. As is usual in prayers. So Psalm 6. 3. and 13. 1, 2. and 74. 10. and 79. 5. and 90. 13. The Saints on earth out of the infirmity of the flesh, ofe complain of Gods cunctation and delay in sending succour; their pre-properous zeal sometimes pours out their cares, and exonerates their griefs and sorrows into the bosom of God; yet with submission to the will of God. The wicked do it with murmuring and repining. The Angel of the Covenant here doth it in most holy manner. As likewise Matth. 26. 39. 42. 44. Heb. 5. 7. He doubts not here, but urgeth the accomplishment of the promise.

Mercie

Mercy] This is the true plea of prayer: And the thing that must over-sway the Churches sins.

these seventy years] Jer. 25. 12. and 29.10. Dan.9.2. of the captivity, as Zach 7.5. according to the foresaid Prophecie of Jeremy: the ruines of which lasted yet, though the people were set at liberty long before. They which make the seventy years to be but now ended, at this very time, do thereby make the complaint and grievance to be unjust. Some indeed observe two seventies, reckoning one from the first of Nebuchadnezzar, or fourth of Jehoiakim, to the first of Cyrus, or Darius the Mede, upon the taking of Babylon. The other from the destruction of the City and Temple of Jerusalem in the eleventh of Zedekiah, to this second year of Darius Hystaspis. But the former in all probability and reason is here related unto, as being the principal. Here we see the Angel alledgeth Gods promise, as the ground of his prayer. And so the godly use in prayer to alledge unto God the Promises he hath made them. They prescribe not any thing to God, or limit the Holy One of Israel; but produce his Word as their warrant, and trust to his truth in his promises. And indeed this is the basis of our faith and hope in prayer. But childishly hence do the Papists gather, that we may, and must pray to Angels. There is indeed a holy kind of Association between Angels and us, in our Head Christ, John 1. 51. They are ministring spirits for us, and our Patrons in a kinde, if we will so call them; and by their ministery to God, seek to comfort us the more, in assurance of his care over us. The servant of Elizæus was much animated when he saw the mountain full of horses and Charets of fire round about his Master, 2 King.6.17. But this is no warrant for us to pray to them. And yet more childishly do they make a leap from Angels, to Saints departed, for our praying to them. God alone must be prayed unto, it is his proper service. And so here the Angel of the Covenant, our Mediator prayes to him.

V. 13. The Angel that talked with me] This is the man that riding upon the red horse stood among the Myrtle trees, ver.8. The Angels, Cursitors, or Scouts, make their report to him, ver. 11. He prays and complains to the Lord, ver. 12. And the Lord here verse 13. answers him: whereupon he gives a charge and command to the Prophet to proclaim Gods merciful promises to Jerusalem, and Zion, and the Cities of Judah, ver.14,15,16,17. including his sore displeasure against their enemies.

with good words] With such promises as tended to the relief of the present miseries they were in. This seems to allude to that, Esay 40.1,2. These words of comfortable promises, of his propensity and kindnesse towards them, must suffice to support their patience and hope, and animate them to go on in the building. It seems the Prophets former objurgation, ver.2,7. took some good effect; and thereupon this consolation follows. After their long time of sadnesse for their desperate evils, now the fit time of gladnesse and comfort was come, Psalm 102.13.

V. 14. Cry thou] With courage, alacrity, and boldnesse; with a loud voice. See Esay 30.7. and 58.1. Matth.3.3. Luke 18.

I am jealous] The sum of those good and comfortable words, vers. 13. which were given to the Angel for the use and behalf of the people. God speaks of himself, as usually in Scripture, in the person of a man, of a dear loving husband, Chap.8.2. Joel.2. 18. See Exod. 34. 14. Esay 9. 7. Though for a time God defer his help and comfort from his Church, yet this declareth that he loveth them still most dearly, as a most merciful father his children, or an husband his wife; and when it is expedient for them, his help is ever ready. And this should stop our over-hasty wishes, and be our stay and support in the mean-time.

V.15. Very sore displeased] He meets with an objection, and answers that double and complaint, why the Nations of the earth were so quiet and at rest, and Gods people only in affliction. He shews their rest, and ease, and prosperity, was but a cursed one, as all such is which flows not from the love and favour of God; we must wait a while, and look to the end of it, Psal.37.1. &c. And we shall see enough of Gods sore displeasure in it. See Mal. 1. 4. Nahum 1. verse 2. They shall in the end pay dearly for their ease and jollity; Ezech. 25.

but a little displeased] I was willing to punish my people by their means, and absolutely resolved so to do, Jer. 14. 11. and 15. 1. Ezech. 14.14. But yet with a moderation, a little time, besitting the end, which was to correct them; and according to my mercy toward them, remembring my Covenant toward the remnant, though the body of the for-lorn and desperate sinners were destroyed.

and they helped] The instruments which I have made use of therein, have added their rage, and the excesses of their cruelty thereunto, not containing themselves within the limits of my revealed will, though they could not go beyond my secret permission. See Isa. 47.6. Psal.69.26. God had his bridle in their jaws. And he speaks not so much of what they did, as with what cruel minde, and to what destructive end they did it.

V.16. I am returned] I went away and hid me from it, in my anger, Hosc.5.15. But now I make an end of my chastisements, and am come again with many comforts, and tender mercies to relieve it.

with mercies] Gods mercies are the fountain and foundation of all our hopes, the remedy of our miseries, most necessary to be tendered to, and pondered by the faithful, to cheer up their souls, and support them in the midst of their infirmities and calamities.

My house shall be built in it] Now the acts of comfort do come in, and flow from his mercies. For indeed his mercies, and reconciliation are the only cause of building his house, and preserving his Church in the world, for their sins deserve it should be rooted out yet out of Gods mercies it shall be built, notwithstanding all the opposition of all the enemies. See Ezra 4.5. and 6. Chapters.

a line shall be] That is, her buildings shall be re-edified, and made up again, Hag.1.13. Neh.3.4. and 6. Chapters.

V.17. Cry yet saying,] ver.14. now the second time.

my cities] He extends the promise to other Cities of Judea besides Jerusalem, not this only of Jerusalem, but others also round about, of inferiour note, Neh. 3.

through prosperity] Heb. good. That is plentiful increase of men, cattel, and all manner of fruits of the earth, as Chapter 2.4.

shall yet be spread abroad] Enlarged, multiplied; yea, and laden, prest, burdened with plenty and prosperity. Notwithstanding the mean and poor estate which the whole country is now in, it shall be replenished with such abundance, that your plaines and presses shall be full and run over, as vessels and fountains that have more then they can hold, as Prov.5.16. See Esay 49. 18. &c. and ch. 54.1,2,3.

Yet] This particle is used four times in this verse. To note the stability of the promise, and assurance of performance. Notwithstanding all, and all manner of lets and hinderances, interruptions, and discouragements, past and present, yet God will carry on, and now accomplish his work.

comfort Zion] Shall confirm and renew the right and priviledge which he had granted her, of being the place of his residence. See Isaiah 14.1. Zechariah 2.12. Esay 49 23. and 40.1.

choose Jerusalem] Speaks not here of eternal Election, Rom.11. 29. But of their temporal estate, and being in the world; chiefly of their condition in outward respects, differing so much from what formerly it was: not yet excluding his inward and spiritual blessings. Thus God rejects, and chooseth again, Jer. 3. 8. and 31. 35, 36. Lam.3.31. When we turn our selves from God, and he turns his face from us, we can think no other but that we are cast off, Jer.32. 24. Hos 9.17. Upon their conversion, God is said to choose them again, and return with his blessings to them.

V. 18. Then I lift mine eyes] Another vision, or part of the former, clear of it self.

four horns] Signifying the Churches enemies, which the hath, and shall ever have in the world. We must not think it a strange thing to see it so now. They as horns shall push asther, and bouse the hoof. See Psal.22.21. Jer.48.25. 1 King.22.11. These four respect not the four Monarchies, but their present enemies, and neighbouring Nations compassing them about on, the four corners of the world, viz. The Syrians, Assyrians, Babylonians and Persians, from the North; the Ammonites and Moabites from the East, the Idumites, and Egyptians from the South, and the Philistines from the West. All which appears in Jeremy and Ezechiel. Some conceive these horns to be iron horns, such say they, as warriours did wear upon their helmets: See 2 Chro.18.10. However, fit workmen are brought in to break them.

V.19. What be these?] What do these signifie? what is meant by them? the Prophet is desirous to learn, and reaps the fruit of his desire, a ready information.

V.20. And the Lord shewed me.] The Angel that talked still with the Prophet is here called the Lord Jehovah. Christ our Mediator is God, the Son of God. He here executes his office of Mediation, neither ever was, nor can be the Church without him. Through him the Head, are the godly all joyned to God, and reconciled to him; neither can they be any other ways.

four Carpenters] These Carpenters or Smiths, 2 Sam.23.19. Are a figure of the instruments, which ruined those enemies that persecuted the Church, and declare that no enemies horn is so strong, but God hath an hammer to break it in pieces. Gods remedy is ready at hand, and as many remedies as there are maladies. He can make her enemies ruine one another, to work her deliverance. See this consolation adde patience to the Church, as knowing that the gates of hell shall never prevail against her. But though the be a little flock, yet she shall be preserved amidst many heards of roaring Lions, and ravening Wolves.

V.21. So that no man] So that they have easily brought it to passe to scatter Judah, seeing none had power to resist them.

to fray them] See that in Judg.7.19 —22. And that 2 King.7.6,7. A Panick fear. See likewise that, 2 Sam.5.24. And that 2 King. 19. 7,9.

to cast out] So to fray them, as to cast them out, and eject them, not only out of the land of Judah, and their tyrannical possession, and oppression of it, but also out of their own lands and dominions.

CHAP. II.

Verse 1. I Lift up mine eyes again] In a vision. And this much makes to the same purpose as the former did, and serves to confirm

mit. Looking upon the present state and face of things, as they now stood, the restauration of Jerusalem, according to the many glorious promises made thereof, was a thing very hard to be believed. This other vision is therefore afforded, to strengthen it. And we are admonished to lift up our eyes in vision spiritually to view, and consider of it.

a man] A created Angel, in the shape, not substance of a man. Thus God deals the more familiarly to converse and communicate his minde to man. Some understand this of the Son of God in humane shape.

with a measuring line] See Ezech.40.3. and 47.3.

V. 2. whither goest thou?] Attention, and diligent inquisition is to be learned by the example of the Prophet. So Act.8.34.& 16.30.

to measure Jerusalem] Whose building was promised, Chap.1.16. And this is the main end of this vision, now that the foure horns by the four carpenters were scattered, and the hinderances of building it, removed.

to see] That the builders, whom God the Master-builder will use in it, may see the due measures of it.

V. 3. The Angel that talked with me went forth] Chap.1.9, 14, 19. It seems towards Zechariah who fell somewhat afar off, verse 4. Christ drew neerer, the better to speak unto me, happily if the other Angel had not profered his service to Christ.

and another Angel] A created Angel. Their prompt and profered obedience. See on Chap.1.11.

V. 4. Run,] So Christ saith to the created Angel: He that was the Son of God, commanded the other, who was but a creature, to expound the vision of the line to the Prophet.

young man] Zechariah. He seems then to be born in Babylon; and not to live there till his old age, as some have imagined: but that he came thence a young man, being such now in Jerusalem or Judah, in the second year of Darius, Chap.1.7. Or, this may happily relate to his mean condition, in comparison of the Angels among whom now he did converse.

saying] Here is Gods care of his Church in using and imploying his Angels thus in the Ministery and service of it. And Gods readinesse to grant the requests of his people, and to instruct them when they desire to learn.

Jerusalem shall be inhabited as towns without walls] Jerusalem had been a famous City, made up of three towns, famoused by heathen Writers among the chiefest Cities of the East. See Lam.1.1.& 2. 15. & 4 12. Now it lay yet in ruines. And after this, upon the re-building of the walls by Nehemiah, much ado there was to get it inhabited, Neh.7.4.& 11.1, but a few returned from the Babylonish captivity, they saw themselves far from what the glorious promises of the Prophets here told: Hereupon they might sit down in sadnesse, if not sink in despair. God here by his Angel and Prophet meets with this sore tentation, renews the glorious promise fully, tells them no walls shall be able to contain so great multitudes; the Angel may leave off his measuring, and measuring-line, Isa.49.19,20,21,22. And they should not measure things by what they saw, but what they were yet to hope for, not tie up those promises to so short time, but yet wait a while: The number of those that shall come thither shall be so great, that it will be impossible to compasse the City with walls large enough. Figurative terms, to signifie chiefly the infinite number of Believers which shall be called into the Church, by the preaching of the Gospel, Ch.1.17. And thus this vision setteth forth the great and marvellous enlargement of the Church under the Messias. See Isa 54 2,3. & 60 4 11. & 49. 20,21. There is then one measure of Jerusalem before God, though another now in the eyes of men.

V. 5. A wall of fire] She shall be safe and secure, though without stone-walls and bulwarks, towers and fortifications, ditches and trenches; God will be a wall of fire, that is, an impregnable wall and defence, which none can passe through, Isa.26.1. & 60.18. to secure her, and confound her enemies.

The glory in the midst of her] My presence in Spirit, grace and power, shall make it glorious; as the resldence of a King is glory to the Royal City, or as formerly in the desert, the glory of God shewed it self in the signs of the pillar, and of the cloud, Isa.60.19. Though now never so few, never so poor and in-glorious, yet then in me alone shall her glory be.

ho, ho] Most of the Jewes returned not out of the Babylonish captivity, but stayed behind, preferring their ease, their planting and commodities there, before the returning into a vast desolate country, attended with many troubles and dangers, forgetting thus the land of promise, and making themselves little better then the Heathens, such was their contempt of God and his worship, and their ingratitude for their freedom and deliverance. Here therefore they are reproached for so doing, and earnestly called upon to return from thence; and by this figure all the Elect are exhorted to leave the world, and the corruptions thereof, to come into Christs Church.

and flee from the Land] Isa.48.20.& 52. 11. Jer. 50. 8. & 51. 6, 45. Rev.18.4. and from the evils present and to come, that shall betide them that abide there.

for I have spread you] Babylon cannot be your country, nor a blessed and holy abode for you, seeing I sent you thither to exile and punishment, where you were cooped up, as birds in a cage, or persons in a prison; wherefore when I set you at liberty, freely to fly away, as a bird in the open air, make use of my benefits, and double not, but as my justice punished you, so my mercy can repair you; he that gave the wound can heal it, and can bring you again; you may trust his power and goodnesse, if you let not slip this acceptable time, and shut the gate of Grace against you.

V. 7. Deliver thy self, O Zion] Come forth speedily, see Jer. 51. 6, 45. Act. 2. 40. else the fault shall be wholly in thee, having those means afforded thee: Remember Zion, Psal. 137. 1, 3, 4, 5, 6. It is Gods rest and dwelling place, Psal. 132. 14. 1 King. 6. 12. and why should the living stones of Gods spiritual Zion remain still in Babylon, as in another Ægypt? God grace when he reacheth out his hand to help us, is not to be rejected.

V. 8. For thus saith the Lord of Hosts] These and the like words are very often repeated in this vision, for the more assurance and confirmation of the several things contained in it.

after the glory] Concise words and general, wrapt up in some obscurity. Some thus; After the Jewes glory, or glorying over the Gentiles shall cease, then, &c. Some rather thus; After the glory of God now already begun to be shewed, in the bringing back the people from the captivity, God will not give over, nor make an end, till he perfect his work, build the Temple, and take such order with the heathen Nations, their enemies, that they shall not only not hinder and obstruct the building, but become a spoil and prey to their servants the Jewes: and thus he argues from the beginning, to the proceedings and perfection; as if he should say, You see now the beginning of the glory of Gods gracious dealing with you, he will go on, Psal. 138. 8. he will restrain the Nations from hindering of you, yea, they shall become a prey unto you; yet this glory which dott but glimmer now, shall not receive its full lustre till the coming of Christ, then shall that mentioned in the fifth verse, most gloriously shine and appear.

hath he sent me] These are the words of Christ delivered to Zechary, by that created Angel that went out to meet Christ, the Angel of the Covenant, with this charge and message from Christ, put in his mouth, v.3,4. They are the words of the Son of God speaking of his Father, God the Father sends his Son against these Nations.

toucheth the apple of his eye] Of his own eye, hurts himself, puts out his own eyes, doth thrust his own sword through his own heart, or rather toucheth the apple of Gods eye, as the meaning is, Deut. 32.10. Psal. 17. 8. The eye is the tenderest part, we cannot endure to have it touched. So ye are so dear to God, that he can no more suffer your enemies to hurt you, then a man can abide to have his eyeball touched.

V. 9. I will shake mine hand] Wherein there is a rod of iron to rule, and crush the heathen, your enemies, Psal. 2. 9. And this notes the facility of the work in Gods hand, he hath long hands, as the phrase is of Kings; and the shaking of his hand shall serve the turn. As Isaiah 8.17. His hille is sufficient.

a spoil to their servants] They shall be your servants, as you have been theirs; a figure of the Churches victory over the world, which before had oppressed her, and kept her in bondage; for this cannot so well be applied to all that time between their return out of Babylon, and the coming of Christ, as to the time of the Gospel and Christ, wherein the heathen Nations submitted their necks to the yoak of Christ, and his spiritual Kingdome.

and ye shall know] Experimentally, and this experimental, practical knowledge is a thing distinguished in Scripture from a bare, literal, noctical, speculative knowledge, swimming in the brain only, and not sinking in the hearts; see Ps.9.10. Heb.10.34. Josh.23.14.

hath sent me] To declare, and perform these promises, as Mediatour and Protectour of the Church. The Son of God is sent by the Father to the good of the Church. See verf, 11.

V.10. Sing] He brings them here, as it were, into present possession and fruition of the promise, sets and placeth it before their eyes, so to fasten the truth of it in their hearts: And bids them therefore sing and rejoyce, as if it were already done, for he will not begin that which he doth not resolve to carry on to perfection. Let them then for the present return from Babylon, and go on with the building of the Temple, and the ordering of the affairs of these promises. See Isaiah 12.6. and 54.1. and 66 10.

I come] Here Christ speaks, not God the Father, nor Angels, nor the Prophet. Here he is called Jehovah, the true and only God; yet is sent by God as Mediatour, and so inferiour to God, in the Person is sent by God as Mediatour. He was now come already. But here is noted a progresse, and further p ocedure in his grace, far beyond the present.

And I will dwell] Typically in the Temple, and on the Mercy-Seat. But really and substantially when Christ came in the flesh who is Immanuel, God with us; in whom, as in a Temple, the fulnesse of the God-head did dwell bodily; Col. 2. 9. And he by his Spirit with his Church, to the end of the world, Matth.28.20. See Lev.26. 12. Ezek 37.27. 2 Cor.6.16,18.

V.11. And many Nations] The voluntary submission of the Gentiles, joyning themselves to the Church of God. Thus ratifying what many other Prophets had formerly fore-told in their times.

In that day] Namely, in the Churches re-establishment by the Messias, figured by the deliverance out of Babylon.

my people] As well as the natural Jew, according to the Law, Exod.12.49. shall make up one body of my Church and People.

dwell] See on verse 10.

Know] See on verse 9.

That the Lord of Hosts] Whose power and work no creature can obstruct or hinder.

unto thee] As formerly to the Nations, and against them, ver.8,9. so now to thee. His Embassie is directed to, and for his Church; to be Head, and Patron of his own peculiar people.

V.12. Inherit Judah his Portion] Possesse and enjoy them: The Jews were his ancient inheritance, by his free and gracious Covenant with them, Deut.9.29. 1 King.8.51,53. Psal.74.2. Jer. 10. 16. Herein blessed were they, Psa.33.12. And God will not forget them, Psal.74.2.& 94.14. They seemed now to be cast off, lately expelled their inheritance, and land of promise, and yet now without Kingdom, Temple, and the worship of God, or scarce having a shadow of these. The Lord now takes off these discouragements, removes these obstacles by his gracious promises here; He shall inherit Judah now, and which makes this promise full, he shall inherit all his Elect which are the true spiritual Judah, and hold them for his proper and peculiar people, and as such which he shall love, govern, and preserve. See Exod.34.9.

In the holy Land] In Canaan now again, though for a time they were exiled out of it. And compleatly, in the Church of Christ, under the Gospel.

and shall choose Jerusalem again] This choice made of old, 1 King. 8.44,48. and 11.13. 2 King.23.27. after their rejection for a while, shall now be in a sort renewed before the eyes of the world. The current of his grace towards her, which was formerly stopt by her sinful courses, and interrupted, shall now flow freely again. See Chap.2.17. Isa.14.1.

V.13. Be silent] Thus he seals up the promises of this vision, stately extolling Gods Power, that his people should not once doubt or fear their accomplishments. As thus, brag not, threaten not, thou adversary, dispute not, doubt not, O weak men, who may not compare their wisdom, or oppose their strength to Gods, who is able, and wel skilled, to bring to passe all his promises, against all oppositions and obstructions whatsoever. See Hab.2.20. Zeph.1.7. He insults in some sort over all the Churches enemies; Let them rage as they list, God will stop their mouths, and silence them.

For he is raised up] Awaked, as a man out of sleep, Psa.78.65. according to that exhortation, Isai.51.9. Raised up, to succour his Church, make good his promises, & over-power any opposition whatsoever.

Holy habitation] Hebr. the habitation of his holinesse; that is Heaven, as it is interpreted, Deut.26.15. from whence God would now send help for his people. Or rather, the Temple, which was likewise Gods habitation, 2 Sam.2.19. and though now it were contemptible, Psal.102.14. not half built, yet was it holy. And thence God would arise, as out of a dream, and shew himself for the defence of his Church; and more fully then, when he shall come, as it were, out of his closet, publikely to govern his Church by his Gospel.

CHAP. III.

Verse 1. Shewed me] In a vision. The end whereof is to shew, that in the restauration of the Temple, and of the service of God, it was first of all necessary to have those persons which were to be imployed therein, reconciled to God, and cleansed from the pollution which they had gotten in Babylon. And that likewise the Church represented here by Joshua a chief Officer of it, should be re-admitted into Gods favour, to the end that the service which he should yeeld to him, might be accepted, which is figured by a form of Joshua, his being by the Lord absolved, and afterwards sanctified.

Joshua the High Priest] Or Jeshuah, or Jeshua. See Hag.1.1,12, 14.& 2. 2. Ezra 2. 2.& 3. 2, 8.& 5. 2. This chapter deals with the High Priest; the next, with Zerubbabel, the Prince.

standing] Like unto a man accused before a Judge, or, as some, ministring in his office.

before the Angel of the Lord] Before Jesus Christ, whose Type Joshua was, who is both Judge and Advocate, and Defender of those that believe in him, in this Judgement, 1 John 2. 1.

and Satan standing at his right hand] That is, an adversary: the adversary, the malicious accuser of the faithful to God, against whom he complains, proceeding to be zealous of having Justice done, though he be only moved through an envious and malignant rage, Rev 12. 10. Psal.109.6. Job 1.6. and 2. 1, 4. which act agreeth with his name in Hebrew in this place.

to resist him] Heb. To be his adversary; to frustrate his prayers and intercession, by interposing this most bitter accusation against him and the Jews: What this accusation was, appears plainly by the third and fourth verses; Satan still is the chief adversary of good & great men, of the Church, and all Gods people; so against Job, ch. 1 9, and 2. ver.3,4. so against David, 2 Chr.21.1. he deals against chief men, as 1 King.22.31. Luke 22.31. See Ephes. 6. 12. We must know Satan is the chief adversary against whom Gods Church and children have to deal; it is he that useth the rage of the world, the madnesse of the people to ruinate the Church; and this he doth in all ages.

V.2. And the Lord said unto Satan] Namely, the Son of God, who was called before Angel, before whom Joshua stood, he is ready at hand for the defence of his people.

the Lord rebuke thee] Not altogether unlike is that phrase Gen. 19.24. the meaning is, My everlasting Father rebuke and confound thee in this malicious opposition which thou makest against his servant, justifying and clearing him against thy accusation; see Jude 9. the same words spoke upon another occasion: This interpretation is doubled, to shew the earnestnesse of affection to have it done, and to intimate the facility of the remedy which is in the Lord to do it; his interpretation is sufficient to curb Satan, he untooseth him, and binds him at his pleasure, Apoc.20.

that hath chosen Jerusalem] Hereby is intimated and shewn the chief foundation and ground of the Churches absolution, here represented in Joshuahs person, which is, that God from all eternity hath out of his meer grace, without their merit, chosen his Elect to salvation, Rom.8.33. All affiance of salvation flowes from election. And the salvation of the Church was the thing intended by the former rebuke.

plucked out of the fire] Out of Ur of the Chaldees, out of the Babylonian fiery furnace; now God will not forsake his own work, but make the end as good as the beginning, and preserve the High Priest, and the High Priesthood, against all thy machinations, malicious oppositions and accusations. Or more largely thus; This man, and this small company which Joshua represents, is a reservation of my grace, which I have reserved out of my people, whom I have caused to passe through the fire of my judgments, Amos 4.11. see Rom. 11.5. and therefore towards him and them my decree of grace shall stand firm and invariable, why then go'st thou about to resist him, and Gods known will concerning him and them?

V.3. with filthy garments] Or, vile garments; an ordinary sign of sin, as a white and clear garment is a sign of Christs righteousnesse put on by faith, and of the regeneration of the Spirit to newnesse of life. See Ezek.16.8,10. Rev.3.4,18. and 7.14. yet this seems to have a further relation to the present state and condition of the High Priest, his garments belonging to him as High Priest, and the High Priesthood it self, were but base and contemptible now, to what they were before the Babylonish captivity: And so all things else nothing answerable to their expectation raised up by the glorious promises of the Prophets formerly made. This Prophet is mainly sent to lift up their dejected minds, and to draw their eyes from the present face of things to expectation of better, from the day of small things, to the dayes of great and glorious things, which were not yet so soon, but to come hereafter.

and stood before the Angel] Christ did not abhor his presence, nor reject his service, so gracious is he to respect his Saints, notwithstanding their many infirmities, and to accept their obedience, though mingled and stained with much corruption.

V.4. unto those that stood before him] Namely, to the created Angels, his Ministers, Heb. 1.14. To shew that Christ who only hath power to forgive sins, and justifie the ungodly, he doth therein imploy the holy ministery for an instrument. See 2 Cor.5.18. Heb.1.14.

take away the filthy garments] In respect of the glorious garments and precious stones that the High Priest did wear before the captivity. And by this contemptible state the Prophet signifieth, that these small beginnings should be made excellent, when Christ shall make the full restitution of his Church.

Behold] See by this sign, 25 Jer.1.9.

I have caused thine iniquity] This hath relation to two spiritual effects: The one is, that by Christs satisfaction, sin is taken away from before the eyes of God, that it is not imputed to condemnation, though the corruption be not altogether blotted out in man, during this life, See Psal.32.1,2. The other is, that Christ his merit and righteousnesse is applied to the believer to life, and that by his Spirit he putteth on the new man in righteousnesse and holinesse, Gal.3.27. Col.3.10. In a larger sense; This may have relation likewise to the iniquities of the Jews, the cause of their present low and dejected estate in shame and misery; and yet that God in mercy will in his time relieve and redresse it.

V.5. And I said] Some understand this to be the speech of the Prophet Zechary: But it seems rather to continue the speech of the Angel of the Lord, Jesus Christ himself.

Let them set a fair Mytre] An ornament for the head of the High Priest, Exod.28.4. Levit.8.9, & 16.4. To shew that God besides his grace which was common to all the members of his Church, did also adorn him with the gifts of his Spirit, befitting his Priestly charge, that the dignity of the High Priesthood might be perfect; This was fulfilled in Christ, who was both Priest and King. In the general; God will have nothing wanting to the furnishing and adorning of his Priests with gifts, and graces fitting both their persons as private men, and their functions as publike officers.

Stood by] As it were to have this his sentence put in execution presently. It was as soon done, as said. And hereby is signified Christs assistance to the work of the Ministery: As to that also seemeth to be referred his speaking alone in this place; to shew that he alone doth all the work, and doth all things in all men: and that that he can alone pronounce the sentence, and comfort the soul by his Spirit.

V. 6. Protested] A court-term as in a contestation and plea of Law. To shew the matter here to be of more then ordinary weight and concernment As Gen.43.3.

V. 7. If thou wilt] His duty hereupon required; with a promise thereunto adjoyned. God tyes this duty to the Priests dignity. They are not advanced to live, and rule as they list; to assume to themselves above what is right and Law: But they are tied in obedience to God, and to his Laws, to live and rule under him, according to it. Deut.17.11. to walk in the wayes of his Commandements according to the Moral Law.

Keep my charge] Or, Ordinance. All things belonging to the charge of Gods House, and office of the High Priest. In a word, the Priests dignity, and duty, is not to be feparated from Gods Word and Worship. God doth not resigne his soveraignty to any mortal man: departs not with any thing of his right; but onely makes men his Ministers, that he alone may rule and govern his Church, by their means and Ministry.

Then thou shalt also judge my house] And rule in my Temple, and regulate the inferiour priests in their several charges and functions, and over-see them that they do their duties: Then I will keep thee in thy Priestly degree, and honour, Heb. 5.4. Of which office the two chief parts were, the government in Ecclesiastical businesses, concerning the worship of God, according as it is set down in the Law, Deut.17.11,12. Chr.19.11. And the chief and continual ministry of holy things. Of his office in civil affairs. See Deut.17.

Keep my courts] The courts of the Priests and People, being accounted part of the Temple; over all which the High Priest was the chief over-seer.

and I will give thee] Here is Joshuahs gracious reward after his faithful service, 1 Sam.2.30.

places to walke] Heb. walks: Happily alluding to the walks and galleries about the Temple.

Among these] Not onely among the faithful ones in the holy assemblies on earth, where also the Angels are, 1 Cor.11.10. but also and chiefly among these, ver.4,5. as it were pointing to them; that is, after all this I will gather thee up into my heavenly glory with mine Angels, to be among the Seraphims, and glorious Angels; the likenesse of which thou beholdest here in this vision, Mat. 22.30. Luk.20.36. Heb.12.22. implying, all things contrary to befal to the Priests that should be false to their functions and offices.

V.8. Hear now] Calls for attention, as to a thing very memorable. Now the Lord of hosts comes to shew, that all this done hitherto to Joshua, was but Typical, and a shadow of that main substantial thing, which should hereafter follow. And therefore still these poor beginnings, should not make them despair in the expectation of those many glorious promises made by the Prophets, of the state of the Church after the return; for they should in their due time obtain their full accomplishment. And therefore here he comes now from the shadow, to the substance; from the Type to the Anti-type; even to him, for whose sake, and by whose means, Priesthood, Temple, People, and all should be restored and preserved. Entring here into a Prophetical enarration touching the Messias.

Thou and thy fellows] Thy friends, the rest of the Priests, the whole College of them; who though inferiour in office, and under his inspection, yet were fellows in most services, and in their degree Types of Christ too.

that sit before thee] In assemblies and meetings, as Assessors before the President. The High Priest, and the rest of the Priests were specially concerned in this ensuing prophecie. Others were not so capable to hear it, or make use of it; they were to drowned in a carnal apprehension of the Promises.

for they are men wondred at] And here is a reason why they alone are spoken to. They are men, not seeking signes and wonders, as Matth.12.38. or for new telling signes and wonders, as Deut.13.1. or as true Prophets did, indued with the gift; nor themselves appointed by God for signes and wonders, as Esay and his two sons, Shear-jashub, and Maher-shalal-hash-baz were, Esay 8.3. But they are men wondered at, not in an honourable way, but in an opprobrious way; as Psalm 71.7. as the Papists wonder at us; and the wicked at the godly, 1 Pet.4.4. Isa.59.15.

Behold] Another note of attention, proceeding from the wondrous prophecie.

I] I, the Lord of Hosts, God the Father.

will bring forth] Now the Priest-hood is mean and despicable; and will be worse afterwards, as appears in the dayes of the Maccabees, of Herod, and in Christs time. But I will mend all, fulfill my promises, and bring forth, suddenly and unexpectedly, for the manner of it,

My servant] Though a Son by nature, yet a servant, by office of Mediation for our sake. So Isa.42.1. & 49.3. & 53.11. Matth.12.18. Phil 2.7. I will send my Son into the world, who shall take upon him the form of a servant, to accomplish the work of Redemption.

The branch] So called likewise, Chap.6.12. Isa. 4.2. and 11.1. Jer.23.5. All which places are understood of Christ. And so called; Because out of the dead and withered stock of Davids house, he sprang forth on a sudden, like a branch, or Cyens out of a dry tree; Though that family then was obscure, and all the glorious branches cut off, even to the stumps, as Dan.4.15. yet a remainder there was, and sap enough therein, which in due time should sprout forth into this glorious Branch, the last & greatest ornament of that Princely family. God in most unlikely times, and by most unlikely means, can bring his purpoles to passe.

V.9. For behold] Yet another note of attention in this so weighty a matter, for he insists upon the same point, under another. Metaphor.

the stone] The foundation and corner-stone of the Church, and its building: that precious stone. See Isa.28.16. Psal.118.22. Dan. 2.34,35. Mat.21.42. Acts 4.11. Rom.9.33. 1 Pet. 2 4,8. This may note the firmnes of Christ, & of the Church built on him, Mat.16.8.

that I have laid] Not to be laid by the industry of Artificers, but by Gods handy-work. So Isa.28.16. Psal. 118.23. Dan.2 34. men at most are but his instruments.

before Joshua] In the Church: whereof he now hath the charge. And this alludes to the Temple now in building, whose foundation was now laid before Joshua and Zerubbabel.

upon one stone shall be seven eyes] Some take it passively: that all mens eyes shall look towards Christ. Others rather, that God shall cast his most perfect care, and use his most absolute providence on him, and over him, as chap.4.10. and put upon him the fulnesse of all grace, the Spirit without measure, Isa. 11.2. and furnish him with all absolute sufficiency of wisdome and counsel, not onely to lay a foundation, but also to build up his Church, and to rule it in the best order. He shall be all eye himselfe; and an eye to enlighten and illuminate his Church, and people. The eyes of my Providence, 2 Chr.16.9. which is infinite and universal, here signified by the number of seven, chap.4.10. shall be always fixed upon Christ, to maintain, favour, and cause him to prosper in his kingdom, that by his most perfect knowledg and providence he may transfuse and accomplish his office and administration according to my will. See Isa.42.6. and 49.8. and 51.16.

Behold] Yet for more attention to this mystery.

I will engrave] Words of God the Father, who hath appointed his Son to be Mediator, & hath conferred upon his humane nature, all the gifts of his Spirit, for to perform it. See Dan.2.34,44. Heb. 9.11. Joh.1.16.& 3.34. Col.1.19. & 2.9. Though it shall be a stone rejected by the builders, Act. 4.11. yet God will work upon it all perfection of excellencies; as Psa.45.7. An allusion this is to the graved carved stones of the Temple; whose costly workmanship did in some sort shadow out the excellencies of Christs endowments But yet these do so far exceed the other, as God is a more cunning worker, then man. The very engraving of Christs wounds upon his body was an excellent workmanship of God. And all this, that he might communicate and impart all to the use and benefit of his Church.

remove the iniquity] Guilt, stain, & punishment. This is the fountain and foundation of all enfuing blessings. Till then no true blessing can come. And the removing of this, is the removing of all lets and obstacles out of the way. Some thus; as in Joshua, newly made fit to undertake the Priesthood again, I have sanctified all my Church: So by one only oblation of my Son, who was eternally consecrated High Priest, I will purge all the sins of my Church. See Heb.9.12. and 10.12,14.

of that land] Of the Church typified by the Land of Canaan. To the inhabitants whereof pardon is now promised.

in one day] Suddenly; and by one all-sufficient sacrifice once offered, in opposition to the legal sacrifices every day repeated. See Heb.7.27. and 9.26,28. and 10.10.

V. 10. In that day] In that season of time, when that day shall come, and from that day.

shall ye call] This may intimate love and charity, in calling and converting others.

under the vine] These trees have broad leaves, and yeeld a cool shade, pleasant in those hot countreys, and therefore under them they had their arbours, wherein they made their banquetings, & invitations of their neighbours, in the times of publike peace, and security of the state, 1 King.4.24,25. The meaning here is; They shall be secure; there shall be no need of fenced places for refuge in danger; There shall be no enemy; none shall make them afraid. And this promise belonging to the whole kingdome of Christ, it may be extended to the Spiritual peace of Gods Church & children, which they enjoy with God, though the reconciliation made by Christ. See Hag.2.9. Mic.4.4. Isa.2.4. Hos.2.18.

CHAP. IV.

Verse 1. And the Angel] See on Chap. 1.9.

came again] It seems from Iosiua, ch.3. to the Prophet. And here he multiplies vision upon vision, without intermission. And this without the Prophets seeking: neither was he in case now to seek it, as the next words shew; but freely prevents him with his grace: and shews his care of his Church, though man no wise appreciate and shews his care of his Church, though man no wise appreciate and omits nothing available for the strengthening of the pear in it; and omits nothing available for the strengthening of the faith of his people, against all their present doubts and difficulties, and to assure them of the present building of the Temple, and of the future glorious restauration of his Church.

and waked me] It may be ther there was some little space of time between these visions; during which time the Prophet in his extasie was as it were asleep. Or he was drowzy, and dull through the infirmities of his flesh if not astonished with admiration at the continuation and greatnesse of the former vision: He was without any action or motion of the spirit in him. And if the Prophet needed this rouzing up, how much more do we?

V.2. what seest thou?] This present vision then was shewed him before this question was asked him. But he had not so duely heeded it, if he was weary and distracted thoughts had not been thus raised up to fresh and further attention. And thus the Angel leads him on by degrees, to learn of him that which he might afterwards faithfully deliver to the Prince and People.

a candlestick] Now begins the vision it self. The Church in Scripture is compared to a candlestick, as Apoc. 1. 20. By allusion to the candlestick in the Tabernacle, Exod. 25. And the ten in the Temple, 1 King. 7. 49. 2 Chron. 4 7. The Church is the light of the world.

all of gold] Such was that in the Tabernacle, and the ten in the Temple, all beaten work of pure and perfect gold. And such also were all the utensils and instruments belonging to them. The silver candlesticks mentioned, 1 Chron. 28. 15. were such as were used by the Priests and Levites in the Court, and carried up and down in their hands. This notes the preciousnesse of the Church, and the purity of it in doctrine, worship and manners, as pure gold without mixture of baser metals, not that God regards gold, but that men thereby might be raised to an higher esteem of spiritual mysteries therein represented.

with a bowl] Heb. with her bowl. This is the oil-vessel, or cruet; but not a little one: a Chrismatory, which through the two golden pipes received into it self the golden liquor, or oil, from the two olive-branches, verse 12. Some foully mistake this for an eighth lamp.

upon the top of it] Upon, or above the top, or shaft, or body of the candlestick.

and his seven Lamps thereon] Above the bowl, high-most of all, and this is repeated in the last words of the verse.

and seven pipes to the seven lamps] Heb. seven and seven, or seven several pipes to the lamps, &c. Or each lamp had seven pipes, say some, which you must imagine to be in the bottom of the bowl, to distribute the oil to each lamp, to convey it to the match or wicks of the several lamps.

V.3. And two olive-trees by it] Likely the trees by the candlestick, and the two branches above the bowl. The berries whereof dropped down oil into the bowl continually, to feed the lamps, and keep them burning, verse 2. Vainly then are they imagined by some to be embossed, and wrought upon the bowl, and to be of gold it self, only fashioned like to olive-trees.

one upon the right, &c.] The candlestick and bowl in the midst betwixt them.

V.4. what are these?] The Prophet having related the vision, is answer to the Angels demand, now asks of the Angel the meaning of it; not only what the two olive-trees, but all the whole vision meaneth. Though he looked, beheld, related it punctually, yet he could not tell the meaning of it. The difficulty should not make us cast it off, or despair, but whet our diligence to make us the more seriously and sedulously search after it, and inquire.

V.5. Knowest thou not what these be?] This is spoken, not so much to reprove, or reproach his ignorance, as to enflame the Prophets desire to know the truth of it.

No,] A free and ingenuous confession. Our pride commonly makes us ashamed, not of our ignorance, but of confessing it: But surely if the Prophet were ignorant of the tendency of this vision, how much more we? It is good for us to know and acknowledge our own ignorance.

My Lord] Thus he calls this Angel the Lord. See on Chap. 1. 9. And thus humbles himself to honour him.

V.6. Then he answered] Such confessions of our own insufficiencies, such inquisitions after knowledge, and the means of it; such humble docibleneſſe and desires want not their fruit, and Gods blessings upon them. Here now he is taught, and thus brought to it by degrees, to heighten his esteem of the vision, and to make him the more attentive to it. And the same use we must make of it. If it had been over-facile, it might have been the sooner sleighted.

This is the word of the Lord] The particulars of the vision are not so much insisted upon, as the main scope of it. Neither are we to insist too much upon each particular of the candlestick, his bowl, his lamps, his pipes, &c. It sufficeth in general to understand thereby the Church, and the various gifts and graces of Gods Spirit abundantly supplied unto it, that it shall shine as the light of the world, and the light of it shall never be extinguished. But rest we in the Angels own interpretation, which is made touching the main scope.

unto Zerubbabel] See on Hag. 1.1. This vision is especially directed to Zerubbabel, the Captain of Gods people, and so a Type of Christ, their eternal King, to strengthen him in his charge of Political head of the people, as the other vision was for Joshua, the Ecclesiastical head.

not by might] Or army; I have caused thee to see in this figure, that the subsistence of my Church is not in the same kinde as that of worldly Empires, in force of armes and power, but in a lively internal action of my Spirit. Wherefore be not dismayed in thy minde, O Zerubbabel, if wordly strength do fail thee, my Spirit and power shall supply all, as well for the re-establishing of the material Temple, as for the spiritual conduct and preservation of the Church. See Hosea 1.7.

nor by power] By no humane force or policy, one or other.

but by my Spirit] My power, providence, and gracious favour.

saith the Lord of Hosts] Who is therefore able of himself, without other helps, to do all things: which opposition between mans help and Gods, is not generally to be taken, as if mans were never subordinate; but with reference to the Jewes opinion, who imagined in this present case, that when outward means lack, all must go to the rack, or that man can do somewhat without God, or at least must do as much as he. Thus then have we shortly the sum and substance of this vision. That as the making and maintaining of this candlestick, and his lamps, was without the art and cunning of man, by means super-natural so Gods Spirit without it, if need were and above all humane helps, should suffice for the re-edification, and preservation of the material Temple, and true Church. And therefore they, (and so we) without all anxiety, were so to fix their faith upon God alone, as to rest and relie wholly upon the sufficiency of his grace and help, though no outward hope appeared.

V.7. Who art thou O great Mountain?] The Empires which oppresse the Church, though they be great as Mountaines, yet shall they be beaten down by the stone, Dan. 2. 34, 35, 44, 45. which is Christ figured by Zerubbabel. See on Chap. 14. 10. Or rather, to apply it to the present time, and state of affairs; the present enemies shall not be able to hinder, as they have done, Ezra 4. the small and little strength of Zerubbabel, and the Jewes from building my Temple: But by the power of my Spirit they shall be levelled before Zerubbabel. The weak beginnings of the Jewes, and the strong oppositions of many and mighty enemies, made them fear their return had been in vain, and they deceived or deluded thereby, the event nothing answering their expectations and hopes. Thus Satan endeavoured to break off the building. But the Lord tells them, there shall be no obstacle, how great soever, which he will not remove. And this is expressed by an interrogative Apostrophe to the enemy, and that full of scorn and insultation against the enemy, and contempt of his mightinesse, who in his own eyes, and the Jewes, was a great mountain inaccessible, unpassible, easily overlooking and over-topping the low and poor estate of the Jewes. See it in the case of the walls of the City, Nehem 4. 1, 2, 3. But yet what are they, when they oppose God, and his servants armed with his power?

a plain] As smooth without resistance, and as easie to passe over, as a levelled plain, and even Champian. If the interrogation be put after Zerubbabel, as some do, yet the sense is the same. And this is a great comfort to the Church in all ages.

and he shall bring forth] It shall be shown to the world at the appointed time, and exalted above all wordly greatnesse, Dan. 2. 35. Or, more punctually, now, will they, nil they, maugre all their might and malice, Zerubbabel shall finish and perfect this present building of my Temple, Ezra 5. 5.

the head-stone] The foundation-stone had been laid long before, Ezra 3. 10, 11, 12. Some count upon 104 years since, some upon 46. But the most likely is about 14 from the first of Cyrus, or Darius Medus, to this second of Darius Hystaspis. The interruptions that interposed we finde, Ezra 4. 4, 24. yet now he shall lay, or cause to be laid in open view, the corner-stone, or front-stone, or top-stone, which finisheth the building. See Psalm 118 22. Ephes. 2. 20. Haply there is an allusion to that custome, when at the foundation, and finishing of great publike buildings, the chief Magistrate is present at the laying of the first, and last stone; and it may be, doth it himselfe.

with shoutings] Acclamations, and joyful out-cries. Some extend the words to a more general meaning, thus; The Angels, the faithful, and all creatures shall rejoyce at Christs Kingdome, established in the world; and shall desire God the Father to heap all manner of blessings and happinesse upon it. See Psalm 116. 26. Or, they shall acknowledge and preach, that the Father hath laid up in him all the treasures of his grace, and gifts of his Spirit, John 1. 16. yet this hath rather a more immediate reference to the joyful acclamations of the people at the finishing of the building of the material Temple by Zerubbabel.

Grace, grace unto it] Applauding it, as men do at Theatres, in harvest, and other like publike occasions, as they did, Ezra 3. 11. wishing and praying all happinesse and prosperity to abide with it, that this Temple and building may long stand and flourish, and that as his favour and grace, not their proper strength, built and finished it, so the same his grace may maintain and preserve it. And thus the faithful should pray with one voice, and heart, earnestly and constantly for the prosperity of Gods Church, Psalm 122. 6. &c. and 51. 18. and 87. 7.

Ver. 8. the word of the Lord] Jehovah, the Angel that still spake spake with him, the Angel of the Covenant. See on Chap. 1. 9.

V.9. The hands of Zerubbabel] God used his hands in laying the foundation; This was a well known truth to all, Ezra 3. 8, 10. and 5. 16.

His hands shall also finish it] This shall be as certain also, as the other is certain. God will carry this building on, and will not forsake the work of his own hands. Psal. 138. 8. Though some seemed to despair of it, yet Zerubbabel should have and enjoy his hearts desire, and finish it, Chap. 8 6. Ezra 6. 14, 15.

and thou] The Prophet, or Zerubbabel.

shalt know] See on Chap. 2. 9, 11. Experience should prove it, and make it good. And seeing that the Lord verse 8. is he that saith, that the Lord had sent him. Some hence would conclude that there are here two Persons, the one the Son who is sent, and the other the Father that sendeth him, both one, only and everlasting God, Isai. 48. 16. Zech. 2. 8. see the like speech, Gen 14. 24.

V.10. For who hath despised the day of small things?] Who? not one, nor a few, nor unknown; but the body of the people, Hag. 2. verse 3. They had a misbelieving, misgiving heart; fearing, if not despairing, that these poor and small beginnings would have no good ending, would come to naught, and be their scorn. As those ancient men wept therefore, Ezra 3. 12. The Angel doth rebuke and reproach them for this their pusillanimity, and dejected, ungrateful, un-believing, malignant spirits; as if God were not able to make good his word, and carry on these weak beginnings to the desired greatnesse and lustre. These small beginnings serve for the tryall of their faith, and the more magnifying of his power. He makes the little stone grow to a great mountain, filling the whole earth, Dan. 2. 35. And thus Christ himself should spring out of the withered stock of Jesse, and come forth of little-Beth-lehem, and out of the low estate of the lowly Virgin; and be despised, without form or beauty desirable. See that Neh 4. 2, 3. and that Job 26. 14.

For they shall rejoyce] Or, but; or sith the seven eyes of the Lord shall rejoyce, notwithstanding all their disdain and diffidence, all their unworthinesse, yet they shall see what they looked not for; they shall one day have occasion to rejoyce, seeing the work perfected. For God out of meanest principles raiseth matters of greatest moment. See Ezra 6. 6——13. The singular comfort of the Church in all ages, and at this very day.

and shall see the plummet] Heb. Stone of Tinne. He seems to mean the little line with a plummet to it, of Tinne, as we usually do now of Lead, which wall-builders do use to level their work with, their perpendicular. And last, they should see the other stone, verse 9.

In the hand of Zerubbabel] He commanding, over-seeing, and directing their work, busily at times employing himself in ordering of stones to be laid level, square, and perpendicular; Thus carrying on the building to perfection.

with those seven] These relate not to the seven lamps of the candlestick, or to any number of Angels, whom God useth as Ministers in his provident government of the world: But to those seven eyes of that stone, Chap. 3. 9. the eyes of the Lord, as the next words shew.

which run to and fro, &c.] 2 Chron. 16. 9. He perfectly knows all things, in all quarters and corners of the world. All men and Angels too, are ignorant, and come short of this knowledge; many mysteries are hid from the Angels, & revealed to them, only as their employment requires. But God is omni-scient, nothing can fal out at any hand to hinder the perfecting of his work, which he fore-sees not, and therefore they may rest secure without any fear, upon his watchful providence, that he will see the building of his Temple now in hand, to be perfected. His providence shall as a soveraign Architect over-see this work, whose director Zerubbabel is, to blesse it and accomplish it.

V.11. Then answered I and said unto him, what are] The Prophet desires still, by degrees, to profit more in the knowledge of this sacred vision; of that last part mentioned, verse 3.

V.12. these two olive-branches] These not mentioned before, are more taken notice of now; bigger besides, and more remarkable then the other branches; from which two the oil dropped. The word seems by its signification to liken them to ears of corn, because they seem to be full of olive-berries, as these are of grains.

which through] Heb. By the hand.

the two golden pipes] Neither were these mentioned before. These conveighed the oil from the branches or berries into the bowl. The former seven pipes conveighed the oil out of the bowl into the lamps.

empty] Or, empty out of themselves oil into the gold.

the golden oil] Heb. the gold: namely, the pure yellow oil that did shine like gold.

V.13. Knowest thou not, &c.] See on verse 5. This is our wisdome to be ever learning all our dayes.

V.14. these are the two anointed ones] Or sons of the oil. Thus interpreting both parts of his question, in one answer: yet there is much doubt who these two are. Not surely Enoch and Elias, Apoc. 11. but if persons, then either Christ, and the Comforter; or Christ in his two Natures, or two offices of King and Priest; or more literally, Joshua and Zerubbabel, as Types of him. Or we may safely understand them of the influxes, and annointings, and graces of Gods Spirit; which from God are continually poured on the Church, and the chief officers of it, through Christ by pipes, that is, such means as he best pleaseth, 1 John 2. 20.

that stand by the Lord of the whole earth] Or before, chap. 6. 5. These graces are and abide in Christ in all fulnesse; and out of him flow forth upon the Church in such a measure as befits every part: so as the lamps never want sufficiency of oil to maintain them burning. Some understand the answer to be concerning the olive-trees, and not concerning the olive-branches. However the one is easily understood by the other, by comparison and proportion.

CHAP. V.

Verse 1. Then I turned] Thus distinguishing this vision from the former, and intimating some small distance of time to have passed betwixt them.

and lifted up mine eyes and looked] God inwardly had moved him hereunto, and so prepared and fitted him to receive this heavenly Oracle.

a flying Roll] Or book of paper, parchment, or other stuff: not written as ours are in several leaves, but according to the customes of those times, in one large scroll, which was wrapped up together, like the web upon the pin. See Psalm 40. 7. Jer. 36. 2. Luke 4. 17. Ezek. 2. 9, 10. This seems to have appeared in the air unfolded and spread abroad, flying and fluttering along swiftly, as a bird ready to seize on its prey.

V.2. what seest thou?] See on Chap. 4. 2.

the length thereof] The length and breadth of huge bulk and bignesse, equal to the measures of the porch of the Temple, 1 King. 6. 3. as if coming forth from thence, as it were, to contain all the peoples sins, and Gods judgements written in this Roll, implying the greatnesse, the weight, and long-lastingnesse of them: as the flying doth the swift execution of them.

cubits] See on Ezek. 40. 5.

V.3. this is the curse] Written in this Roll. Though in the former visions were revelations of Gods favour and mercies to this people, and he for his election-sake did purpose to establish his Church among them, and restore their state again. Yet he gives them to understand that he favoured not their grosse and grievous sins; but would severely punish them for the present; and if they grew more rank and ripe in rebellion, he would preserve his Church, but utterly subvert them, when they had filled up the measure of their iniquity. Or rather, as some others; Though they justly suffered for their sins, yet he comforts them with this, that God would at length put an end to their evils, and bear away their sinnes, the causers of them, and cast their wickednesse out of his Church, and confine it, as it were, into exile and banishment.

that goes forth over the whole earth] Ready to be executed, and to seize upon all the lands of Judah and Israel, upon the grosse and grievous sinners therein, in every part and corner of it, no place being free.

for every one that stealeth] He instanceth in some grosse sinnes, against both which this curse is threatned. They had other sins. This here of theft is against the second Table of the Law: yet sacrilege also may be here included.

shall be cut off] Targum thus: Every one that stealeth, and liveth, is punished by it. The vulgar Latine, shall be judged. And so the LXX ἐκδικηθήσεται.

on this side, according to it] Or, every one of this people that stealeth, holdeth himself guiltleſse, as it doth. That is, as the rest of the earth doth, are as impudent in maintaining their sins, as the rest of the earth is; as the Heathen man doth, as any in the world doth. Others thus; every one that stealeth being written on this side of the book or roll, shall be cut off, according to it, to the contents of it; The plainer and easier sense and meaning is; on this side of the land, or whole earth; as the former expression is; no place or person shall be exempted or spared from the punishment.

according to it] That is, according to that curse, in the Roll.

shall be cut off] Punished, or destroyed.

and every one that sweareth] Swearing, and forswearing, a grosse and every one that sweareth] Swearing, and for-swearing, a grosse sin against the first Table. Not these two sins, or sinners, are here in sin against the first Table. Not these two sins, or sinners, are here in this punishments equalized or compared: but rather that all sins against both Tables are comprehended here under these two kinds, and that one shall be punished as well as the other.

shall be] See the Annotations on all the same words next aforegoing. The sum is, every one shall receive his reward and punishment, according to his sins, according to the curse in the roll, be he who he will be, and in what place of the land soever he shall be, it shall finde him out, and cut him off; none shall escape Gods Tribunal. And therefore the Jewes now should not think it strange, if for their grosse sins they were so roughly handled.

V.4. I will bring it forth] God will see his own law executed. He will be owned as the authour of these curses and punishments.

it shall enter into the house] In vain shall they seek to hide themselves selves from it, or strengthen themselves against it. It shall fly in, and break in upon them, even there where they think themselves most secure.

falsly by my name] Swearing in truth, and by Gods Name, when upon a lawful cause, we are lawfully called thereunto, is a service of God, and an honouring of his name. See on Zeph.1.5. But perjury is a damnable sin. See Levit.19 20. Mal.3.5. 1 Tim.1.10.

and it shall remain] It shall continue, reside, and dwell there, with him, and his family, in the midst of his house, not in any out-corner of it. He shall neither keep it out, nor drive it out, so long as your sin remaineth un-repented, or un-reformed, but the Judgment that hath seized on his person or family, shall remain on himself, or them.

with the Timber] Leave no rubbish it self behinde, but utterly consume them, and their whole estates, which they have got together by stealth and rapine, sacrilege and perjury, no relique or piece of it shall remain, to terrifie is God in his Judgments. Heb.10.31.

V.5. Then the Angel] See on chap.2. verse 3. This is another vision, or another part of the vision continued.

lift up now thine eyes] Happily he was somewhat dejected with fear at the vision of the curse flying abroad, and durst not so freely and boldly look and lift up his eyes. And then this is to embolden and animate him. However, it calls upon him for further attention and advertency.

that goeth forth] That appeareth again to thee in vision.

V.6. What is it?] H. sees from what moving, but knows not well what it is. See on chap.1.9,19,21.

this is an Ephah] See on Ezech.45.10,11, and on Exod.16.16. It may here be taken for any great measure that measureth dry things, not liquid. See Deut.25.14. This may be a figure of the just measure of Gods judgments. Or for a measure and compasse limiting and bounding in the Jewes afflictions by their enemies, or their sins and wickednesse rather, as appears in the eighth verse.

this is their resemblance through all the earth] It seems that the Angel turned to that apparition of the Lord, which did represent his providence, and shewed it to the Prophet. Or this is their eye. Some understand it of the eye of the three Persons of the most holy Trinity, as Gen.1.26,3,22. and 11.7. Esay 6.1. By this resemblance, or eye, is meant Gods universal providence, chap.3.9. and 4.10. and 9.1,2. 1 Chr.16.9. which is president over his judgements, and sees in the Church the whole bulk and body of wicked men. Others thus, This resembles them, and their wickednesse bounded in and circumscribed by Gods all-knowing, and all-disposing providence, who sees how every ones sins fill up the Common measure. To conceive, that the Ephah should import a resemblance of them in their unrighteous dealing, in buying and selling suits not so well with the scope of the Text.

V.7. lift up] Or, brought.

a talent of lead] Or, weighty piece. The woman sitting in the Ephah, is sin, or the whole bundle of sinners, which by little and little filleth up the measure: and the same woman thrown into the midst of it, is sin beaten down, the talent of lead is the immoveablenesse, fastnesse, and weight of Gods Decree, keeping sin in, and under. A talent properly taken weighs 120 or 125 pounds, reckoning 12 ounces to the pound. Others make this to be the sacred talent, and the common talent to be but half so much. See on Exod. 25.39. Here it may be taken for a great piece, or masse of lead, made broad and flat, to cover the Ephah, or Bushel. This weight of lead was lift up, or brought, and hung over the Ephah.

a woman] Cast into, and confined within the Ephah.

V.8. This is wickednesse] A type of the wickednesse and sins of the people of the Jews, the late up before, here she is taken and thrown down in it; all power to resist and defend her self, being taken away.

and he cast the weight of lead] He covered the Ephah close and sure, with a broad weight of lead, which the should not be able to remove, being shut up there fast and sure, as in a strong prison, to wait what shall be done with her, as Josh.10.18. Dan.6.17. Mat.27. 66.

V.9. Two women] A figure, say some, of Gods two properties, Namely, Mercy towards his, and Justice towards his enemies, wherewith he transferreth upon these last, to wit, his enemies, the judgments by which he had punished his own people, which is done with admirable celerity. Others think the two women to have reference to the Church of the Jewes, in their two Acts of reformation, at two several times, specially in ejecting the out-landish wives, and their children, Ezra 9 and 10 chapters, and Nehem.13. Both which acts were done with speed, and publikely by open sentence, and execution. But rather by these two may be understood the instruments and means only in general, for the lifting up, and bearing away of this Ephah with the wicked woman in it, and weighty cover upon it. And this is sufficient for the plain and literal meaning of the words.

and the winde was in their wings, &c.] All this makes for the speedy execution of this transportation. Wings large and great, like the wings of a Stork. And they were helped forward with the winde, which bare them up, and drove them on apace, like a bird that flies before the winde.

lift up] Mount up with it aloft into the air, to carry it away.

whither do these bear the Ephah?] A needful question, that carries with it the main tendency and importment of this vision. As the answer hereunto will declare.

V.11. To build it an house in the Land of Shinar] This is the key opening the issue and intendment of this vision, which is to bear away wickednesse, and afflictions, and judgements for sin onely by consequence, from Judah; to banish it out of the Church for ever, according to those promises, Esay 52.1. and 35.8. Joel 3.17. See Zech.14.21. Apoc.21.27. and 22.15. Ezech.43.7. and 37.23.&c. and 14.11. And to build it an house, that is, to appoint a place of continual abode, as in a setled dwelling. Thus is the phrase used, Jer.29.5,28. A mansion place for wickednesse, out of the Church, from amongst Gods holy people.

in the land of Shinar] To wit, Babylon, Gen.10.10. and 11.2. Whereby are meant all Gods and the Churches wicked and cruell enemies; as 1 Sam.24.13. Apoc.22.11. Let wickednesse remain amongst the wicked, as in its proper element: And plagues and punishments for sin likewise.

and it shall be established] Hereby is shewn the irrevocable eternity of the punishments of the wicked, opposite to the determined and short-lasting chastisements of the Church, figured before by the flying roll. Or rather here by is shewed the fixed residence and settlement both of wickednesse, and its punishment, where it shall remain, namely, out of the Church, amongst Gods and the Churches enemies, setled there, as an house upon its foundation, or a pillar strongly fixed upon a firm Base. The issue then and main purpose of this vision is this: not a fearful forc-shewing of the utter rejection of the Jews, and final extirpation of them out of their Land, by the Romans, after the death of our Saviour, as some would: But rather a consolation to them, That God in favour would put an end to their evils, and carry away wickednesse, the cause of all their evils far out of the land of his elect and holy people, that they should be freed from it, the guilt, power, and dominion of it; and the miseries procured by it, and that wickednesse and the evil fruits of it, should be removed, and be placed, fixed, and abide out of the Church in its own place, even among the enemies of the Church, the cruel, and bloody Babylonians.

CHAP. VI.

Verse 1. And I turned] Here we have Gods fore-care, power, and speed, by his Angels, in divers sorts, for Judah at home, and in Babel yet remaining: And this in another vision, after some small distance of time inter-vening and the Prophets diligent advertency preceding: He delivering herein nothing of his own, but what he received from heaven.

four Charets] Not without their drivers, or Coach-men. Some hereby understand the four Gospels, some the four Monarchies, the Assyrian or Babylonian, the Persian, the Grecian, the Roman. But what follows in the Text concerning these four Charets can hardly comply with the former opinions. Hereby rather are signified, as it were, four squadrons of Angels, going forth at Gods command through the earth, and executing his will for the good of his people, and against their enemies. And this seems best to agree with the Angels own interpretation, verse 5. &c. See Chap.1.8. And thus hereby are set forth the various changes of things which fell out, not only in Judea, but also in Chaldea and other places, and Nations, as they had reference to the state and affairs of Gods people the Jewes.

from between two mountains] Some make this an allusion to the custome of those times, of running Races with Charets, where the Horses and Charets stood ready for the course, inclosed within barred Lists, from whence upon the sign given they loosed. But further, by the two mountains others understand Heaven, the high and firm habitation of Angels, opened, and as it were, cleft in two, to give way for the coming ont of these spirits. And yet more, by the mountains he seemeth to mean the eternal counsel, and unsearchable providence of God, whereby he hath from before all Eternity decreed what shall come to passe.

of brasse] Or, steel, his providence, counsels, and decrees are hidden and secret, till they come forth. And they are most firm, stable, impregnable, immutable in themselves, like unto un-removeable mountains of brasse, or steel: neither Satan, nor all the world can alter, or hinder them. So far off is it, that God should fore-see and decree the event of things to come only conditionally, and dependently upon the contingent issue and pleasure of mans free will, Mat.20.29,30.

V.2. Red horses] Or of a bloody, or fiery colour. The horses may signifie the swiftnesse and speedinesse of the executions of Gods Decrees. The diversity of the colours may haply serve for distinction sake only, to know one Charet from another, without further significations; or if we make them significant, we must make them relate to the Church, and the several states of it. Yet we must not be too precise and peremptory therein. Red horses then may be a sign of the execution of wrath, Chap.1.8. Apoc.6.4.

black horses] A sign of execution of death, Revel.6.5.

V. 3.

V.3. white horses] See upon Chap.1.8.

grizled] Spotted with white spots, like hail-stones upon bay-colour, as Jacobs spotted sheep, Gen.30.39. and 31.10.

Bay] Or strong. Heb. strong, or strengthened. To wit, by God for the execution of his will, and so may be as a common Epithete to all these horses; as is perceived by the eighth verse.

V.4. what are these my Lord?] See on Chap.4.4. Still we must shake off sluggishnesse, and shew our selves attentive, and desirous to learn. And so we shall not want our will, or fail of obtaining it.

V.5. These are the four Spirits of the heavens] Or winder. Four principal Angels, as it were Commanders of Squadrons, if not four Squadrons, who are sent from God by his secret instinct and impulse, into all the quarters of the world, and from thence repair again into his presence. God so abounds in means and ministers to execute his will.

from standing before] Who stand in the presence of God, waiting his commands, ready to go forth in the speedy execution of his eternal counsels and decrees, as it is most plain, Job 1.6. and 2.1. 1 King.22.19. Dan.7.10. and above, Zech 1.10. Matth.18.10. Heb. 1.14. so that chance and fortune have no place in humane affairs: And men, and Angels, and all secondary causes stand, and go forth, move and work in their several spheres, and according to their kindes, from, and under the Lord, and ruler of all the earth, of all the world.

V.6. The black horses which are therein] A verse obscure and difficult. Some render the words and meaning thus; They that are in that Charet, meaning the red horses in the first Charet; and so they make the red, black, and white horses to go into the North country. Others conceive the red horses, and first Charet to be here omitted; as already too well known of the Jewes in Judea, by their sad and woful experience, there. Or if meant of Babylon, then omitted because the Chaldean Empire was overthrown, and so their race was run. These black horses were the second Charet, as shadows of blacknesse, darknesse, and dismal effects.

North-country] Signifying the grievous executions of Gods judgments done upon the Babylonians, northward to Judea, verse 8. and that out of his care of, and over his people, the Jews yet remaining in Babylon, lest they there might grow into despair of Gods minding them any more for good, but that he altogether neglected and rejected them.

and the white go forth after them] The white horses in the third Charet, go forth at Gods direction, and upon his imployment, after the former horses and Charet, into the North-country likewise, for the comfort and consolation of the Jewes yet remaining there. So that these are Angels of safety and of peace, which did accompany the destroyers of Babylon to deliver Gods Church which was there, and to provide for, and to procure their good.

and the grizled] In the fourth Charet, called also bay, or strong, verse 3,7.

toward the South country] Some understand this of Judea, south from Babylon: That they went to it for the service and behoof of the Jews now in their own land. Others, of Egypt, south from Judea, that their punishment should be tempered with some mercy, which should not be done to the Babylonians.

V.7. and the bay] Not differing from the grizled. Some would have it, imagining both to draw together in the fourth Charet, and now to be severed, the grizled to the south, and the bay throughout all the earth, what then shall become of the Charet? but they are, as was said, the same: their course might vary.

and sought to go] Thus are they at Gods appointment. Yea, even wicked men, and Satan himself. See on ver.5. Gods secret, and infinite wisdome and providence, rules, and over-rules all.

through the earth] Some understand this of all the earth, as Job 1.7. and 2.2. as if they desired to make, as it were, a general visitation of the world, and to punish other people, which have not any communion with the Church. Others, of the earth, and land of Judea only; as if they desired their imployment might be in, and for that land, and over and among that people only for their good.

and he said] This Angel that talked with me, ver. 4,5. the head of the Angels, Chap.1 8. the Angel of the Covenant, Mal.3.1. the mighty God, Esay 9.6. His commission, and their obedience follows, Mat.18.10, and 6.10.

V.8. Then cried he unto me] Called on me with a loud voice; to breed more attention to this, as the main scope and intendment of the vision, and the only point and part of interpretation which the Angel pleaseth to give. And no marvel then, if the other parts and parcels of the vision remain obscure, and subject to various apprehensions, and constructions.

have quieted my Spirit in the North-country] Have perfectly executed their charge and given me satisfaction, either satisfying me in my revenge upon the Chaldeans, for the wrongs done to my people, as Esay 1.24. or so working upon my people yet remaining there, so reducing them to penitency and piety, as thereby rendering me pacified and appeased towards them, not minded utterly to cast them off, but really to be reconciled with them, and entreated by them; an effect and fruit whereof seems to be that Return of the people made with Ezra, Chap.7. and 8. and thus God honours the Ange's in this their ministery and service under him.

V.9. And the word of the Lord] This which follows seems to have a dependance upon the last words immediately going before. For it seems to be a narrative of the publike profession of the Religion, which the godly Jews remaining yet behinde in Babylon did make, by their messengers sent to them in Jerusalem; and again of that restimony and approbation which God did publikely give to them for it, by assigning them crowns of gold and silver for a memoriall and monument for them in the Temple of the Lord; with promises annexed of the Kingdome of Christ.

V.10. Take] The aim of all this action is to shew, that as Joshua and Zerubbabel, restorers of the Church which was at that time, were each one for their several part, in their several office, figures of the Messias; so Christ should for ever enjoy the two offices of King and Priest: which he shal enter into possession of, by his death & passion.

of them of the captivity] Which are now returned thence, now in the second year of Darius, and the eleventh moneth, Chap.1.7.

even of Heldai] Called Helem, ver.14. It is not certainly known who these three were. But it is very likely they were some heads of the people, who were induced by Zechariah, or much rather came from Babylon purposely to make this offering of gold and silver, which was now thus bestowed in making these crowns which were to remain in the Temple for a remembrance of this solemn promise which God had made of the Messiah, and of their interest in him, and right to his Temple.

which are come from Babylon] Either as private men, religiously bringing their own free-will-offering to the house of God, and the godly Jews in Babylon, to make known their profession, and zeale, and to bring their gifts.

and come thou the same day] That these men came from Babylon to Jerusalem. No delay was here to be used, no time fore-slowed in so sacred and solemn an action.

and go into the house of Josiah] Who seemes to be called Hen, ver.14. Some make him to be a Treasurer for the Temple, who received the oblations that were made for the building, or repairing of it; see Ezra 2.69. And so the Prophet must go thither, with those three afore-said, to receive gold and silver of them in the Treasurers house, whither they would bring it. Others conceive him to be some Gold-smith, or Founder dwelling in Jerusalem, who should make the Crowns after-mentioned. But the former words of this verse, and those verse 14. make him rather to be a fourth person, that came with the three former. And from him also the Prophet was to receive a part of this offering.

V.11. Then take silver and gold] Of Heldai, and the rest, of their offerings, which they brought from Babylon.

and make crowns] Likely two, one of gold, another of silver, and not one very great one, of gold and silver mixt.

and set them] Therefore more then one.

upon the head of Joshua] Not both together, but one after another, in all likelihood. And both upon the head of Joshua the High Priest. Not one upon his head, and another upon the head of Zerubbabel the Prince, we read of the Myrre of the High Priest. And also we finde these words, Exod.39.30. And they made the plate of the holy Crown (of the High-Priest) of pure gold, and wrote upon it, Holinesse to the Lord. However, here are the two Crowns set upon the head of Joshua only. And this by an act of extraordinary use and dispensation, to represent at this time the union and conjunction of both Offices, and Dignities of Priesthood and Kingdome in one person. And though the execution of both offices was not to be performed by Joshua, who was a Priest after the order of Aaron, and the Kingly office was invested in the house and lineage of David; yet this solemn kinde of inauguration and coronation of Joshua served for an extraordinary representation, to shadow, as in a special type, for an extraordinary representation, to shadow, as in a special type, what should really come to passe in the person of the Messias, who was that true Melchisedech, both King and Priest, an High-Priest after the order of Melchisedech; see Gen.14.18. Psal.110.4. Heb.5. verse 6, 10. and 6.20. and 7.1,2,3,4,10,11,15,21. That incroachment which the High-Priests made upon the Kingly office, after this time, especially in the daies of the Maccabees, however they might pretend a necessity for it, in those times, or fetch a seeming colour for it from hence, yet it was in it self no lesse then an unwarrantable usurpation. The Kingly dignity was now more over-turned then the Priesthood, Ezek.21.26,27. And therefore also the Crowns are here set upon the head of Joshua rather then of Zerubbabel.

V.12. And speak unto him saying] Now follows the exposition of the type, the signification of these ceremonies which the Prophet declares in a speech he makes unto Joshua, after that he had set the Crowns upon his head, shewing him whereat this solemnity aimed; and that this honour was in him but typical, which should be really accomplished in the Messias, of whom he was herein but a figure.

behold, the man] See in Joshua thus adorned with Priestly, and Princely Ensigns, a plain similitude and representation of the Messias hoped, and looked for by all that expect salvation in Israel. A Type of Christ who shall appear in the flesh, at the appointed time, in whom shall be verified that which is shewen and confirmed unto the Church by this action.

whose name is the Branch] See on Chap.3.8.

he shall grow up out of his place] Or, branch up from under him, like a plant that sp.outs up, and grows by vertue of its living root; even so shall Christ, by vertue of himselfe, without any humane means, advance his kingdom. Or, he shall grow up from under himself; that is to say, by secret ways, without any humane shew, as Isa.11.1. Or this may allude and relate to the place and City of Nazareth, where he was brought up, See Matth.2.23.

and he shall build the Temple of the Lord] And this repeated again in the next words; to shew the weight of the matter; and to meet with their diffidence, and difficulty in believing it. He shall build the material Temple; which not Joshua's, nor Zerubbabels skill and strength could finish, without the aid, and protection of Christ, Chap. 4. 6. And the Spiritual Temple, the Church, far more excellent then the material, that should Christ rear up upon himself by the power of his Spirit, in his Prophets, and Ministers of the Gospel; Heb. 3. 3. Mat. 16. 18. 1 Cor. 3. 9. 1 Pet. 2. 5. And this Temple and House seem to be meant, Hag. 2. 9. and by that large description, Ezek. 40. 41. 42 Chapters.

V. 13. And he shall bear the glory] Not thou Joshua, albeit now thou art crowned with these crowns. The dignity, and honour of the Church is onely in the Head Jesus Christ; and from him communicated to the members. Again the Jews were now to look for no such outward pomp and splendor, either in the Prince or Priest, as they had before the Captivity. And they must not be dismayed or discouraged at it. All things were abased, that they might the more eagerly look after the Messias; the brightenesse of the glory, and the excellency of Honour: In whom, though not in outward appearance should meet all perfection of both dignities, which either the Priests or Kings had. Both which were now almost laid in the dust: But Christ should lift them up again; and shall sit and rule upon his Throne.

and he shall be a Priest upon his Throne] Here is the substance of Joshua's ceremonious inauguration, and the manner how Christ should bear the Glory; that is, by the glorious conjunction of two supreame dignities in his most excellent person; the Kingdom, and the Priest-hood; that expressed in the former clause, this in the latter. Here is no mention of the Prophetical office of Christ, which it may be, is but an Appendix of his Priest-hood. See Ps. 110. 4. Heb.3.1. & 9.14.

and the counsel of peace shall be between them both] Not between Joshua and Zerubbabel; nor between Joshua and Jesus Christ, the type and anti-type; Though both these true; yet not truly here meant. But between both Priest-hood, and kingdom in Christ. They both should joyntly effect and produce this peace in, and towards the Church; even peace and reconciliation with God; together with safety and deliverance from all our spiritual enemies: which is the benefit we obtain by Christs Sacrifice, and soveraign authority, Ephes.2.13, &c. He shall work, and bring, and preach peace, both to those in Judea, and those afar off, reconciling both to God in one body, by his crosse. Others expresse it thus; that these two offices and properties shall for ever be united together in Christ, and shall perfectly agree one with the other, though they seem to be very different; the one being to execute Justice, in commanding, and punishing, the other of mercy, to expiate, and pardon; that he may be obeyed when he commands, Psal. 130. 4. Having put men into Gods favour, to make them receive the spirit of peace, in and through Christ, who is our peace, the Prince of Peace, purchasing it by his Priest-hood, and maintaining it by his Kingdom. And all the prophetical and glorious promise, is to comfort Joshua, Zerubbabel, and the people, against all the present discouragements that were before their eyes. They saw how mean and miserable they were, what poor beginnings they had; what enemies on all sides rose up; how unlikely their state was and unanswerable to those glorious promises, which the Prophets formerly had made: Here therefore God calls them by his Prophet, from what they saw now, to what they were yet to hope for hereafter; even a full and glorious accomplishment: but not in that manner: nor so soon, as they rashly, and over-hastily expected: looking to have all those promises fulfilled in one day.

V. 14. And the crowns shall be to Helem] It is likely that Helem and Hen were the same as were called Heldai and Josiah, vers. 10. As hath been said.

for a memorial] After thou hast thus prophecied of Christ, setting these two material crowns upon the head of Joshua, lay them up again in the Temple, in the names of these four men, peradventure with some inscription of their names, for a publique monument and remembrance, either of their liberality, and piety, in offering gold and silver unto Christ, and for the Temple; or of their incredulity, and hardnesse of heart, who would not believe the promises without such a visible assurance: or of the Typical coronation of Joshua, that the crowns, as they were set upon his head, for to signifie the Messiah: so should they be hung up in the Temple, to put all spectators in minde of what was promised: and to be expected shortly; or to be a testimony and confirmation of Gods favourable acceptance of all such as should come from a far to worship in the Temple: and joyn themselves to the people of God, whether from Babylon, as these Jews here named, or else where from among the Gentiles, as is inferred in the next verse. A memorial, some-what like that, Josh.22.27,28.

in the Temple of the Lord] Kept in some treasury, and cabinet, or rather hung up in open view among other costly donaries, and Anathematacs of the Temple, which might be after the finishing of the Temple.

V. 15. And they that are far off shall come] The Jews in Babylon and dispersed in the Persian Empire; and which is more, the Gentiles in all parts; These shall come, and be an accession to Gods people, Isa 57.19. & chap. 60. and chap. 66, 18, 19. Acts 2.39. and chap. 22.21.

And build in the temple of the Lord] Help forward the present building of the material Temple; by their pains, or by their purse. This help should the Jews at home receive from those afar off, both from their brethren the Jews in Babylon, and else-where, among whom many out of zeale to Religion, and Gods House, did after the example of Hildia, and the rest, either bring, or send their Gifts and also from the Gentiles, who though not then converted to the Jewish religion, did nevertheless, moved by Gods Spirit, greatly further this re-edification of the Temple. Thus had Cyrus done formerly, Ezra 1.4,6,7. Darius at this time, Ezra 6. 8. And Artaxerxes, and his Counsellors, when Ezra came up afterwards; Ezra 7.15.16.20,21,22. and chap. 8. 25. This was more then was done in building of Solomons Temple. And this makes for their present encouragement to goe on in the Building, notwithstanding all difficulties and disheartnings to the contrary: what humane Histories record that Herod did to this Temple, was many Ages after this time, but yet the full meaning of this Text, stretcheth further to the building of Gods spiritual Temple, the Church of Christ under the Gospel; when both Jews and Gentiles, both neer and far off, distant, as in place, so in Religion and affection, did come and convert, and as living stones build up the true Temple, whereof Christ was the foundation, 1 Pet.2.4. Ephes.2.13,17.

and ye shall know] See on chap.2.9,11. & on chap.4.9. this should be a justification of Zecharias calling, that he was a true Prophet sent by God to them, with Gods Word in his mouth; specially when Jews then living, to whom he was sent, should speedily see and know by experience; and find the present help in building the Temple, which they should have from such as they little looked for it at their hands: and the Almighty power of the Lord of Hosts should confirm them in this belief, whole power nothing can withstand.

and this shall come to passe, if, &c.] Their distrust and disobedience might hinder a while, and delay further the building of the Temple, as it had done all the while hitherto; but it should no wife hinder the coming of Christ, and building of his spiritual Temple: For the councils and decrees of God depend not upon the contingent and arbitrary pleasures of men, Rom.3.3. yet the good and benefit of this prophetical promise, should not reach the people of the Jews to their comfort, if they did not comply with the condition here propounded, and yeeld the obedience of faith and life to the voice of the Lord in the mouth of his Prophets. Some so render the words, as to make the condition it self here mentioned to be the thing first promised, and the building thereafter, and thereupon to be performed and accomplished.

CHAP. VII.

Vers. 1. A*Nd it came to passe*] This and the next Chapter is no vision, as hitherto hath been; but the Answer which the Prophet from God gives to a question propounded by Ambassadors, purposely sent for a resolution in a scruple, and case of conscience, touching Fasting: The Prohpet intermixing with all sundry excellent instructions, consolations and promises unto the people.

that the word of the Lord] See on Chap.1.1.

in the fourth day of the ninth moneth, even in Chisleu] Chisleu begins with the new Moon in our November: they begin their moneths still with their new Moons, and this date of time is about two years and one moneth fince the first time that the Word of the Lord came to Zechariah, and one yeer nine moneths and one day es fince the latter time mentioned, chap.1.7, and two years two moneths and twenty nine dayes before the Temple was finished, Ezra 6.15.

V. 2. When they had sent] Either these two here named had sent Messengers, or rather these two were sent as Ambassadors by the Jews that were returned, and resident in Judea; or rather by the Jews yet remaining in Babylon, though the case and question did much alike concern them both; their journey was long, troublesome, and chargeable.

unto the house of God] The House or Temple was now about half builded.

Sherezar] Two choice men that were the chiefe and principal personages in this honourable employment and Embassie. We need not not here trouble our selves with the erroneous translation of the Seventy, or of that copy of it which now we have.

and their men] Their train of Attendants and Assistants, as is used in such an Embassage, for the more grace and honour of it.

to pray before the Lord] Heb. To intreat the face of the Lord: They prayed no doubt in Babylon, and that with their faces no doubt toward Jerusalem, and the Temple, as Daniel did, Dan. 6. 10. when both City and Temple lay in ruines. But this was a solemn prayer before the Lord, in that place of prayer, whereunto God had vouchsafed special promises, 1 Kings 8. 28, 29, 30, 48. And to these prayers no doubt were Sacrifices annexed; Sacrifices being as the appurtenances to prayer in that place, and prayer ever the chief, 1 Sam. 13. 12. And though the Temple was not yet finished, the Altar for Sacrifices was long before, Ezra 3 2, 3. And most likely it is, that Gifts and Oblations likewise they brought with them, as those, chap.6. vers. 10, 11, 14.

V. 3. And to speak] In a scruple of minde, and case of conscience, to ask a resolution, desirous thus to know, that they might accordingly practice and obey.

unto the Priests] To whom it belonged to teach the Law, Deut. 17.8,---14. Mal.2.7. Jer.18.18. This due reverence they yeeld to them.

which were in the house of the Lord of hosts] Attended on the service there, and also did dwell within the circuits and courts of the Temple: hence is that Esay 2.3. Mic. 4.2.

and to the Prophets] Extraordinary, as Haggai, Zechariah, and Malachy, if he then lived, and to the ordinary Prophets also: the residence of Haggai and Zechariah there, should have been a strong motive to the Jews in Babylon for their return.

Should I weep] Meaning Fast, as vers.5. Weeping is so annexed to Fasting, that our Saviour useth the words of mourning and fasting indifferently to signifie the same thing, Mat. 9.15. And where Saint Matthew sees down the word mourn, in that place the other Evangelists put for it fast, Mark 2. 9. Luk. 5.34. Of this weeping at fastings, see Joel 2.12,13. Judg. 20.26. 1 Sam.7.6. Psal.69.10. Ezra 10.1. How contrary is this to our practice in fasting? and much more to the Doctrine of popish fasting?

In the fifth moneth] They had likewise other days of fasting, see vers.5. & chap.8. 19. but this was the chief, because then both City and Temple were burnt, Jer.52.12,13. They doubted not the lawfulnesse of its first institution, and the keeping and celebrating of it hitherto, being ordained by the publick and common consent of the Church of the Jews; as likewise the feasts of Purim were in the days of Esther; though the like authority for Fasts and Feasts upon the like grounds, is by some denyed now to the power and authority of the Church: but their question and scruple now was touching the continuation of it thus; Are we in conscience bound to keep the solemn Fast appointed to be in the fifth Moneth, by reason of the destruction of the Temple which happened at that time, 2 King.25.8, 9. now that it is in re-edifying, and Gods service to be restored, Ezra 6.15. seeing the keeping of it is not commanded in the Law of God? See Malac.3.14. They would not take upon them to end in now of themselves, and forbear it hereafter, without the consent and authority of the Church at Jerusalem, to prevent any schisme, and to preserve unity therein between them both. The day of that fifth moneth is set down to be the tenth day, Jer.52.12. three dayes after that Nebuzaradan came unto the City, 2 King.25.8.

separating my self] From feasts, company of women, gay apparel, musick, & all other carnal delights, see ch.1.12,13,14. 1 Cor. 7.5. Joel 2.16. Jona.3.6. 2 Sam.12.20. Esth.5.1. Dan.6.10. & 10.3. And addicting my self to more strict holinesse on that solemn day; for separation from all pollution of sin in those extraordinary days of fasting, was a thing more then ordinarily looked unto.

these so many years] In the captivity and since the 70 yeers of captivity began 11 years before the burning of the Temple, See Ezek. 40 1. & chap.33.21. And the number of years since the end of the captivity till this time of building the Temple, are by divers diversly reckoned: see Annot. on Dan.9.25. by all afore-going it appears, that the Jewes remaining in Babylon were not grosse contemners of God and his Religion, but though it was their great fault to abide there, and their great ingratitude too, when God in mercy had made open the way for their return, yet there remained in them many sparks of piety, and they could not but be displeased in themselves for that their sin, though they did not presently amend it; and therefore they stood in need, as of reproof and rebuke for their sin, so of exhortation and instigation to repent and return.

V. 4. Then came the word of the Lord] vers.1. & 6.9. and 4.8. and ch. 1.1,7. Hag.1.1,3. Zeph.1.1. Mic.1.1. Jonah 1.1. and so usually.

V. 5. Speak unto all the people] Comprehending both those that sent, and those that were sent unto; As the cause was common, so the answer was publike, and to all. And indeed the whole subject and substance of the Sermon following, is more directed to all the people, then to the Ambassadors; and contains matter of more concernment then that point of fasting came unto.

and to the Priests] For likely they were both of the people and of the Priests, which doubted, as touching this controversie; besides them which yet remained in Chaldea, and reasoned of it, as of one of the points of their religion.

fasted and mourned] Both joyned together, Esay 58. 5. See on vers. 1.

and seventh moneth] This other fast was appointed for the death of Gedeliah, which happened in this moneth, 2 King. 25 25. Jer.41. 1, &c. whereupon followed the total dispersion of the remainder of the people, and desolation of the land.

those seventy years] See on verse 3. and on Chap. 1.12.

un-o me, even to me] A vehement interrogation for a vehement denial; seconded with an emphatical repetition and appealing to their own consciences. They did not in such a manner, with such affections, ends, and exercises, as God requires; with repentance and amendment, which God expects. But they went no further then the outward ceremonie; fondly conceiving; as if God would be pacified and pleased with such outward rites, & bodily exercises; and therefore they glory in themselves for so doing; and expostulate the matter with God, as wee see, Esay 58. 3. Thus pleasing and satisfying themselves in their carnal humours, and not heeding him who is a Spirit, and must be served in Spirit and truth. Should I then; should I approve of such a fasting as done to me? was it not onely out of a carnal feeling of your evils and misries? Hos.7.14.

V. 6. Did not ye eat for your selves?] As ye fasted, so ye fasted; and neither for me or my glory, as you should, according to that rule, 1 Cor.10.31. but to content your own fancies. And such abstaining or not abstaining makes nothing to the service of God, 1 Cor.8.8. yea, in your mirth and rejoycing you have not regarded me, to yeeld me honour and thanks for my benefits, Hos. 8.13. and 9.4. now the answer to the foresaid question is referred to this point; your fast might be sanctified by piety and devotion; but you had better to omit it, then prophane it, as you do; and instead of your ceremonies, endeavour your selves to serve God internally; by means of which I will change these your doleful dayes, into days of feasting, and giving thanks for my benefits, Chap.8.19.

V. 7. Should ye not hear] Ye busie your selves about trifles, you curiously ex quire of this fasting, as if it were the prime part and principal point of Religion, and mean-while live in grosse sins, and neglect main duties. This is the corrupt nature and condition of hypocrites especially; They will strain a gnat, and swallow a camel. The Prophet therefore having to deal with such for their better conviction, calls them back to the main point; touching them to the quick, appealing to, and charging their own consciences, for the reality and truth of what he now tels them.

the words] Or, are not these the words. Hath not God sufficiently declared his will concerning these external actions, and specially concerning a fast, prophaned through wickednesse, Esay 58. 3,4. and concerning the main duties of repentance, holinesse, and righteousnesse required in your lives.

hath cryed] Openly, plainly, and vehemently, as Esay 58. 1.

by the former Prophets] Heb. by the hand of, &c. This asserts his authority; he accords with the former Prophets, and insists as they did upon the same main duties; he brings no new thing. And this doubles their crime; that they would not be warned and schooled by the example of their fathers, and what befel them; but still shut their eyes, and stop their ears against those lessons by the former Prophets, so plainly and powerfully preached to them. They still exhorted to repentance, and obedience; and threatned destruction for rebellion: you should have obeyed Gods command by them. But where is this? And neglecting it, all your fasting is to no purpose: you do but dally so with God, and delude your selves.

when Jerusalem was inhabited] Or, on foot: or in its former state. Inhabited, not thinly, and poorly, as now; but populously.

and the cities thereof] Throughout all the land likewise, were in prosperity, and flourishing.

the south of the plain] Or, the South, and the plain. See Josh. 15 the plain Chapter, and Jer. 17.26. and 33.44. Places, it seems, much inhabited formerly; and after, for their sins, much wasted. The Prophets cryed out against their sinful courses then, but there was no amendment; and therefore ruine came upon them. And should ye not now hear and heed the words of those Prophets, and not run the same race of sin as formerly was done.

V. 8. And the word] See on vers. 4.

V. 9. Execute] Having reproached them for their disobedience in general, in not heatkning to the words of the former Prophets, which was the thing that God looked for, more then their fastings: & for want of which God rejected their ceremonious fasts; He comes now to presse them with particulars; He sets before them the special words and commandments of God, by the former Prophets, whereunto God required obedience, vers. 9. 10. And their fathers refusing to obey, vers. 11, 12. And Gods punishing them for it, vers. 13, 14. And thus in their Fathers example, hee sets them see what themselves are, and what they should likewise expect, if they amended not.

true judgement] Heb. Judge judgement of truth. He sheweth that they did not fast with a sincere heart, but for hypocrisie; and that it was not done of a pure religion, because that they lacked these offices and shew mercy] This is the duty of every man to his brother; not onely to abstain from doing him any wrong, but to use kinde and favourable dealing towards him.

23.23. Micah 6.8. Judgement of truth is when and where equity and right is onely regarded, without any respect had, to favour, fear, hatred, bribes, acceptings of persons, or the like. And the charge is for the Judges. And thus he begins with the duties of the second Table; as is usual in the Prophets, having to deal with an hypocritical people: not but that our duties to God in the first Table are of far more esteem: but therein Hypocrites can best dissemble what is their inward mind; whereas the duties of the second Table put them upon a visible and palpable trial in the eyes of the world. So that examination and conviction will here soonest appear.

and compassions] So to do, out of the bowels of a tender affectionate love to our brethren.

V. 10. And oppresse not the widow] Break not over where the hedge is lowest; do no wrong there especially, where we have most ease and advantage to do it, by reason of their weaknesse, and inability to save themselves harmlesse, or to resist, and offend us. And therefore God in his Law gives charge so often, and takes so great care of these persons, Exod. 22.21,22. Esay 1.17,23. Jerem. 5. 28. Deut. 10.18. & 14.29. and 24.17,19. and 27.19.

imagine evil] The inward thought of the heart is root and beginning of outward violence, and wrong; And therefore is to be looked to in the first place, that this be kept pure and undefiled, as in the sight of God, as Ephes. 6.5,6. See Micah 2.1. Prov. 21.2. and 6. 14.18. and 4.23. and 23.26.

V. 11. But they refused to hearken] A wilful disobedience, obstinate stubbornnesse, and intractablenesse, Chap. 1. 4. See 2 Chron. 33. 10. Ezek. 3. 7. Deut. 28.15. and 30. 17. Great is the evil and danger of this.

and pulled away the shoulder] Heb. they gave a back sliding shoulder. And would not carry the Lords burden, which was sweet and easie; but would bear their own, which was heavy, and grievous to the flesh; thinking to merit thereby: which similitude is taken from yoked oxen, which shrink at the yoke, and are unwilling to draw, Neh. 9.29. Hosea 4.16. Or as he that should carry a burden, but pulls away his shoulder, and lets it fall. The case is otherwise, Zeph. 3 9.

and stopped their ears] Heb. made heavy. An argument of extream contempt, and hatred of the speaker, for the hearer to stop his ears at him. See Esay 6.10.

V. 12. As an adamant stone] See Ezek. 11.19. and 36.26. Job 41. 24. Ezek. 3.9. Harder then the nether mil-stone. They heightned their heart to a malicious stubbornnesse by continual opposition to all means of amendment; that they could no more be wrought upon to receive any impression of remorse, or reformation, then the diamond, flint, hardest rock, or stone could be engraven by the tool of the artificer. See 1 Sam. 6. 6. Jer. 17. 1. and 6. 28,29.

lest they should hear the law] As Psal. 58.4,5. The Law of Moses was the sacred rule of obedience; and obedience ever requited to it; seconded with all promises and threatnings, Deut. 27. 26. and chap. 28. Levit. 26.

in his spirit] Which declareth that they rebelled not onely against the Prophets, but against the Spirit of God that spake in them, as Acts 7.51.

by the former Prophets] Heb. By the hand of, &c. The power and majestie of the high Spirit of God shined forth in them, and their doctrine; which rendered the people the more inexcusable.

therefore there came a great wrath] A great punishment, the effect of great anger and displeasure. And the greatnesse of Gods wrath doth evince the greatnesse of their sins; for God is just. And both these should have been warning sufficient to the people to whom Zechariah now preacheth; that they should not now dally with God, and serve him with shadows and ceremonies, but seriously repent and amend.

V. 13. Therefore it is come to passe] By a just and equal retaliation, when there was now no other remedy, 2 Chron. 36.16.

that as he cryed] An admirable mercy of God, that he should deigne to invite man, to call and cry upon him, for his good and salvation; sending his Prophets early and late. See Ezek. 18.3,32. Jer. 13.27. Esay 65.2.

and they would not hear] An height of impiety in man: And much charged upon sinners in Scripture. They would not hear to obey his voice, and reform their manners.

So they cried] Jer. 2.27. Judg. 10.10,15. Isa. 26. 16. Hos. 5.15. in their calamities, for help and succour.

And I would not hear] A most just retaliation: As they were deaf to God, so he to them, Job 27.9. Prov. 1.28. Isa. 1.15, and 59.2. and 65.12. Jer. 11.11. and 14.12. Micah. 23.4. He would not relieve and comfort them; but left them helpless in the hand of their enemies. And this is the great wrath of God indeed. See Jer. 15.1.

V. 12. But I scattered them] Not onely drove them into exile; but therein scattered and dispersed them.

with a whirl-winde] Violently and suddenly; as with a strong storm and Tempest. See Job 21. 18. Isa. 17.13.

among all the Nations] Of the four quarters of the heavens 1 See Ezek. 5.2. among the Assyrians, Egyptians, Edomites, Moabites, &c.

whom they knew not] So remote and far off, that they knew not them, or their language; had not heard of them; strangers to the Jews in affection and religion.

Thus the land was desolate] The mark of Gods vengeance laid upon the land it self, Gods own land, because they had defiled it. And to fulfil the threatnings, Lev. 26. 32,33,34,35. 2 Chron. 36.21.

after them] After they have been carried away out of it: after the murder of Gedaliah; when all the remainder of the people, men, women, and children, fled into Egypt, Jer. 43.6.

That no man passed through] We read not that any Colonies were sent by the king of Babylon to plant in the Jews room, as was done by the Assyrian, in Samaria and Israel, 2 King. 17. Neither that any neighbouring Nation came in to possesse and inhabit it; nor yet that at the return of the Jews, any were displaced to make them room, either by force, or fair means. But God in his judgement and providence, kept it waste and empty, ready for them at their return; See Isa. 60.15. Ezek. 33.28. See the like of Babylon, Jer. 50.13. & 51.43. and that Zeph. 3.6.

for they laid] God in his justice, and the Jews by their sins, Psal. 107.34. Dan. 9. 16. the sins of the Jews wasted their own land more then the armies of the Babylonians.

the pleasant land] Heb. land of desire, meaning Judea. See Psal. 106.24. Jer. 3.19. Isa. 62.3,4. God had made it as his Paradise, enriched it with all plenty, and pleasure; and above all, with his presence and residence in his City, and Temple: But they by their sins laid all desolate, Lam. 1.1. & 2.15. & 4 12. and 2.1,6,7. and 4.1. 6. and 5.18.

CHAP. VIII.

Vers. 1. A Gain the word] It appeareth by verse 19. that this is a continuation of Gods answer to the question concerning the said Fasts; And it mainly contains a confutation by many comfortable Promises against all such discouragements as caused them to distrust the good successe of things.

V. 2. I was jealous for Zion] Chap. 1. 14. Some take this to be Gods zeal for Zion, his great and ardent height of love to her; and thence arising his great fury and wrath against her enemies; that he will be her defender, and avenger of them. Others rather understand it of his jealousie for her. Now Jealousie is a mixt passion in a husband, consisting as of a most tender love to his wife, and care of her, and his own honour, so of a most furious rage, and revenge, upon just, or evil suspition of false dealings, where this is suspected or known to be violated. And both these are comprised in this verse.

with great jealousie] I loved my city with a singular love, so that I could not abide that any should do her any injury. Or, as some apply it to the particular and present occasion, lest she should sin by keeping these fasts, in an evil manner.

And I was] Or, have been.

Jealous for her] Or, of her, or over her.

with great fury] Punishing her for her breach of faith, and playing the harlot, with rejection, and banishment out of her country. This seems best to sute with that which follows: though that also be a truth, of Gods fury against the enemies of his Church, whom he punisheth for the love he beareth to his Church.

V. 3. Thus, saith the Lord] This is repeated seven times in the nine first verses of this chapter; and seven times more in the rest of this chapter. And all this to strengthen their faith against distrust; because the things here promised and spoken are so strange and difficult, yea, seem to be impossible, incredible in their eyes, verse. 6. want of faith to Gods Word is a destructive sin, dishonourable to God, pernicious to man, 1 John 5.10. John 3.18.

I am returned unto Zion] Here the decree is put for the thing it self, or the beginning for the perfecting of it: before God was gone away from Zion, Ezek. 10 & 11 chap. he left it waste as a prophane place, there was no Temple, Altar, Sacrifice, Priest, People, Service, City there, God was absent; now he returns to Zion, to his Church and people there, returns in mercy, grace and favour, he is reconciled to them.

and will dwell, &c.] Not stay a-while, as Jer. 18. but abide still, reside and inhabit there, chap. 2.10. See Exod. 25.8. 1 King 6. 13. 2 Chr. 6.18. Psalm 68.16. and 132. 13, 14. so that he shall not need to fear the threats of their enemies, and scoffes at their weak beginnings, like those Nehem. 4.3. Gods presence shall be her sure help, Pl. 46.5. and he will make it the setled place of his glory and worship.

Shall be called a city of truth] She had been false and faithlesse, Isa. 1.21, Jer. 2.20,21. and therefore cast off: but now she should be called a City of truth, not only passively, because God should truly perform all his promises towards her, & verifie them in her; but also and rather actively, because of her verity & fidelity with men, and chiefly for her sincerity in Gods Worship, professing, preaching and maintaining it, Isa. 1. 26. A faithful City, observing faith and loyalty towards God, in cleaving constantly to his sincere Worship; whereas all other Cities in the world abroad were full of errours, superstitions, and abominable idolatries; see that Isa. 26.1. & 60.14, 18. Ezek. 48.35.

the holy mountain] They prophaned and polluted it before, Mal. 1.7,11,12. but now it should be called holy, because of the holy Temple thereon re-edified, and the holy Worship of God therein re-established; see Jer. 31.23. Isa. 4.3. Obad. 16.17. Joel 3.17. Dan. 9. 16, 20. Isa. 27.13. & 56.7. & 62.12. & 65.25 & 66. 20. Gods dwelling in the midst of his people, is to make them holy.

V. 4. There shall yet old men] I will bless the Inhabitants of Jerusalem with peace, and health, and long life: A figure of the spiritual blessings of the Church, as Isa. 65. 20, 22. though now they were few in number, and by reason of wars, and other troubles, not likely to live long, and to encrease to any great multitudes, or to live in peace; yet God promiseth they shall do both: the streets now desolate and un-frequented, should be re-peopled; they that were now young, should live till decrepit old age, they should die, not by strength of War, but by length of years, being kept safe under Gods protection, & blessed by his dwelling in the midst of them.

his staffe in his hand] A sign of a peaceable and prosperous estate, wherein men are not cut off untimely by wars, and such like calamities; see 1 Sam 2.31. Lam. 2.20,21. & 5.11,12,13,14.

for very age] Heb. for multitude of days. This was evidently seen in Zerubbabel, Joshua, Ezra, Nehemiah, & others, as some conceive.

V. 5. Full of boyes and girles] A sign of fruitfulnesse and encrease, as Exod. 1.7. Jer. 3.16. Esay 60.22. and 65.20,22.

playing] A figure of peace and security, after the fashion of children in Towns peaceably inhabited: In time of war and common calamity, it is otherwise.

V. 6. If it be marvellous] Or hard, difficult, incredible. This promise afore said seemed strange to the Jews, the present state of things being considered; God therefore by way of prevention, confirms his promise, by an argument from his power opposed to their incredulity; what is impossible with man, is possible with God: and he sheweth so, wherein our faith standeth, and whereupon we must fix it; not upon our sense or reason: the checks this conceit; is it meet to measure God by our selves? to include his power within the compasse of our brains? No, we must trust to his truth and power, who can and will perform that which he hath promised, though it seeme never so impossible to man, Gen. 18. 14. Luk. 1.37. and 18.27. Rom. 4.17,22.

of the remnant of this people] They seeing themselves so small a remnant, were discouraged, and grew distrustful hereupon: And yet this might have strengthened their faith, That seeing this small remnant had returned beyond all hope, by Gods power and pleasure, therefore this might serve to help their hope for the time to come.

in these dayes] The consideration of the present state of things at this time: God in their light, and darkned the eye of their faith: but they were to raise up themselves above that; true faith is the evidence of things not seen, Heb. 11.1.

V. 7. I will save my people] God fets forth his own power to help forward their faith: see Isa. 43.1,13,13. & 48.15. and 66.9. Exod. 6. verse 7.

from the East-country] Gods promise of re-collecting the dispersed Jewes, and restoring them to their own home: though they were never so much dispersed and scattered, yet that should not hinder the accomplishment of his promise.

and from the west-country] Heb. The Country of the going down of the Sun. They were most carried into Babylon, and those Eastern Countries; yet into other parts also: and by East and West here, are meant all quarters of the world: see ch. 2.6. Pl. 113.3. Mal. 1.11. Psal. 50.1. This may be applied mystically to the Church.

V. 8. And they shall dwell] The Jews with whom Zechariah had now to deal, mist-trusted all things; they feared they had returned to Jerusalem but too few, out of too much zeal, the present face of things promised so little good to come: But God by his Prophet tells them here, That they should see by the event, that things should fall out otherwise; The remnant of the dispersion should return, come to them, and dwell there, Chap. 2.4. That decree, Hos. 9.3. should now be reversed, Ezek. 36.10,11.28. and 37.25. Jer. 23.8. Isa. 44.26.

My people] Gods free and gracious Covenant, the fountain of all his favours, which seemed for their sins to be broke off for a time, and the memory of it buried; yet God would not forget, but renew and revive again; consisting in a mutual stipulation, for subjection in them, and protection in him. See Jer. 13.11. and 24.7. and 30. 22. and 31.33. and 32.37,38. besides many other places.

in truth, and in righteousnesse] Faithfully performing my promise which I have made to them in my Covenant; and enlarging my bounty towards them; which is often signified by the word righteousnesse. See Hos. 2.19. Or, in truth, on my side, Isa. 65.16. and in righteousnesse on theirs; Isa. 60.21. and 61.11. and 65.25. and 46.13.

V. 9. Let your hands be strong] Hag. 2. 4. Let neither respect of your private commodities, neither counsel of others, nor feare of enemies, discourage you in the going forward with the building of the Temple; but let both hearts and hands joyn in setting forwards all things belonging to the service of God, and good of the State. This exhortation he presseth with much variety, and force of argument, to the fifteenth verse. See Joh. 1. 6.7.9.18. and 23.6. Ezra 10.4. Isa. 35.3,4.

ye that hear in these dayes these words] There is a force in these demonstrative words to be observed: ye present, now living, in these hopefull days; and yet hear and have these gracious words of promises, to be strong in heart and hand.

by the mouth of the Prophets] Haggai, and Zechariah, who at this time prophecied to the Jewes, Ezra 5. 2.

which were in the day that the foundation] It was but about two years since they now had began to build, Ezra. 5.2. And yet in that short time, God often called upon them, & encouraged them by his Prophets; and therefore the more blame and shame for them if they did not go on in the building, being so daily stirred up to it. If we make the words of laying the foundation to relate to that, Ezra. 3. 8. Yet thence to this fourth year of Darius Hystaspis, are not many years, but about twelve. But they who understand this fourth year to be of Darius Notus, the seventh Persian Monarch after Cyrus, do finde the years intervening to be 108. And the cupon are much puzzled about the long age of Zerubbabel, Joshua, Ezra, and Nehemiah, Haggai, and Zechariah, who yet is called a young man, chap. 2. 4. all of them living then, and now; Ezra and Nehemiah, we are sure long after.

that the Temple might be built] This is the main thing urged by the Prophets, then, and now. And therefore they must strenuously and courageously go on with the work, and hold to it; notwithstanding all obstructions; and overcome all difficulties, and tentations to the contrary. Gods Word in the mouth of his Prophets is a sufficient ground, and warrant for them, so to do.

V. 10. For before these dayes] While the building was neglected, there was no hire] Or, the hire of man became nothing, &c. Mens, and beasts labour, was in vain, by reason of the curse which I laid upon your carelesnesse in reforing my service, Hag. 1. 6, 10. and 2.15,16,17. Mal. 3.10,11. He mindes them of this judgement of famine (as we have need to be often minded in the like case) That they should not dare to go on to provoke the Lord any further in so sinful doing.

any peace] At home, or abroad, in City, or countrey, but wars, and dangers from enemies round about them; who by incursions, and invasions, did vex, disquiet, prey, and spoil them; so that there was no safety for travellers in any body. A second judgement.

because of the affliction] Brought on them by the enemies: who wrought them much mischief. And these were their neighbours, the Samaritans, Ammonites, and other old enemies.

for I set all men] Seditions, and civil contentions, grudgings, partakings, factions, whereby they were im-bittered one against another; as Esay 9.20,21. A third judgement. And here is Gods hand in these punishments. See on Amos 4. 6. Here is more then a bare permission; and yet God holy therein, and free, making use of their rage, to execute his judgements, which they intended not. His hidden counsel, and purpose, his secret motion herein, appertain not to them, nor excuse: their sin.

V. 11. But now] Seeing you have cheerfully gone on to the re edifying of my Temple; though I am without shadow or change, Jam. 1.17. Yet my actions shall change their nature towards you.

I will not] Be angry, as formerly; nor punish you. When our sins cease, Gods anger ceaseth.

V. 12. For the seed shall be prosperous] Heb. of peace. I will set down the true occasions, and means, of a true and perfect peace, and will cause it to increase and multiply. See Psal. 72. 3. ye shall be free from enemies; all in peace. Or rather, Their seed shall prosper; They shall peaceably sow; & no floods, or storms, or any hurtful thing, shall annoy their fruits, and harvest. And this best agrees with that which followeth.

the vine] Joel 2.22. Hag. 2.19. Hos. 2.21,22. Husbandmen shal enjoy the benefit of Gods favour, and reap the fruit of their labors; abundance of encrease, a plentiful crop; through the kindly and seasonable showers that God will send: upon whose blessing in these things we must wholly depend, Mat. 6.11.

and I will cause the remnant] God himself will put them in possession; and though they were a poor remnant, yet they should enjoy it quietly in spight of all their enemies.

V. 13. As ye were a curse] A form of execration and cursing; As thus; God do to me, or thee, as he hath done to the Jews; Or, God make thee like a Jew; or the like. Making their calamity a pattern for any fearful imprecation. See Deut. 28.37. Jer. 24.9. & 29.18.22. and 42.18. Psal. 89.11. and 102.8. Thus it was with them, They were odious, and detestable to all. When they bewayed their impiety and ingratitude in not building the Temple; they were fearful examples of Gods horrible wrath.

O house of Judah, and house of Israel] Some make the latter only an explication of the former, as in Psal. 14.7. and 76.1. See Isa. 48. 1. & 46.13. But rather we may distinctly understand them of both kingdoms: for some of the ten Tribes also did return, Hos. 1.11. Jer. 3. 18. Ezek. 37. As a remnant did escape and return of them that fled into Egypt. Compare Jer. 42. 16,17. with Chap. 44. 28. Divers of the ten Tribes remained in the land after their general captivity. See 2 Chr. 30.5, 6.18.11. and chap. 34.33. And these being captived with them of Judah afterwards, might with them return. That general dispersion through 127 Provinces in the Persian Empire, Esth.1.1. with Chap.3.8. & Ch.8.v.9. argues a kind of union of Judah and Israel; which might produce a joynt return of some of both. See Jer.33.7.

shall be a blessing] A form to be used in blessing of others. As the like, Ruth 4.11,12. See Zeph.3.20.

fear not] Cast no doubt, mistrust not your own weaknesse, nor your enemies strength; but go on in the work, and be confident of Gods aid; and he by his power will overcome all impediments, and cleer all obstructions.

V.14. As I thought to punish you] This, and the next verse makes a cleerer explication of what was formerly said. And here is first Gods thought and purpose to punish their sins. Sin ever provokes God to wrath and punishment.

when your fathers] So that at that time when your fathers so sinned: not punishing the children for the fathers provocations.

and I repented not] I changed not my minde, because they changed not their manners; but this they got by their obstinacy in sin, that I became inflexible, incxorable, in rigour to punish them; when they made war against me, I armed my selfe for vengeance against them; I did as I fore-thought and fore-threatned, Psal.18.26. And the Jews had found by experience that thus far God was as good as his word.

V.15. So again have I thought] Here is Gods purpose to shew mercy unto them. He changeth not in himselfe; but in his actions towards the several conditions of the sons of men: and he changeth their hearts, when he will do well unto them.

fear ye not] That I will fail of my promise. I will surely bring to passe what I intended for your good. And therefore go on in your building, and expect that which yet appears not; even a full restitution, a plenary instauration.

V.16. These are the things] As God will be merciful, so they must be dutiful. Gods promises are conditional; and in his own, he mercifully works the condition it self. And he here tels them what the duties are. They must not onely build the Temple, and look to Gods ceremonious worship, and the observation of it; but they must chiefly look to Gods Moral Law, to perform the main duties of it; Matth.9.13.

Speak ye] He instanceth in some particulars: under them comprehending the rest.

Every man the truth] Ephef.4.15. Psal.5.2. Prov.12.19. See Isa. 59.14,15. Hos.4.1.

to his neighbour] Who he is, see Luke 10.36.

Execute the judgement of truth and peace] Heb. Judge truth, and the judgement of peace. Chap.7.9, 10. And herein deale candidly and sincerely: not fraudulently and deceitfully: as corrupt Judges will seek to put on fair glosses and pretences to cover, and colour, and cunningly to hide their false judgements: judge truly according to the rule of the Law, and according to true and right informations, in matters of Fact.

and peace] To compose the quarrels and differences between private men; and so preserve the publike peace. Whereas wrong judgements breed more quarrels, to the distuibance of peace.

in your gates] In the places of justice, which were in those times in the entrance of the gates of the citie, Amos 5.12.15. See Annot. on Amos 5.10. These places should be as sanctuaries of justice, and cities of refuge to the oppressed.

V.17. Imagine evil] The thoughts and heart are to be holy and charitable. They are the fountain: and God heeds most, and examines them. And his Law is spiritual, contrary to the corrupt glosses of the Pharisees, justly taxed by our Saviour, Matth.5. See Zech 7.10. If the Jews do add the moral duties to the building of the Temple, then God will be gracious and bountiful unto them.

and love no false oath] Chap.5.8. Psal. 15.4. and 24.4. Ezek. 17.verf.18,19. Jer.5.1. Joh.9.19.

things that I hate] And them that do them, Psal. 5.5. & 11.5. See Prov.6.16. Jer.12.8.

V.18. And the word] See on verf. 1.

V.19. The fast] After all those more material things formerly premised, he now comes to the final decision of the main question concerning the fasting proposed, chap.7.3. The answer now is soon made: If you would build my House, and not imagine evil, to oppresse one another; but execute mercy and truth; then I will perform my gracious promises made to you, and abundantly blesse you: And then this question shall not it selfe; your Fasts shall be turned into Feasts; such shall the change of your state and condition be.

of the fourth moneth] Appointed for a remembrance of the taking of Jerusalem by the Chaldeans, which was in this moneth, the ninth day, Jer.39.2. & 52.6,7. 2 King. 25.3. and the Fast of the fifth] For the burning of the Temple, the tenth day of that moneth, that is, three dayes after Nebuzaradan came into the citie, 2 King.25.8. Jer.52,12,13. See on Zech.12.5.

Fast of the seventh] For the death of Gedaliah, Jer. 41.1, &c. Zech.7.5.

Fast of the tenth] For the siege laid before Jerusalem, Jer.52.4. 2 King.25.1, in the tenth day. These fasts are not blamed here, as unwarrantably undertaken, joy and gladnesse] And therefore no more fit to be times of fasts, joy and sorrow, as light and darknesse, expel one another.

and cheerful Feasts] Heb. solemn or set-times of feasts. Your solemn feasts appointed by God in his law; and interrupted, and left off all the time of your captivity, shall now be revived, and celebrated by you, as ye began, Ezra 3.v.4.

therefore] An injunction, to be sure to observe that which God most required, and they most neglected; if they would hope and have those good things come to passe.

Love the truth] The substance of Religion; in obedience to God, and charity to our Neighbour; and heed not so much those outward ceremonies, and bodily exercises. And love is required to truth, Rom.12.9. Amos 5.15. Psal.119.20. 40.47.97.131.

and peace] Peaceable dealings; the judgement of peace, ver. 16. Not quarrelling for old customes. And this will bring you peace with God, and prosperity in the world. Look to these.

V.20. Thus saith the Lord of hosts] To bring credit and authority to the ensuing prophecie; The matter of it being so incredible to them, who for the present saw all things in so poor and despicable a condition, that they half repented that they were returned; as the Jewes in the wildernesse, after their coming out of Egypt; and thinking themselves deluded, were rather minded to return into Babylon again. Scarce possible was it for them in this case to believe these, and the like glorious promises, as Hag.2.9 This preface therefore was most necessary for them.

it shall yet come to passe] Yet hereafter, though there be so unlikely an appearance for the present, He amplifies the former joy, by adding Evangelical promises, concerning the spiritual Kingdom of Christ; and the great and eager confluence and accesse of the Gentiles to it, and the glory of the Jewes by it.

Come people] See on Mic.4.1,2. come and be converted; and joyn themselves to the Church.

many cities] Many, and great cities of the Gentiles for all their greatnesse, yet shall they submit and subject themselves.

V.21. Let us go] In going let us go. See on Esay 2. verf. 3. and on Mic.4 2. The zeal of converts to convert others. See Psal.122.1. and 95.1,2. Jer.3.1,6.

speedily] Or, continually: Heb. going.

to pray] Heb. To entreat the face of the Lord. See on Chap.7.2. and on Zeph.2.verf.3. Amos 5.v.4,6. Hos.5.15. Prayer is the chief part, and duty of Gods worship; taken for the whole. And they seek him, as most desirous to finde him and his favour; to know him and his will; that they may obey him and it, as their onely guide and aim, Psal.119.105.

I will go also] Every one was as forward to serve God himself, as he was desirous for another to do it. That is true zealous charity which never leaveth others behinde, nor thrusteth others before it. Not like that of the Pharisees, Matth.23.4.

V.22. Yea, many people, and strong nations] Not a few poor ones; but many and mighty, potent and populous. Esay 66.8.12. 20.23. & 49.19,20,21,22. & 54.1,2,3. & 60.3,4,5,11,12.

in Jerusalem] Typically; because at this time Gods Worship being onely there, all converts were to resort thither. So that this Temple now in building, should become in a kinde common to the Gentiles; a Temple also for them and their use. Not yet that they should keep and observe the Levitical sacrifices and services there; But because the word of the Lord should go forth from Jerusalem, which being now the onely Church of God; and therefore so often taken for a type of Christs Church under the Gospel, should be the mother Church, whence the Gospel should proceed, Isa.2.v.3 Psal. 110.2. See the like, Esay 66.23. & Zech.14.16.

V.23. Ten men shall take hold] Ten men taken for many; as Gen. 31.41. Lev.26.26. Job 19.3. In the dayes of publication of the Gospel, they who are now so averse, fuch enemies, shall become thus eager and earnest, to embrace the Gospel. There shall be no need of arms, and co-action to enforce them; they shall be such a willing people, Pf 110.3. They shall come on thus, and come in with this unity, unanimity, consent, humility, and fervency.

out of all languages of the nations] We see no language or nation excepted. So largely shall the kingdome of Christ, and the Gospel spread. See Ch.2.11. Esay 66.18. Dan.7.14. Apoc.5.9. & 7.2. Psal.9.8. Acts 10.35. Though they shall not understand one anothers language, yet they shall agree in this one understanding, by Gods sacred and secret instinct and motion of his Spirit, and shall speak this language of Canaan, Isa.19.18.

of the skirt of him that is a Jew] Ten men, of one Jew; whom they so hated and scorned before; yet now they should take no scorn to cleave unto them, to humble & submit unto them, to learn of them, and become their disciples, hang upon them, and run after them, as little children do when they catch hold on their mothers garments, Esay 55.5. Thus they flocked to Paul, and the other Apostles, Gal.4.15. And indeed to the Jews was the Gospel first preached; and the next by the Jewes to the Gentiles, Acts 13 46. And the believing Jewes thought not now themselves disparaged, nor their glory eclipsed by the accesse of the Gentiles; but rather gloried in it, as justly they might. And thus was the old prophecie fulfilled, Gen. 9. 27.

we will goe with you] In the worship and service of the true God. And the reason follows.

for we have heard] By your preaching, Rom. 10. 17.

that God is with you] Rightly known and worshipped, onely among you Jews, or in the Church; but not among us, who are ignorant idolatrous Gentiles. Therefore they thus catch hold of them, use the help and ministery of men, to seek and finde God among them, verf. 22. See 1 Cor. 14. 25. Great and glorious was this prerogative of the Jews, which afterwards they lost by their infidelity.

CHAP. IX.

Verse 1. THe burden*] Here begins the third main Sermon of Zechariah; & continues to the end of the eleventh Chapter. And contains a prophecie, 1 against the enemies of the Jews to the 9 verse. Secondly, of the coming of Christ, and of his kingdome, and the blessings of it; to the 12 Chap. And thirdly of the destruction of Jerusalem, and the rejection of the Jews for their rejecting of Christ. Chap. 11.

The burden of the word of the Lord] His burdensome word. A prophecie of heavy and sad, great and grievous threatnings and curses: A prophecie of threatnings and curses against the bordering enemies of Gods people. See Esay 13. 1. Jer.23. 33. which burden they should not be able to shake off from their shoulders.

in the land] Or, upon, against the land.

of Hadrach] Not elsewhere in Scripture mentioned. Some say without any proof, that it was an idol of the Syrians, which repiesented the Sun. And that the Prophet calleth that countrey or some part of it by the name of the idol: as Esay 8.8. is Immanuels land, and the like Jer. 48 46. and Hos.10.5. Others understand onely by this, the countreyes bordering round about Judea; taking the word to be a Syriack word of that signification: which language was in use with the nations here threatned. The like, they say, is Isa. 14. 1. Jer. 25.36, &c 51 41. But rather it seems to be the name, not of a man, but of some city, neer to Damascus and Hamath; or of some particular region in Syria.

and Damascus] See on Amos 1.3. See Esay 8.4. and 17. 1. Jer. 4. 23.

shall be the rest thereof] These threatnings shall fall, and be executed upon Damascus; this burden shall fit and rest there, as in its place of residence; settle there till it consumes them. It shall not be like a sudden storm, soon gone; but as in Esay 9.8. and Psal. 125. 3. it shall fix and maintain its station in that royal city of the Syrians; they shall not be able to shake the burden of it from off their shoulders, or any way to escape it.

when the eyes of man] Heb. for the Lords eye is upon man, as on all the Tribes of Israel. He giveth a reason why the burden and words of the Prophet were directed to the Heathen nations: namely, because God's providence doth not govern his people alone, but the whole worlds; for God had an eye upon all men. See Ch. 3. 9. & 4. 10. & 5. 6. Gen. 18. 25. But with lesse straining we may understand it of the eyes of man, and that not of all mankind, or the Gentiles: but of the Jews, of all the tribes of Israel; when the eyes of that people, as of one man shall unanimously look up towards the Lord, for aid & help against their enemies; & they convert, as their eyes, so their heart to him by true repentance, Then shall the burden of some word of the Lord light and lie upon their enemies.

all the tribes of Israel] An explication of the last word afore-going.

toward the Lord] And not toward idols, or images.

V.2. And Hamath] See on Amos 6.2,3 Some take this to be Antiochia.

shall border thereby] Heb. And he also shall border Hamath thereby. Meaning, that eye of Providence shall limit, that is, shall stay the course of the power, conquests, and enterprises of Hamath, chief city of Syria. See Esay 7. 8,9. Jer. 49.23. Or rather thus: Hamath shall share in the burden, bear a part in the punishment. As Ribla in Hamath, much cruelty had been exercised upon the Jews; and the Syrians generally had been their cruel enemies, God now will be the avenger of his people against them. To interpret this of the Hamathites conversion, is far from the Prophets meaning, and tenour of the context.

Tyrus] See on Amos 91. 10.

and Zidon] Called great Sidon or Zidon, Josh. 11. 8. An ancient and famous City, named likely of Sidon the eldest Son of Canaan, Gen. 10. 15. Of great Trasfick and Merchandize, lying on the Western Ocean, North North-East from Tyre nigh to Zebulon Gen. 49. 13. allotted to Asher, but they got not the possession of it, Judg. 1. 31, & 3 3. But the Sidonians oppressed the Israelites, Judg. 10. 12. And had been lately a pricking briar to the house of Israel; Ezech. 28 24. were cad of kings of Zidon, Jer. 25. 22. & 47. 3. subdued by Nebuchadnezzar. Ahab married Jezebel the daughter of Ethbaal, King of the Zidonians; 1 King. 16. 31. Astoreth, or Astaroth was their Goddesse, 1 King. 11. 5. Sarepta was neer it, Luke 4. 26. Our Saviour went aside into those parts; Matt. 15. 21. And from those parts they came to our Saviour, Mat. 3. 8. Luke 6. 17. Paul in his voyage to Rome touched there, Act 27 3. And they make peace with Herod, Acts 2. 20.

though it be very wise] In worldly wisdom, which is attributed to the Tyrians, Ezek. 28. 3, 4, 5, 12, 17. The singular number here may be distributively applyed to each of them, Merchants are wise, and cunning: upon which those Cities founded their greatnesse. They were enemies to the Jews, proud, insolent and cruel to them, in the time of the desolation of their state. And therefore God here threatens revenge, which they should not escape for all their wisdom. Job 5. 13, 13. These words have the touch of an Ironical mock, as that Ezek. 28, 3, V.3. And Tyrus did build her self] Made warlike fortifications, It was called the strong City Tyre, Josh. 19.29. The strong hold of Tyre. 2 Sam. 24.7.

and heaped up silver] Money, the other sinew of war, and this heaped up in all abundance. See 1 Kin.10.27. Which abundance of treasure it was not hard for the Tyrians to gather together; considering the long, and great trade, which all nations of the world used there; as is largely described, Ezek. 27. So that Tyre thought her selfe impregnable.

V.4. Behold, the Lord] Neither her wit, wealth, or strength should avail her against the Lord; or save her from ruin. The Lord will scatter her wealth, and impoverish her. And though she be seated in an Island in the sea, and be never so powerfull by sea, and shippings; yet the Lord will smite her power in the sea, Prov. 21. 30. Esay 29. 16.

devoured with fire] That is consumed, a Metaphor from ravenous beasts. Though Tyrus was seated in the midst of the waters, yet shall she be devoured with fire: it God kindle the flame, nothing shall quench it.

V.5. Ashkelon] See on Zeph. 2. 4.

shall see it, and fear] This, and the following Cities of the Philistines, who dwelt along the Sea-coast, south-ward of Tyre and Sidon: from whence this storm was next to come upon them; who also evermore had been the Jews bitter enemies, and still were after their return from Babylon, they shall see the destruction of Hadrach, Damascus, Hamath, Tyre, and Zidon, and fear the like to fall upon them. As it did most of all by Alexander the Great.

Gaza] See on Zeph. 2. 4.

Ekron] See on Zeph. 2. 4.

for her expectation shall be ashamed] She ashamed of it; being deceived and destitute of such succour and help as she looked for, from her potent, but then impoverished friends, which could not save themselves, much lesse others. Specially they were astonished when they saw Tyre fall.

and the king shall perish from Gaza] The Governours, and Government, the state, and liberty of their Common-wealth, shall be over-thrown.

and Ashkelon shall not be inhabited] The inhabitants being wasted by war, or carried captive, it shall be dis-peopled and desolate.

V. 6. And a Bastard] Not their legitimate King or Governour. But a mingled multitude of strange nations gathered together, as bastards in a family; which intrude upon others rights, or if any of Ashdod remain, they shall be but as strangers there without a certaine seat of abode; as pilgrims are in a forraign soil.

Ashdod] See on Zeph. 2. 4.

and I will cut off the pride of the Philistines] Their wealth, strength, and all other things that made them swell with pride and insolence against their poor neighbours the Jews. In the time between the Jews return out of the Babylonian captivity, and the coming of our Saviour, the Philistines were throughly plagued; partly by Alexander the Great and his successors, the Seleucidæ and Lagidæ, and partly by the Jews in the times of the Maccabees, and before, as histories doe record, see ch. 2. 9. Obad. 20. Zeph. 2. 4. For further knowledge of the Philistines, so much mentioned in Scripture, we finde this: that they came of Cham. Gen. 10. 6, 13, 14. They inhabited the west border of Canaan, adjoyning to the Mediterranean sea, and maintained still their possessions there, though it were given moft to the tribe of Judah, Josh. 15. In Abrahams, and Isaacs time, Abimelech was king of Gerar, one of their Cities. In the times of the Judges, they were divided into five Lordships, Judg. 3. 3 And so in the beginning of Samuels time, 1 Sam. 6. 16, 17. They took the ark of God in battell, and Jonathan. They were of Dagon their Idol. They slew Saul, and Jonathan. They were slain in great numbers by Sampson. Samuel overcomes them; once chased by Jonathan, 1 Sam. 13, 14. chapters, another by Davids ocasioned by Jonathan, 1 Sam. 27. After Sauls death; though David had slaying of Goliath, 1 Sam. 17. After Sauls death; though David had formerly fled to Achish, King of Gath, for shelter against Saul, first in danger there, 1 Sam. 21. And a second time, upon better security, 1 Sam. 27. Yet being now king, he overcomes them in four battels, wherein four Giants the brethren of Goliath of Gath were slain, 2 Sam. 21. 15–22. Afterwards Uzziah, and Hezekiah prevail over them. And after, they were overcome by the Egyptians; and by the Babylonians.

V.7. His blood out of his mouth] Heb. Bloods. I will make that they shall no more devour my people like beasts, wolves, lyons.

his abominations] That is, abominable, spoiles, murders; cruelties, rapines, these their fin-eate like meat and drink to sinners, they hold them fast, and are as unwilling to part with them, as to have meat pulled out of their mouthes.

from between his teeth] Yet God will give his people deliverance from their bloody enemies, and rescue them from being a bloody prey unto them, when in their imagination they had swallowed them up.

but he that remaineth] That little remainder of my people which escaped from the enemies violence.

even he shall be for our God] Even that poor, ignoble, and contemptible remnant of the Jewes, shall be for our God, shall be in his care, protection, favour, and in his account.

and he shall be as a Governour in Judah] Not onely of highest rank, and chiefest esteem with God, as Governours are in a Common-wealth; but also he shall be free, and have command and rule over others, albeit he had been now a long time a servant himself. Others thus, Though not suitable to the words and context, I will take away, and pardon his sins: And the remainder of them, according to the election of grace, shall be, as it were, en-denizoned among my people, and shall be honourable among them. So making this to be an Evangelical Promise of the Calling of the Gentiles: as many such like there are. And these also understand the Ekronites here to be promised to become as the Jebusite Araunah, 2 Sam. 24.16. Who was of honourable account among the people of God.

and Ekron as a Jebusite] A slave, and tributary, and one appointed to destruction: as the Jebusites, 2 Sam. 5.v.6. And the rest of the Canaanites were.

V. 8. And I will encamp] Gods protection of his people, Ch. 2. 5. They are unable for their own defence: Gods power is all-sufficient for them; He will encamp round about them. Not as Esay 29. 3. But as those, Gen. 32.1,2. 2 Kin. 6.17. Psal. 34.7.

about my house] The Temple, and Church; for the sake whereof the state is preserved. It is usually called Gods House, and the House of the Lord; the holy and beautiful house, Esay 64.11. The House of his glory, Esay 60.7.

because of the army] Of the enemy, to oppose it; and shield his Church. Psal 3.1,3,6 & 27.1,2,3.

because of him that passeth by] The enemy ranging up and down, passing to and fro, with his armies. This may have reference to the invasions and incursions of the Seleucidæ, and Lagidæ, among others.

because of him that returneth] Again, and again, with fresh onsets, against my House and people. Though the enemies be numerous in armies, obstinate in malicious cruelties, and often recruit their forces, yet God will be a sure shield, and safe-guard unto them, Psal. 17.9, 11, 12, 13, & 18. 1,2.

and no oppressour] They shall no more be tyrannized over, nor exacted upon; as they have been heretofore. Formerly even children had been their oppressions, Esay 3. 12. And their enemies had been as Pharaohs task-masters over them, Esay 64. 10, 11, 12. But hereafter it should be far otherwise, Esay 54. 14. and 49. 26. and 60. 17, 18. This hath its full verification in the spiritual state of the Church under the Gospel.

for now have I seen with mine eyes] God seeth all from all eternity. But in Scripture phrase, when he doth not shew forth that he taketh such notice of things as we apprehend, he is said, not to see, to shut his eyes, to sleep, to forget. And so on the contrary. Here he saith, he hath taken good notice how unworthily, and vilely, and intolerably his Church hath been dealt with all by her enemies, as Exod. 2. 25. But now I have seen, and will avenge her; I have turned my favourable counte nance toward her, and have taken her into my protection, and this out of my good pleasure, because it seemed good so in mine eyes, I will reveal my power to do her good.

V. 9. Rejoyce] A Prophecie of Christs coming, of his Kingdome, and of the benefits of it. And thus the Prophet shews by what means, and from whom, all comfort, and the full accomplishment of the former glorious promises was to be expected. This prophecie hath in it much difficulty.

greatly] And again, shout for joy. And that even in the midst of all your present discouragements, and miseries. Here is matter enough of all joy, Christ is the Churches joy solely and wholly, Esay 45. 25. John 12. 15, it is there, fear not; not any thing whatsoever, Psal. 27.1.3. See Joh. 11. v. 13.

O daughter of Zion] And again, of Jerusalem: meaning the true and universal Church of Christ, and all the children of God.

behold] As ever and anon in Scripture, chiefly now, in this chiefest cause, Mat. 13. 16, 17. Luk. 2.30. Joh. 8 56.

thy king] Thy promised, expected king, Psal 2.6. Esay 32. 1. Jer. 23.5. and 30. 9. Ezech. 37. 22, 24. Hos. 3.5, Matth. 2. 2. Luke 23.2. Joh. 12.13. and 18.37. and 19.19. A king of the family of David, that shall raise up all, make good all. Neither could they expect the promised blessings otherwise, but according to the tenor of them, in and by the person of the Messias. And this should animate them to constancy, and hope, in the midst of their miseries.

cometh] In the flesh. He tells this, not as a matter of news unto them, he was so often promised, unlesse it be in the speed, and manner of his coming. He is now upon the way. Esay 62. 11.

unto thee] He and his coming, is wholly for thee; for thy good, not for his own sake, his own glory, as is the coming of earthly Kings.

he is just and having salvation] Or, saving him self, Esay 11.2,3, 4,5. and 9.6,7. Exod. 23. 21. having justice, and salvation for his Church, and bringing justification and salvation to his Church. Matth. 1.21. Joh. 17.19. Indeed he saved himselfe from death by his own power, Acts 2.24. Rom. 1,4. but this was for the use of his Church.

lowly] in outward estate poor, mean, afflicted Esay 52.14. in minde and heart, meek, humble. Matt. 12. 19, 20. A King quite of another condition then the magnificent and proud Monarchs of the world are. Joh. 18. 36. And who shall save his Church and children, not by arms and warlike force, but by spiritual and divine power.

and riding upon an asse] Not carried in a triumphant chariot, or on some stately courser, or on a mule; as the fashion was of Kings before, and then, 1 King. 1.33. specially in greater solemnities, entring into their royal cities: But on an asse, a poor, and filly beast. It is true, Princes and great men did ride on asses. Judg 5.10. and 10. 4. and 12.14. 2 Sam. 17.23. and 19.26. But these no doubt were bred up and fitted for the saddle, and set out with stately furniture. This was altogether otherwise, used to toyl and drudgery. Matth. 21.5. ὑποζύγιον.

and upon a colt] This expounds the former words, that Christ rode upon the colt; a young wild colt, whereon never man sate. Thus Mark 11.2,4,5,7. Luk. 19. 30, 33, 35. John 12. 14,15. And herein, as there was a neglect of all curiosity, and ornament, so was there some demonstration also of Christs power over the untamed creature: that our Saviour did ride, first on the Dam, and after on the colt; having a reference to Jew, and Gentile; is but a needlesse conjecture. Indeed the sense here in the Prophet may be, or seem to be metaphorical and figurative; yet it hinders not but Christ might exhibit this visible signe, and simplar, of the Prophets meaning in this place. A like may that be. Psal. 22.18. The sum is, a Prophecie of Christs coming in the flesh, who is the everlasting king of his Church, from whom all former benefits proceeded, and were spiritually in him fully heaped up, and from him heaped upon his Church; and all not by worldly strength and power; but by vertue of his everlasting righteousnesse: by which he hath acquired salvation to his Church; whereof his royal, and withal most humble entrance into Jerusalem was figure.

V. 10. And I will cut off the chariot] He declares more plainly, what he had shadowed out before in Christs person, touching the nature of his kingdome: that it should not be managed by earthly means, and human helps, but by spiritual. The Messiah shall bring to the Church a true and eternal spiritual peace: whence there shall not be any more preparing for war, Psal. 46. 10. Esay 2.4. Hos. 2.18. Or, by his onely power, without any humane means, he shall save, and defend his people, Hos. 1.7. Micah. 5.10. 2 Cor. 10.4,5,6. The Jews then were not to think as vainly they did that the Messias should be a worldly Emperour, and that all nations should become subjects to the Jewish Crown. Earthly warlike weapons should be of no force, or use, to erect and enlarge Christs Kingdome; Being indeed a Spiritual Empire over mens hearts and consciences.

peace unto the heathen] To the Gentiles he shall speak peaceably, as Psal. 85.8. & 28. 3. By publishing the Gospel of reconciliation. See Act. 10.34,35. Ephes. 2. 17. And peaceably he shall be heard, and obeyed: His word and Gospel of peace shall suffice and avail: no force shall be needfull to be used to erect, and enlarge his dominion.

and his dominion shall be] Under the figure of the country of Israel, confined by these ancient bounds, he noteth the large extent of the universal Church.

from sea to sea] Psal. 72. 8. From the red or Arabian sea, to the Syrian North sea; from South to North.

from the river to, &c.] From Euphrates, to the utmost bounds of Judea the mid-land sea, from East to West. See Deut. 1.7. Josh. 1.4. Psal. 2.8. Exod. 23.31. Deut. 11.24. The utmost borders of the holy land are sometimes put for the utmost quarters of the world, as Psal. 89.12. and 107.3.

V. 11. As] The benefits which the Jewes had, and should have, by the Messias. The same Messiah, by vertue of the same blood, wherewith he hath reconciled man-kind to God, and obtained everlasting salvation for them, hath also been the author of thy deliverance from Babylon, and of all other ensuing benefits. And thus he confirms, and amplifies, that Spiritual deliverance, which was to come by the Gospel of Christ, by that recent and late deliverance which he vouchsafed his people out of Babylon.

for thee also] Thee Zion, and Jerusalem; in the feminine gender. Christ here speaks to her, not the Prophet to Christ, as Papists would tear the text, and foist in other words besides, to fetch in, and frame hence their Limbus Patrum: choosing to mangle the text to their minde, and to cry out upon it, as many wayes corrupt, rather then then their fancied Limbus should not finde some favour and footing here.

by the blood] Or, whose covenant is by blood. Namely, the blood of Christ, figured by the blood which was sprinkled upon the people, Exod. 24.8. Psal. 74.20. Heb. 9.19.& 13.20. shadowed out in the blood of the sacrifices.

of thy Covenant] Gods Covenant, flowing freely from him, the author of it, and the Churches Covenant, as made for her, on her behalf, to her behoof.

I have sent forth] Though the Jews had often broken this Covenant on their part, and had been sorely punished for it, yet God for his part was always mindful of it, and by vertue of this Covenant, delivered them in their distresses, that he might perform to them the promise of the Messias, upon whom this Covenant was founded. See Levit. 26.42,43,44,45. By vertue of it he vouchsafed to them that present manumission out of Babylon.

thy prisoners] Thy captives held in bondage and thraldome, as men in prison. See Esay 61.1.

out of the pit wherein is no water] Here is Limbus Patrum, say the Papists. But then surely their Limbus is not Abrahams bosom, which is a place of comfort, Luk. 17.25. Their's a place of horrour. Here plainly is meant the pit and prison of Babylon, the dissonsolate and hard estate of the Jewes there, like to Jeremies in the dungeon, Jer. 38.6. Out of which for his Covenant sake he gave them a manumission.

V. 12. Turn ye] Ye distressed Jewes, that are prisoners in Babylon; or, ye that are already returned; or rather both. God speaks to the whole state of the Jewes: And not the Prophet to the Patriarchs, sticking fast in mire of Limbo, as Papists would fain have it.

to the strong hold] To Jerusalem, say some; though yet weak, both City, and Temple; yet a strong hold, under the strong protection of God Almighty. O ye distressed Jewes in Babylon, return speedily to the strong hold of Jerusalem, the place of your habitation, secure under my safe-guard and protection, see Dan. 11. 31, 38. Others rather refer it to the Messias himself, and the turnings of their hearts and hopes to him. Indeed all other strong holds without him, shall be like fig-trees, with the first ripe figs that fall into the mouth of the eater, Nah. 3.12. and as Lam. 2.2,5. But he is the strength of our salvation, our strong Tower, 2 Sam. 22. 2. Sam. 22.2,3. Luke 1. 69. Esay 26.1.

Ye prisoners of hope] Expecting further freedome from such afflictions and dangers as encompasse you round about, under the strictnesse and burden whereof ye sigh, waiting for the redemption promised by the Messias, Luke 2.25,38. Mar. 15 43. Others had cast off all hope, and were clean fallen away from God, and his Religion. Here again the Papists would fain be at the Patriarchs in Limbo.

even to day] When your state seemeth miserable, and deplorable. Some refer it to that day, verse 9.

do I declare] Make an open promise to you, and feare not so to do, though now there be small appearance of it, but time shall try it, and your experience finde the truth of it.

that I will render double unto thee] Far greater felicity then the evils which thou hast suffered, or the goods which thou hast lost, Isa. 61.7. defence against the enemy, and such singular favours moreover as should be double to all that ever their fore-fathers enjoyed in their most happy estate. See that, Hag. 2.9. And therefore they should take courage, and go on in building, and expect still with joyful hope, notwithstanding the present sad face of all things.

V. 13. when I have bent Judah for me] Here the Lord begins to declare, when, and how, he will render double felicity, two for one, unto her, when I have used Judah as my bow, and bent, and drawn it to my self, as a weapon of war for me; so that God shall be the Agent and Author; Judah but the instrument, in his hand. As in an other case God used the Assyrian, Esay 10.5,15. The Jewes were a people odious in the world, and weak in themselves; yet God would thus make use of them for victories and revenge over his, and their enemies: Their power was from heaven; They had no cause to boast of their own prowesse and puissance. The Bow was an instrument much used in war. See verse 10. Gen. 48.22. Josh. 24.12. 2 Sam. 22.35. 1 Kings 22.34. 2 Kings 6.22. and 9.24. Psal. 44.6, and 46.9. Esay 41.2. Jer. 49,35. Ezek. 39.3. Hosea 1.5,7. 2 Chron. 17.17. Neh. 4.13.

filled the bow with Ephraim] Psal. 78.9. Ephraim here may be taken for the ten Tribes, because in all likelihood many of them returned with the two. Or, for the same with Judah, by an elegancy of variety, as ver. 10. and in many other places; and so are no more but the Sons of Zion. These here are likened to the arrowes, see 1 Chron. 10.3, and 11.1. 2 Chron. 26.15. Psal. 127.4. Esay 5. 28. 1 Sam. 3.1,3. The meaning is, the armes and armies of the Jewes, should be Gods powerful instruments for destruction of the enemies.

and raised up thy sons O Zion] Awakened and put courage into the Jewes, to provide and stand for their defence, and the over-throw of their enemies. Here is an Emphatical Apostrophe to both Nations, shewing sovereign rule and power over both.

against thy sons O Greece] Of the Græcians we read, that they came of Javan the son of Japhet, Gen. 10. 2. Of Javan some derive the word Ionia signifying Greece. But clear it is in Scripture, that by Javan Greece is signified. They bought the Jewes slaves from them of Tyre and Sidon, Joel 3.6. And they used much merchandize with Tyre, as appears, Ezech. 27.13,19. Xerxes carried out a huge army against them, but returned with his greater shame, Dan. 11.2. Here God will raise up the Jewes against them, against the two Kingdomes of the Seleucidæ, and Lagidæ which were possessed by great Alexanders Successors, who were Græcians. And herein no doubt a great eye is had to the Maccabees, and their Heroick acts in their time, as appears in the History of the Maccabees, and in Josephus. Of Greece, and Græcians in the New Testament we read, Act. 2.10. and 9.29. and 11.20. and 18.4. Rom. 1.14,16. and 10. 12. 1 Cor. 1.22. Gal. 3.28.

as the sword] As a sharp sword in a strong mans hand, in a Giants hand, that can use it to purpose.

V. 14. And the Lord] Here the point of Gods power and proceeding of his warlike acting in his instruments, the Sons of Zion, against the enemies, is more clearly prosecuted.

shall be seen over them] Gods powerful protection of his people shall be apparent, like as when he shewed himself over the Israelites in the cloud, Exod. 14.19,24. Others apply it to Gods powerful over-throw of the enemies of the Church; The Lord shall beyond the course and compasse of ordinary meanes, so marvellously assist his people by his power, that the over-throw of the enemies shall plainly appear to be his work, and the victory to be ascribed to him only. And see this in the History of the Maccabees: And this may have a spiritual relation to Christs spiritual Kingdome, to the defence of his own, and over-throw of his enemies therein.

and his arrow shall go forth as the lightening] 2 Sam. 22.15. Psal. 18.14. Luke 17.24. Psal. 97.4. Nahum 2.4. Swiftly, suddenly, and irresistibly. See also Jer. 50.14.

and the Lord God shall blow the trumpet] God himself shall be the Captain, and his thunder shall be as the sound of a trumpet to gather his forces together, and give a dreadful alarm to the enemies, See Jer. 10.13. 1 Thes. 4.16. Judg. 7.20.

and shall go] With his people against his enemies, as their General, and in the fore-front of the battels.

with whirl-winds of the South] This may not unfitly be interpreted of those tempests, wherewith God over-threw the Egyptians at the red sea, South-wards of Judea: which how dreadful they were, not onely in thunderings, lightenings, and horrible rain, but also in outragious windes. See Psal. 77. 16, 17, 18. Exod. 15. 10. And this being joyned to the sound of the trumpet, it may seem to allude to those wonderous and terrible signes shewed on Mount Sinai, south likewise of Judea, and by like to that place, Hab. 3.3. Teman and Paran being neer Mount Sinai. Whirl-windes hurry and scatter here and there with irresistible violence. And such furious violence God would use against the enemies. This seems to relate to Gods Judgments upon the Greeks, Gog and Magog, and the Israelites victories over them. Read Ezek. Ch. 38. and 39. 2 Mac. 2.21,22. and 5. 2,3. and 10.28,29,30. and 11.8,10. which shew that God did manifest his powerful presence to these distressed in very extraordinary manner.

V. 15. The Lord of Hosts shall defend them] The deliverance of his people, and their victories over their enemies, figuratively set forth before, are here more plainly expressed. And God shall fight for, and defend, and protect his people, the sons of Zion, ver. 13. as ch. 12.8. 2 Kings. 19.34. Psal. 17. 8. Esay 31. 5. Read great Alexanders submission when he saw Jaddua the H.P. in his attire.

and they shall devoure] Their enemies, slay, and destroy them; eating, as it were, their flesh, and drinking their blood, not as Cannibals, but as the next words expresse. Others thus; They shall eat, that is, quietly enjoy a peaceable and joyful possession, and use of their own wealth, & the enemies spoil, after their victories obtained.

and subdue with sling-stones] Or subdue the stones of the sling; subdue their enemies, and their regiments, and armies of Slingers, with force of Artillery, and weapons of war: A sling was a weapon then much used in wars: see Judges 20.16. 1 Sam. 17. 40, 49, 50. 1 Chron. 12 2. 2 Chron. 26.14. Job 41.28.

and they shall drink, and make a noyse, as through wine] Hereby is described the Jewes freenesse and courage in setting upon their enemies; see Psal. 78.65. Or, their joyful acclamations and festivities for the over-throw of their enemies, that they shall make a noise of gladnesse and praise therefore, as men use to do that are filled with wine, which maketh them merry and frolike: see Psal. 69.12. Esay 5.12. and 24.9. And herein is a plentiful use of the blessings of God allowed, but no invitation to excesse, Deut. 12.18.

and they shall be filled like bowls] Or, Shall fill both the bowls, &c. Fill both the bowls and basins, and the hornes of the Altar with the blood of the Sacrifices of Peace and Thanksgiving, which they shall offer to God in great abundance for their victories obtained, and benefits received: see Chap. 14.20. 1 King. 7.50. 2 Chron. 4.11. and see Exod. 27.2. and 29.12. Levit. 4. 30. and 7. 14. Some understand this of their being so filled with the blood of their enemies, as formerly expounded.

and as the corners of the Altar] Whereon the hornes of the brazen Altar of Burnt-Offerings stood, which were all be-sprinkled with with the blood of the Sacrifices, Leviticus 1. 5, 11. and 3. 8.

V. 16. And the Lord, &c.] As ver. 15. Out of his singular love, and tend. regard towards them, with special reference to the Covenant which God entered into with the Jewes, in regard whereof God promiseth that they, as his peculiar people, shall be in his protection and chiefest care.

as the flock] Sheep whereof he will be the Shepherd, and save them, as a shepherd saves and defends his sheep, with all his might. See Am 3. 12. John 10. verse 11. The rest of the world are but as herds of goats, or worse, as ravening wolves preying upon the Jewes.

of his people] Intimating his elect remnant, Psal 77. 20.

for they shall be as the stones of a crown] Not as sling-stones, ver. 15. but as of a Regal Diadem, which is be-set with stones of great price. The Jewes should be as dear to God, as such a Crown is to a King. See Esay 62. 3. Prov. 9. 9. and 12. 4. Exod. 10. 6. Or as the stones of the Ephod, Exod. 28. 9. Or, as stones erected for Trophies, by reason of their great victories obtained over their enemies, as monuments thereof.

lifted up as an ensign] As a beacon, Jer. 6. 1. Or, as a Trophee or sign, and monument of victory, and as a standard of praise. See Esay 11. verse 12.

upon his land] See Deut. 11. verse 12.

V. 17. For how great is his goodnesse] A pathetical exclamation, wherein to the Prophet breaks, admiring the singular goodnesse of God towards his Church. The meaning is, the grace and the glory of God shall marvellously shew it self in the salvation of his, Ps. 84. 12. and 31. 19.

his beauty] In himself, and in his dealings towards his people. See Cant. 1. 16. and 5. 10. &c. Psalm 110. 3.

corn shall make, &c.] As God will preserve them, so he will provide for them, and supply them with abundant maintenance: They had been pinched with famine, Lam. 2. 20, 21. and since their return, Chap. 8. 10, 12. Hag. 1. 6, 9, 10, 11. and 2. 17. now God will afford such plentiful provision, as should make them who fainted before through scarcity and want, to be full of life, cheerfulnesse and mirth, and fill them with joy and thanksgiving; the blessings of God corporal and spiritual shall make his people fruitful, eloquent in praise, as Isa. 57. 19. see Chap. 8. 11, 12. Hag. 2. 19.

the young men cheerful] Or, grow, or, speak, Psal. 104. 15.

and new wine the maids] Such plenty, as not only to suffice the old, that most need it; but also the younger sort, for their further pleasure.

CHAP. X.

Verse 1. Ask ye of the Lord] Notwithstanding the last words of promise for plenty, yet they for the present were pinched with scarcity, and so in a sort thought themselves deluded with the promise: The Prophet closely tells them that the fault is theirs; the blessing is ready prepared, but they keep it back by their infidelity; let them truly in prayer ask it of God, and he is ready to grant it, O ye Jewes which have now again settled your selves in the right way of serving God, since the re-edifying of the Temple, do but make your prayers to him, and he will hear you.

rain] A principal cause of fruitfulnesse, and encrease of the field, 2 Sam. 23. 4. Job 38. 27. Psal. 72. 6. this is a thing much expected and desired, Job 29. 23.

in the time of the later rain] See on Joel 2. 23. The first rain is to soften the ground for tilling and sowing, or rather after sowing, to bring the seed out of the ground; the later afterwards to make the grain full in the ear, Jer. 3. 3. In Jury seldome was there rain in Summer, and in Harvest it was counted an uncouth thing, 1 Sam. 12. 17. Prov. 26. 1.

so the Lord shall make, &c.] Deut. 28. 12. Job 5. 10. & 28. 25, 26. He is the father of the rain, he begets the drops of dew, Job 38. 28. he causeth the vapours to ascend from the ends of the earth; he makes the spreadings and ballancings of the clouds, he covereth the heaven with them, and prepareth rain for the earth; he makes a decree or law for the rain, he shakes out the bottles of heaven, he makes small the drop of waters which distill. He saith to the small rain, be thou on the earth; and to the great rain of his strength. These are the Scripture-expressions in this point; and this he promiseth and performeth, as his blessing to his people upon their obedience, Levit. 26. 4. Isa. 30. 23. Hos. 2. 21. And he threatens the with-holding of it, and executes it as his curse upon their disobedience, Jer. 3. 3. Amos 4. 7. Yea, he shuts the heaven, makes it to be brasse over their heads, he makes the rain of the land to be powder and dust, Deut. 28. 23, 24. see 1 King. 17. 1. Jer. 14. 1, 7. Amos 4. 7. Jer. 5. 24, 25.

bright clouds] Or, lightenings, signes and fore-runners of thunder and rain, Psal. 135. 7. Jer. 10. 13.

showers of rain] Plenty of it, to fill the earth with juice and moysture; see Chap. 8. 12. Hag. 1. 6, 9, 10, 11, and 2. 16, 19, to bring forth grasse for Cattel, and corn for the food of man.

V. 2. For the idols] Hebr. Teraphim. Of whom formerly they had asked help, and rain, instead of asking it of the Lord; see Isa. 19. 3. Judg. 10. 14. 1 King. 18. 27. Heb. 2. 10. The meaning is, Direct your prayers to God, who will really bless you; not to the Idols, who have always deceived you.

have spoken vanity] Have frustrated their hopes and expectations, done them hurt, and no help: And thus he deridesthe idolatrious course that they took, and labours to prevent them, least they should do the like again. Idols are Teachers of lies and vanities; Jer. 10. 8, 15. Heb. 2. 18. Isa. 41. 29. They cannot give rain, Jer. 14. 22. Their oracles and answers are false, the prayers made to them are vain, and the diviners have seen a lie] Thus they left God, and relinquished their trust in the faithful promises of his aid and supply, and betook themselves to all shifts and unlawful means, how vain and ungodly soever, Jer. 2. 13. and 17. 13. and 18. 14, 15. and 27. 9, 15, 16. and 29. 8, 9. Psal. 73. 5. Isa. 44. 25. Diviners were severely forbidden in the Law, Deut. 18. 10, 11, 12. Levit. 20. 27. and the seeking to them, Isa. 8. 19. It was the common sin of the Heathens, Jer. 27. 9, 10. and Gods people were guilty of it, Jer. 29. 8, 9. Ezek. 13. 6, 7, 8, 9, 23. and 22. 28. and reforted to them in time of distresse.

false dreams] Pretending divine visions and revelations, Jer. 23. 25, 33. and 29. 8. and Deut. 13. 3. God promised, and performed a real mercy to his people in this way, Numb. 12. 6. Joel 2. 28. Act. 2. 17. But these were false pretenders, by delivering that which did arise out of their own idle heads, or was inspired by Satan, without all truth.

They comfort in vain] Job 13. 4. All that is gotten by it in the end, is but to finde themselves abused by Satans delusions, they went their way as a flock] The Jewes went into the Babylonish captivity, as a flock of sheep, bleating without a shepherd. And this should be a sufficient warning to their posterity, not to walk now in their wayes, but by their harm to learn to avoid these sins, and to trust, and relie upon God onely for succour and supply; and not to shut the gate of his grace and mercy against them by their infidelity. The examples of Gods judgments are not to be forgotten; but we should advantage our selves by the memory and meditation of them.

no shepherd] Your Temporal and Ecclesiastical Governours have not performed their duties, but have been perverted, Jer. 23. 2. 11. Ezek. 34. 2. And this also caused their captivity.

V. 3. Mine anger was kindled] Hos. 8. 5. Nahum 1. 6. Ezek. 7. verse 8. This his anger against these persons, shewes his love to his people, and his care of their safety.

against the shepherds] Though the sheep were not blameless, but all guilty, none free; yet against the shepherds most, because they should have kept the sheep from straying, but did not; seducing them, rather, and as blinde guides leading them into the ditch.

shepherds] So he calls them, because of their office, and duties were such, though indeed they proved wolves rather.

punished] Heb. visited upon.

the goats] The cruel Governours which did oppresse she poore sheep, Ezek. 34. 16, 17. Others, the heads and great ones, upon whom God poured out his greatest vengeance, by meanes of the Chaldeans, Jer. 39. 6.

hath visited] With another manner of visiting, the goats in anger, his flock in favour; his flock] Because his flock; respecting therein, not their present merit, but his meer grace, that his true choice of them should not prove to be in vain.

his goodly horse] See Job 30. 19, 26. Cant. 1. 9. Now that the Lord hath turned his favourable countenance towards his people, he hath endowed them with valour and strength, so that of sheep they are now become a great war-horse, with which the Lord will overcome and trample down his enemies. Which may in part be understood of the Maccabees victory, but most perfectly of the whole Churches victories over the world, and the devil. Others say, of all this strength and assistance in armes and victories, in the end of this verse, and in the two verses following, that God gave it to the enemies, out of his anger against the evil shepherds of his people:

V. 4. Out of him] Or, from. The meaning is, They shall be sufficiently safe-guarded, though weak in themselves; all their munitions and fortifications, all their defence shall come of him. He shall be instead of all unto them.

Corner] Of chief regard in building, or scaling tower; as Zeph. 1. 16.

Nail] That fasteneth the tents of war.

Battle-bowe] See 1 King. 22. 34. 2 King. 9. 24, 1 Chron. 5. 18, and 8 40. and 12. 2. Isaiah 7. 28. Amos 2. 15. Of the battel axe. See Jer. 51. 20. The sum is; on God dependeth all their strength, whether it be to bear up themselves, as corner-stones do bear up the building, or as nails do hold fast tents, or bear up things that are hung upon them, Isaiah 22. verse 23, 24. Or be it to defend themselves by open strength, which is meant by the bowe, Every oppressour together] All manner of oppression done by other men, is also part of Gods providence. See Chap. 9. 8. Or rather thus; They shall prevail against their enemies, and oppresse their oppressours, and exact tribute of them, as victours do of them whom whom they have subdued. This best suits with the context. And this we see partly verified in the history of the Maccabees: and more fully in and under the Kingdome of Christ in the dayes of the Gospel; the Prophet here comprehending in these Promises the whole and intire redemption and deliverance of Gods Church and People, by and under the Messias, See Isaiah 51. 13.

V. 5. And they shall be] The Lord goes on largely to set forth, in all the rest of this Chapter, the Promises of his manifold mercies to his People.

as mighty men, &c.] to passe by the victorious conquests of Christians; This is most true in the Church Militant under the Crosse; thus triumphing over her enemies: God makes them rejoycing in hope, glorious in patience, and all heavenly graces, multiplying in numbers and power, even before the eyes of their furious enemies raging against them.

the riders on horses] Or, they shall make the riders on horses ashamed: that is, the powerfull enemies, who are well appointed and provided for war. Yet some there are that understand all in this verse and the former, and the last words of the third verse, as spoken of the Chaldeans, formerly acted by God, and so inabled to subdue the Jews, and lead them away captives as a flock without a shepherd, because of his anger kindled against them for their sins.

Gods promises to his Church, the full accomplishment whereof pertains to the kingdom of Christ; so that the Jews were not to rest, or reflect so much upon those poor beginnings which were present before their eyes; they came far short of the exceeding largeneſse of Gods promises; but they were to advance their hopes and expectations to far more then what yet appeared, and to extend them to the coming of Christ when all those glorious promises should receive their full accomplishment.

the house of Judah] which is so weak.

The house of Joseph] Namely, the ten Tribes; the chiefe whereof was Ephraim, descended from Joseph, God will save them that were so lost from the kingdom of Judah first, and at the last by the Assyrians conquering and captiving them.

for I am] He remained mindfull of his own free and gracious covenant with them; and so would still leave place for his mercy towards them. Chap. 8. 8. see Annotations there.

and will hear them] as v. 1. and c. 13. 9. Jer. 29. 12, 13. Thus exciting them to make their addresse to him by prayer; that so their prayers, and his promises, might accord in one; and suit to the same end.

V. 7. And they of Ephraim] See on Hos. 4. 17. They of the Ten tribes, the Israelites distinct from Judah; who had in a sort cut off themselves from the people of God, and were now cast off by God; yet they are hereunto, not Judah; and to them is this gracious promise made, Judahs return and reſtauration was more easily believed: But this of Ephraim almost incredible.

their heart shall rejoyce in the Lord] Here is true joy, and the cause of true joy. 1 Pet. 1. 8. Phil. 4. 4. The full accomplishment of these Promises, as hath been said, is in the Spiritual Kingdom of Christ.

V. 8. I will hisse] Doe it thus easily, as it were with a whistle of my mouth, though all the world should seek to hinder it: And thus doth he hisse for the enemies, and they come at his call, and obey his beck, Isa. 5. 26. & 7. 18. Here he will call them by his Gospel as from afar off, into his Church, see Esay 5. 26. & 7. 18.

for I have redeemed them] Or, For I will redeem them. I have begun it now, and I will not give it over till I bring it to perfection, Psal. 138. 8. In their affliction and dispersion they could hardly believe this: but as it is chap. 8. 6. & Jer. 32. 27. Christ the head of the Church, will gather all the members of his body to him, John 11. 51.

among the people] Their dispersion it selfe should turn to be a blessing. They should be among the people of all Nations, as Gods seed, to bring forth every where plentifull fruit unto him. And this should give contentment to their minde, and asswage the displeasure of their dispersion; in that God would bring thus light out of darknesse, good out of evil; as in that dispersion of Levi, Gen. 49. 7.

and they shall remember me in far countreys] I will scatter them abroad where I will preserve them, and their posterity, that they may spread my Name there, and my memoriall. Indeed the Jews were so sowen among the people in far countreys; that where the Gospel was preached, there were found Synagogues of the Jews, which were the first in-lets, and receptacles of the Gospel; and opened the door to let in the Gentiles, to come in after.

and they shall live with their children] Be preserved there; and that for the end and use aforesaid; and in the time of their children, of their posterity, this should be performed. See on verse 9.

And though they returned not into their countrey, nor flirred a foot out of the places of their dispersions, yet their turning to the Gospel is accounted for it; and so called in the common language of the Prophets,

V. 11. passe through the sea with affliction] Rebuking, smiting, afflicting it, as the next words make the exposition. He will miraculously deliver, and enlarge his Church. He alludeth to the deliverance of the people out of Egypt, when the Angel smote the floods, and rivers. See Isa. 11. 15. Psal. 106. 9. & 114. 3, 5. Nahum 1. 4. CHAP. XI.

verse 1. Open] A Prophecie of the horrible destruction of the Jews because they rejected Christ, and his Gospel. This was chiefly executed by the Romans. And this would serve to leave the obstinate sinners the more inexcusable; and to bear up the faithfull in that day of tentation, when this direfull judgement should come to be executed. Indeed this may seem not so consonant to all the former prophecies; but rather to crosse the gracious mercies contained in them. Yet this shews how things at last should fall out. As in Deut. 31. 16.—22. & chap. 32. So here; This should be their obstinate course, and malicious trade of sinning in the end, that God for all his propitious favours formerly vouchsafed to his people, should at last be driven to this extremity, to do this his strange work, and execute this dreadfull doom upon them. See Lam. 3. 33. Esay 28. 21.

thy doors] Lebanon seems to have had strong fortifications in it; besides the strong situation of the place, called the defenced forrest, verse 2. The doors of them should in a manner open themselves to the enemies. See Esay 45.1,2. Another kind of opening is that, Esay 60.11. Or thus; Because Lebanon was the confine of the Country on that side where the Romans made their chief in-rode or invasion, it is here brought in as opening the gates of Judea.

O Lebanon] Libanus or Lebanon was a great and famous mountain, and stantiall forrest, on the north boundarie of Judea: looking westward to ward the great sea, toward Zidon, and Joppa, and eastward, toward Damascus of Syria: Inhabited of old by the Hivites, where it seems Solomon built a glorious house: all the vessels thereof were of pure gold; and he placed there 300 Targets of beaten gold, he founded chiefly with Cedar-trees; wherof Solomon built the Temple and other Houses; and the Tyrians made the Masts of ships. It was stored also with Fir-trees, and Almug-trees. Much is spoken of the glory of it; many comparisons are taken from the beauty, flowers, smell, wine of it, in the Book of Canticles. The Assyrian Empire is likened to a Cedar in it. A most pleasant place; as Gilead was on the east-side of Jordan. This Moses mentions, and desired to see before he died. When the enemies invaded Judea, they gloried in the gaining of this mountain; wherein likely strong fortifications were; Isa.37.24.2 Kin. 19.23. Conquering the land they had a special care of this mountain. Asaph was the keeper of it under the Persian Monarch, Nch. 2.8. And here Lebanon is spoken to, for to open her doors of strengths and munitions to let in the enemies, to burn up, and spoil Judea. The Prophets speaking thus to Lebanon, and these other places, hath a kind of emphasis and vehemency in it. Josephus records in his History that the Temple doors opened themselves before it was destroyed by Titus. But that makes nothing to this text.

that the fire] Of Gods wrath, and the fury of his instruments of vengeance.

may devoure thy Cedars] This may be understood, either literally, because the Romans did almost destroy the whole forrest of Lebanon, to imploy the trees to the besieging of places; as Isa. 14.8. Or figuratively, for the most powerfull and flourishing city; or for the Peers and Potentates of Judea: as Isaiah 2. 13. Ezek.17.3.

V. 2. Howl fir-trees] If the noblest plants be spoiled, the inferiour ones must not look to be spared. Which may also be understood of the lesser cities and holds, which were about Jerusalem, or of the meaner sort of people.

mighty] Or, Gallants. They should not be able to save themselves from spoil.

Bashan] See on Micah 7.14.

for the forrest] Or defenced forrest. Seeing that Lebanon was destroyed, which was the strongest munition, the weaker places could not think to hold out. No strength, fence, or defence, can withstand the power of Gods vengeance. Others understand by the forrest of the vintage, the promiscuous multitude of the meaner sort of people.

V. 3. A voice] He speaks of the dreadfull judgement to come, as present; for the certainty of it, and to affect them the more with it.

O the howling] Not in way of repentance, but of lamentation, vexation, and sorrow. As Ezek.30.2. Hos.7.14. Isa. 52.5.

of the shepherds] Namely, of the Governours of Jerusalem, in Church and Common-wealth: who instead of being shepherds, to feed the people, were ravenous Lionesses, Ezek. 19.2,3. See Jer. 4.8,9. & 25.34,35,36.

for their glory is spoiled] Their glory and greatnesse, wherein they prided themselves, could not free them from that spoil and ruine which their sins merited at the revenging hand of Gods justice.

Young Lions] Many were in Judea: and most about the banks, woods, and wildernesses of Jordan. And these resemble those cruel oppressors that exercised bloody tyranny, under pretence of their authority, against the people.

for the pride of Jordan is spoiled] The shelter and succour of the Lions. And likely intimating hereby the proud and numerous company of the people, over whom they had tyrannized; likened here to the yearly over-flowing of Jordan: whereof see Josh.3.15. Jer.12.5. and 49.19.

V. 4. Thus saith] Thus follows the reason of this so severe dealing of God against them: because their wickednesse was incurable, themselves incorrigible. He would act the part of a carefull faithfull shepherd to them, so as no default should lie on his side: and yet their ingratitude, ungraciousnesse, incorrigiblenesse would thereby so much the more appear: so as no more place would be left for pity, pardon, or mitigation.

My God] That is, God the Father to God the Son, the Eternal Shepherd of his Church, Heb. 13.20. 1 Pet. 5.4. To whom it is given of the Father, to govern, and to guard his people, oppressed by powe. full and prophane ones, unto the time prefixed of their total diffipation, for their ingratitude.

Feed] Christ by himself, and by his Ministers, and under-shepherds. We must not restrain all this to the person of Christ alone.

the flock of the slaughter] The poor flock, v. 7. exposed and appointed as it were, to slaughter, to be bruised, as is set forth in the next words, v.5. This was true of the Jews, in the time, and age of this Prophet: but much more in the dayes of our Saviour.

V. 5. whose possessours slay] Namely, any one that hath any right over my people, either by conquest of war, or otherwise, as in the time of Aristobulus first, and second, of Alexander, Hircanus, Antipater, Herod, and the Romans.

and hold themselves not guilty] Of cruelty, or murder. They do it, and think they may lawfully do it, as it it were a lawfull prey: and are not punished for it. See Jer. 2. 3. and 50.7.

and they that sell them] Namely, they that make merchandize of them, as of poor slaves. See Josephus his Antiq.6.13.c.19.12.

Blessed be the Lord] They do profanely boast of the power that God hath given them over his people; and of their selling of them, to enrich themselves with the price of their slavery, as of an expresse blessing. See Deut. 29.19. Hos. 12.8. And this is an usual form of speech, common even among Hypocrites, that will not be guilty and conscious to themselves of their unjust & unlawful gain.

and their own shepherds pity them not] Not only Wolves, and Lions, and thieves, did worry, and tear, and slay them; but their own shepherds did not so much as pity them. Pitifull then was the state and condition of this poor flock. And yet in this so pitifull, and mercilesse condition, Christ took the care and charge of a shepherd over them: Isa. 40.11. which mercie rejected by them, occasions the utter nothing and rejection of them: as followeth.

V. 6. For I will no more pity] O my Son do thou exercise this charge of shepherd over this people, during the prefixed time of my patience. But seeing thou shalt spend thy strength in vain, Isa. 49.4. and they will not be under thy pastoral care and Government, but reject, and renounce thee, and it, what now should with-hold my judgement any longer? I will utterly destroy them for their rebellion and ingratitude.

the inhabitants of the land] The bulke and body of this people, excepting the poor flock of the slaughter. Or, as some take it, this may relate to those that slay, sell, and pity them not, in the former verse.

I will deliver the men every one, &c.] Heb. make to be found every one at the hand of his neighbour. He seemeth to signifie the frequent seditions, and civil intestine troubles of the Jews, wherein they should slaughter and consume one another: and specially about the time of their last desolation.

His King] Namely, Antipater, Herod the great, and chiefly the Roman Emperour, whom they then should have accepted for their king: rejecting my Son, John 19.15.

and they shall smite the land] Intestine and forraign enemies shall utterly ruine it. Mich. 6.13. See Ezek.9.5. Isa.2.19.

I will not deliver] Nor care for their ruine, but let them perish without remedy. Thus they shut upon themselves the door of mercy.

V. 7. And I] This is spoken not of Zechariah, but of Christ: of whom, verse 4.

will feed] Here he returns to his charge of feeding the flock: whereupon will follow, and the more appear, their ingratitude and rebellion: which will render them the more odious, and vile, and leave no place for pardon.

I will feed] Or, I fed.

the flock of slaughter] See on verse 4.

even you O poor] Or, verily the poor. Namely, my poor Church, and Jewish Nation, no way comparable in greatnesse and power to other Nations and Empires of the world: and brought very low by her calamities. See Isa. 14.32. Zeph.3.12. Zech. 13.7. Or the poor and humble for of them verse 11.

of the flock] These may seem to be distinct from the rest of the flock, as peculiarly fed, and singularly guided, folded, and cared for, by Christ.

Two staves] Or sheep-hooks, or shepherds staves. Other shepherds are content with one Staffe. But Christ surpassing all others in feeding and governing his flock, hath two. Some make the two staves a figure of them two ways that Christ useth at all times in feeding of his Church: the one by guiding them lovingly by his Word and Spirit: the other by severely punishing them, by the cruel hand of their enemies. See Psal. 110.2. and 2.9. and 89.32. See Micah 7.14. Psal. 23.1,2,3,4.

Bands] Or, binders. Some, sticking close to the pricks or Hebrew vowels, which now we have, translate it, destroyers: and understand it according to the former expositon. Others translating it bands or binders, refer it to the binding and uniting together, both Judah and Israel, in our Saviours Pastoral charge, and the execution of it. See Mat. 10.5,6. And indeed our Saviour much preached, wrought miracles, converted, and dwelt in Galilee, and among the ten Tribes, before the calling of the Gentiles, which sense best agrees with that v. 14.

and I fed the flock] There was no lack, no defect or default on my side. Hos. 13.9. The greater sin, and blame and shame, was theirs: not to suffer themselves to be fed, and guided, and governed by such a shepherd.

V. 8. Three shepherds] Hereby he sheweth his care and diligence: he spared no pains and labour. As that Gen.31.40. He withstood all oppo oppositions, and molestations: removed all obstructions that lay in his way; would not endure bad shepherds: because they should consider his great love. By 3 shepherds understanding, not the 3 chief Empires which had tyrannized over Gods people, Jer. 6.2. & 12.10. namely, of the Chaldeans, Persians, and Greeks whole, and parted: which were destroyed by the Son of God. Dan. 2. 45. Others much rather conceive our Saviour by three shepherds to understand many; Or as some will, aiming at those three Principal Sects, or sorts among the Jews, in his time, the Pharisees, Sadducees, and Essenes. See Mat. 3. 17. and 16.6,11,12. and 22.v. 23, 34. and 23. 13, &c. Acts. 4,1. & 5.17. & 23.6,7,8. The Scribes also are much mentioned, and opposed by our Saviour. And of the Herodians we read likewise.

I cut off] Rejecting, confuting, and confounding them. And in stead of them, sending forth better shepherds, his twelve Apostles; and seventy Disciples.

in one moneth] In a short time; as Hos. 5.7. His own publike Ministery being but three years, and one half. And all this his care and pains serves to aggravate the crime of the Jewish people, in leaving and loathing him; and to justifie the merit of their direfull destruction.

And my soul loathed them] Heb. was straitned for them; estranged from them, imbittered against them; vexed at my peoples disloyalty, and ingratitude; as well as at those shepherds treachery.

and their soul also abhorred me] This the history of the Gospel sheweth. They rested not till they brought him to his death. Thus they rewarded his love, and recompenced his pains. See 2 Cor. 6. 11, 12.

V. 9. Then said I] He did not over-hastily proceed against them; but after all the precedure. As it is, Isaiah 5.4,5. Matth. 23. 37, 38.

I will not feed you] A representation of the rejection of the Jews for rejecting salvation offered them by the Messiah; as if he should say: I will not feed you, O ungratefull Jews; meaning the Gospel should be taken from them. Matth. 21.43. So that for their said sin, here follows the judgement. A grievous judgement, but not too severe for the merit of their sin. He would make proof of the utmost of his love, and care, before he would fall upon these extremities. But when for all that they came to scoffe at, and to loath God their Saviour, what remained, and what more justly, then this final resolution, and direful doom here set down? He resigns his pastoral office and care, and leaves them to themselves.

That that dieth] The shepherds part and duty is, to defend the flock from dogs, wolves, theeves, &c. But he that is freed of that charge, is not interessed or concerned therein; no blame is imputed to him, though the sheep miscarry, and perish an hundred times, and wayes. The flock rejecting the shepherd, may thank themselves for it. See Apoc. 22. 11. 1 Cor. 14. 38. Psal. 81. 11, 12. Ezek. 3.27.

and let thereft] That were not cut off by forraign foes, and forces; or otherwise.

eat every one, &c. Heb. a woman the flesh of her friend, or fellow, or neighbour. This judgement openly appeared, when the nearer they were to destruction, by the Roman Army, without the walls of Jerusalem, the more fierce and furious they were within, in slaughtering one another by their deadly feudes and intestine seditions.

V. 10. And I took] A Type of the breaking off of this Pastoral office. As there is a use amongst men, to break in sunder the staff of their office, when their office ceaseth and endeth.

Even beauty] This first was broken; the beautiful order in Church, and Politie; by which formerly he governed them. Schismes, and Sects, and Heresies corrupted the purity of doctrine, marred the beautifull face of the Church; and the Common-wealth was in a broken estate, and deformed.

that I might break my covenant] The people oft-soones broke it on their part. See Lev. 26.44. Deut. 31.16,20. Judg. 2.20. Jer. 11.10. and 31.v. 32. But for all that, God never did, nor would breake it on his part totally. See Judg. 2.1. Psal. 89.34. Jer. 33.20, 21. Ezech. 16.60,61,63. And this covenant here may seem to relate more immediately to that peace which he had granted to his Church, that she should be no more assaulted, nor molested by any strange nation: which was verified from the Maccabees time, until a little before the comming of Christ.

with all the people] With the body of the 12 Tribes: yet he reserved an holy Remnant; as appears in the next words. See Rom. 11. 1.

V. 11. And it was broken in that day] dictum, factum. This came not to passe by fate, or fortune; but by the revenging, and secret hand of Gods providence; who after his so long patience, did in this manner execute his judgements upon them.

and so the poor of the flock] Those verse 7. the holy Remnant.

that waited upon me] Diligently, and duly observed me, and my ways, and works; waiting upon my words, and promises, and weighing my judgements: such as those Micah 7.7. see Lam. 3.25,26. Jer. 14.22. Esay 64.4.

knew that it was, &c.] Though the rest; and most of the people knew not so much; who usually shut their eyes against Gods judgements, and the passages of his providence, and think not that such affaires are governed by the hand of God; yet some poor and mean people, the holy seed, know, and take to heart these things; and profit, and better themselves, in humiliation and repentance, by those judgements of God upon his Church.

word of the Lord] According to it, his word, and work. My elect which remained, of my people, who humbly believed my promises, and gave obedience to my commandments, my Disciples, and Apostles did acknowledge the time of my visitation; and that dire wars moved by the Romans were effects of my providence, according to the ancient propheeies.

V. 12. and I said unto them] Here, to their horrible ingratitude, is added a flagitious crime of a most base and vile valuation of the unestimable riches of Gods mercy in the Messiah, and his Ministery. This is brought in under the figure of a shepherd demanding his wages; and the recompence and price which they pay him.

if ye think good] Heb. if it be good in your eyes. Christ seems here to speak as a man full of stomack, indignation, and disdain. And so should our stomack rise against sin.

give me my price] That ye value me, and my paines at. See 1 Tim 5. 17,18. Lev. 19.13. Deut. 24. 14,15. Mal. 3.5. Jam. 5.4. Not that Christ is an hireling, Joh. 10.v. 11,12,13. But hereby to make way to convict them of their own unworthy, base, and villainous minds in this case.

and if not, forbear] As if he should say, I do not heed or regard it; whether yea, or no: I know your bad and base mindes sufficiently already; you will shew your selves most ungratefull wretches, and hereby it will appear so to all the world. See Ezech. 12.15. and 3.11,27.

so they weighed, &c.] He expected and deserved that as he gave himselfe to them, and for them; so they again should give up themselves to him, in all thankfulnesse, and holy obedience, as his peculiar people, and redeemed ones. 1 Cor. 6.19,20. and 7.23. Mich. 6.6, &c. But they requitedhim as followeth. Deut. 32.6.

weighed] After they gave over exchanging one commoditie for another, and traded in silver, then they delivered it not by tale, but by weight, so Gen. 23.16 and 43.21. Esay 55.2. Jer. 32.9. And shekel the common price of Silver, seems to come from Schakal to weigh.

30 pieces of silver] Thirty silverings; usually taken in Scripture for shekels: and the common shekel containing ten gerahs; (the sacred double,) and each gerah weighing 16 grains of barly, is so commonly taken to be the fourth part of an ounce of silver, with us one shilling three pence. And so thirty of them come to 37 shillings sixpence, set down for the price of the life of a servant, or slave. Exod. 21.32. And this price they payed to Judas for the life of our Saviour, Mat. 26.15. the price of him that was valued whom they of the children of Israel did value, as the words are of Saint Mathew, c. 27.9.

V. 13. And the Lord said unto me] God my Father, did so detest their flagitious, and heinous ingrattitude, that he gave me in charge that which followeth.

cast it unto the potter] God did abominate such their dealings: as he did abhor the price of a whore, Deut. 23.18. Micah 1.7. He loathed it, as he did the ceremonious services of such vile sinners, Esay 1.13. and 66.3. And therefore he commands it to be cast away, to be cast to a potter, as fitter for a potter, and his use, then for such a Pastor, and his price. And thus by prophecy he fore-shews what in time should come to passe; what figuratively is represented here, was visibly acted and accomplished upon the person of our Saviour, the great shepherd of his flock, 1 Pet. 5.4. How this price came into the potters hand, for his field, upon the occasion of Judas his despaire and despite, we read Mat 27.3. 11.

a goodly price] Spoken thus in scorn and disdain, a lordid price, most unbeseeming the Majesty of God.

that I was prized at, &c.] Because that the injury done to my Son, redoundeth to me, who had before governed them by him, see Joh. 5.23.

of them] The children of Israel, Mat. 27.9. not of Heathen, barbarous nations: but his own people.

and I took] Thus God would have a visible monument to remain, and to be upon record, that the Jews in their time might see what scene they acted; and how punctually they performed, what was so long afore prophecied; though then their own malice, and the God of this world blinded their eyes. How this prophecie is alledged out of Jeremy, see on Mat. 27.9.

V. 14. Then I cut a-sunder] Of this other staff see before on v. 7. whether this staffe was broken before the demanding his price, and upon the relinquishing his pastoral charge, verse 9. together with the breaking of his staffe of Beauty; or not till now; is not so certain; neither is it much material.

that I might break the brother-hood, &c.] This shews that the meaning is not, that Christ would not onely not govern his people any more in mildnesse and clemencie, nor exercise his shepherdly severity in saving corrections and visitations; as he had done in former times; but that he would altogether reject them; taking away from the Jews according to the flesh, the title of being his Church, and his people: whereas before, Israel the people of God, and Judah, had been the same thing in name and in effect; and taking to himselfe the Israel, which is according to the Spirit, namely, all true believers; and rejecting the carnal Judah. But hereby more particularly is meant, that Judah, the two Tribes, and Israel the ten, should no more keep brother-hood together and be united as one among themselves in state and Government; but be broken asunder, and broken in pieces, dispersed, and scattered, without recovery. We read of their union promised, and lively represented by the joyning of two sticks, Ezek. 37. 16.--17. But that is understood either to precede this breach, or rather of the spiritual union of them both in the Church and kingdom of Christ, under the Gospel: And more specially of their general calling, when the fulnesse of the Gentiles is come in; intimated, Luk 21.24. 2 Cor. 3.16. and more fully expressed, Rom. 11.11, 12, 15, 23, 24, 25--32. And that hinders not the more literal sense of this text, and the preceding breach of brother-hood betwixt them, here mentioned, V. 15. unto me] Namely, to Zechariah. Some understand it of Christ, as spoken to him.

of a foolish shepherd] Not unlike to that command to Hosea, Chap. 1. verse 2. After Christs two pastoral staves broken, there yet should remain some shew and shadow of a Pastoral charge and government among the Jews, wherewith they would please and sooth up themselves: As Papists do at this day in the like case: But it should be such as would appear to be not for edification but for destruction. They should be foolish shepheards; as those Hos. 9.7,8. Lam. 2.14. shepheards fit for a foolish flock; such as those, Deut 32.6. Jer. 5.21. Not wise for the good of the flock; but pernicious and destructive to them. These shepherds thought themselves wise, but Christ calls them fools; Matthew 23.17. Luke 11.40.

V. 16. For lo I will raise up] God doth it for the sins of his people, to revenge the quarrel of his Covenant. Having relinquished his Pastoral office he will now raise up, not such shepheards as those, Jer. 23. 4, and 3. 15. But dogs, wolves, and beasts of prey; thieves and robbers to be their shepheards; Those John 10.1, 10. As he did raise up evil against David out of his own house: and many adversaries against Solomon; and the Assyrians and Babylonians against the Jews; and gave them kings in his anger: so here he will raise up wolvish shepheards to them. A representation of the peoples evil government by their own heads, Priests, Doctors, and others; into whose power the Lord delivered them for a punishment, because they had rejected Christ.

a shepherd in the land] A government which shall be uniforme in wickednesse and depravation, though it be administred by several persons which God had suffered to raise themselves to that dignity, and authority. This is the explication of the former Type or Hieroglyphick.

cut off] Or, hidden. Will not see, nor seek what is wanting.

the young one] That is more apt to be lost, and goe astray, and tear their clawes in pieces] Exceeds in ravenous cruelties the very wilde beasts. Amos 3. 12. By these faults of the foolish shepherd we may gather what are the parts and duties of the wise and faithful shepheards.

V. 17. woe to the idol shepheard] He speaks to the whole company of them, as unto one man. He shews, that though God doth thus deservedly punish the Jews by this foolish shepheard; yet he shall not escape un-punished himself. The word here for idol signifieth a thing of nothing, of no worth, an empty, vain, vacant thing. The woe denounced here is often taken up in Scripture. See Jer. 10. 21. & 22. 22. & 23. 1. & 25. 34. & 50. 6. Ezek. 34. 2. John 10.12.

that leaveth the flock] John 10.12,13.

upon his arm] His strength and state which he seemeth to have, and wherein he flourisheth in the eyes of the world; it shall be clean dried up; it shall wither, decay, and dye: and the shamefulnesse of it appear to the world.

right eye] His understanding, knowledge, prudence, which he pretends to, and seems to have in the opinion of the world.

shall be utterly darkned] Ezek. 13. 23. Micah 3. 6, 7. See Annotations there. The strength and knowledge of man are thus in the hands of God, to give & take away as he pleaseth. Under these two similitudes and expressions here, all kinds of punishments upon body & minde are comprehended. And they are here justly punished; for though God sited them as instruments of his wrath and revenge upon his sinful people; yet they intended nothing lesse then to obey and do his will therein; Their own ambition, covetousnesse, and cruelty set them on work, to ferve their own ends: And the allwise God can cause sinful men, and Satan himself to bring to passe his holy will and do his just work, though unwittingly, unwillingly, and wickedly on their part. Acts 4. 27, 28. And yet God thus punishing the idol shepheard, doth shew thereby, that he retains still some care of this people for his elects sake, that small remnant, and holy seed, that was amongst them. The accomplishment of these threatnings, verse. 16, 17. we may read in Josephus his wars of the Jews, Hegesippus and others.

CHAP. XII.

Verse 1. The burden of the word of the Lord] This more generally is taken for a prophecie, or word of Gods inspiration: See on Chap. 9. 1. Jer. 23. 33--39. Heb. 1. 1. More strictly and frequently for a burthensome prophecie, against either foraign nations, enemies to the Church; as against Babylon, Moab, Damascus, Egypt, and others, as we read in the beginnings of the 13, 15, 17, 19, 21. 23. Chapters of Esay, or against the Jews themselves, as Esay 22. 1. Mal. 1. 1.

for Israel] Both for, and against. For Israel concerning the victories which God giveth unto his Church, collected of Jews and Gentiles, which by the Apostles is called the Israel of God, Gal. 6. 16. And so this is on the behalf of Israel. And a burden against the enemies of the Church of Christ under the Gospel. And it is all full of allegories, taken from the Church of the Jews, as being the type of the other, mainly setting forth Gods threatnings, and judgements against the enemies of his Church, and his manifold promises of blessings and benefits to be vouchsafed to her: and yet not altogether taking off the present intendment, and application of many things herein mentioned, to the present state and condition of the Church, and people of the Jews, in the Prophets time.

saith the Lord which stretcheth] This glorious description of God is often used by the Prophets. See Esay 42. 5. and 40. 22. and 44. 24, and 48. 13. Jer. 10. 12. and 51. 15. Psalm 104. 2. Job 9. 8. and 26. 7. And this is of special use to confirm our faith in the belief of a thing promised by God, though it seem in it self, and to all our sense and reason, to be impossible. And such was the case here in hand. The Prophet therefore calls on them to consider the infinite power of God, in creating the heaven above, the earth beneath, and the Spirit of man that is invisible within him; to convict them thereby that they are not to measure his infinite power, by the poor scantling of their shallow, sense and reason: but firmly to believe that what he shall promise he is able to perform, Rom. 4. 17, 22.

V. 2. Behold] To make them to attend to the promise that would seem so incredible.

I will make Jerusalem] Though it be so poor a city now, without walls, and with few inhabitants, as appears in the Book of Nehemiah: and much more I will make my Church, where of Jerusalem is a type, a cup of trembling unto all] Or, slumber, or poison. Jerusalem shall be as a soporiferous or poisonous potion, to her enemies. Some translate a post of bruising, wherein they shall bruise and breake themselves. My Church being set upon by her enemies, shall be an occasion that I will strike them with amazement, so that they shall not be able to bring their designes to any happy end: but shall be the causes of their own ruine. Esay 51. 17, 22. Jer. 51. 7.

when they shall be, &c. Or, and also against Judah shall he be, which shall be in siege against Jerusalem.

in the siege] In the very instant that the enemies were ready to do their best and last endeavours.

both against Judah] Not that Judah should be against Jerusalem, as some would make it: but that God will be a protection, both to country, and to city, against the enemies besieging them.

V. 3. And in that day] Repeated verse. 4. 6, 8, 9, 11. and again, Chap. 13. 1, 2, 4. and Chap. 14. 4, 6, 8, 9, 13, 20, 21. This must needs be a famous day, and compasseth in it sundry great things of Gods manifold mercies to his Church, under the names of Judah and Jerusalem: of Christs death, and the cities destruction following the ceasation, of Gods battel and fighting against the enemies of his people: of the conversion of the nations: punishment of the rest: reslauration of the Jews: and glorious state of the Church of God.

will I make Jerusalem] God is the Agent for his Church, against her enemies.

a burdensome stone] Some Ancients observe, that this is taken from an exercise or game, which was frequent in dayes of old; namely, to take up a great round stone, to try ones strength, lifting it up from the ground, sometimes to their knees, sometimes to their navels, sometimes to their shoulders, and sometimes as high as their heads. At which sports sometimes they did grievously hurt themselves. The meaning is, the enemies of the Church shall strive and endeavour who shall be able to do her the most hurt: but the strongest and valiantest of them all shall be overcome. See Math. 21. 44. She shall be too heavy for them; and their strengths too little for it.

shall be cut in pieces] They shall think to cut her off; but themselves shall be cut in pieces; they shall gain by such lifting at her, ruptures in their bodies, dislocations in their joynts; they shall be bruised to powder, broken, crusht, and cut in pieces, 1 Peter 2. 8.

though all the people of the earth] No humane force can prevail against her; for God is her founder, and defender. Chap. 10. 12 Psalm 46. 5. & 87. 1, 2. See Psalm 27. 3. and 3. 6.

V. 4. every horse, &c.] By horse and rider are meant all warlike like strengths, Job 39. 19---26. By astonishment, madnesse, and blindnesse, are meant the many ways that God hath open, and secret, to confound their force and strength, to take from them skill and counsel; that they shall be amazed and mad. See Exod. 15. 1. 2 King. 6. 18. Jer. 51. 21. vain are these helps against the Lord. Psal. 33. 17. & 76. 3, 5, 6, 7. Prov. 21. 30, 31. Esay 31. 1. 3, 4. Jer. 50. 37.

open mine eyes upon the house of Judah] I had formerly shut mine eyes against them for their sins, Psal. 31. 22. Esay 1. 15. But now I will look to them, and care for them; mine eyes shall be upon them for good, as Esay 49. 16. Jer. 24. 6. To assist and defend them against all their enemies.

V. 5. And the governours of Judah] Which before had many populous Cities, and mighty Armies.

shall say in their heart] Shall heartily be thus courageous and confident, as to say thus;

the inhabitants of Jerusalem] Though now without walls; and almost without inhabitants; yet even they.

shall be my strength] They alone, though never so few now: They, though the other cities of Judah want inhabitants to assist, Others put in a copulative; and understand both the governours of Judah, and inhabitants of Jerusalem, to be thus heartily confident of their strength in their God; Transfusing thus, There is strength to me, and to the inhabitants, &c. But those which expound thus, viz. all the Governours of the Church shall hearten on the faithful to fight this good fight of faith, seem to recede too far from the literal meaning of the Text.

my strength] Every one of them for his part shall say so.

the Lord of hosts] Therefore able enough for strength, against all opposition.

their God] And therefore willing enough upon their true interest in him.

V. 6. The governours of Judah] Some thus, The Apostles, and Evangelists, by the preaching of the Gospel, shall institute the whole world with perfections and assentions, Luk. 12. 49. By the Church in the end, the enemies shall come to ruine, and the Church shall be established. Others more likely, understand hereby onely in general the victories of the Churches Governours over all her enemies.

hearth of fire] Or furnace of fire, Obad. verse. 18. They, how weak soever now, shall then consume all their enemies before them, as fire doth.

among the wood] The enemies elf-where are likened to fewel for the fire; to wax before the fire; to chaff, or stubble, or thistle-down before the winde, Job 21. 18. Esay 31. 9. See Zech. 2. 5.

they shall devour] Which aims not at an unstable cruelty, and destruction of the enemies, which they should bring upon themselves, by Gods just judgement, in the hands of his instruments.

all the people] Though never so many, and mighty. Marvellous still, if not miraculous, shall the deliverance of the Church be, and we must not too anxiously be inquiring after the means, how, and how it may be, this way, or that way, so distrustfully distracting our selves. Though we have no strength, nor see any, yet God is able.

in her own place] Chap. 14. 10. The enemies thought to root it up; that the place of it should know it no more. But God had chosen it for the place of his worship, till the coming of his Son, when, and not before, for the renouncing and crucifying of him, one stone should not be left upon a stone, Mat. 24. 2. Luk. 13. 34, 35.

V. 7. The Lord also shall save] He is sufficient, though all humane help fail. We may, and must rest and relie upon him onely.

the tents of Judah] Though they be but tents; nor strong, and fenced cities; yet Gods sole protection shall be their sufficient safeguard.

first] Some thus; as at the first, as at the beginning; as when they dwelt in tents in the wilderneſſe, at their coming out of Egypt; or were but newly come into the land of Canaan: so by his sole power will he wondrously save and preserve them now. Others rather thus; That God shall save the exterior and weaker places first, before the approach and accesse of the enemies be made to Jerusalem, and that for the reason in the next words following, viz.

that the glory of the house of David] That the glory of the Regal family, and the Regal city, may have no cause or colour left to glory and boast, and magnifie themselves against Judah, that is, over and above the other weaker, and remoter parts of Judah; as if they had by their power and prowesse overcome the enemies, and saved Judah; as they were ever prone and prompt thus to ascribe the glory of victories, and the preservation and deliverance of Judah to themselves: But that by this course of Gods saving Judah first, and without them, they might see and throughly learn to ascribe all the glory of safety and preservation from enemies, not to themselves, but wholly to God alone: and so one member should not boast over another, or arrogate any thing to it self above another; but give all the praise to God onely, who without means, without the wealth, and strength of the royal race, and royal city, would thus save Judah first. The spiritual meaning, as some conceive, may seem to be this; that Christs salvation shall first be profered to the poor and weak, like to the tents of those poor Jews, which lived in the fields, and were not comparable to Jerusalem, which was a royal and strong city, belonging to the house of David, and was the glory of the land. That is to say, the Kings, and great ones, shall be last converted, as the event did verifie it under the Gospel: To shew the prerogative of mean ones with God. See Jam. 2. 5. 1 Cor. 1. 26. The phrases here have reference to the type of the Jewish Kingdom and City.

V. 8. Defend the inhabitants of Jerusalem] Them also safter Judah. Defend them, be as a shield, and buckler to them, protect and safe-guard them, even them who leaving the Babylonish captivity, would come among all hazards, and difficulties, to inhabit the holy place of his worship. These are not excluded out of this Text: But they, though they be never so weak now, and unprovided of themselves; though all borderers be against them, and no help appears for them, yet they shall be defended, Gods arme shall make it self bare for them.

and he that is feeble among them] Or abject. Heb. fallen. The meaning is, the weak and feeble shall by Gods Spirit be strength ned, and confirmed in heroical and divine vertues. See Joel 3. 10.

shall be as David] 1 Sam. 17. 8. yea, as David was in his Kingdome, excelling in all royal parts and endowments above all other Kings.

and the house of David] Not debased thereby, but advanced. That house must stand; as it is, Psal. 89. 35, 36, 37. Thence must come the Son of David, the fountain, and foundation of all their safety and salvation.

shall be as Gods] As Angels. See Psal. 8. 5. and 82. 6. The same word is there used. Namely, the Princes of the blood-royal, who were also chief officers of the Crown, shall be such, for grace, so qualified, so esteemed. And this may have a reference to the Apostles, to whom should be given so much grace, majesty, authority, strength, and truth, that they should be respected as Gods, and Angels in the world, rather then men. See Gal. 4. 14. Act. 14. 11, 12, 13.

as the Angel of the Lord before them] The Angel of the Covenant. However the House of David was now, and should after be, in their eyes, and in the eyes of all men, in never so mean an account, and estimation, and contemptible condition, Esay 11. 1. and 53. 1, 2. Yet Christ the Son of David, and Son of God, springing thence, he and his Scepter should rule over all the world, and be glorious; and Jerusalem should be the Mother Church of all nations. See Psal. 2. 8. & 110. 1, 2. Esay 2. verse. 3. This should be the glorious state of things then, how-ever the Jewes through their ingratitude and infidelity should be least sharers in it.

V. 9. I will seek] I will seriously set my self about it; carefully intend, and attend it.

to destroy all nations] Though never so many; and his people be never so weak.

that come] That shall enterprize, combine, conspire, to assail, assaule, and prevail.

against Jerusalem] The type of the Church of Christ. For these glorious promises had not their due accomplishment in all that time which did run out from Zechariah his dayes, before the coming of Christ. Here then is the estate of the Church and Kingdome of Christ, assailed by enemies, defended by him.

V. 10. And I will powre] See Joel 2. 28. and the Annot. there. This Prophecie had its accomplishment, partly upon our Saviours coming, Acts. 2. 24. 17, 18. Esay 44. 3. Joh. 7. 38. And yet shall more fully upon the last conversion of the Jews, Rom. 11. 11---32.

the house, &c.] Typically representing the Church of Christ, and children of God.

the Spirit of grace, and of supplications] The prefence, the operation, and the gifts of Christs Spirit, which is given through grace, and is the seal, and earnest of Gods grace in them; and doth alone produce in believers, holy and acceptable prayers, Rom. 8. 25, 26. Some understand this of Gods gracious commiseration towards them; that he will pour out the bowels of his mercy and compassion upon them. And some understand, for supplications, lamentations. See Jer. 31. 9. which suits well with that which followeth. The sum is, Gods Spirit shall affect them with the sense of his mercies, and inwardly move them to bemoan themselves in penitent prayer before him, upon the sight of their sins, whereof formerly they had not been sensible.

and they shall look upon me] That is, they shall turn to me by faith. See Numb. 21. 8, 9. They shall at last be-think themselves aright of their sin, and Gods wrath; and lament, repent, convert and be saved.

whom they have pierced] See Psal. 22. 16. Matth. 27. 35. John 19. 34, 37. Apoc. 1. 7. The LXX thus; They shall look unto me [as supplicants and adorers] in stead of that they (formerly) insulted supplicants and adorers] in stead of that they (formerly) insulted over me. Sr. John, Chap. 19. 37. Apoc. 1. 7. leaves the LXX, and sticks to the Hebrew text. A visible monument hereof is upon record, in Christs person. The Jews did it, though by the hand of the Roman Souldier, who was but the instrument of their malice: And so they are said to crucifie Christ, Acts 2. 36. though they did it by the means of Pilate; whom in a manner they compelled thereunto, fore against his will.

and they shall mourn for him] They shall be exceedingly grieved for the mis-doing of their fore-fathers. See Jer. 3. 21. Acts 2. 37. And that they themselves had crucified him by their sins. Their repentance is here promised, and largely set forth, and sorrow and mourning is the beginning of it, 2 Cor. 7. 9, 10, 11. which must needs arise upon a true sight of sin, and through sense of Gods fierce wrath for it.

for his onely Son] Jer. 6. 26. Amos 8. 10 Jer. 31. 15. This expresseth the degree onely, the manner and measure of their mourning, not the cause of it: The cause was, not the losse of him by death, as the parent here mourns, but their own monstrous sin in putting him to death; that their own malice so monstrously blinded them and their progenitors, as to murther the Son of God, who came to give them life. That Christ should be here called Gods onely Son, in relation to his Deity; and his first-born in relation to his humanity, we being his brethren, the sons of God by adoption, is not the meaning of this Text; how ever that be a witty comment, and a truth in it self.

V. 11. A great mourning] This mourning being a thing so memorable, is much insisted upon, and prosecuted to the end of the Chapter. Hereunto we may apply that, Ezek. 19. 14.

in Jerusalem] Acts 2. 37. yet under the name of this Citie, the whole nations of Jews every where seem to be comprehended.

as the mourning of Hadadrimmon] Not the name of a man, as some would; but of a Town adjacent, or strong-hold, or of a region, or tract, wherein the valley of Megiddon was.

Megiddon] In the Tribe of Manasseh, west of Jordan, Josh. 17. 11. Judg. 1. 27. There Ahaziah King of Judah dyed of his wound given him upon Jehu his command, 2 King. 9. 27. And there Josiah was slain by Pharaoh Necho, 2 King. 23. 29. of whom the Text saith, that all Judah and Jerusalem mourned for Josiah. And Jeremiah lamented for Josiah, and all the singing-men, and singing-women spake of Josiah in their lamentations to this day, and made them an ordinance in Israel, and behold they are written in the Lamentations, 2 Chron. 35. 24, 25. in some publike lamentations remaining then upon record; not those in Scripture written by Jeremiah: for though some relation may haply be made to him therein; yet they were written upon the destruction of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar, as Chap. 4. 20. and the whole context of the Lamentations makes it apparent. This mourning here is likened to that for Josiah: we read that women mourned at the death of our Saviour: but that falls far short of this. And this belongs to them that pierced and crucified him. That Act. 2. 37. may be a taste of this, which most likely shall have its full verification upon the general conversion of the Jews, when the fulnesse of the Gentiles shall be come in.

V. 12. And the land shall mourn] That is, in all places where the Jews shall remain. And of every nation under heaven, some of the Jews were gathered to Jerusalem, and three thousand of them converted at one Sermon of St. Peter, Act. 2. 5. 37, 41. and were prickt in their heart; as a fore-runner of this mourning.

every family a-part] Heb. Families, families. Not a counterfeit ceremonious mourning; not one family for company-sake with another, to condole with them. But each a-part, out of the serious sense of their own compunction, and their own cause of sorrow. We should indeed by our own example labour to stir up others to repent. But this is not the thing minded in this place. Here they are severed and set a-part, to expresse each ones true sorrow.

The family of the house of David a-part] The remainders of the royal family. Circumstances taken from the manner of publike mournings; in which they used to shut themselves up in their houses, with their families, and refrained the company of women, and all manner of delightful converfation. See Num. 20. 29.

and their wives a-part] This is more then the former: this parts each family. The wives shall not stay for the examples of their husbands to provoke them to it; but of themselves shall set themselves a-part to it. This mourning is not directly for the death of Christ, whose death was the life of the world, but for their sin in it; and upon their repentance at the sight, and sense of it; that their Ancestors had done it, and said, His blood be upon us, and on our children; and themselves had continued so long malicious, blinde, and obstinate, in the approbation and justification of it.

Of Nathan] Not the Prophet in Davids time, but Davids son of that name; to whom the crown descended, after Solomons race; and of whom Christ came, Luk. 3. 27. 31. 2 Sam. 5. 14.

V. 13. Levi a-part] The Regal and Priestly families are named: likely as chief mourners, as they that had been chief offenders, persecuting Christ most; who should have embraced and honoured him most.

Shimei a-part] It seemeth that it was some family of the Levites, 1 Chron. 6. 17. & 23, 10. And the Prophet doth in this manner specifie these families, whereof some had held Temporal, some Ecclesiastical offices; to shew, that as the Church and State were united, and joyned in persecuting of Christ, and in putting him to death; so they should joyntly repent for it.

V. 14. All the families that remain] Some apply this to the remnant according to the election of grace, Rom. 11. 5. as Esay 6. 13. But the plain meaning of the letter affords no other sense, then what was said of the other Tribes. In conclusion, so much is spoken of this mourning, in that it is a thing wonderful, that God should vouchsafe such repentance and mercy to any of that reprobate nation; who in their blindnesse had put out the light of Israel; and in their malice put him to death, who came to give light to the world.

CHAP. XIII.

Vers. 1. IN that day] Namely, when the Messiah shall come into the world.

there shall be a fountain] Namely, the grace of God in the remission of sins, and regeneration of the Spirit, shall be prefered to all believers in Christ, through his blood. A figure taken from the waters of the Temple, and the washings according to the Law. And an allusion unto that, Joh. 19. 34. Those waters and washings were but ceremonious shadows, shewing things afar off; and shadowing them darkly; neither could they wash away sin; neither could the blood of those legal sacrifices take away sins. They did serve onely as to the purifying of the flesh, not conscience: as the patterns of heavenly things, and no more, Heb 10. 1. 4. 11. and Chap. 9. 9, 10. 13. Their true vertue stood in relation to this fountain. And those waters of the Temple were in Lavers, poured in, and emptied out: This here is no Laver, but a Fountain, ever springing, ever flowing.

opened] Easie, free, exposed, open to all: not so stopt and darkned, as was under the Law.

to the house of David, &c.] Shadowing the Church of Christ, Esay 2. 2, 3. Mic. 4. 1, 2. Psal. 110. 2. Luke 24. 47. Act. 1. 8.

for sinne] To expiate and cleanse it. Heb. 9. 12. 14. 26. and 10. 10. 14.

and for uncleanesse] Heb. Separation for uncleannesse. See Lev. 12. and 15. And here is the fruit of their aforesaid mourning, and repentance; it should not be in vain; God would thus graciously blesse it; yea, here is the fruit of Christs death, and blood-shedding to all the world, to all believers.

V. 2. In that day] When God will repair and restore his Church.

I will cut off] Exod. 23. 13. Psalm 16. 4. Ezek. 30. 13. Hos. 2. 17.

the names of the idols] He promiseth that God will also purge them from all superstition, and that their Religion shall be pure. This is another fruit of their mourning and repentance. Thus God would blesse his Church, and people. See on 1 Sam. 31. 9.

no more be remembred] But if so; yet with detestation, and horrour at the naming of them. As Ezek. 16. 61. see Psal. 16. 4. Exod. 23, 16. Deut. 12. 3. Hos. 2. 17.

the Prophet] So called, though false prophets. By which are meant the prophets of the idols, and all seducers, and teachers of false doctrines, and lies. Of whom in the 4 verses following.

and the unclean spirit] That is, the Devils wicked and unclean inspirations. The Devil is called an unclean spirit, Matth. 12. 43. Mark. 1. 26. For he is the author of all errour and lying, John 8. 44. And also of that corruption which is brought into the true and heavenly doctrine; the which is signified, Revel. 16. 13. Or, this may be an explication of the word Prophets; to be such as by the suggestions of the unclean spirit, spread unclean prophecies & doctrines, to the defiling of others. Such Prophets will pretend to the holy Spirit, and the inspirations thereof to the great blasphewie of Gods Spirit.

to passe out of the land] As Zeph. 3. 11. Mic. 5. 12. Ezek. 23. 48.

V. 3. Yet prophecie] Thus false prophets will still assume the name; and not easily fore-go the trade; or be beaten off their way of seducing, which they get their living by. See Jezech. 13. 19. Micah 3. 5.

then] A representation of the Spirit of knowledg, discretion, and zeal in Christs true Church, to discern false doctrines, and to oppose them. Figurative terms, taken from that which was commanded against false prophets, Deut. 13. 5, 6, 9. 71. and 2. &c.

his father] Even his parents themselves shall not spare him; Preferring therein their zeal and piety towards God, before the affection and love which naturally they bear towards their own children. See Deut. 13. 6, 9. Yea, Gods glory is to be preferred before our life it self; before our salvation it self, Exod. 32. 32. Rom. 9. 3. No lesse zeal is required under the Gospel, then was under the Law.

thou shalt not live] The equity of that Law, Deut. 13. Remains under the Gospel. And better and with lesse danger is a thief, an adulterer, a murderer, a witch, and sorcerer, tolerated, then such an heretick, and seducer. The present pleading for liberty of conscience, in preaching, and practice, is a thing extreamly shameful, dangerous, and destructive.

lyes in the name of the Lord] This makes to the heynousnesse of the crime; to draw in God, and his truth, to serve a lye; to make him, who is Truth it self, in a sort to deny himself, and cease to be God, and to play the Devils part, who is the father of lies, John 8. 44. Against these lying prophets, see Esay 9. 14, 15. Jer. 23, 25, 26. 32. 2, 8. & 27. 10, & 28. 15, & 29. 31. Ezek. 13. 4. ---- 20. and 22. 28. Micah. 2. 11.

shall thrust him thorow] Out of their extraordinary zeal. As Phinees did, Numb. 25. 8, 11. This takes not the sword out of the hand of the Magistrate; but relates rather to that, Deut. 13. 8, 9, 10. compared with chap. 17. 5, 7. They shall be the causers of his death in a legal way.

V. 4. Shall be ashamed] All false doctrine, and worship of former times, shall be removed by the clear light of the Gospel, the false prophets shall be ashamed, and repent of their doings. See Micah 3. 5, 6, 7.

a rough garment] Heb. a garment of hair. They shall not dare to counterfeit the true Prophets; who used to wear such kinde of garments, 2 King. 1. 8. Isa. 20. 2. Mat. 3. 4. They shall not any longer seek to lie as wolves, under lambs skins, as those, Mat. 7. 15.

to deceive] Heb. to lie. By their false prophecies; or by seeking to gain an opinion of holinesse to themselves, from their rough garments; or to deceive the people with an opinion of holinesse in the garment it self. Both which popish Monks and Friers did by their cowls and Friers habits. See Zechariah.

V. 5. I am no Prophet] They shall disclaim any more that profession: and confesse they were never brought up to it, or fitted for it; how-ever the blockish stupidity of the vulgar had been a shelter for their ignorance, and shame. They were impostors.

I was an husband man] A free and full confession. And willing, and ready to return to my former calling, and labour. Now they will not onely cease to do evil, but also learn to do well. An halfe Reformation sufficeth not; Eph. 4. 28.

for man taught me] This was his lawful calling, to which he was educated; and to this onely. Amos indeed had been an herdman; but God called him from that, to be a Prophet, Amos 7. 14, 15. Such false prophets as these are now teared to arise in these dayes.

V. 6. What are these wounds?] It appears he had passed some censure, and punishment, because he had been a seducer, and deceiver; yet not that of death, mentioned, vers. 3. Either the Magistrate did not his office; or this mans case afforded him some favour. An inferiour punishment he had under-gone. But yet some understand these wounds to be like those, 1 King. 18. 28. And that they did argue him to be a false prophet still. But his answer takes off that conceit.

in the house of my friends] He denies it not, nor murmurs at it: but acknowledgeth himselfe worthy of it, meekly and patiently bears it; and calls them his friends who inflicted that punishment upon him, Psal. 141. 5. Prov. 27. 5, 6. Unjustly, and very ignorantly are the words of this verse applied by some to the person of our Saviour; unlesse taken off from their own sense, and used in another sense, when applied to him. But in them there is a representation of the wonderful power of the Spirit, and light of God, in convincing and correcting the Ministers of errour. See Acts 8. 13. and 19. 18, 19.

V. 7. Awake O sword] These words seem to come in abruptly: And therefore the coherence and sense is diversly made, some thus; True it is, that for a time my Church shall be an enemie to all manner of false-doctrine, and false teachers: but there shall likewise come a time, in which by my secret providence, Christs true Ministers, according as he himself was slain by the Jewes for a false prophet, shall also be persecuted and slain; whence shall follow a great dispersion of believers, and of Churches in the world. Others rather thus, Though the former promises of good things, and against false prophets, may haply seem vain, when they shall see Christ my Shepherd, and my fellow smitten so grievously, as if he were a false prophet, and his sheep thereupon scattered; yet the scandal thereof should not so much offend the godly, they being thus long before fore-told it by me: and I nevertheleste can make good my promises, in my small remnant, and refine them in the fire and furnace of afflictions; though the rest, and greater part shall perish in my judgements. And thus he shews, that upon all the former promisses of good things, they should not fancy and form to themselves a constant course and perpetual current of felicity, without any interruptions of crosses, judgements, and afflictions intervening: but that God will so temper his blessings, as withal mixt afflictions, to exercise his Church with them, and that the faithful should prepare themselves against them. By the sword is meant afflictions, and chastisements: as by the rod, Mic. 6. 9. The apostrophe to the sword carries an emphasis with it. It is called upon to awake, as if it had been a sleep, or rusted long in the sheath.

against my shepherd] Many restrain this to Christ alone, and the rather, because Christ himself applies it to himself, Matth. 26. 31. And no doubt but it chiefly belongs to him as the chief Shepherd, 1 Pet. 5. 4. The Prince of Pastors, and head of the Prophets; He spake by them, Heb. 1. 1. yet we may extend it to the whole order of Pastors and Shepherds. As also that place, Deut. 18. 15. Principally, and in a peculiar manner it is meant of Christ, the great Prophet of his Church, yet may in a greater latitude comprehend also other prophets. Christ then in his own person, and in the person too of his faithful Ministers, in their degree, is here understood.

my fellow] To shew the unity of essence, and the union of the will of the Father, and of the Son the Mediator; see upon Esay 5. 1.

Jer 11 15. John 10. 3. and 17. 21. Phil. 2. 6. Thus God doth honour Christ in this appellation; who is indued his other self, the brightnesse of his glory, the expresse image of his person, Heb. 1. 3. in the bosome of the Father, and sitting at his right hand. And again, in a larger sense, this is true of all Christs faithful shepherds, they are fellow-workers with God in this office, 1 Cor. 3. 9.

Smite the shepherd] Mat. 26. 31. Mark. 14 27. John 16. 32.

and the sheep shall be scattered] In Christs case, as in a glasse, this appeared true. They were scattered, and offended thereupon, John 16. 32. Mark 14. 50. And yet this was long fore-told, and often renewed by our Saviour himself: that they might have been the lesse offended at it, Mat. 26. 31. and chap. 11. 6. John. 14. 16. & 18. chapters. And generally upon the smiting of the Shepherd, the scattering of the sheep will follow, Act. 8. 1. and chap. 11. 19.

and I will turn mine hand, &c.] In the general dispersion, I will gather together and preserve mine elect, who are poor, and weak according to the world. See chap. 11. 7, 11. Matth. 18. 10, 14. Jam. 2. 5. Not then, as some would, that they should be under the hand, and rod of his correction: but under the hand or his merciful protection, and favour. Those little, poor, humble, afflicted ones, Mat. 18. 6. Mar. 9. 42. Luk. 17. 2. He will recover them, preserve them, and eternally save them. The LXX instead of the little ones, hath the shepherds.

V. 8. In all the land] Of Judy: and may in a larger sense be extended to all the Christian world.

two parts therein shall be cut off] The greatest part of the world, which bear the name of Christians, shall follow errours, and shall perish, Rev. 13. 14 & 17. 18. Of the Jews remaining after Christs passion, two parts shall be destroyed, the third part escaping. Gods promises of grace belong not to hypocrites, to the greatest part or body of the people; the greater part is still the worse, Mat. 7. 13, 14. Luke 12. 32. But to the faithful, the little remnant, and holy seed, the promises shall ever be made good.

and die] Two words to the same purpose, to assure the truth of the thing, how strange soever.

but the third] To whom indeed the promises do belong; the elect, which are the lesser number. And this doth explicate that in the latter end of the former verse.

V. 9. The third part through the fire] Of the crosse, and afflictions, 1 Cor. 3. 15. I will do it by the faith and constancy of those few that escape by many afflictions. See chap 14. 2.

and will refine them] The two parts confumed; This third refined. The different work of afflictions upon the wicked, and upon the godly. The wicked are many times fatted by prosperity to the slaughter, Psal. 37. 1, &c. At other times, burne up, and clean consumed with the fire of Gods vengeance, Ezek. 14. 9, 10. and 20. 18. The godly need refining; much corruption and drosse is in them: The best want it not: God will be their refiner; as Mal. 3. 2, 3. Dan. 11. 35.

as silver, &c.] Nor as drosse, or chaff, which are burnt up in the fire: But as silver, and gold; Both which when taken out of the mynes, need much refining, which is done by fire, Prov. 27. 21. and 17. 3. That Esay 48. 10. imports that God will refine them, rather not for silver, but freely, or not so much as silver, their infirmity not enduring so exact and exquisite refining. See Dan. 12. 10. 1 Pet. 1. 6, 7.

they shall call] Here is a principal particular of their refining; a fruit of their afflictions. They shall drive them to prayer, and fit them for it, Psal. 78. 34.

and I will hear them] This sweetens their afflictions; and this promise invites to prayer. Without this promise, and faith in it, we can never be brought to pray truly, and acceptably. But this promise adds wings to prayer. See Psalm. 65. 2. and 32. 5. Dan. 10. 12. Esay 58. 9. and 65. 24.

I will say] Gods infinite mercy herein: and that first, and free.

it is my people] See on chap 8. 8. See also Hos. 2. 23. Ezek. 36. 28. and 37. 23, 27. and 11. 20. Jer. 13. 11. and 24. 7. and 30. 22. and 31. 33. Their infinite comfort, Isa. 64. 9.

and they shall say, &c.] When God hath said that before; and never till then, and then ever.

The Lord is my God] Which is their infinite happinesse, Psal. 144. 15. & 33, 12. & 65. 4. & 100. 3. & 106. 45. and 149. 4.

CHAP. XIV.

Vers. 1. BEhold] This Chapter is obscure and intricate in the phrase and manner of speech, and also for the times and matters whereof it speaks. Some understand this Chapter of the time of Antichrist, some of the last day of judgement; but it seems rather to have a relation to the two last verses of the former chapter, and to continue and enlarge the exposition of them. The calamities here spoken of, are rather all those that should befall the Jews, from this time, till the coming of Christ; comprehending therein, as that of Antiochus, Epiphanes so also the destruction of the City Jerusalem by Titus and Vespasian: All which should come to passe before the full accomplishment and fruition of those glorious

glorious promises formerly made, chap.12. and 13. and which after follow in the latter part of this chapter; and therefore the faithfull were to arm themselves against those calamities that were to come, in a joyful expectation of the promises, and their accomplishment which should afterwards follow. The particle, Behold, serves to make them attend to it, and not doubt of the truth of it, though humane sense and reason could not reach and rise up unto it.

the day of the Lord] Not fate or fortune, not the power or wit of man should bring on these calamities, but God in the day of his just judgement shall do it. They have then herein to deal with God, and are not to complain of his severity; but to acknowledg therein their own just deservings.

cometh] Soon after that time of Christs death, chap.13.7.

thy spoil] Speaking to the City Jerusalem, the prey and pillage of thee. See Esay 10. 6.

shall be divided in the midst of thee] Taken there, and divided, parted, shared there by thine enemies, securely at their leasure and pleasure, without any daring to molest them: He insists upon that last before-mentioned, Chap. 13. 8, 9. and arms, as was said, the godly against the great tentations that should come, before they enjoyed this prosperous estate, promised under Christ; that when these dangers should come, the might know that they were wanted of them before.

V. 2. For I will gather] Nations shall be the instruments, but God himself will be the Author and the General of the Army; they shall be his Host, and fight under his Banner; they therefore should humble themselves under this mighty hand of God, 1 Per. 5.6.

all nations] A mighty Army, many enemies, an universal combination; the Armies specially under Antiochus Epiphanes, and chiefly the Romans, Lords of all Nations, the Armies under Vespasian and Titus; see Josephus of this war, Book 3. cap. 1. and Cornelius Tacitus his Annals, Book 21. in the beginning.

against Jerusalem] Long after it shall be repaired by Nehemiah, and inhabited.

and the city shall be taken] Stormed, sacked, plundered: See Mat.24.2. Here the last destruction of Jerusalem seems more plainly described then before, when God would execute against her his last judgements for the sins of the Jews; but especially for slaying the chief Shepherd and Author of life, Christ his Son, Act.2.22,23. and 13.15.

women ravished] Extream beastly out-rage, so in Babylon, Isa. 13.16. see Amos 1.13.

and half of the city] As formerly two thirds of the Land, Chap. 13.8. so here one half of the City, many, if not most.

captivity] Be subdued, captived, dispersed, scattered.

and the residue] That third part, chap.13.7,8,9. This some apply to those which before the siege went out of the City, and betook themselves to Pella. Or thus, The residue shall not be cut off from being the City of God, from being his Church, and joyned to the believing Gentiles, so that still a Church shall remain, some remnant of the holy seed, even in the midst of all calamities.

V. 3. Then] Some thus, God who before this time had been the keeper of the Jewish Nation, and their City, shall now leave his holy places, Temple and City, and hold it as given over and forsaken; and also get him to another place, namely, unto the enemies besieging the City: See Josephus seventh book of the Wars of the Jewes, cap. 12. Titus himself confessed that God fought for them, against the Jews, and therefore refused to be crowned for that victory, because he ascribed it not to himself, but to God, Philostratus, book 6. c. 14. Others rather apply this to his going forth to fight against those Nations, as verse. 2. against Jerusalem; so after he hath afflicted and chastised her, he will now revenge the wrongs done her by those Nations; he will burn the rod in the fire, he himself will make open war against them, as the words expresse: See Esay 31.4,5. he will hide his power no longer, he will suffer them no more to insult, triumph in their wickednesse, and against his people; but he will openly shew himself in arms, and take upon him his Churches cause, and become enemie to her enemies, Exod. 23. 22.

as when he fought in the day of battle] Not slightly, but earnestly and stoutly, as he did for Gideon and divers others, Judg. 7. 22. 1 Sa. 9. 4. and 10. 26. 2 King. 19.25. For we must extend this to all times, when his Church stood in need of help from Heaven; Gods appearing for them then, those former experiences, and our remembrances of them, must animate our faith and hope, to expect the like hereafter; for he is still the same, and his hand is not shortened; this must support us in all tentations, that we faint not in them, and be overcome by them.

V. 4. And his feet] In such case of extremities and dangers we are hard of belief, John 3.12. To help our weaknesse and strengthen our faith, the Prophet here useth lofty similitudes, strong expressions; brings in God, and placeth him, as it were, before their eyes, makes a visible representation of his presence coming to their aid. An expression of like kind is that touching the valley of Jehoshaphat, Joel 3.2,12.

mount of Olives] Jesus went oft thither, was apprehended there, ascended thence: but to make this Text look that way, may argue more subtlety then soundnesse. The more safe and plain meaning may be this; That Gods coming to defend his Church against her enemies, shall be conspicuous and glorious, even such as the Prophet could not better expresse it, nor we better conceive of it, then under these similitudes, as if there he stood Sentinel for the safety of his Church, and thence gave directions for things; what and how to be done in this fight and battle.

on the East] So is Mount Olivet situated from Jerusalem. Bethphage and Bethany were there; and in Bethany the house of Lazarus and his sisters, and of Simon the Leper, Luke 19.29. John 11.1. Bethany was in the further part of the Mount about 15 furlongs from Jerusalem; it was the neerer part of the Mount where our Saviour was apprehended, Mat.26.30. if not a little short of it, in Gethsemane: upon this Mountain the glory of the Lord last flood, when it left the City, in Ezekiels vision, chap. 11. 23. and here now comes he to defend it. Titus placed some of his Legions there.

shall cleave] Some say by an Earth-quake, though that be not mentioned by Josephus, or any Historian, no more then that Earthquake in the days of Uzziah, have onely so long after, Amos 1.1. Zech.14.5. Others, by the industry of the Roman Armies, taking away the middle part of it to fill up the wondrous deep valley of Cedron, that lay between it and the City, for the commodiousnesse of the Besiegers. Others with least probability would understand by the Mount, the Roman Army placed there; and by the cleaving of it, the dividing of the Army to besiege other parts of the City. The safest way is, not to fancy a miracle here, no more then out of those words, Psal. 114.4,6. But to conceive hereby the Majestie of his appearance, that he will wondrously make way, and plain and even passages through all mountains of oppositions, for the safety and deliverance of his people, see cap.4.7. toward the East, &c.] That is, from East to West, so as the two halves shall be on the North and South sides.

a very great valley] Between the North, and South parts of it: Haply, that so out of all the parts of the world they might see Jerusalem, which was before hid, and shadowed with this mountain. And this he meaneth of the Spiritual Jerusalem, the Church, according to the prophecie, Isa. 66. 23. Which Text of Esay sheweth an utter abolishing of Moses ceremonies, seeing all Nations cannot come every week to Jerusalem. The meaning may tend to the same point, as that Isa.2.2. Mic.4.1.

V. 5. And ye] The very Jewes themselves shall be afraid at the presence of Gods appearance; affrighted at the Majestie of it. And so still were the visions and apparitions of God to all the Saints of old; that they feared death to follow upon it. Much more cause here had the enemies to fear.

shall flee] For fear and likely for succour too.

to the valley of the mountains] Or, my mountains; between the North, and South mountains, verse.4. to that valley, unto it, into it, by the plain way of it; to a place of refuge far enough, and safe enough.

for the valley of the mountains shall reach unto Azal] Or when he shall touch the valley of the mountains, to the place he separated. The valley shall be wide, long, and large. Azal is rather the name of a place, then of a man. No mention of it is elsewhere in Scripture. Some take it appellatively, for a place nigh, or separated. The Spiritual meaning may be this; All you Believers shall run unto the Church, to be safe from the destruction of the world. Which Church shall be extended to places separated formerly before the partition wall was broken down; which seemeth to be meant by the word Azal, which signifieth separation. Or, the free entrance into the Church shall be open every where, save onely where Gods election hath not wrought, but hath left men, as it were sequestred. See Isa.4.3. Or, according to the letter, the besieged Jewes, upon the nearer approaching of the besiegers to the walls, should flee to the valley of the mountains, Sion and Moriah, which was within the walls, for their better safety.

like as ye fled] So fearfully, and hastily, as it were for life and death.

from before the earth-quake, in the dayes of Uzziah] Like to that fearful flight wherewith the Jews were stricken of old, by reason of the earth-quake, the which fell out in the dayes of Uzziah the King, as it is, Amos 1.1. In what year of his reign it is uncertain: That it should be when King Uzziah was stricken with leprosie, is but a conjecture. How-ever, it was a terrible earth-quake, and an horrible signe, and presage of Gods wrath; and falling out so many ages before this time, thereby is signified, that the like terrour to this happened not of many ages before: yet this is not properly a threatning to Jewes; unlesse it be to the wicked hypocrites among them; But makes all for the greater dread and terrour of the enemies.

and the Lord my God shall come] Some think, that here is a Transition made from the destruction of Jerusalem, to the day of the last judgement, as from the semblance, to the substance. As our Saviour likewise did, Mat.24. Mark 13. And the rather there, for that the Apostles then thought both should fall out together, f

Thef.

1. Thess. 5.13. Seems to allude to this text. Others thus, Because they did not credit the Prophets words, he turneth himself from them to God himself, calling him to witness, and conforteth himself in that he knew these things should come, and faith, Thou, O God, with thine Angels, wilt come to perform this great thing, Jude 14. Others, make all this to be a magnificent description of the glorious coming of God with his Saints, to the Church, to dwell in it for ever: that then the very mountains shall cleave asunder, as we reade a like phrase of Speech, Psal. 114 4,6. And the very members of the Church it self shall fear and flee, being astonished, and amazed at so great a Majesty of Gods approaching: as in Majesty and terrour he appeared at the delivering of the Law, Exod. 19.

my God] Here the Prophet claims God to be his God, and that he is sent by him, so to gain the more credit to his Prophecie: and he doth hereby as it were, in an holy animosity rouze up himself against all wicked ones, that mocket at his prophecies, and sleighted the truth of them: thus stirring himself, and the faithfull, that his God would come to perform them.

Shall come] Not in a visible descent from heaven: as at the last day, Mat.24.30. But in a semblable manner, in respect of the Majesty of his power. See Hab.3. and all the Saints] Angels, often called holy, and elect. 1 Tim. 5. 21. See Dan. 8. 13.

with thee] Thus turning his Speech to God: as witnesse of what he now saith: though the wicked neither heed, nor believe it.

V.6. And it shall come to passe in that day] Some understand this of all the time from this day, to the day of Christs coming. Others, of all the time after Christs coming, the day of the Gospel. And according to this divers acception and apprehension of the day and time, they diversly understand the meaning of this, and the next verse.

that the light shall not be clear] Heb. precious, bright, shining.

nor dark] Heb. Thickneſſe, Meaning cloudy, thick, and foggy. But, say some, it shall be betwixt both: mixt of both: partly clear, and partly dark, various, changing, unstable: a lowring day, that they shall hardly discern whether it be day or night. And in this sense they refer it to all the time before Christs coming, that the Prophet fore-tels them what dayes they were to expect: not to be free from the tryals of the crosse, not to hope for constant and stable dayes of felicity, but to have doubtful dayes, to meet with many dangerous dayes, keeping them in fears and uncertainties. And that therefore they should arm themselves with patience to bear them, and comfortably expect Gods help and succour in them, and his hand for deliverance out of them. Others thus, It shall not be a mixt, and various day, a day of light and darknesse, of day and night, but all day, and no night, as Esay 60.19,20. That day shall not be as days are now, sometimes clear and bright, sometimes dark and cloudy: yea more, there shall not be the vicissitude of day and night: But it shall be one perpetual day, bright and shining, by the shining glory of the Gospel in the Spirit. And this they refer to the dayes of the dayes of the glorious Gospel: 2 Cor.4. v. 3, 4. or that blessed day of glory, Apoc.21.23,25. The LXX and the Vulgar Latine thus: there shall not be light, but cold and frost: following, as it seems, to some, some other copie.

V.7. But it shall be one day] Or, the day shall be one, not one numerically, but of one and the same tenor. Mixt, say some, and cloudy. Others, not mixt, but all bright, all day without any night, as was said before. Yet some make this relate to one singular day; to wit, of Christ death, when the Sun was darkned at noon, and so remained three hours, Matth. 27. 45. And others understand one perpetuall day: meaning, there shall be alwayes light in the Church under the Messiah, though sometimes more dimme and dark then at other times, yet always some light.

which shall be known to the Lord] Ordered by him, managed by him, and the faithfull not over anxiously to trouble themselves with distractions, and disquisitions about it, but to leave it to his hand and care, to give way to his providence, and to depend upon his will and pleasure therein, as Gen.22. 8. The others thus, God will take the care of it, and know how to make it one day, all day, and no night, as in Esay 60. and Apoc. 21. Others thus, The Lord will take special notice of this day, and light, to keep and preserve it. The Lord who from all eternity knows what shall be in time, will have regard that still light be preserved in his Church, in the evening of time, or last age of the world: for so the time of the Messiah is counted. See Heb.1.1.1 Pet.1.20.1 John 2.18. Or, that singular day of Christs death, undergoing such changes, might signifie the state of the Church after, from his going to heaven, to his coming to judgement. Some make those words, Mat. 24. 36. to relate to these.

not day nor night] See on verse 6.

at evening time it shall be light] The end of the day when darkneſſe is expected, yet then it shall be light: the end and issue of the black troubles and afflictions of Gods People shall be light-some and happy, see Esay 54.7,8, & 58.8. Psal. 97.11.& 112.4.& 37.5,6, 7.& 126.5,6.& 30.5. He bids them look to the end, Psal. 37.37. The others say, The evening time, and night also, shall become all one day, without any even or night.

V.8. Living waters] Springing waters, as Gen. 26.19. not Pools or Ponds, or River-waters, that will be dried up, as the Brooks, Job. 6.

15. ——21. and Cherith, 1 Kings 17.7.

shall go out from Jerusalem] Agreeable to that of Esay 2. v. 3. for from thence the Gospel came into the world, described under the name of two Seas, well known to the Jews, See Ezek. 47.1, — 6. Joel 3.18. Apoc. 22.1. Jerusalem had the fountains of Siloe and Rogel and the Brooks Cedron, or Kidron and Gihon, they had fountains without the City, 2 Chron. 32. 3,4. but these waters are none of those.

half of them] Two Rivers shall rise out of this Fountain of living waters, and running two contrary ways, East and West.

the former sea] East-ward toward the dead Sea, or Persian Sea, Ezek. 47. 8,18.

the hinder sea] West-ward, the mid-land Sea, Deut. 11.24.& 34.2.

in summer] As into all places, for at all times shall these Waters be flowing, never be dry. These waters must be referred to the Kingdome of Christ, and therefore must be of the nature of that Kingdome; spirituall Waters of a spirituall Kingdome, see Esay 44.3.& 35.7.& chap.12.3. Joel 2. 28. Act 2. 17. Gods spirituall graces shall then cleanse and water his Church and People, dry and barren of themselves, Ezek. 36. 25. purifie them, and make them fruitfie: And they shall water the whole Church, from East to West, and they shall never fail, John 4. 14.& 7. 38. The Gospel shall be propagated, the gifts and graces of Gods Spirit in this World, and his glory in the Heavenly life, shall be poured out upon his Elect for ever, chap. 13. 1. And this shall follow after that gloomy day, as some expound it. Their miseries shall be thus happily amended, thus joyfully recompenced with these spirituall mercies.

V.9. And] Here the Prophet doth more clearly expresse himself, and the blessing, magnifying it in regard of what had been in former times.

the Lord] The Son of God, not excluding the Father and Spirit.

shall be king] Be, and be acknowledged so to be, and what greater felicity to man, then to be under this King in his Kingdome, under his rule and protection?

over all the earth] Not so before, Psal. 76.1.& 147.19,20. Now the Son of God shall alone be acknowledged and worthipped for everlasting King of the world.

one Lord] Not many Lords, as Heathenish Idolaters, and superstitious people owned many, and worshipped many, every Nation their own gods, proprios penates, see 1 Cor. 8 5,6. Exod. 20. 3.13. He is a jealous God. Isa. 42. 8.

and his name one] He onely, and alone shall be acknowledged in his Church over all the earth, his Name preached, invocated, worshipped, and the worship of his name shall be one, and the same which himself prescribes. His religion and fervice shall not be adulterated, as formerly, John 3.22. nor his worship violated, and polluted, but be and abide pure and entire. See Ephes. 4. 4, 5.

V.10. All the Land] Figurative termes, taken from the hilly situation of Judea: to signifie, that all worldly height shall be beaten down, and the Church alone shall be glorified. As Isaiah 2. 2. and 40.4. Zech. 4.7. Also the amplitude and inlargement of the Church of Christ may hereby be typified.

turned as a plain] Before mountainous. See Exod. 15.17. Deut. 3.25. Isaiah 14.25. Ezek. 6.2. But now as Isa. 40.4.

from Geba to Rimmon] Geba and Rimmon were two confines of Judah, the one towards the North, and the other towards the South, Josh. 15.32.36. and 19.7. 1 Kings 15.27. Judg. 20.45.

and it shall be lifted up] Before, of the Land, now, of the City. Jerusalem before was encompassed with mountains, and so seated in a vally. Psal. 87.1. & 125.2. Now it shall be no more in a botton, but lifted up, and made conspicuous to be seen afar-off. See Esay 2.2.

and inhabited] Or, shall abide. Namely, the City shall abide, chap. 12. 6.

in her place] Though now in Zerubbabels time, in a narrower compasse, yet at last in its own and old place, as large as ever. It shall recover its ancient lustre and splendor. chap. 12.6. Jer. 30.18.

from Benjamins gate] By a similitude taken from the precinct of the eastly Jerusalem, as Jer. 31. 38,39,40. he doth imply a perfect re-establishment of the Church in all parts of it. Benjamins gate was on the North-side, going into the fields of Benjamin, to which tribe belonged that part of the City. Jer. 37.1,2,13.

unto the place of the first gate] It seemeth he meaneth the old gate, or the fish-gate, which was next it, Neh. 3.3,6. which was over against the second gate, Jer. 39. 3. Zeph. 1. 10. and so he meaneth the whole circuit of Jerusalem: Benjamins gate was on the North-east-side, from thence going to the corner-gate, which was on the North-west-side, they went along by the fish-gate, and from Hananels tower, they went the other compasse, from the South, to the Kings wine-presses, which were on the West-side, where these two half-circles did meet to make up a whole circle or compasse. Of the gates of Jerusalem, See Neh. 3. 1. &c. And the Annotations there. Of the gates of Jerusalem in Ezekiels vision, See Ezek. 48. 31. ——35.

unto the corner-gate] See 2 Chron. 26.9.& 25.23. Perhaps there was some tower there to make the corners.

unto the kings wine-presses] On the North, say some. And so from South to North.

V. 11. dwell in it] chap 11.6. and 8.4.8. and 2.4. Esay 6.11. Though now they were few dwellers in it; and in Nehemiahs time they were fain to cast lots to get dwellers in it; Neh. 11. 1,2. yet it should be a populous Citie.

safely inhabited] securely, without fear of enemies. See Ezek. 28. 26. 2 Chron. 20.30.

V. 12. And this shall be] Gods judgements upon the enemies of the Church. She shall not want enemies; but the shall be safe from them under Gods protection.

the plague] God will avenge her of her enemies. This may analogically be referred to the eternal punishment of the wicked.

all the people that have fought] Verse 3. Their multitudes need not to be a terrour to Jerusalem; though they match them not in numbers, yet Gods hand shall prevail, Esay 60. 12.

their flesh] The flesh of every one of them; as of one man.

shall consume away] See Ezek. 21. 7. and 24. 10. pine away, and waste.

while they stand] Presently, in a moment of time; and God will do it without humane help, that the vengeance of heaven may so the more appear. Deu. 28. 21, 22. Or thus, with relation to Hell-torment; Though he subsist, and live, and shall not die yet he shall be tormented everlastingly, still out-living his pain; having no end, that his pain may also be endlesse.

Their eyes, &c.] Some thus; Though they be alive, and can see, yet shall they be deprived of light, in infernal darknesse; having neither eyes nor understanding; but onely to see, and judge of their extream miserie. Yet others much rather, forgo not the former sense of Gods judgements upon the enemies of the Church in this world. The grievousnesse whereof is set forth under these similies and expressions. And many examples there are in histories of Gods like dreadful judgements upon the persons of notorious persecutors and enemies of the Church.

their tongues] See Luke 16. 24. Esay 13. 8.

V. 13. In that day] Of Gods victorie over his enemies.

a great tumult] Or vexation. Hos. 10. 14. And Gods secret hand is in it.

they shall lay hold] God shall cause them to fight one against another; as in the battell of Midian, Judg. 7. 22. and as among the Philistines, sending a sudden fear among them, 1 Sam. 14, 15. 20. And Christ fore-told the like, Matth. 24. 7.

shall rise up] To destroy one another, as 2 Chron. 20. 22, 23.

V. 14. And Judah also shall] Or, thou also, O Judah, shalt. The carnal and un-believing Jews shall also be enemies to Christs true Church. Or, as others, Judah also, that is, Gods Church shall help, in the third place (besides God himself, verse 12. and the enemies themselves, verse 13.) to fight against her enemies.

at Jerusalem] rather then against it. Though some would understand it, that Judah shall fight against Jerusalem, and apply it to the times of Antiochus Magnus, and Antiochus, Epiphanes, wherein many Jews sided with them against their brethren, and against Jerusalem, as the history of the Maccabees sheweth.

and the wealth of all the heathen] The Church shall plentifully and abundantly be enriched with the spoils of her enemies, as God made his people wealthy with the spoils of the Egyptians. Some make of this spirituall meanings and applications.

V. 15. The plague of the horse, &c.] God shall not onely destroy his enemies, v. 12. but even all the means and instruments they used for to afflict the Church.

as this plague] Which the men endure, v. 12, 13, 14.

V. 16. And it shall come to passe] Gods mercy and grace to the rest of the enemies, in their conversion to God, and to his true worship and service.

that every one] God shall save some among the enemies, whom he shall cause to turn to his true spiritual service, described here as in a shadow, by the ceremonial service of the Law, as Esay 66. 23.

shall even go up] Applying himself to the capacity of the Jewish people, he alludes to their manner of worship, under it shadowing the true and spiritual service of God, in the dayes of the Gospel.

to keep the feast of Tabernacles] Names one particular for all, comprehending the rest by a Synechdoche. See Lev. 23, 34. Nehe. 8. 14, 18. A figure, fay some, of the elects gathering together into particular Churches in this world, to which every one must reduce himself, for to partake of the communion of Saints, and of Gods grace. This Feast is called John 7. 2. Σκηνοπηγία, a pitching of tents, or setting up of booths, Deut. 16. 16. which the Jews kept in remembrance of Gods favour to them in the wildernesse where they dwelt in booths, Levit. 23. 43. And to shew their thankfulnesse for the fruits of the earth, reaped in this moneth, Deut. 16. 13, 14. And further, as some say, to figure out the coming of Christ into the world at this time of the year, to dwell in the Tabernacle of our flesh, John 1. 14. This feast may haply be named above that of the Passover, or that of weeks, not so much to signifie that we should be as wandring pilgrims in this world, as to import the admirable and wonderfull power of God to be seen in this second redemption and restauration of his Church, as memorable as that first deliverance out of Egypt, and specially that preservation of them in the wildernesse, where they dwelt forty years in Tents and Tabernacles, and therefore as their Fathers kept that Feast in memory thereof, so the Prophet takes occasion to allude thereunto, to intimate a like cause of their thankfulnesse and festivall rejoycing, for this spiritual, Evangelical deliverance. See Agge. 2. 1, 3. Plal. 84. 1. Amos 9. 11. Esay 33. 20, and 54. 2. Jer. 30. 18. Ezek. 37. 27.

V. 17. That who so will not] But continue obstinate, and obdurate, notwithstanding all means of conversion and grace afforded.

of all the families of the earth] When the partition-wall between Jew and Gentile is broken down.

unto Jerusalem] Not to tye Gods worship to Legal, Mosaical shadows, rights and ceremonies; Jerusalem is here so named, as was the feasts of Tabernacles: it is put for a type of Christs Church. See on verse 10 and that John 4. 21.

no rain] Gods revenge and malediction upon such refractory contemners of him, and his religion. The use of rain is mainly necessary for the maintenance of this life, Hos. 2. 21, 22. The want of it is a most dreadfull plague. See 1 Kings 17. 12. and 18. 5, 6. Amos 4. 7, 8. Deut. 28. 23, 24. And surely if the heavens be brasse, the earth must needs be iron. This then cuts off all sustenance, and comforts of this life. A direfull plague is intimated under this allegory. God shall impart none of his blessings to them: but they shall be cursed and plagued. Our LXX hath it thus, They shall be joyned to them.

V. 18. Family of Egypt go not up] Which was the ancientest enemie of the Church: which also seemed not to have much reason to fear the foresaid want of rain, because of the yearly over-flowing of Nilus. See Deut. 11. verse 10. But therefore, instead of that it is threatned with like plagues equivalent to the former. See Gen. 41. v. 30.

that have no] Heb. upon whom there is not: seldom any rain or need of any. See Psal. 105. 32. An hot countrey, and yet without rain. But wonderfully provided for by God, by the over-flowing of the river Nilus, as is famous in all histories.

the plague] That verse 12. Or, as was said, it shall be cursed of God, and undergo the like extremities, as other nations shall suffer that have no rain.

the Heathen that, &c.] See on v. 16, 17.

V. 19. This] He repeats it often, because it was a thing scarce credible, and yet a thing very usefull and needful to be believed, for the corroboration and comfort of the Church of God, and a terrour to the enemies thereof.

punishment] Or, sin. The Hebrew word is used for both. See 2. Cor. 5. 21. Gal. 3. 13. God will shew himself a revenger and maintainer of his own glory. Let no such prophane despisers think to escape un-punished. Heb. 2. 2, 3.

the feast of Tabernacles] At this feast Solomons Temple (a figure of Christs body, John 2. 19, 21.) was dedicated with great solemnity, and the Ark brought into it, 2 Chron. 5. 2, 3, 7, & 7. 10. And this feast we spiritually keep by belief in Christ, that his grace is sufficient for us; and that in all our infirmities the power of Christ resteth upon us to protect us, as a Tabernacle, 2 Cor. 12. 9. The first place where Israel encamped after they came out of Egypt, was called Succoth. That is, booths, Exod. 12. 37. See also on verse 16.

V. 20. Bells of the horses] Or, bridles, or collars, or trappings, or stables, as some translate it. Such usual in the Eastern countries. Judg. 8. 21, 26. both in war and in peace. The words are somewhat obscure, being taken from the manner of the Jewish worship. Having spoken of the horses overthrow, and other cattle of the enemies, verse 15. he addeth to make up the measure, that all their spoils, even the very deckings of the furniture, if they were of mettal, should be consecrated to God, to make utensils for his service: wherein he seems to have relation to that which Gideon did, Judg. 8. 26. The meaning is, God shall convert to his service in his Church, all such things, as before were employed against him. And yet further, we know that great riches, and ornaments were bestowed upon the Church by Christian Emperours, and Kings, and people. That story of Helena her causing to be put into the bridle of her son Constantine one of the supposed nails wherewith our Saviour was crucified, if true in it self, is nothing to the true meaning of this Text. Here God shall so be king over all the world, that all things shall be applied to his worship, sanctified to that use.

holinesse unto the Lord] This was engraven on the High Priests miter, as he was a type of that holy High Priest, our Saviour, Dan. 9. 24. Luk. 1. 35. and 4. 34. Acts 4. 27, 30. And all the things, and utensils, & appurtenances of the Temple, were counted, and so called, holy, in their kinde. The meaning here seems to be, that the meanest things of common and prophane use only heretofore, whether in war or peace, should now become holy, and be holily used, if not in the service of God, yet in the whole carriage and conversation of a mans life in all his actions: men should consecrate themselves and all they had to Gods service, and an holy use: in all their actions offering up a pure sacrifice to God, Rom. 12. 1. 1 Cor. 10. 31.

pots in the Lords house] Made of these bosses or Bels, say some. Or, the other pots formerly in use in the Temple. The meaning may be, that there shall be frequent sacrifices of thanksgiving, of which some parts were dressed in the temple, in the kitchins belonging to it Ezek. 46. 21, 23, 24. for the sacred Feasts, 1 Sam. 2. 15. And all this must be be understood of the spiritual service, which should be in the Christian Church, figured by the ancient ceremonial service; as Esay 60. 7. and 66. 23. Mal. 1. 11. And the meanest thing in this, shall be as precious as the most glorious things in the other. The meaner sort of things in sacred use, shall be advanced to an higher degree of esteem and holy employment, then before. The pots of the kitchen of the Temple shall become as the bowls of the Altar. As Esay 66, 20, 21. and 61. 6.

bowls before the altar] which were in very great number, for to receive the blood of the sacrifices, and to make the sprinklings. See 2 Chron. 4. 8. Ezra 1. 9, 10. Some understand this of the grates upon the Altar, Exod. 27. 4, 5. and 35. 16. and 38. 4.

V. 21. Yea, every pot] He seemeth to mean, that the spiritual service shall be every where yielded to God, even in the most ordinary actions of a Christians life. The meanest thing shall be converted to sacred use. There should be that reverence and fear of God in all the world, that whatsoever men went about to do, should be as an acceptable sacrifice to him; 1 Pet. 2. 5. Apoc. 1. 6.

in Jerusalem and in Judah] Not in the Lords house onely, verse 20. but in all the Church of Christ, in what citie, or kingdom soever.

shall be holinesse to the Lord] See on verse 20.

and all they that sacrifice] Numerous multitudes of people, nations and languages.

and take of them] As well as formerly they did take pots in the Lords house; and use them to seeth therein the sacrifices. But those now should not be able to suffice such multitudes. All along there are still allusions to the Levitical manner of Gods service.

And all this should serve for encouragement to the Jews in their present undertaking for the building of the Temple: (the present intendment of Zechariah his prophecy) seeing that notwithstanding their paucity, and all poor appearances, their many difficulties and discouragements, small helps and mighty enemies; yet all those glorious promises in their day & time should be effected and fulfilled.

there shall be no more the Canaanite] Though now in this sad estate and calamitous condition of all things, the Samaritane, Canaanite, and other Heathens were mixed among them; who seemed them and their religion, and opposed them; Ezra 4. and 5. Chapters; and so after, Neh. 4. & 6. Chapters, yet God would in that day cleanse and purge, and rid his Church of them. See on 9. 8. Esay 35. 8. and 52. 1. and 65. 25. Joel 3. 17. Nahum 1. 15. Apoc. 21. 27. & 22. 15. True it is, that the floor of Christs Church contains both chaffe, and wheat; his field tares among the good corn; the net of the Gospel doth catch fish, both good and bad; yet this also is a truth, a truth in comparison, and in relation to that corrupt state of things before this purgation and renovation; ch. 13. 9. And true it is that God shall thus cleanse his mysticall Church, composed of true Believers and elect, from the mixture of all prophane persons. And upon Christs second coming, this promise shall receive its full verification in all perfection. Some for Canaanite here trunslate merchant. And indeed the word signifieth also so much. And say they, He seemeth to have a special relation to the abuse of merchandizing, and selling which was used in the Temple, Math. 21. 12. John 2. 15. And they run upon other allegories hereupon, after their own fancies. But these are the strains only of mens wits, varying from the plain meaning and intent of the text.

ANNOTATIONS on the Book of the Prophet MALACHI.

THE ARGUMENT.

MAlachi, (his name in Hebrew signifieth Angel or Messenger) endeth the Prophets: and seems to fall in, and to correspond with Nehemiahs thirteenth Chapter, comparing Mal. 2. 11. & chap. 3. 8. with Nehem. 13, 3, 4. and verse 10. &c. & verse 27, &c. He prophesied to Israel, viz. to all the people of the several Tribes which were returned from Babylon; after the re-edifying of the Temple; and also, after Haggai and Zechariah; confirming their turned from Babylon; after the re-edifying of the Temple; and also, after Haggai and Zechariah; confirming their doctrine, and carrying on the reformation of what was yet corrupt and defective, either in Gods service, or in the Israelites life and conversation. And first, he putteth them in minde of their free election, the onely ground of Gods continued favour in their preservation. Then doth he reprove and threaten them for false dealing in the Covenant; for their prophaning Gods service; and other vices of all sorts, as idolatry, adultery, false oaths, sacrilege, blasphemies, mixing themselves in unlawful marriages, injustice, and violence; vices, which had spread far, and invaded not onely the common people, but Priests and Levits also. Moreover, he calleth them to repentance, promising grace and blessing to all Believers in the coming of the Messiah Christ, the Sun of Righteousnesse, with healing in his wings: Before whom the Messenger or fore-runner, John the Baptist (who is called also by this Prophet, Elias the Prophet, chap. 4. 5.) must come, before the coming of the great & dreadful day, viz. that fiery apparition of the Son of God in the flesh, accompanied also with consuming powers of fire down, ch. 3. 2. & 4. 1. After John the Messenger to prepare the way, Christ the Messenger of the Covenant, or Mediator and foundation of the Covenant of grace with Gods elect, should suddenly come into that re-edified Temple, work the salvation of his people, call in the Nations, make his Church Catholike and one, to that re-edified Temple, work the salvation of his people, call in the Nations, make his Church Catholike and one, by joyning Jews and Gentiles. And because the Israelites must look for no more Prophets till the great Prophet was born, he referreth them to Moses, who spake of this Prophet to come, whom all must hear, or be cut off, bidding them to remember his Law in the mean-while, till Christ come to accomplish the Covenant: whose coming would be terrible to the wicked, but joyful to the godly. Zechariah and Malachi are the last Prophets, and end the Old Testament. The same names, not persons, the New Testament beginneth with al. One Zecharias was John Baptists father: and John Baptist himself was that Malachi, or Messenger that Elijah foretold here, chap. 3. 1. & ch. 4. vers. 5, 6. As we see Luke 1. 76. & chap. 7. 27. Matth. 11. 10. The Evangelist Luke beginneth the Gospel with Zecharias, and Mark beginneth it with Malachi; that is, Messenger, namely, John the Baptist. So sweetly in speeches hath God joyned the Old and New Testament, to face one another, as the Cherubims over the Ark, that the bid Apochrypha might not be in the Canon of the Bible. In Hebrew these Apochryphal Books are not: the New Testament citeth them not: yet most of them are of much worth, containing many worthy documents in them, and specially the Hystory of the Maccabees is of singular use for the interpretation of the two last Chapters of Daniel: and part of the 2.7. and 8. Chapters. Generally they Malachi threatneth the Priests, chap. 1. and 2. and the people, chap. 2. from the coming of John Baptist, chap. 3. and of Christ, chap. 4. And all this, much in a dialogue-wise and manner.

to Israel] That is, to all the people of several Tribes which were returned from Babylon. And they were chiefly of Judah, Benjamin and Levi: they here are called Israel. They which remained still behind in Babylon, and the Persian Empire, scarce deserved the name of Israel. The greatest part of this Book contains judgements, against Israel for their sins, God spares not his own people, 1 Pet. 4. 17. Jer. 25. 29. Amos 3. 2.

called Malachi, chap. 3. 1. and again Elias, chap. 4. v. 5. Saint Mark beginneth his Gospel with Malachi, or Angel: Gabriel in the first speech of the New Testament beginneth with Elias, Luke 1. verse 17. so sweetly in words hath God joyned the Old and New Testament, that the hid Apocrypha appeareth never to be breathed by Gods Spirit, nor to be any part of the Canon or rule of faith. Some Writers have imagined this Malachi to be Ezra; but without any grounds for it. He prophecied last of all after the Temple was rebuilt, and finished. He brings here nothing of his own, but faithfully reports what he receives from the Lord. 1 Cor. 11. 23. 1 Tim. 3. 16. 2 Pet. 1. 21.

V. 2. I have loved you] With a free love in your election, and the benefits flowing thence. Thus God begins with an expostulation, and exprobation, recounting his benefits, to render thereby their ingratitude and sinfulnesse the more odious, in that they requite so loving a God with so great unkindnesse, so good a God with so great evil. This love was not that generall love wherewith he loved all mankind, but his special love where-with he loved Israel; whom he chose to be his peculiar people above all other people; and entered into a gracious Covenant with them, Deut. 7. 6, 7, 8. And this not out of any worth or merit in them, Deut. 7. 7. But out of his own meer good-will, free favour and pleasure, Deuter. 10. 14, 15. 1 Sam. 12. 22. He might have said, I have created you, and prefied them to their duty thereupon, and argued their ingratitude in requiting him so evilly. But this love is much more, and aggravates their ill requitall of this love much the more.

yet ye say] They would willingly and wickedly shift off, extenuate, obliterate this gracious love of God. This is mans cursed corrupt nature.

wherein hast thou loved us] This shews the senselessnesse, and stupidity of their ingratefull minde; not acknowledging any love, or fruit of love received. They likely minding onely their afflictions; wherein they were as deep as any other nation.

was not Esau Jacobs brother] An elder brother too. But this he omits, as sufficiently known. Consider this the principall effect of my love; in that of meer grace I have chosen you to be my people, in your father Jacob; rejecting Esau, his brother, equall in all other things to him: whereupon all my blessings have dropped down upon you, as your preservation, deliverance from captivity, and re-establishment; whereof the Edomites, from Esau, have not been partakers. And thus he fetcheth it afar off, derives it from the well-head, and recounts it from the beginning. Somewhat alike is that, Jer. 2. 5, 6, 7. and Micah 6. 3, 4, 5. This free Covenant is the sure argument and pledge of his love. And whereas he might have drawn his argument from Abraham, and his choosing of him, and rejecting the rest of the world, he rather takes it from two of his grand-children, brethren in the same family, twins by birth; and his choosing of the one (their progenitor) and his casting off the other.

yet I loved Jacob] And extends it to the love of election, Rom 9. And no such love as the love of election to salvation. It is the fountain of all graces; and of all blessings, so farre as blessings; such only are exempt from condemnation, and are heirs of glory. See 2 Thess. 2. 13. This love was not for Jacobs good works fore-seen, by the free use of his own free-will. Augustine accounts this subtilty a great absurdity. This was before he was born, Gen. 25. 23. Rom. 9 11, 12, 13. works there, though fore-seen, are directly excluded, v. 11, 16. good works flow from it, as the effect, not the cause of it, Ephes. 1. 4. As also vocation, faith, regeneration, salvation, Act. 13. 48. yea Christ himself as Mediatour is under the decree of election. As the end is first thought on, before the means, Ephes. 1. 4, 5. All mankinde were created alike in Adam, and fell alike in Adam: And it is God now that makes them differ one from another, 1 Cor. 4. 7. He doth it according to the good pleasure of his will, which he had purposed in himself, to the praise of the glory of his grace, Ephes. 1. 5, 6, 9. Neither needed the Apostle to collect these circumstances, Rom. 9. had he not purposed to prove it, to be onely in the good pleasure of his will, Matt. 11. 26. He is bound to no man; but his mercy is the cause of his mercy, Rom. 9. 15, 18. As also his good pleasure was the meer cause he made us men, and not beasts; and chose the seed of Abraham before all other nations. If we should seek for the causes of these things out of God in the creature, we should run into a maze, and finde our selves in an endlesse labyrinth. And for man herein to finde out quarrels against Gods doing; to seek to measure his infinite wildom by the scantling of his own reason; and to subject him and his soveraign power to his creatures will, is insolency, and impudency, altogether intolerable, Esay 45. 9. Rom. 9. 19 —— 24. He calleth upon all by the generall Promises of the Gospel; But the efficacy thereof depends upon the secret pleasure of his will, Rom. 9. 16. 1 Cor. 3. 6, 7. Christ died for all; so that whosoever believeth in him should be saved by him: and belief is the free gift of Gods grace to his elect, and the great work of his power in them: Neither herein is the use of free-will taken away, or any Stoical Fate brought in place thereof; But God that works the will, knows how sweetly to frame and incline it.

V. 3. And I hated Esau] Jer. 49. 17, 18. Ezek. 35. 7. 9. Obad. v. 16, 17, 18. I have given him no part in my grace; but have left him, as a sinner and corrupt, under my wrath and judgement; which I have also declared in his inexpirable destruction, which hath not befaln you, nor can befall my Church, which hath alway a remainder, and an issue out of her evils, Jer. 31. verse 36. Others thus; That this love and hatred is spoken of comparatively, as Gen. 25. 28, and 29. 31. and Luk. 14. 16. expounded Matth. 10. 37. And is extended here chiefly to the posteritie of Jacob and Esau. And that this love and hatred here is taken for, and intends the benefits proceeding from the one, and the displeasures and discommodities proceeding from the other. And that in all this no spirituall good or evil is much intended or meant: But temporall things; as birth-right to Jacob, and a fairer inheritance, and a dominion in his posterity over Esaus posterity, according to that, Gen. 25. 23. & 27. 29. Nor doth Malachi instance here in any spirituall thing. And that Saint Paul, Rom. 9. 11. teaching the doctrine of Gods free election and preterition, according to the meer purpose and pleasure of his own will, doth alledge this Text in Malachi, in this wise, and to this purpose; That, as it was free to God, to deal thus diversly with Jacob and Esau, in temporall things, without any respect to any merits of theirs, so it is free to God to deal with men in spirituall things, even in the point of election ad preterition, according to his purpose and pleasure from all eternity, before the one party, or the other were born. And that the repentance spoken of, Heb. 12. v. 17. was not any spirituall repentance which Esau then did so seek to finde in himself, but the repentance or change of minde in Isaac, to re-call and alter the blessing, which Esau did so eagerly then sue for, and could not finde or procure that alteration to be in Isaac, that he would repent him of what he had done.

and laid his mountains] Seir was a mountainous country, of rough and craggy mountains. And thither Esau betook himself, forsaking Canaan, and his fathers house; quitting to the Promised land, destinated by God to his own people; as he had before prophanely sold away his birth-right. And here is a further argument of God his fore-said love to the Jews, more then to the posterity of Esau, taken from the present state of both nations: He brought back the Jews at this time into their own Country; not so the Edomites, but laid and left their Country wast.

for the dragons] Which have their dwelings in deserts and unfrequented places. See Job 30. 29. Esay 13. 29. & 34. 13. Jer. 49. 33. & 51. 37.

V. 4. we are impoverished, but, &c.] The like is Esay 9. 9, 10. Thus wicked men oppose themselves to the power of God and the course of his judgements and providence.

but I will throw down] If they think and labour to be restored out of their calamities and repaired, as you are from the desolations which have befallen you by the Chaldeans, they shall finde themselves deluded, Jer. 49. verse 7, 17. Ezech. 25. 12, &c. Obad. verse 17. 1 Macc. 5. 3. 2 Macc. 10. v. 16, 17, 23. The Persians dealt much better with the Jews in their return, then with the Idumeans, Psal. 137. 1.

the border of wickedness] A wicked, cursed people. Contrariwise Jerusalem, Zech. 8. 3. Jer. 3. 17. Esay 1. 26. and 60. 14.

for ever] Without any hope of return and reparation, Jer. 49. 7. —— 33. as in the over-throw of Sodom and Gomorrah, Ezech. 25. verse 12, 14. Obad. v. 1. God deals not so with his own people; His chastisements are but for a time to them, and for their good, Psal. 89. 31, 32, 33. Esay 54. 7, 8. and 27. 7, 8, 9. 2 Cor. 4. 8, 9. Psal. 118. 18.

V. 5. And your eyes shall see] See it so still, as you do see it now; never better with them.

and ye shall say,] Though ye for your part wold bury the memory of this judgement against them, and extenuate the mercy vouchsafed to you, yet the thing it self shall force this confession from you.

the Lord be magnified] Thus should we have our eyes open upon the judgements of God, and celebrate the praise of the power and justice of God, in the desolation of his enemies, Apoc. 19. verse 1, 2, 3, 4.

from the border of Israel] Or, upon. Heb. from upon, Even from his holy Temple, the place of his abode, from whence he sheweth the glory of his power, to the destruction of his enemies. Or, they shall see it from their own habitations. So conspicious shall Gods judgements be upon the Edomites.

V. 6. A son] A grievous charge, and contestation against many sins of the Israelites. And first against their contempt and profanation of Gods worship; charged upon the Priests, and prosecuted to the tenth verse of the next chapter. The duty of a son to his father, and of a servant to his master is famously known, by the law of nature, and nations; of God, and man. And the right and soveraignty that fathers and masters have in this case is likewise acknowledged, Eph. 6 1, 2, 3. Deut. 27. 16. Prov. 30. 17. And again, Mat. 8. 9. 1 Tim. 6. 1. 1 Pet. 2. 18.

if then] God was the Father of the Jews; not onely by the common right of Creation, as he is the Father of the rain, Job 38. verse 28. and of all mankind, chap. 2. 10. But by his special right of adoption of them, and gracious Covenant with them, above all all others, Deut. 32. verse 6. Esay 63. verse 16. Jer. 31. verse 9.

And if] God was their Lord, not onely as he is the Lord of hosts, of all his creatures, the Lord of Lords; but in right of speciall title, acquisition, redemption, and dominion over them, 1 Chron. 17. 21, 22. John 13. 13.

where is mine honour? where is my fear?] Where? no where; as 1 Cor. 1. 20. & 12. 17. Job 20. 7. Thus in both rights God complains of the want of his Honour; 1 Tim. 1. 17. and 6. 16. Apoc. 4. 11. & 5. 12, 13. See Act. 12. v. 23, and of his fear: without which there can be no Piety; The fear of God being the fountain of it; such a fear as is here intimated, a filiall fear, mixed with love, 1 Pet. 1. v. 17 But these wanted both love, and fear, to draw them to obedience. Luk. 6. 46.

O Priests!] The former argumentation and contestation stands good against all the Jews, of all forts and callings. But he now applies it to the Priests specially, that should have been guides to the rest by doctrine and example, to bring them on to honour, and fear God, and should have reproved their neglect; but themselves prov'd ring-leaders to the contrary, and hardned others by their example.

that despise my name] A grand crime. Verse 11, 14. and 2. 2. Holy and Reverend is his name, Psal. 111. verse 9. great, glorious, and fearfull, Deut. 28. 58. And he whose name is Jealous, is jealous of the glory of it; Exod. 34. 14. See the commandment, Exod. 20. 7. Lev. 18. 21. The prayer, Mat. 6. 9. And that of Joshuah chap. 7. 9. 1 Sam. 12. 22. Psal. 8. 1. & 29. 2. & 66. 2.

and ye say, wherein, &c.] He noteth their grosse hypocrisie, which would not see their faults, but impudently cloaked them, and so were blinde guides. They were blinde at home, could not see the beams in their own eyes, and therefore grew haughty, insolent, presumptuous, their neck was an iron sinew and their brow brass, as Esay 48. 4. bold to out-face and deny open crimes, and to scorn all checks, and reproofs for them. They harden their fore-head, and impudently demand wherein, &c. And such sinners are never wanting in the world.

V. 7. To offer] Or bring unto, &c. Ye take it, and accept it of the people, and offer it.

polluted bread] Either that for the shew-bread, Exod. 25. 30. fresh set every Sabbath, Levit. 24. 5, 8. See 1 Sam. 21. 4, 6. Or for the meat-offerings, Lev. 2. Or bread taken more generally for sacrifices, Levit. 22. 24. Polluted, not lawfull, nor acceptable, being defective, Levit. 22. 20. Deut. 15. v. 21. When of other kinde, or otherwise used, then the Law prescribed. See Hag. 1. 14. Ezech. 4. 13. & 22. 26. A grievous sin it is to pollute Gods holy ordinances, and worship. Levit. 19. 8. Num. 18, 32. Ezech. 23. 38.

upon my Altar] Golden Table of shew-bread, in the Temple, or brazen Altar of burnt-offerings, in the Court.

wherein, &c.] He noteth their grosse hypocrisie, which would not see their faults, but impudently cloaked them: and so were blinde guides. Thus again Hypocrites and wicked men are ready to justifie themselves: Luk. 16. 15. 1 Sam. 15. 20. They plead and pretend innocency, and that they are unjustly taxed. See Levit. 3. 11. & 4. 6. & 6. 16. & 21. 6, 8, 17.

In that ye say] Thus against such men must their sin be particularised. Else they will shift off, and winde themselves out of generall accusations. They said it, though not in words, yet in deeds. 2 Tim. 3. 5.

the Table of the Lord is contemptible] Before Altar; here Table. See Ezech. 41. 22. & 44. 16. Their fence is, the Temple and the Altar fence the return from Captivity are so poor and different from the ancient splendour they were in, that they do not deserve to have such exact care taken of the beasts which are offered there, as formerly in the first Temple, fee Zech. 4. 10. Or thus, they sleighted the service and worship of God, as a thing not much to be regarded. And this is an heavy sin, sleightly to heed, and to perform the worship of God, without regard to the Majesty of God, v. 14. Or the Holinels of his worship, see Esa. 1. 12.

V. 8. And if ye offer the blinde] Forbidden, Lev. 22. 22, 23, 24. Deut. 15 21. & 17. 1. It was the peoples sin, to bring such to be offered. And the Priests sin to take, and offer them and not to reject them, and reprove them for it, and stand to vindicate and maintain Gods Law therein, and the right of his service. Ezech. 22. 26. Some imagine the Priests to receive good and lawfull sacrifices from the people, and to change them for these; or if such evil ones from the people, yet to say, rather such then none. Wicked Hypocrites think any thing good enough for God; and pious men think nothing good enough for him. Blinde and ignorant services: lame and halting services are, when there is action without affection; the lips without the heart; double-mindednesse and hypocrisie. Sick, or faint, and languishing services are, that come coldly from us, without any life or vigour of the inner-man, and these are all vile and odious. God is a Spirit, and will be served in spirit and truth. Some read the words without an interrogation, as if they were the words of the Priests, maintaining that there was no evil in doing so, in sacrificing such. Indeed God seems to neglect, sleight, or reject, all sacrifices, Hos. 6. v. 6. Micah. 6. v. 6. Psal. 50. v. 8. 9 —— 14. Esay 1. 11. & 66. 3. Jer. 7. 21, 23. But all this is spoken comparatively; and when they were performed by Hypocrites and wicked men; without any heed to the true end and use of the sacrifice, and the spirituall service therein; without any life or motion of the inner-man. And yet these Priests by this neglecting and polluting these eternall ceremonies and sacrifices, shew thereby that they had clean cast off all manner of Piety.

offer it now] He reproacheth them; shewing that a mortall man would not be content to be so served.

unto thy Governours] As were Zerubbabel, Nehemiah, and others under the Empire of Persia, who had their provision assigned them upon the people, Nehe. 5. 14, 15.

will he be pleased] Nothing less. And yet what they dare not do to men, that they presume to do to God. And the world is too full of such sinners.

V. 9. Beseech] An ironicall Permission or Injunction. Go to, do so, try the issue. This indeed belonged to their office and duty; The Priests were to pray and intercede for the people, Numb. 6. 23. Joel 2. 17. And so likely they did, when they offered the people sacrifices. They sustained in some fort the office of Christ our Mediator 1 Sam. 12. 19, 23. He derideth the Priests, who did bare the people in hand that they prayed for them; and sheweth Gods disregard thereof, and that they were the occasion that these evils came upon the people.

God] Heb. The face of God.

this hath been by your means] Heb. from your hand. While by your means things go thus; and you thus carry your selves towards God, polluting thus and prophaning his worship. The sins of the Priests, and specially in the Points of Gods service are grievous sins, and cryed out upon, Chap. 2. 8, 9. Zeph. 3. verse 4. Micah. 3. 11. Hos. 6. 9. Ezech. 22. 26. Lam. 4. 13. Jer. 2. 8. & 5. 30, 31. & 6. 13. And the sins of the people are oft imputed to them.

will he regard?] This interrogation implies a strong and vehement negation. Will God consider your office and state, seeing you are so Covetous, and profane contemners of his service? An heavy judgement of God it is, to have our prayers rejected. Esay 1. v. 15. Prov. 1. 28. Jer. 11. 11. & 14. 12. Micah. 3. verse 4 Zech. 7. 13. Causes hereof are noted, Jam. 4. 3. John 9 31. Psal. 66. 18. Prov. 28. 9 & 21. 13. Jam. 1 67. 1 Tim. 2. 8.

V. 10. who is there, &c.] He insists still upon the Priests sins in Gods service; which indeed ruined all Religion in the people. The Levites, Porters to the doors of the Court, and the Priests that were to open and shut the doors of the Temple, were all faulty. Because the Levites which kept the doors did not try whether the sacrifices that came in, were according to the Law, God wisheth them that they would rather shut the doors, then to receive such as were not perfect. Or rather, He chargeth them with self-seeking in their ministeriall services in the Temple, That they did it for their own gain and profit take; and else would not do it for any care of Gods worship, which if they yet minded, he would surely bless them, as it is chap. 3. 10. But seeing they did otherwise; it was bur in vain for them thus to sacrifice, both illegall sacrifices, and with a covetous self-seeking minde. God appoints means and maintenance for his Ministers; 1 Cor. 9. 7. —— 15. Hates Covetousnesse in them, 1 Tim. 3. 3. Esay 56. 11. and will be worshipped according to the prefript rule of his Word and Law.

for nought] for I do recompence you largely for your service, by tithes, first-fruits, offerings, &c. And therefore your neglect of duty is the more odious. Esay 5. 4. 1 Sam. 15. 17. 2 Sam. 12. 7. But yet in vain ye do it, doing it in that manner.

no pleasure in you] In the generality of you, in the most, a remnant yet were reserved according to the election of grace.

neither I will accept] If the person be not accepted, neither will the offering be, Gen. 4 4. Hag. 2. 14. See Esay 1. 11. &c. Jer. 6. 20. Amos 5. 21.

V. 11. For from the rising of the Sun] Another judgement of God, that he would take away his worship from them; and vouchsafe it to the Gentiles. The Jewes thought God was tyed to them, he could not be God, unless they were his Church, he should not be worshipped at all, unless worshiped by them. Indeed great were their priviledges, Deut. 4. verse 7, 8. 33, 34. Psal. 147. v. 10. But they forgot that Deut. 32. verse 21. God needed them not, They were but a final Nation. He could and would have all the world, the Gentiles to worship him. He rejecting them, verse 10. would finde out others, even substitute the numerous nations of the Gentiles in their stead, Rom. 10. 16. Thus here as a punishment to the Jews, he fore-tels the calling of the Gentiles. So Mat. 21. 43. Act. 13. 46, 47. & 18. 6. & 22. 21. Sometimes it is promised, as a blessing to them at least to the Godly amongst them, a blessing, by the propagation of the Gospel, and the worship of God thereby. So Zech. 8. 23. Esay 66. 12. and 60. 3, 4, 5. and 49. 22.

my name shall be great] The knowledge of it, and of the right worship of it. That place, Psal. 113. 3. and that 8. 1. Comes short of this, and contains only the general praise of Gods name, as he is in himself, and appears in his glorious works and creatures.

among the Gentiles] an excellent prophecie of the calling of the Gentiles: as there are many like.

and in every place] Nor in Judea only. Act. 10. verse 34, 35. Mat. 13. 10. Luk. 24. 47. 1 Tim. 2. 8. & 3. 16. 2 Tim. 1. 11. Eph. 2. 17. 18. incen- incense] Here the Prophet that was under the Law framed his words to the capacity of the people; and by the altar and sacrifices he meaneth the spiritual service of God which should be under the Gospel, when an end shall be put to all these legall ceremonies by Christ only sacrifice: as Esay 66.23 Zech.14.16. Mal.3.4. See John 4.21,23.1 Tim.2.8. See Heb.13.10.

and a pure offering] The offerings and sacrifices of the New Testament, are prayer, praise, thanks, charity, obedience, and the like. Heb.13.15,16. Rom.12.1. 1 Pet.2.5. Apoc.1.6. And these are pure, that is, pure from hypocrisie, and in comparison of the offerings of the hypocritical and wicked Jews; pure in sincerity and integrity; and in acceptation for Christs offering. The Papists drawing this Text to the defence of their Mass, is a childish trick, an argument of the forlorne hope, and signe of a desperate cause, when impurely and impiously they wrest this, and apply it to their masse-cake. Not unlike to this place is that, Jonah 2.28.

my name shall be great] Redoubled; because it was to them, at this time, scarce credible.

V.12. But] Here is a reason rendered why God will translate his worship and religion to the Gentiles.

ye] Priests principally: though in its degree it may belong to all, as too true in all.

have prophaned it] Polluted my Name, fleighted, vilipended it, esteemed it as a prophane and common thing, as a trivolous matter. Or thus, ye have dishonoured the Name of God, bearing no reipect, nor obedience to what he hath commanded; which is the occasion of rejecting the Jews and their service. See that Heb.10.29. Zeph.3. verse 4. Ezek.44.7,8. and 43.8. and 36.17 ——— 24. and 20.39.

In that ye say] See on vers.7. Though they uttered not these blasphemies with their mouth, yet their deeds proclaimed them: Their actions spake to much.

the Table of the Lord] Some thus; The altar hath been spoiled by the Chaldeans: and the sacrifices are not offered with that ancient sacred solemnity. See verse 7. and the Annotations there. It is an high point of dishonouring the Name of God, either basely to judge of, or perfunctorily to perform the worship of God. 1 Cor. 11. 29. Ezek.33.31. Eccl.5.1. Heb 12.28.

and the fruit thereof, &c.] Whereby is meant whatsoever is offered upon the Altar. Some understand it that the Priests should account the means and maintenance they received by serving the Table and Altar of the Lord to be but base and contemptible. Others rather, That they so dis-esteemed the service of the Lords Table and Altar, that they counted any kinde of bread and sacrifices good enough for them; and therefore heeded not so much to observe strictly the letter of the Law, in having and offering the best. And thus by their open contempt of the outward rights, ordained by God for the necessary help of humane infirmity, they bewrayed the prophane impiety and atheism of their hearts, as clean void of all religion.

V.13. Ye said also] Here the sin is yet more particularly charged upon them. See on verse 7.

what a wearinesse] Though you do me but little service, and that after an ill manner, yet you complain of it, as if it were a burden to you, Hypocrites pretend, and proclaim muchtyes, and that whē they perform least. See 2 Kings 10.16. Mat.23,5. Joh.12.43. Emptieft vessels sound lowdest. Whereas a found heart performs most, and pretends least. And yet they are soon weary, and tire, and grow impatient and murmuring, even in that outward hypocritical service it self, as Amos 8.5. And this for want of love to God, and delight in his service. 1 John 5.3. 1 Pet.2.3. See Psal.1.verse 2. & 42.2. & 110.3. Esay 58.13. Gen.19.20.

and ye have snuffed at it] In scorn and disdain and dislike; Or, ye have puffed and blown, as weary and over-laboured, with the burden and weight of the sacrifices; whereas ye might have blown them away (and so the word may be translated) they were so lean and thin.

and ye brought] This toucheth both Priests and People.

torn] By wilde beasts, and so maimed, or half-dead. See Ezek.4. 14. Lev.22.8.

and the lame] See on verse 8. In all the sacrifices Gods aim was this, to exercise his people thereby in Faith and Repentance; to see therein the desert of their sins, and the perfect expiation of them by the sacrifice and death of Christ that immaculate Lamb of God, who was to come.

V.14. But cursed] The issue of that sin formerly spoken of. The curse of God is the reward of all sin. Deut.27.26. Gal.3.10. And is oft applyed to sundry particulars, as here.

the deceiver] That would deal fraudulently, and falf-heartedly with God. This reacheth the people as well as the Priests. With men many deal deceitfully; as Gen.34.13. 2 Sam.3.27. Psal.35.20. and 52.4. Acts 13.10. And such the Lord abhors; Psal.5.verse 6. and.55.23. But to seek to deal deceitfully with God, to dally with him is foolish in it self, and much more abominable to him. Yet such there are, Jer.9.6. Hos.11.12. such as do not proceed plainly nor directly in Gods service: but having abilitie to serve the Lord according to his word, yet will do it according to their base covetous minde. Or such as will wash the out-side of the platter, and be as painted sepulchres: but all foul within. These may deceive men with their fair shewes; Luke 16.15. and their own selves too, James 1.22. but not God. They cannot so mock him that seeth the heart, nor escape his judgements by such silly shifts.

which hath in his flock] Or, in whose flock is, a male] Without any blemish according to the Law of burnt-offerings, Levit. 1.3.10. because that in sacrifices of thanksgiving females were also accepted of, Lev.1.3,6.

and voweth] See on Jonah 1.16.

a corrupt thing] Vows must not be rashly made; but rightly and exactly performed. See on Jonah 1.16. These were fordid and base in their performances.

for I am a great King] However fleighted by you, in your services. Far above an earthly governour, verse 8. See Psal. 47.2. In Gods service we should ever duely weigh him with whom we have to deal, Eccl. 5.2. His greatnesse should humble us; and that in reverence and fear, Heb. 12.28, 29.

among the Heathen] And much more should it be among you. And shall be there, when Christ shall come and take the possession of his kingdom; and not place his Name in Jerusalem onely, and in the Temple of Sion; as he hath hitherto done, and you think he must still do.

CHAP. II.

Verse 1. And now O ye Priests] He insists upon the same point; returns prefently to the Priests, and falls upon them. And thus Ministers may and must reprove states, and persons, Hos. 5.1. 1 Tim.5.20. As Christ did the Scribes, Pharisees, Lawyers, &c. John Baptist the Publicans, Sadducees, Souldiers, Herod, Nathan, David: Paul the incestuous person.

this commandement is for you] Here the Prophet deals with the Priests principally; because they themselves should first give glory to Gods Name; and by their office procure others to do it likewise. Therefore the charge is laid upon them; and the curse in case of failer. It was their duty & function to see to the preservation, and intire observance of religion, and Gods service and worship in its purity, and to avoid the pollution of it. They in their place, as it is the Magistrates duty in his place. The Priests doing their parts, would have kept the people to its; they durst not then so transgresse: But the Priests neglect or connivence was enough to animate the people to their mis-doings. And therefore he accuseth the Priests as the Authors of all, and guilty of all.

V.2. If] This implies then the aversion of the judgement in case of Repentance, and Obedience. And to this end God threatens, that we might prevent the execution. So true is that which he professeth of himself, Ezek.33.11.& 18.31. Jer.18.7. &c.

ye] This reacheth also to the people, next after the Priests; as appears in the curse.

will not hear] Here is the cause of the curse; that they will not give God audience; and that when he speaks for their good and amendment, to prevent the malediction; but flep their ears against him. A cause so just as leaves them no cause to complain of his too severe proceeding against them. See Zech.7.11,12.

lay it to heart] This expounds the former; without this the former is counted no hearing. As good not heard, as not laid to heart. It must be attended, pondered, finde place, and its due authority in us, and so obeyed. As Prov.24.32. Ezek.44.5. Hag.1.5. and 2.15.

To give glory to my Name] By your amendment and obedience. As the contrary brings dishonour and blasphemy to my name. See Matth.5.16. John 15.8. and again, 2 Sam.12.4. Ezek.20.27. and 36. 20,21,22.

I will even sent a curse] God the author and inflicter of judgements, Secondary means are but his instruments. Amos 3.6. Esay 45. 7. Job 5.6. Haggai 1.11. Hos. 6.1. And he sends his curse upon sin, Levit. 26.14. Deut. 28. 15. And specially for corruptions in religion, and in the manner of his worship; and for the contempt of his word.

curse your blessings] Namely, those blessings which God had bestowed upon them in all the good things pertaining to this life, as Testimonies of his gracious goodnesse, and fatherly favour towards them; as those Lev.26.4.&c. and Deut. 28. 2.&c. Or those blessings wherewith the Priests blesse the people in their prayers for them; as Numb.6.23. ——— 27. Or both.

already] And yet are not bettered and amended by them: so little do ye profit and I prevail by my corrections. A sin too common in the world. Esay 1.5.2. Chron.28.22. Jer.6.29,30.

because] He is at this sin again; because he cannot endure the contempt of his word. This is the main cause, and the procurer of Gods curse.

V.3 Behold, I] Calls them to consider it is he that will do it. And therefore no power can hinder it, nor their vain pretences, presumptuous imaginations, or self-conceited shews or shifts, under which they did seek to shelter themselves.

will corrupt your seed] Or, reprove, check, I will curse your seed, and cause it not to increase or yeeld an harvest. Here is one particular of the curse, sterility and barrennesse. Let them sow as they list, God will curse it. Hag.1.6,9,10,11. and 2.16,17. Vulgar Latin, will cast out an arme unto you.

dung] I will make you abject, and abominable, v. 9. and will degrade you from your sacred honour, putting you from before me, as the dung of sacrifices, which were offered upon festival dayes, was carried away out of sight, see Lev.4.11,12. see Jer.9.22. Zeph.1.17. like that Nahum 3.6.

the dung of your solemn feasts] Which were three principal. Your sacrifices then which were a sweet-smelling savour to me, Exod. 29. 18. Lev.1.13. Now are as dung in my nostrils, you have so polluted and defiled them, and are polluted and defiled your selves. Hag. 2. 13,14. These which you so much trust to, and glory in, I will turn into your shame. See Esay 1.v.11, 14. and 66. 3. A fearful sin and dreadful case, when our holy things become thus abominable to God, and we so hateful in the use of them.

take you away with it] Or, it shall take you away to it, ye shall be wholly as dung, and fit to be taken away with it, used as the dung and dirt of the streets.

V.4. And ye] Priests.

shall know] By experience, Or, should have known and acknowledged, or have known & appealing thus to the Priests own consciences for the knowledge of these things hereafter following, concerning their duty, and the primary practice of it. See on Zech.2.9. Jer. 44.28.

this Commandment] This v.1.

that my covenant might be with Levi] You think, this Commandment, and check, and curse threatned cannot stand with my covenant made with Levi, but breaks it, you say, as your predecessors did to Jeremy, Jer. 18.18. And the like alladge and say the Popish Priests for themselves, and their Church; Lo, I am with you to the end of the world: would Christ receive his Church? and the Church erre? we are the Church, the Holy Ghost resides among us, else his promise and his covenant fails. But God shews these two can stand together, and they shall know it. His covenant with Levi abrogates not his own right, and power, and soveraignty, nor abates the rule and authority of his Law; nor their deviations, corruptions, and manifold vices, and the severe reprehensions of them, and his curse upon such priests, do not annihilate or vacate that covenant: nay, it doth establish it, it is the means to restore, rectifie, confirm and settle it, that thus the priest-hood might remain in Levi his race, (for Levi was dead before the priest-hood was setled in Aaron and his posterity) and remain in them, and the other Levites, with Gods favour and blessing, as was formerly promised, as it were by an especial covenant.

V.5. My covenant was with him] God shewes what his said covenant was, and that he did not violate it, v. 5, 6, 7. But they on their part, v.8,9. Gods covenant is general with all his creatures, as Gen. 9.9,18. Jer.33. v. 20. more particular, with man, yet more with his Church, most special with his elect. And in his Church, with his ministers, as here with Levi.

of life and peace] The Tribe of Levi, specially Aaron, and some of those who where presently after him, enjoyed the honour of this office, with all manner of blessings, length of life, and prosperity. See Nehem. 13. v. 29. This is my part of the covenant. But where is your part? covenants are mutual obligations, binde reciprocally, on both sides, would you have me stand bound, and your selves left free to do as you list?

and I gave them to him] Life and peace, I performed my covenant to him, for my part.

for the fear] See Exod.32.26---30. Num.25.7---14. Deut.33.8,9. This fear is insisted on in the rest of the verse, as a prime grace, being a filial fear, arising from the love of God, fearing him for his goodnesse, Hos. 3.5. and fearing by sin to offend so great and glorious a Majesty, and so holy a God. Others thus; I gave to him fear, to shew further Gods gracious dealing with Levi, that he gave him the grace of fear, Jer.32.40. and the rule of fear, how he should regulate himself in his function and priestly office.

and was afraid] In the latter sense thus; And he did so, he was a fearful in zealous affectionate, proudly and presumptuously to mis-behave himself, but humbly, modestly, and faithfully to carry himself in his calling. And this suites with that which followeth.

V.6. The law of truth was in his lips] to teach it others. He expounded and taught my law in right sounsell, and in truth to my people, this was chief in Levies charge, Lev. 10.v.11. 2 Chron.17. v. 7, 8, 9. Ezra 7.10. Nehem.8.3, 4, 7, 8. And in the N. T. and iniquity was not, &c.] No false doctrine, evil life, or unjust judgements; such Leaven must not be mingled with it, Mat.16.6.

he walked] His life answerable to his doctrine 1 Cor. 9.v.27. Urim and Thummim must be joyned together. 1 Tim.4.16.

with me] Departed not from me, nor the duty I prescribed to him, but was faithfull and true to me and it, walking as with me, and before me, in all sincerity and integrity, 2 Cor. 1.12.

in peace, and equity] In an humble and quiet obedience, without any rebellion, which is alwayes turbulent. As my covenant was of peace with him, v. 5. so he for his part walked in peace with me, in equity and uprightnesse keeping the Covenant.

and did turn, &c.] The effect and fruit of his doctrine and office.

V.7. For the Priests lips] His brain and heart for himself, his lips and tongue for the Church.

should] It is his duty. Deut 17.9,10,11. Here is no promise to keep him from erring and failing. The like is that, 1 Tim. 3.15. Duty is too oft broken. v.8. Zeph.3.v.4. Micah 3. 11 Hos.6.9. Ezech. 22. 26; and 7. 26.

keep knowledge] The a treasure-house of it, Mat.13.52. a store-house, to keep it in plenty, and that not from, but for others, not reserve it to himself, but dispense it to others, 1 Cor.4.1. Jer.3.15.

and they should seek] The peoples duty. Hag.2.12. Rom.10.15, 21 Acts 8.31.

the law at his mouth] Gods law, Esay 8. 20. Gods law is sufficient, 2 Tim.3.16,17. There is no other rule of Faith, or life. They must not adde to it, nor diminish from it, Ezech.3.17. Jer.23.28.

for he is the messenger] Legate, Ambassador, Angel, Interpreter of Gods will, in teaching and governing the Church. Judg 2.1. Hag.1. 13. see the message, 2 Cor. 5.20. Then receive such with reverence, Mar. 10. 40, despise them not, Luke 10.16. 1 Thes. 5. 28. David revenged sore the abuse of his messengers, 2 Sam. 10. But such as deliver no message, or not his message, are no messengers or ministers of his.

V.8. But ye are departed] Zech.7.11. Dan.9.5. Ezech.44.10. Jer.5. 23. Esay 31.6.

out of the way] Of my law, of truth, of peace and equity. Thus priests may erre. And too often do. The whole Councill did so, in condemning Christ. We must trie the spirits therefore, 1 Thess. 5.21. 1 John 4.1. And erring priests must be told of it.

many to stumble] He did turn many away from iniquity, v. 6. ye cause them to stumble, and fall, stumble at the law, or fall in the law namely, by your evil example, or by defect of admonishing and giving instruction, or by giving them occasion to disdain Gods service by reason of the ministers wickednesse. See 2 Sam.12. 17. Jer. 18.15. Here is their sin, contrary to the duty afore-going. And the priests fall is the fall of many 2 Tim.2.17. Gal.2.14. Jer.10.21. As when a main stone in a building, or a tall cedar falls.

ye have corrupted the covenant of Levi] That covenant v.4.5 Neh. 13. 29. ye have broken it, and done clean contrary to it; are covenant-breakers, and therefore are utterly unworthy that title, honour, and office, wherein you so much trust, and boast, and vaunt your selves, and whereupon you bear your selves so high. You have broken those bounds, and degenerated from your predecessours, and walked in crosse-waves and steps to them. Their good examples should excite you to the like, Esay 51. 2. How ever, they will not priviledge you in sinning but justly aggravate your guilt, and shame, and punishment.

V.9. Therefore have I] Still the punishment follows the sin, 1 Sam. 2. 30 contemptible and base] A good name and esteem is precious, Prov. 22.1. Eccles.7.1. 1 Tim.3.7. Phil.4 8. Here God inflicts the contrary punishment v.3. This is a part of the curse, Deut.28.37. Mat.5.13. they loved the praise and esteem of men, to be counted honourable, of the holy Tribe, and Order, sacred, consecrated persons, as Mat.23. 6,7. God turns all to their greater shame and punishment.

before all the people] Of whom they would be had in honour. See that 1 Sam. 15.30.

according as ye] Ye said, the Table of the Lord is contemptible, ch.1. 7. so ye shall be truely rendred contemptible, and that deservedly, for your forsaking of my wayes, Ezech. 44.8. See Esay 41.24.

but have been partiall in the Law] Heb. accepted faces, or, lifted up the face against, that is, boldly, and impudently. To favour or wrong men you have subverted my Law, either in doctrine, or in judgement, Ezek.22.26. Zech.3.9. and done clean contrary to it, and ambition. See Ezech.13.19. Micah 3.5. To serve these turns they would wrest the Law. And thus large and sharp hath the Prophet been in inveighing against the Priests, as being the chief offenders, in Gods worship, and the causers of ruine to the rest. Neither would they be easily beaten off, and convinced, and confounded, and till then, little hope of doing any good with the people.

have we not all?] He comes now to the People, and their sins. And first in Matrimonial causes, preaching against their marrying with strangers and infidels, v.10,11,12. And against their treacherous dealing with their lawfull wives, verse 13, 14, 15, 16. Some make this verse to be the argument or Apology of those that made and maintained strange marriages with aliens and heathen, that they all had one father Adam, and one God their Creatour, why then might they not marry with them? why should they be counted treacherous in so doing? or prophaners of the covenant of their fathers? Others rather take the words as the Prophets arguing against that sin, thus; That whereas God so honoured them all, by his gracious choice of them in their one Father Abraham, above all the rest of the world, and so created them all in a fort to be his holy and peculiar people and a royall Priest-hood, why therefore should they dis-esteem and under-value this dignity, and betray this priviledge and prerogative, in mingling themselves in marriage with Heathen Idolaters; and so ingratefully and treacherously cast away that sacred honour, and prophane, pollute, and violate, and break off that precious covenant of their fathers, which God made with them, by prostituting themselves in this sort to mix the holy seed with the uncircumcised Nations?

one God] See that Ephes. 4. 6 & Job 31. 15.

every man against his brother] Some understand this of private or personal wrongs and treacheries, done among the Jews one against another.

V. 11. Judah] Those of Judah returned out of Babylon. This circumstance of the persons aggravates the crime, that they should do it, and be guilty therein.

treacherously, and an abomination, &c.] The Prophet doth thus, as it were, brand and stigmatize this sin.

in Jerusalem] Which of all other places of the world should least have done so, and Jerusalem being, as yet, but newly raised out of its ashes, for its sins, and but meanly repaired.

prophaned] Polluted, defiled, dis-esteemed, counted and used as a common, and not a sacred thing.

the holiness of the Lord] The holy Lord, his holy Name and sanctuary, but more directly here may be meant themselves, an holy People, which the Lord had separated to himself, from the rest of the world, to be an holy Nation to himself, Exod. 19. 6. And put several marks of holiness upon them, to distinguish them from other Nations, as in the difference of meats, clean and un-clean, and in many others particulars. Yet themselves dishonored the holy name of Gods people which they did bear, and all other signes of his Covenant by which God sanctified them to himself, separating them from prophane Nations.

which he loved] Or, ought to love, referring it to Judahs duty, to prefer the love of that holiness before their lust after strange women. Others understand it of Gods Love to his people, the people of his holiness: which being so gracious, free, and altogether without any their worth or desert, so much the more enhanseth this their crime.

and hath married the daughter of a strange God] This is that particular crime and prophanation, wherewith he doth here first charge the People. Not yet that the Priests were altogether free of it. This sin was in the posterity of Enosh, and Seth, Gen. 6. 2. Was expressly forbidden the Jews, Exod. 34. 16. Deut. 7. 3, 4. See Abrahams charge to his servant, Gen. 24. 3, 8, 37. And Isaac his charge to Jacob, Gen. 28. 1. And Isaac and Rebekah their grief at the contrary in Esau, Gen. 27. 46. & 28. 8. & 26. 35. See this sin branded in the Jews, Judg. 3. 6, 7. In Samson, Judg. 14. 2, 3. In Solomon, 1 King. 11. 1, 2, 8. After the return from the Babylonish captivity, See Ezra chap. 9. & 10. and again, Neh. 13, 23——31. In the N.T. See 2 Cor. 6. 14.

daughter of a strange God] To set out the vilenesse of the sin, and danger of it. See Neh. 13. 26. 1 King. 21. 25. 2 King. 8. 27. This is not to marry in the Lord, 1 Cor. 7. v. 39. Nor the way to bring up their children in the information of the Lord. That Deut. 21. 10 ---- 15. Is no Law, but a concession, for the hardnels of their heart, un-pleasing to God, as appears by that context.

V. 12. The Lord will cut off] Either by an accursed death, or by excommunication out of the Church. They shall not escape un-punished.

that doth this] This abomination, verse 11.

the Master and the Scholler] Or, him that waketh, and him that answereth. Or, him that watcheth, and him that singeth, the Master, and the servant: him that calls and commands, and him that doth answer and obey, the practiser, and the Patron of such prophane marriages. Some make this relate to the porters, and singers of the Temple. See 1 Chron. 25. 8.

and him that offereth] The Priests also offending in this kinde. Or, as some, even the man that would seem devout, and by offering sacrifices shall think to pacifie and please God. As those Esay 58. 3. In a word, all without excepting any, high or low, people, or Priest. The Priests, and Levites had also sinned in these forrain marriages, Ezra. 9. 1. & chap. 10. 18. Neh. 13. 28. And this threatning seemeth to be directed to them, who should not willingly submit themselves to the reformation of this fault, appointed by Ezra: or to those who should after fall into the like.

V. 13. And this have ye done again] You have not onely married strange women, but have also afflicted your own lawful wives, bringing in strangers to vex them, See Levit. 18. 18. 1 Sam. 1. 6. The second fault the Prophet accuseth them of. Some understand this of the wives of the Priests, hardly used by them, It is sore to add sin unto sin. And much more to re-iterate the same sin.

covering the Altar of the Lord with tears] Joyfull praises, and thankf-giving should be heard there, Psal. 65. v. 1. But here the Case was otherwise: You have caused your poor wives to poure out doleful lamentations before mine altar, which are like a thick cloud, that will not suffer your offerings to be looked upon, nor accepted by me.

in so much that he regardeth not] The bringers, and offerers being so wicked: and the Priests themselves no better then they. And the Person not being accepted, neither is the offering: we see this in the first offerers, Cain, and Abel, Gen. 4. 4, 5. during the state of impeniteney no sacrifice, or service is accepted with God. Some make this verse to be an exaggeration of the crime of the People, Thus, That they were such polluted persons, and so defiled and prophaned Gods Altar with their filthy sins, that themselves, persons, prayers, and sacrifices were rejected by God, being offered with such impure hearts and hands, and therefore the people wept, and be-moaned themselves and their estates, that thereupon through the Priests defaults, they had no wayes or means left them to expiate their sins, pacifie God, and serve him in an acceptable manner, as they ought to do. Chap. 1. 10.

V. 14. Yet ye say] Most likely both Priests, and People.

wherefore] Are we so deeply charged in the former verse? Thus chap. 1. 6, 7. Hypocrites and obdurate sinners are thus ready to quarrel, expostulate, beat back, all admonitions, and to stand upon their own justification. So willing is wickednesse to defend it self. A dangerous sin, Prov. 29. 1. It is otherwise with the godly, Psal. 141. 5. He is the accuser of himself. Job 31. 33. Psal. 32. 5.

because the Lord had been witnesse] He convicts them in one grosse particular for all. The Lord hath been witness of the Matrimonial promises, made as it were in his presence, with invocation of his name. Impudently insolent then was their expostulation. Matrimony is called Gods Covenant, Prov. 2. 17. He becomes as it were suretie on both sides, under-taker for both, hath witnessed the contract, and will be a witness against the violation of it, the Covenant-breakers. See chap. 3. 5. The Lord sees, and puts upon record, and will give in evidence against all sinners, 1 Joh. 3. 20. Psal. 50. 21. Mal. 3. 16. Jer. 44. 21. Apoc. 20. 12. Particularly against these wedlock-breakers.

and the wife of thy youth] Whom thou didst marry in the budding, spring and flowre of thy youth, and both of you have enjoyed the mutuall comforts of it, youth winning tenderness of love, and continuance in years confirming it. This then aggravates the fault, when in elder years such wrong is done her.

treacherously] Breaking the Covenant, in divorcing her, and taking another: or in taking another to her, and so multiplying wives by un-lawfull Polygamy.

thy companion] Yoke-fellow, yea, one flesh with thee. Gen. 2. v. 24. Ephes. 5. 28, 29, 31. And yet with some subjection, 1 Cor. 11. 7. &c. 1 Pet. 3. 7. 1 Tim. 2. 13, 14. Eph. 5. 22, 23, 24.

wife of thy Covenant] Thy first lawfull wife, thy confederate, between whom that sacred covenant was made, with whom having spent thy youthful dayes, thou now beginnest to contemn and hate her in her old age. Which covenant-breaking is a kinde of dissolution of all humane society.

V. 15. And did not he make one?] Did not God in the beginning create Adam alone, out of whom he framed Eve to be his wife, without creating any more women for one man, or more men for one woman? shewing thereby that as he ordained matrimony, by one onely Law of lawfull Conjunction; to it likewise ought to be, of one with one, and so two in the same flesh, Gen. 2. 23, 24. Matth. 19. 5. The Jews translate and corrupt this Text thus: Did not one do it? The Jews translate and corrupt this Text thus: Did not one do it? meaning Abraham, that one singular rare man, And so making these offenders to defend themselves, by the example of Abraham, taking more wives. Others of them, thus, did not Abraham do it when he was one alone, without any seed? and do it then, not of Lust, but to this end, to seek and get that promised seed, that seed of God. Thus extenuating Abrahams fact, as no lawfull defence for them. But these both are sufficiently Jewish, and blinde wresting of the words.

ye had he] He could, had he pleased, have created more living persons at once, more women for one man: there was no want of power in him to do it.

residue of the Spirit] Or excellency.

and wherefore one?] One pair, and no more: to what end? with what intent? for what cause? upon what ground and reason?

that he might seek a godly seed] Heb. A seed of God. Gods chief end in this proceeding was, that the posterity might be sanctified, being born in chast wedlock, according to his appointment: whereas it is defiled by all manner of un-lawfull conjunctions. All other seed is spurious, not a lawfull and legitimate seed, nor such fathers are lawfull fathers, who so pervert the order and ordinance of Matrimonie. God puts his mark of infamy upon the seed it self, Deut. 23. 2.

take heed to your spirit] So verse 16. Having sufficiently convinced the crime, and taught the truth, he comes now next to exhortation, and layes it on to the life; As your life and salvation is dear unto you, so look to it, As Deut. 4. v. 9. 15. Jere. 17. v. 21. The spirit and heart are the fountain and spring of our affections and actions, and so primarily to be heeded and ordered. Prov. 4. 23.

let none deal treacherously] Or, un-faithfully, Defrauding, or otherwise abusing his lawfull wife, for concubines.

V. 16. That he putteth putting away] Or, if he hate her, put her away. According to this later translation some expound the words, That God wills and allows this putting away of the lawfull wife, not in it self, but in case of the husbands hatred, and then not simply, but comparatively; as esteeming this putting away, or Bill of Divorce, a lesser greivance to the true wife, the being so freed from that yoak of bondage, under her hating husband, and left to her liberty; and also a lesser offence in it self, then Polygamy is, or the keeping her still, and taking more wives to her: and counting this later to be but as the covering covering of violence with a cloak, as indeed it was, in so dealing with their lawfull wives. And thus divorce was, if not permitted, yet not punished under the Law: As the Magistrate sometimes suffers what he allows and approves not. See Deut. 24. 1. Matt. 5. 31. & 19. 3——13. Matt. 10. 5, 6. Others rather, according to the former rendition of the words, understand here a third fault, in putting away their lawfull wives upon pretence of the Law, Deut. 24. 1. As it is alledged, Mat. 5. 31. But the Prophet telleth them, God hateth putting away. And as our Saviour pleadeth against it, Mat. 19. 3.——13. So the words of the law it self imply no less. Deut. 4. 4.

for one covereth violence] Heb and he covereth, &c. Meaning, he that puts her away excuseth this violence by the Law of God given by Moses concerning divorce: but therein such did injury both to their lawfull wives, and to the Law of God, Deut. 24. 4. See Matt. 5. 32. & 19. 9. Thus upon pretences, and cloakes wicked men commit the most heynous sins.

therefore take heed, &c.] See on verse 15. The end of conviction is our admonition, and amendment. Else the sin that follows after, is a double sin. John 9. 41. We must keep a vigilant eye, and carefull watch over our spirits. And the fountain must first be purged, before the stream can run clear and pure.

V. 17. Ye] Here he changeth them with another crime, the most greivous of all, even open Blasphemy against God.

have wearied me] God is a pure act or agent, without any passion. But here he speaks to man, as in the person of a man, after the manner of men: for our better understanding. So Esay 43. 24. Amos 2. 13. The meaning is, God had born patiently very long with their wickednesse. And thus he did with the old world, with the Amorites, with all, with most desperate, wretched, wicked men. Exod. 34. 6. Rom. 2. 4. & 9. 22. The world makes ill use of it, Eccl. 8. 11, 12, 13. Rom. 2. 4. And now he is ready to put an end to his patience, that his justice may take place, Psal. 50. 21, 22. Esay 1. 24. Ye have greivously and intollerably offended me. See chap. 1. 13. Esay 7. 13. & 63. 10. Ezech. 6. 9.

with your words] And murmuring complaints. Words are more then winde, they have their weight, and are provoking. chap 3. 13. Job. 21. 24. & 22. 17. See Matt. 12. 36, 37.

yet ye say wherein, &c.] They question, not as of a matter in doubt, desirous to be informed, and to amend, but they come ready armed with impudence and insolency, to maintain their cause and quarrel. See on chap. 1. 6, 7. & 2. 14. & ch. 3. 7, 8, 13. Job doth justly justifie himself in point of his sincerity against the charge of hypocrisie put upon him by his friends. But is far off from justifying himself in his sins against God, Job 9. 2, 3, 20. But here is prodigious blockish stupidity, or shameless impudency, and a brow of brass.

every one that doth evil] They say not, some, or most, but every one, not the vilest sinner excepted. Thus they heighthen their blasphemy, and bewray the bitterness of their godless spirits. And mean while would exempt themselves out of this number of evil doers.

is good in the sight of the Lord] Acceptable to him. They complain not thus, out of any hatred they have to the evil of sin: but because in their judgement, others worse then they; are spared, and themselves, far better then the others, are punished. God, say they, favoureth the wicked: Or if it be not so, why doth he leave them unpunished, and in the mean while afflict good men? chap. 3. 14, 15. Thus they minde their own ease and cause. And in the sense of that, stick not at this blasphemy against God, because he doth not answerably to their silly apprehensions presently punish the wicked, and succour and relieve themselves, holy Saints, in their distresses. For such sinfull hypocrites will not see their own sins and demerits, but do think that God is bound and beholden to them, and ought to bless and prosper them. Indeed the generall consideration of the administration of Gods providence in this kinde, in prospering the wicked, and afflicting the Godly, much troubled Job, chap. 21. 7. & David, Psal. 37. & 73. & Jeremy, ch. 12. 1, 2. But they keep far off from the sin of these here, they soon recollect and recover themselves, and possess their souls in patience, see Jer. 8. 14. Eccl. 9. 1. Rom. 9. 21. Matt. 20. 15.

and he delighteth in them] And hellish blasphemy. Thus they proceed on, in the bitterness of their spirit. See Prov. 12. 22. & 21. 3. Jer. 9. 24. Esay 66. 5, 7.

or where is the God of judgement?] Thus yet again they belch out their blasphemy, condemning God in his power and justice, because he judged not according to their fantasies. And yet manifold and manifest are the reasons even appearing to man in the word of God, why God doth let the wicked prosper and flourish in this world many times, and exercise the godly with sore afflictions: And he nevertheless be stil the God of judgement, and justice, the just judge of the world, the avenger of sin, and plentiful rewarder of well-doing. Which he can no sooner cease to do, then cease to be God, and become an idol.

CHAP. III.

Verse 1. Behold] And again repeated towards the end of this verse, to raise attention.

I will send] Christ will send. Alledged, as spoken in the person of God, Matt. 11. 10. Mar. 1. verse 2. Luk. 7. 27.

my messenger] my Angel my Malachi, my Embassador, see ch. 2. 7. Apoc. 2. 1. Here it is meant of John Baptist, another Malachi, as Christ expoundeth it Matt. 11. 10, 14 Luke 7. 27. And Zachary, his father, Luk. 1. 76. And thus God answers to those blasphemies last afore mentioned, asserting his justice and judgement, by the sending of John Baptist and of Christ, and by the effects of their coming, of Christ especially, upon the Godly, and upon the wicked.

and he shall prepare the way] The Jews by their enormous sins had laid blocks, as it were, in the way to hinder Christs coming, as if purposely they meant to keep off this great grace now ready and prepared for them. And indeed all men naturally are un-prepared to receive Christ: they are as an un-even way, of mountains and dales: rough and cross: and so they: must be levelled, and smoothed, Luk. 3. 5. How John the Baptist did this, we reade, Esay 40. 3. &c. Mat. 3. 1, 3. Mar. 1. v. 2.——9. Luk. 1. 76.——80. & 3. v. 2.——19. and 7. 19.——36. John 1. 6, 7, 8. 15.——37. and 3. 27.——36. By his preaching, and baptizing he did prepare mens hearts for to receive Christ, taking away all lets of hypocrisie, carnall pride, impiety.

before me] Our Saviour, and the Evangelists alledged it thus, before they face, which shall prepare thy way before thee. So changing the Person, but retaining the sense: God sends John Baptist to prepare the way before our Saviour, God the Father, and God the Son do send him.

and the Lord] Here God the Father speaks, or the Prophet in his Name, and that of and concerning the Lord Christ, that Lord, Psal. 110 1. and 2. 2, 11, 12. and Dan. 9. 7.

whom ye seek] Meaning the Messiah, as Psal. 40. 1, 7. Dan. 9, 17, 25. towards whom all the hopes and thoughts of Believers are bent: But ye for your parts do now odiously question me for not sending him, as failing therein of my promises, and frustrating your hopes and expectations: such is your murmuring and incredulity.

shall suddenly] No Prophet between Malachi, and Christs coming, Malachi the last Prophet. And suddenly, instantly upon John Baptist his coming; then suddenly. Presently after that John shall begin to preach, Christ the everlasting God shall appear, and publikely exercise his office, Matt. 3. 11.

come] When the way is prepared. Before, Christ was often promised, and many wayes prefigured. Now in the fulnesse of time he should come. The high Priest-hood; and Davids Kingdom shadowed his offices, But now the substance should come, Heb. 10. 1, 5, 9. Col. 2. 17.

to his Temple] Of Jerusalem, which is now but newly re-builded, which was a figure of the Church, to preach there, and to use his authority as in his own house. See John 2. 14, 16. And some make this a confirmation of the literal meaning of that, Hag. 2. 7, 9. Now no Temple is left for the Jews, yet expected Messias, We are Gods spirituall Temple, 1 Cor. 6. 19. We should seek for, and long for his coming into our hearts: And for his second coming in glory, 2 Tim. 4. 8. Apoc. 22. 20.

the messenger of the Covenant] Another manner of Messenger then John Baptist was, John 1. 8, 15, 20, 27, 30. and 3. 28, 29, 30. Jesus is the Angel of the Covenant: In him, and for his sake, this Covenant touching life and salvation to be obtained by him was made, in his blood, it was ratified, and sealed. In him are all the Promises of it, Yea, and Amen, 2 Cor. 1. 20. No other Name under heaven given unto men for salvation, Acts 4. 12. See Esay 53. 11. 1 Tim. 2. 5. See further Exod. 23. 20, 21. Esay 63. 9. Heb. 8. 6. & 9. 15. & 12. 24. 2 Cor. 5. 19. See other names, Heb. 3. & 3. 1.

whom ye delight in] Who is the great joy and delightfull expectation of the Jews, of Abraham, Joh. 8. 56. of all the faithful. Though ye sport your selves at his coming, mocking at the day and expectation of his coming: as seems best to agree with the words afore-going, and following. The like is Esay 5. 19. Amos 5. 18.

behold, he shall come] See before in this verse.

saith the Lord of hosts] Here is his warrant. Other sciences have their demonstrations. God tyes us to no other evidence then his word, which is the only ground of all supernatural revelations. And this is true faith, truely to rest in the assurance of it. Rom. 4. 18. Psal. 119. 49. & 56. 4, 10.

V. 2. But who may abide] Here is the manner of his coming in the flesh. And hereby God will affert the faithfulnesse of his covenant, the constancy and truth of his promises, the reality of his justice and judgement against these blasphemers.

the day of his coming] He will come. But little to your comfort. His coming will be terrible to such as you are. And therefore vainly do you sooth up and solace your selves in the hope and expectation of his coming, or you do but dissemble in desiring it. His delay, or not-coming would be best for you. True it is, that to the godly nothing is more comfortable. Joh. 8. 56. And to them, as his spiritual presence in his grace, is the sweet delight of their souls, so also his second coming is a dreadful day to obdurate sinners, like that, Amos 5. 18. He is a rock of offence, a stumbling stone, a stone to grinde them to powder, see Luk. 2. 34. 1 Pet. 2. 7, 8. Mat. 21. 44. Though this his coming in the eye of flesh and blood was mean, base, and contemptible, and he then meek, riding on an asse, his voice not heard, in the streets; not breaking a bruised reed, Esa.42.2,3. yet even then he comes with his fan in his hand, with his whip-cord in his hand, and that twice over, John 2.14,15,16. Mat.21.12. he layes the axe to the roots of the trees Mat.3. 10,12. Herod, and all Jerusalem were troubled at this his coming, Mat.2.v.3. And then to wicked sinners how terrible shall his second coming be? see Apoc.6.16. and 1.7.2 Cor.5.10. Psal.2.12. Esay 33.14, 15. 2 Thes. 1.7, 8, 9, 10. Be to them that trample under foot his blood, and crucifie him again by their sins?

and who shall stand] See Psal.1.5. and 36.12. Nahum 1.6. His presence and preaching shall be accompanied with a most powerful vertue of Gods Spirit, and with severe judgement to destroy all rebels, and to cleanse his Church, see Isaiah 4.4. Matt.3.10,11,12. Here are the effects of Christs coming, Luk.14. 15.

for he is like a refiners fire] Here is no Popish purgatory fire, a fire to consume the wicked like drosse, such as you are: and to purge and purifie the godly as gold and silver: and that by his word, as fire, Jer.23. 29. Heb.4.12,13. And by his spirit as fire. Mat.3.11. see Luk.12.49.51, 52. So fast corruption cleaves and sticks to man that it needs this refining fire; Psal.51.7. Jer.13.23. Heb.12.1,2 Tim.2.16. And so powerful is the efficacy of the grace of Christ, and his blood, to purge and cleanse it, Heb.9.14.

and like fullers sope] which was very ordinarily used to whiten wooll and cleanse it. See Mar.9.3. Thus he purifies his Remnant. Esay 10. 21,22. preserving them.

V.3. And he shall sit] Sit at it, continue at it, and be long and serious about it, as a thing not soon and suddenly done, they were so long set and settled upon their lees.

as a refiner] see Prov.17.3, Jer.9.7. He represents his diligence and care about this work of cleansing his elect, likened to precious metals.

the sons of Levi] corruptions there were in all estates. He beginneth with the Priests first, as the managers of Gods worship, and that they might be lights and shine to others: or he meaneth all true Christians made priests, Rev.1.6. to offer unto God spiritual sacrifices. Rom. 12.1. figured by the ceremonial sacrifices, chap.1.11.

as gold and silver] And not be as that reprobate silver. Jer. 6. 29, 30. or that Ezech.22.20,21,22. see Dan. 11.35.

that they may offer] Not as they do now, impure offerers, and impure offerings.

an offering in righteousnesse] Right as they should do, right as God requires, and they are in duty bound, without wronging Gods Law and rule therein. Rightly, lawfully, and according to his ordinance, without default. See Psal.51.19. Rom.12.1.

V.4. Then shall the offerings] Chap.1.11.

of Judah and Jerusalem] The offerings which the people of Judah and Jerusalem shall bring, and the Priests shall offer up in sacrifice, both Priests and people being purified.

be pleasant] Such offerings shall: and not evil doers, as the blasphemers that charged him, ch.2,17. nor as those offerings, Hos.9.4. Jer.6.20. See Ezech.20.40. Jer.9.24. Esay 56.7.

as in the dayes of old] Though now Temple, worship, offerings, all, be mean and poor, yet then all shalbe purged & purified, acceptable to the Lord, & pleasant to him, as when first instituted & best observed.

V.5. And I will come neer to you to judgment] His coming shall be as formerly, for the good of his, to refine them, & here for judgement against the wicked, to destroy them. They charged him, that he kept afar off, and was not the God of judgement, ch.2.17. that he came not neer them, to own them, and judge for them against their and his enemies: They would rule him, and his doings at their beck, have him at their call. He tells them he will come neer thē, neer enough, But it is to judgement, against them, as his wicked enemies, as Esay 1.24. His Spirit shall effectually convince all sinners, Isa.4.4. Joh.16. 8, and the execution shall speedily follow that inward conviction, contrary to that former blasphemy.

a swift witnesse] Not slack & slow, as they did calumniate, but swift enough for them, for as they shall soon see that none of their sins are hid, or unknown to him, no not those which they labour most to keep secret. A witnesse, not to them, as Esay 55.4. nor for them, as for Job, c.16.19. but against them, as Micah, 1.v.2. and Jer.29. 23.

against] Here are seven deadly sins reckoned up, that a wonder it is, such should reigne amongst Gods people, and those but lately brought back from the Babylonish captivity.

the sorcerers] And all the sorts, and kinds, of such devillish dealers, and Satanicall inners. Against these, see Exo.22.18. Deu.18.10. Such were those, 2 Chr.33.6. those of Pharaoh, Ex.7.8. & 9.ch. and many Chaldeans, Dan.2.2. Esay 47.9,12. See Mica.5.12. Nah.3.4. Jer.27.9.

adulterers] Against these, see Deut.22.22. Heb.13.4. and the law of jelousie, Num.5. see Prov.6.33, &c. Jer.23.10. Hos.4.2. & 7.4.

false swearers] Against these, See Levit.19.12.1 Tim.1.10.

oppresse] Or defraude.

hirelings] Against these, See Levit.19.13. Jam.5.4.

widow, and the fatherlesse, and the stranger] These through their weak estate are the more exposed to the injuries of wicked worldly men. And God therefore the more often gives charge on their behalf, and the more takes them into his tuition and protection, and threatens his revenge against such as wronge them, so that such offenders set themselves against God more immediately.

and fear not me] The fear of God is a fountain of all true wisdom and Piety. Prov.16.6. Gen.41.18. The want of it opens the flood-gate to all sin and villany. Gen.20.11. Rom.3.18. Psal.36.1. And yet all these several sorts of grosse offenders would expostulate with God, for not being the God of judgement against thē sinners. But let us learn to judge our selves before we call upon God for his plagues and judgements upon others.

V.6. For I am the Lord] Jehovah, Exod.6.3. He argues thence as followeth.

I change not] So much Balaam is forced to confesse, Numb.23.19. Men change, and counsells and occurences change. It is not so with Gods Nature, essence and wisedom. He changes not, but persevereth constant in his justice, and truth, against their blasphemies: He is the same yesterday, to day, and for ever, James 1.17. He will perform his counsell and purpose, according to his promises, Rom.11. 29. Some thus, Under the Gospel, I will proceed with speedy operation of my Spirit and Judgement: whereas now I do use a great deal of clemency and patience out of my meere mercy and constancy in my promises.

therefore ye] Some thus, Though ye sons of Jacob are not yet consumed, yet I change not, I am the same Lord, and ye shall finde so in the end, that I am a just Judge, though I forbear you long. Others much rather thus, ye have deserved over and over again to be consumed, and considering your demerits it might be a wonder that I have not ere this thrown thunder-bolts amongst you to consume you: But that I have not done it, and that ye remain alive, preserved out of so many calamities, it is because of me, and my Nature, that I am Jehovah, and changenot, and will perform my mercies promised: which ye should acknowledge, and be thankfull for, see Lam. 3.22,23. Hos.11.9.

V.7. Even from the dayes of your fathers] Therefore but for me, it would be a wonder that ye had not been consumed before. For ye have thus sinned, not lately begun to do so, but continued to doing for many generations. Psal.95.10. Ezek.2.3. Act.7.51. The examples of Fathers is too prevailent with posterity, to sway them to evil. But neither such examples, nor any prescription, custom, antiquity, or the like, are pleas available for the excuse of sin. Psal.95.8,9. and 78.8. Ezek.20.18. Zech.1.5.1 Pet.4.3. This circumstance here aggravates the crime, not lessens it.

and have not kept them] But trample them under feet. Jer. 2. 29 Zech.7.11. Hos.7.13. Dan. 9. 5, 10. &c. And yet God bore, and forbore: was indulgent, consumed them not: his slacknesse was their safety. And notwithstanding here they proudly and furiously charge him with slacknesse on their behalf.

return unto me] So Zech.1.3,4. Hos.14.1. Joel 2.13. Acts 26.18. After he hath laboured with sharp reproofs to over-master & subdue their proud rebellious stubbornesse, now he comes gently to exhort them and draw them to repentance, at least such of them as would become tractable, & be fairly wonne. And thus ever and anō in the Prophets; yet for a ll this return ye. Not yet that Repentance is in our own power, when ever we will. But this shews the way and weight of our duty, though we have dis-inabled our selves: and this urgeth us to seek for it out of our selves, even of him, who hath promised it, and gives it by this means. Jer.31. 18,19.

and I will return] Does them in hope of mercy, without which hope man would ever flee from God, and never return to him. God returns by pardoning, accepting, and blessing of them, shewing them signes and pledges of his favour, and reconciliation. Whereas sin unrepented made a separation, and hid Gods face from them, Isa.59.2. & 54. 7. yet sin though never so long continued in, shuts not out from mercy, if Repentance come in place, See Luk.19.42. Acts 17.30. Ezek. 18.21,22. Impenitency onely doth it. Yet we must not abuse this mercy, Rom.6.1. But look to that Prov.1.24,26. Isa.55.6. Ezek.24.13.

wherein shall we return?] Thus before? see on c.3.17. Here is still a shrewd signe of rebellious contumacy & perverseness. Men the deeper ingaged in the guilt of sin, are the more hardly brought to conviction of it: custom blindes, & hardens them. Isa.5.20. Ro.1.28. We say, they are not guilty to our selves, shew us what, and wherein we offend.

V.8. will a man rob God?] He punctually tells them wherein. Will any man do this? any idolater, any heathen? so Jer. 2. 10, 11. This makes to the aggravat.ō of the sin, & to their greater conviction. No heathen will do this that ye do, none so barbarous, that will defraud their Gods of their honour and oblations or deale deceitfully with them. See Gen. 47.22. Care of maintenance for Gods worship is ingraffed in man by nature. We see it in Idolaters, and all Heathens. All bountifull that way. And therefore sacrilledge is abominable to all. See Num.22. Act.19.37.

yet ye have robbed me] So again, v.9. Thus God takes it as done against himself, what is done against the meanes and maintenance of his worship. See the like, Act.9.4. He owns it as his own what is set apart to the maintenance of his service.

wherein? &c.] See on ch. 2.17. Herein they exceed the bounds of impudency it self, being openly so sacrilegious, yet here to say, wherein? as the adulterous woman, Prov.30.20.

in tithes & offerings] Keeping those things back which are my right, & are to furnish out my service, and for the maintenance of my officers, Neh.13.10.&c. Tithes paid before the law, by Abraham to Melchizedech chizedech. By Jacob vowed to Gods service, Gen. 28. 22. under the law established by Gods statute-law to be paid to the Priests and Levites: and wherein this law is either ceremonial, or judicial, may be questioned. And the rather because by the light and instinct of nature, the Heathens hallowed the tenth unto God. And no question there can be but under the Gospel, God requires as liberal a maintenance to the Ministers of the Gospel, as he allotted to them under the Law, and leaves them not to the arbitrary devotion of the people, see 1. Cor 9.7—15. 1 Tim.3.2.& 5.17,18. Gal.6.6.& 3.15. Pro. 20.25.& 3.9. Lev.27.30,31.

V.9. Ye are cursed] They complained, that God did punish them without end, or measure, they were cursed; These were their continual clamours, faith God, be it so, and true it is, ye are cursed. But see the cause, thank your selves, the fault is yours, not my rigor.

for ye have robbed me] See v. 8. what marvell then, though I cry quittance with you, and render you a just reward?

this whole nation] An epidemical sin, not a few of them, but as it were a general combination, an universall conspiracy and confederacy in this sin Neh.23.10. And thus God shews that his curse was not without cause.

V.10. bring ye] God brings all to this issue, as if he should say, in vain ye go on in quarrelling and complaining, here is the best way and remedy, Amend your fault, and ye shall soon see my goodnes, so Esay 1.16—20. and c.9.12,13. Lam.3.48. Remove the cause of the evill, Micah.6.9,8. Hos.6.1. and 14.1,2. Too few do thus, Jer.8.6.

all the tithes] Not a part onely, keeping back what ye can fraudulently, as formerly ye did: willing so to seem to deal fairely, but in truth deal lying with God, who will not be mocked, and deluding and defrauding his Priests. The vail of hypocrisie will not cover things so from the eyes of God, Bring them all, voluntarily, faithfully, and cheerfully, not with grudging and repining, see Act. 5. 2. 2 Chr. 31.5. &c.

into the store-house] See Neh.13.12,13.2 Chr.31.11,12.1 Chr.26.20 that there may be meat in my house] For my service, and servitors, not that God for himself needed these, Psal. 50. 8—14. But by these he would train up his people to his true & spiritual worship & service & lift up their mindes to the heavenly things shadowed out by them. and prove me now herewith] Ye have afraid other wayes, & in vain ye think this unlikely, yet trie it, prove it. God offers himself to the tryall, whereby it shall soon be seen that causelesly they complained of God, and that truely the fault will be found in themselves, and their facrilledge. See that Judg. 6. 37, 38, 39. There is an un-lawfull tempting of God, a presumptuous tempting, without ground of promise made, or means prescribed. All contrary to his will, verse 15. As he sins with slackneſse on their behalf.

return unto me] So Zech.1.3,4. Hos.14.1. Joel 2.13. Acts 26.18. After he hath laboured with sharp reproofs to over-master & subdue their proud rebellious stubbornesse, now he comes gently to exhort them and draw them to repentance, at least such of them as would become tractable, & be fairly wonne. And thus ever and anō in the Prophets; yet for a ll this return ye. Not yet that Repentance is in our own power, when ever we will. Jer.31. 18,19.

and I will return] Does them in hope of mercy, without which hope man would ever flee from God, and never return to him. wherein shall we return?] Thus before? see on c.3.17. Here is still a shrewd signe of rebellious contumacy & perverseness. V.8. will a man rob God?] He punctually tells them wherein. Will any man do this? any idolater, any heathen? so Jer. 2. 10, 11. a book of remembrance] Of memorandums, a register book, a book of Records. Like that Ester 6.1. & 9.32. & Ezra 6.1. and Neh. 7.5. This is spoken after the manner of men, as that Ps. 56.8. To shew that God will never forget to reward the services of his Saints that fear him. Heb. 6.10. see Neh. 13. 14, 22, 31. Mat. 25. 44. Gal. 6.9. Neither wants he a book of remembrance for the wicked, Ps. 50. 21, 22. Apoc. 20. 12.

thought upon his Name] Well remembred, and weighed, and considered, and duely reverenced & esteemed his name, that bethought themselves of God aright: that have his fear alwayes in their hearts and before their eyes, that meditate upon his grace and commandments, that have a care to call upon him, and do actually remember him in all his works.

V. 17. And they shall be] Here is the end wherefore God foregarded and recorded them; and whereby it shall appear full well that they did not serve God in vain.

Mine] Mine in a peculiar sort, Exod. 19. 5. my peculiar lot, inheritance, choice portion, chief treasure, Esay 19. 25. Deut. 19. 29. 1 Kings 8. 51, 53. Psal. 33. 12. Jer. 10. 16. And we answerably should be his in a peculiar kinde of holy living, 2 Cor. 7. 1. Ps. 16. 8. Tit. 2. 14.

in that day when] God first notes & records, for such as fear him, yet defers & delays for a time, doth not presently so own the in the open face of the world, But yet afterwards in his time fails not to do it: in that day of his Churches reparation and restauration, in his day, and fittest opportunity best known to him: wherein we must not limit him, or prescribe to him: But mean-while we must patiently bear and wait his good leisure and pleasure, as the Saints all have ever done.

my jewels] Deut. 7. 6. and 14. 2. and 26. 18. Esay 62. 3. my special treasure, Ps. 135. 4. when I shall restore my Church according to my promise, they shall be as mine own proper and choicest, chiefest goods, however they may seem to be neglected now.

spare them] That is, forgive their sins, and govern, them with my spirit. And moreover pardon their imperfections in my services. They know their best actions & affections in serving me are imperfect, defective, and defiled. They dream not of an absolute perfection in this world, Phil. 3. 12. much lesse brag they of the merit of their works, or works of supererogation. But know they need this pardon and sparing even in doing holy duties, and this sparing I do here promise to the.

his own son] Psal. 103. 13. His fatherly indulgence accepts of the will for the work, Heb. 13. 18. 2 Cor. 8. 12. As a Father will accept in his Childe the desire for the deed, and if there be a blemish in his childe, will pity it, and cover it.

that serveth him] With a son-like and filial affection. The Father will not use him, as a servant or hireling. Here is adoption, and sanctification, and acceptation included.

V. 18. Then] At that day, though before ye will not. Then when to late for you.

Shall ye] Shall all men, yea and ye too. Ye blasphemers shall.

return] The tyde shall turne, the scene change, the case and face of things so alter, that even ye shall return so far to your selves, though smally to your comfort, to see it, and say it.

and discern] That v. 14, 15. and Ch. 2. 17. He retorts the blasphemies upon themselves; making themselves their own judges and condemners therein. Their own experience shall teach and school them, the sense of their own pains and sight of the others happiness, shall turn them now from that stupidity and frenzy wherewithal formerly they were possessed, and make them now to discern between things that do so much differ.

between the righteous and the wicked] Between them, and their different estates, and Gods different dealing with them. That God doth now sit idle in heaven, and let men live as they list, regarding neither right nor wrong; forgoing, or forgetting himself, and his part, and office of being just, and the just judge of the world, They shall know to their pain and sorrow, that he is both the rewarder of the good, and also the just and fearfull avenger of sin, and sinners, though in his un-searchable wisdom, he did forbear, and let things go on, till his appointed time. See Luke 16. 25 between him that serveth God] This expounds the former, and shews that all fals in with this as rivers all fall into the sea. This service of God is the thing that compleats and comprehends all. The summe is, you do wrongfully impute to God that he doth not reward those which serve him: but if ye served him heartily and uprightly, then you should finde the effect of his promises, whereas now you deprive your selves of them, because your service is defiled with hypocrisie, and impiety. The Lord will not always suffer, bear, and forbear, as now he doth: But a day shall come, wherein a sensible difference shall appear, Psal. 58. 11. Esay 66. 14. The full and final separation shall be in the last judgement, Matt. 25. 32, &c. 2 Thess. 1. 5, &c.

CHAP. IV.

Verse 1. For] He prosecutes that which was averred in the last words aforegoing, still clearing Gods justice from their blasphemous calumniations.

behold] The note of attention, needfully required here.

the day] And again repeated afterward. The day, not of the last judgement, at Christs second coming, as some would, though then that thing shall be consumated, and perfectly compleated, which is here spoken of. Neither the day from Malachi till Christ coming, wherein the Jews suffered many miseries under the Grecian Kings of Syria, and Egypt, the Seleucidæ, and Lagidæ, the two legs of Daniels Image, Dan. 2. 33, 41, 42, 43. and c. 11. 2. as some others would. But the day of Christs first coming in the flesh, wherein was accomplished what is set down in this Chapter, both judgements upon them who would not receive Christ, when as God should send him for the restauration of his Church, whereof he had spoken, chap. 3. 2, 3. and which fell out in the last destruction of Jerusalem: And healing and salvatin to those that fear the Lords Name. And the sending of Elias, as Christs Harbinger to prepare the way before him.

cometh] Is not far off. No Prophet between Malachi, and John Baptist. This, the more to affect them, and raise their expectation.

that shall burn as an oven] A black day to the wicked and impenitent Jews: a fearfull and fiery day to sinners, called the great and dreadfull day, v. 5. great and terrible day, Joel 2. 31. Gods wrath and revenge is often compared to fire, and to fire burning as in an oven, or furnace. See Esay 31. 9. Matt. 13. 42. like Nebuchadnezzars oven, Dan. 3. 19. see on ch. 3. 2.

and all the proud] Even those, c. 3. 15. and all like them: they shall not be happy, and exalted, as the blasphemers said, but be as stubble. But who are they? He takes up their words, c. 3. 15. They least meant them of themselves, they were like those Esay 65. 5. But the Prophet mindes them, as if he should say, In that day you shall see a difference made, and you shall see what shall become of the proud and wicked doers, yea and who those proud and wicked doers are, not those you think of, but even your selves, and such like proud blasphemers, there will this pride and wicked doing be found.

shall be stubble] fully dry, Nahum 1. 10. See Exod. 15. 7.

and the day] God then doth not in one constant and equall tenour of proceeding exercise and execute his Judgements in this world, in this life, nor is tied to our lawes & desires; But hath his own appointed dayes, sometimes of long-suffering and forbearance, and sometimes of vengeance, and punishment, as pleaseth him.

burn them up] See Esay 5. 24. and 47. 14. Psal. 8. 5. 14: So easily as fire burneth the stubble, can the Lord destroy the wicked.

neither root, nor branch] Neither root, nor stalk, of the stubble shall remain: an utter extirpation shall be made. Proverbiall terms, as Job 18. 16. and 29. 19. Esay 5. 24. Amos 2. 9. This relates to the last destruction of Jerusalem, and rejection of the Jews. A dreadfull judgement for that so fearfull a sin of rejecting Christ, and crucifying the Son of God. This so fiered and inflamed the wrath of God against them, that he inflicted that horrible vengeance (as was meet) for such an hellish and un-heard of sin: An un-parelled crying crime, did cry out for this extermination here threatned. The Jews, even the vilest sinners and blasphemers amongst them, boasted of the coming of the Messias. And come he should, but in a vengeance to them, the day of his coming should be as that, Amos 5. 18. We see then Christ came not to save all, but in judgement to some, John 9. v. 39. Luke 2. 34. He came to save his people, Matt. 1. 21, his sheep, his elect: all indeed without exception that believe in him. But now this belief depends not upon the absolute power & pleasure of mans will. God hangs not the merit and efficacy of Christs death, the fulfilling of his eternall decrees, upon the contingent mutability of mans will. But he who made the will, bends and frames it as he will, in whom he will, to the fulfilling of his decrees. And he who is bound to none, gives grace and faith not to all, but according to the good pleasure of his will, which he had purposed in himself.

V. 2. But unto you] Here is the effect and benefit of Christs coming to the godly. He separates these here to whom now he speaks, from those grosse hypocrites and blasphemers against whom he spake, and contended before. He tells these here apart, that fearfull comminations belongs not to them, that day of Christs coming shall not be terrible to them, but most comfortable.

that fear my Name] See on Ch. 3. 16. that do not sleight me, or my words and threatnings, or murmur at them, or deride them, and securely go on in their sins, but tremble at my word, Esay 66. 5. and fear my name, Deut. 28. 58. Psal. 111. 9. Exod. 15. 3. Josh. 7. 9. See Psal. 19. 2. These God referred to himself out of the great bulk and body of the sinfull multitude, these had need of comfort, and to them this promise is made. Let others perish that think God bound to the, though they are at open war with him, but do ye lift up your heads, patiently bear your present pressures, and joyfully expect this day of glorious deliverance.

shall the sun of righteousnesse arise] Christ that sun, Esay 60. 1, 2, 19, 20. the light of the world, John 8. 12. and 1. 9. and 9. 5. the light of the Gentiles, and the glory of his people Israel, Luk. 2. 32. See John 1. 8. This sun was not risen to the Patriarchs and Prophets, only it brought on the dawning of the day, and caused a kinde of twilight before, and under the Law: But now it should arise in their sight, as that sun, Psal. 19. 5, 6. as that light, Prov. 4. 18. Luke 1. 78, 79. And this he did, as in his own person, so by the light of the Gospel, which then brake forth, whereby the heavens seemed to be opened, as the phrase is, Apoc. 4. 1. and 19. 11. See Ephes. 5. 14. And he is the sun of righteousnesse, in whom the righteousnesse of God should shine, and the Lord our righteousnesse, Jer. 23. 6. that we might be made the righteousnesse of God in him, 2 Cor. 5. 21. receiving him both imputed, and inherent righteousnesse, 1 Cor. 1. 30.

with healing in his wings] He shall dispel the clouds and darknesse of ignorance, sin & miserie, and shall bring in his rayes the quickning heat, and cheerfull, comfortable light, of life, and health, healing, and all happinesse. Esay 53. 5. 1 Pet. 2. 24. Matt. 11. 28.

and ye shall go forth] Ye were, as it were, imprisoned before, in sins and sorrowes. But here is your freedom, and manumission. A description of the libertie of the Spirit in the elect, in joy, vigour, and readinesse of spiritual motions. See 2 Cor. 3. 17.

and grow up] Or increase. Here is increase of the graces of regeneration, and sanctification. They shall be as trees planted in Gods garden, watered by the rivers issuing out of the sanctuary, and bringing forth new fruit every moneth, Ezeck 47. 12. Psal. 1. 3. The seed of sanctification is permanent and immortal, 1 John 3. 9. and fruits as springs and growes up to eternal life, John 4. 14.

as calves of the stall] Fat and flourishing. See Ezek. 34. 14. Esay 25. 6. Jer. 31. 14. Psal 63. 5.

V. 3. And ye shall tread] A representation of the Churches victories over her enemies, which is very frequent in the Prophets. So that they shall not need to envy their presen jollitie and felicitie, when they see them flourish and flaunt it out, and Lord it over them, That day shall come when this part of felicity shall not be wanting to them: even a glorious triumph over their wicked enemies. Not that they should cruelly thirst after revenge, or want the spirit of meeknesse, even to pray for their enemies, But that God in justice should thus change the face of things, and use his people as his instruments therein, who also should greatly joy in seeing God vindicating his own glory, in his just revenge upon his implacable and ir-reconcileable enemies, Psal. 58. 10, 11. Apoc. 18. 20. Esay 66. 24. Some apply this to the Churches spirituall enemies, over whom the thus triumphs in Christ her head, who hath overcome them for her, that they shall no be able to hurt her, 1 Cor. 15. 55, 56, 57. Joh. 16. 33. but work her good, Rom. 8. 28 in the day that] Till that day they must stay their over-hasty desires, and mean-while with patience wait for it, and with joy expect it.

V. 4. Remember ye] He speaks not of re-edifying the Temple, as Haggai and Zechariah did, But coming after them, when the Temple was now built, and being the last of the Prophets, because the time was come that the Jews should be destitute of Prophets untill the time of Christ, that they might more fervently desire his coming, the Prophet exhorteth them to exercise themselves diligently in studying the Law of Moses in the mean-season, whereby they might continue in the true religion, and also be armed against all temptation.

the law] Mentions the Law only, not the Prophets, yet they not excluded, as being but the Interpreters of Moses, Appendexes to the Law, mainly aiming at this, to contain the people in the obedience of the Law, and therefore many times conjoyned to the Law, as Mat. 7. 11. & 11. 13. & 22. 40. Ties them to the Law, as Esay 8. 20. They must not swerve from it, to the left-hand, or right, They must not adde to it, or take from it, It is a perfect Law, Psal. 19. 7. and sufficient for them. And this Law would prepare them for Christ, and his coming, fit them to receive him. For the Law reveals sin, Rom. 3. 20. & 7. 9. And works wrath, Rom. 4. 15. Gal. 3. 10. And is our School-master to Christ, Gal. 3. 24. And is the Rule of life, when we are in Christ, Rom. 7. 11. 16, 22, 25.

of Moses] Exod. 20. Deut. 5. Called his Law, Heb. 10. 28. because he was the minister of it, Exod. 20. 19. Joh. 1. 17. As Paul calls the Gospel, his Gospel, Rom. 16. 25. See John 9. 28.

my servant] Heb. 3. 2, 5. Deu. 4. 5. Neh. 1. 7. Moses is usually so stiled.

which I commanded unto him] God the Lord, & Author of the Law and the Proclaimer and Publisher of it, in a dreadfull and miraculous manner.

in Horeb] Exod. 3. 1. & 17. 8. & 33. 6. Deut. 4. 10. 15. & 5. 2. & 18. 16. 1 King 8. 9. Psal. 106. 19. called also Sinai, likely from the bramble, for so the word signifieth, or the bush, which Moses there saw burning, but not consuming, Exod. 3. 1, 2. Some make the East part of that Mount to be called Horeb, and the West part Sinai.

for all Israel] And therefore all Israel, from the least to the greatest, Princes and people, learned and un-learned, young and old, men, women, and children, are to remember and remark it, no excuse may be pretended by any, Deut. 4. 10.

with the Statutes] Other titles also are given to the Law, Psal. 119. and in other places, to set forth the use, perfection, and commendation of the Law, and Gods mercy to Israel in vouchsafing them this Law. Deut. 4. 6, 8. Psal. 147. 19, 20. And their sin and ingratitude, if they should forget it, or fore-go it.

V. 5. Behold] To fix their attention upon this, till the coming of Elias, and Messias.

I will send you] God sends his Prophets, and Ministers. Mat. 9. 38. And extraordinary men, extraordinarily qualified and furnished with gifts, as the extraordinary necessity of the times, and state of the Church do require sends here, after this time of silence and intermission.

Elias] This is John Baptist, as our Saviour himself tells us, Mat. 11, 13, 14. And again, ch. 17. 11, 12. Elias metaphorically, analegically, who came in the spirit and power of Elias, as the Angel Gabriel tells Zacharias the father of the Baptist, Luk. 1. 17. And as successour in his office, and with his zeal, to restore Religion being decayed then, at it was in the dayes of Ahab and Elias. John himself seems to deny this, John 1. 21. But that is in such sense as the Priests, and Levites, that were Pharisees, asked the question: He was not Elias the Tishbite, nor yet had his soul by transmigration come into him: But yet he was that Elias foretold by Esay, ch. 40. 1. See Mat. 3. 3. Mar. 1. 3. And yet the Papists, to gain this that Antichrist is not yet come, and so the Pope not he, would feign here understand this of Elias in person and of the time, not of Christs first coming, but of his second coming, or Antichrists coming: and to Elias they joyn Enoch, and make them those two witnesses, Apoc. 11. 3. Such miserable shifts a desperate cause drives wise men unto.

the Prophet] I. Baptist denies himself the title of Prophet, meaning of that Prophet, Dent. 18. 15. See Joh. 1. 20, 21. Luk. 3. 16. Or of such a prophet, as the prophets, as the former prophets were, for he was greater then they: he could point with his finger to the Messias; Joh. 1. 29. Whereupon are those words of our Saviour Concerning him, Mat. 11. 9, 10, 11. A Prophet and more then a Prophet.

before the coming] Immediately before. This shall be the sign and token of his coming, John the Baptist shall be his harbinger, and immediate fore-runner: as the histories of the Gospels do declare. See Luke 1. 26, 36, 56. & Joh. 1. 15, 26, 29, 36. Mat. 3. 13.

of the great and dreadfull day of the Lord] See on v. 1. & 6. & on ch. 3. 2. Dreadfull, occasionally, by the perverse, ob-durate, and forlorn way-wardnesse, stubbornnesse, contumacy, and rebellion of the Jewish nation, Joh. 1. 11. But to the godly remnant, and whole Church of Christ it was the great and glorious day of joy and consolation, the day of salvation, Luke 2. 10, 11, 14. John 1. 12. Hereunto may be applied, Psal. 118. 21. 2 Cor. 6. 2.

V. 6. And he shall] The end of Johns sending, and coming, Johns office and employment, and the fruit and effect of it. After that time of silence and interruption of the Prophet, the doctrine of salvation shall again have its course, beginning at John.

turn the heart] Conversion, and that of the heart is the work of the Ministery, Acts 26. 18. 1 Cor. 3. 15. Col. 17. Isa. 55. 10, 11. Joh. 20. 23. 1 Tim. 4. 16. Indeed this work is properly Gods. Regeneration is a greater work then Creation. And yet man cannot make one hair of his head white or black, or adde one cubit unto his stature, Matt. 5. 36. & 6. 27. But God pleaseth to use the Ministers as his instruments in the work, whence is that, 2 Cor. 6. 1 and God by the secret grace, and vertue, and power of his Spirit works in them, and by them: He joyns himself to the Ministers, resignes not his right, but onely communicates his power with them, and graceth his instruments with the honour and title of the work. Saint Paul explicates this point, 1 Cor. 3. 6, 7. and ch. 15. 10. & Gal. 2. 8. Sometimes in his just judgement for sin, God by them hardens the hearts of people, as Isa. 6. 10. Ezek. 2. 2 Cor. 2. 15, 16.

of the fathers to their children] There were at this time many sects and schismes, and heresies, and hot divisions amongst them, and bitter heart-burnings between them: There were Pharisees, Sadducees, Samaritanes, &c. See Acts 23. 6. John 4. 9. Luke 9. 53, 54. Zech. 11. 8. As Micah 7. 6. and Mat. 10. 21, 35. Johns office should be to accord these discords, to reconcile these un-natural differences, to bring them to mutual charity in the bond of peace, to turn them to unity: And not simply to unity, for there is an unity in wicked conspiracy: But to bring them both to the sacred unity of saving faith in Christ, and so to prepare the way before him, to such an unity as formerly in the best times they had enjoyed, when they were knit together in the holy bond of unity in faith, and love, and the service of God. See Luke 1. 16, 17. Or thus, His preaching shall be to bring back the children of Israel that are gon astray, to the true faith and piety of their fore-fathers: whereby Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, who (as one may say) did not acknowledge them, Isa. 29. 22, 23. shall re-accept them for their lawfull posterity.

least I come] Thus God threatens, because of their obduration in sin: And thus he shews what an abominable sin, and monstrous ingratitude it is, to contemne his grace in sending his Son for mans salvation, and that upon the failing of this conversion he will thus proceed:

and smite the earth with a curse] He sends John to turn and convert some, that so at least he may save a Remnant, and not finally and totally destroy the whole nation. See Rom. 11. 1, 2. This curse makes this day a dreadfull day, v. 5. and 1 chap. 3. 2. executed upon the Jewish nation, Matt. 23. 37, 38. and 24. 2. 21. And shall be upon all contemners of the Gospel, Matth. 10. 14, 15. and 11. 24. Acts 13. 51. 2 Thes. 1. 8, 9. Heb. 2. 2, 3. and 10. 28, 29.

then meek, riding on an asse, his voice not heard, in the streets; not breaking a bruised reed, Esa. 42.3.43.3. yet even then he comes with his fan in his hand, with his whip-cord in his hand, and that twice over, John 2.14,15,16. Mat. 21.12. he layes the axe to the roots of the trees Mat. 3. 10,12. Herod, and all Jerusalem were troubled at this his coming, Mat. 2.v.3. And then to wicked sinners how terrible shall his second coming be? see Apoc. 6.16. and 1.7.1 Cor. 5.10. Psal. 2.12. Esay 33.14, 15. 2 Thes. 1.7,8,9, 10. Be to them that trample under foot his blood, and crucifie him again by their sins?

and who shall stand] See Psal. 1.5. and 36.12. Nahum 1.6. His presence and preaching shall be accompanied with a most powerful vertue of Gods spirit, and with severe judgement to destroy all rebels, and to cleanse his Church, see Isaiah 4.4. Matt. 3.10,11,12. Here are the effects of Christs coming, Luk. 24. 19.

for he is like a refiners fire] Here is no Popish purgatory fire, a fire to consume the wicked like drosse, such as you are: and to purge and purifie the gold and silver: and that by his word, as fire, Jer. 23. 29. Heb. 4.12,13. And by his spirit as fire. Mat. 3.11. see Luk. 12.49.51, 52. So fast corruption cleaves and sticks to man that it needs this refining fire; Psal. 51.7. Jer. 13.23. Heb. 12.1. 2 Tim. 2.16. And so powerful is the efficacy of the grace of Christ, and his blood, to purge and cleanse it, Heb. 9.14.

and like fullers sope] which was very ordinarily used to whiten woull and cleanse it. See Mar. 9.3. Thus he purifies his Remnant. Esay 10. 21,22. preserving them.

V.3. And he shall sit] Sit at it, continue at it, and be long and serious about it, as a thing not soon and suddenly done, they were so long set and settled upon their lees.

as a refiner] See Prov. 17.3, Jer. 9.7. He represents his diligence and care about this work of cleansing his elect, likened to precious metals.

the sons of Levi] corruptions there were in all estates. He beginneth with the Priests first, as the managers of Gods worship, and that they might be lights and shine to others: or he meaneth all true Christians made priests, Rev. 1.6. to offer unto God spiritual sacrifices. Rom. 12.1. figured by the ceremonial sacrifices, chap. 1.11.

as gold and silver] And not be as that reprobate silver. Jer. 6. 29, 30. or that Ezech. 22.20,21.22. see Dan. 11.35.

that they may offer] Not as they do now, impure offerers, and impure offerings.

an offering in righteousnesse] Right as they should do, right as God requires, and they are in duty bound, without wronging Gods Law and rule therein. Rightly, lawfully, and according to his ordinance, without default. See Psal. 51.19. Rom. 12.1.

V.4. Then shall the offerings] Chap. 1.11.

of Judah and Jerusalem] The offerings which the people of Judah and Jerusalem shall bring, and the Priests shall offer up in sacrifice, both Priests and people being purified.

be pleasant] Such offerings shall: and not evil doers, as the blasphemers that charged him, ch. 2,17. nor as those offerings, Hos. 9.4. Jer. 6.20. See Ezech. 20.40. Jer. 9.24. Esay 56.7.

as in the dayes of old] Though now Temple, worship, offerings, all be mean and poor, yet then all shalbe purged & purified, acceptable to the Lord, & pleasant to him, as when first instituted & best observed.

V.5. And I will come neer to you to judgment] His coming shall be as formerly, for the good of his, to refine them, so here for judgement against the wicked, to destroy them. They charged him, that he kept afar off, and was not the God of judgement, ch. 2.17. that he came not neer them, to own them, and judge for them against their and his enemies: They would rule him, and his doings at their beck, have him at their call. He tells them he will come neer thé, neer enough, But it is to judgement, against them, as his wicked enemies, as Esay 1.24. His Spirit shall effectually convince all sinners, Isa. 4.4. Joh. 16. 8. and the execution shall speedily follow that inward conviction, contrary to that former blasphemy.

a swift witnesse] Not slack & slow, as they did calumniate, but swift enough for them, for as they shall soon see that none of their sins are hid, or unknown to him, no not thosé which they labour most to keep secret. A witnesse, not to them, as Esay 55.4. nor for them, as for Job, c. 16.19. but against them, as Micah, 1.v.2. and Jer. 29. 23.

against] Here are seven deadly sins reckoned up, that a wonder it is, such should reigne amongst Gods people, and thosé but lately brought back from the Babylonish captivity.

the sorcerers] And all the sorts, and kinds, of such devillish dealers, and Satanicall sinners. Against thesé, see Exo. 22.18. Deu. 18.10. Such were thosé, 2 Chr. 33.6. thosé of Pharaoh, Ex. 7.8. & 9.ch. and many Chaldeans, Dan. 2.2. Esay 47.9,12. See Mica. 5.12. Nah. 3.4. Je. 27.9.

adulterers] Against these, see Deut. 22.22. Heb. 13.4. and the law of jelousie, Num. 5. see Prov. 6.33. &c. Jer. 23.10. Hos. 4.2. & 7.4.

false [swearers] Against these, See Levit. 19.12.1 Tim. 1.10.

oppressing] Or defraude.

hirelings] Against thesé, See Levit. 19.13. Jam. 5.4.

widow, and the fatherlesse, and the stranger] These through their weak estate are the more exposed to the injuries of wicked worldly men. And God therefore the more often gives charge on their behalf, and the more takes them into his tuition and protection, and threatens his revenge against such as wrongs them, so that such offenders set themselves against God more immediately.

and fear not me] The fear of God is a fountain of all true wisedom and Piety. Prov. 16.6. Gen. 41.18. The want of it opens the flood-gate to all sin and villany. Gen. 20.11. Rom. 3.18. Psal. 36.1. And yet all these severall sorts of grosse offenders would expostulate with God, for not being the God of judgement against sinners. But let us learn to judge our selves before we call upon God for his plagues and judgements upon others.

V.6. For I am the Lord] Jehovah, Exod. 6.3. He argues thence as followeth.

I change not] So much Balaam is forced to confesse, Numb. 23.19. Men change, and counsells and occurences change. It is not so with Gods Nature, essence and wisedom. He changes not, but persevereth constant in his justice, and truth, against their blasphemies: He is the same yesterday, to day, and for ever, James 1.17. He will perform his counsell and purpose, according to his promises, Rom. 11. 29. Some thus, under the Gospel, I will proceed with speedy operation of my Spirit and Judgement: whereas now I do use a great deal of clemency and patience out of my meere mercy and constancy in my promises.

therefore ye] Some thus, Though ye sons of Jacob are not yet consumed, yet I change not, I am the same Lord, and ye shall finde so in the end, that I am a just Judge, though I forbear you long. Others much rather thus, ye have deserved over and over again to be consumed, and considering your demerits it might be a wonder that I have not ere this thrown thunder-bolts amongst you to consume you: But that I have not done it, and that ye remain alive, preserved out of so many calamities, it is because of me, and my Nature, that I am Jehovah, and change not, and will perform my mercies promised: which ye should acknowledge, and be thankfull for, see Lam. 3.22,23. Hos. 11.9.

V.7. Even from the dayes of your fathers] Therefore but for me, it would be a wonder that ye had not been consumed before. For ye have thus sinned, not lately begun fo to do: but continued so doing for many generations. Psal. 95.10. Ezek. 2.3. Acts 7.51. The examples of Fathers is too prevailent with posterity, to sway them to evil. But neither such examples, nor any preferipion, custom, antiquity, or the like, are pleas available for the excuse of sin. Psal. 95.8,9. and 78.8. Ezek. 20.18. Zech. 1.5.1 Pet. 4.3. This circumstance here aggravates the crime, not lessens it.

and have not kept them] But trample them under feet. Jer. 2. 27 Zech. 7.11. Hos. 7.13. Dan. 9. 5, 10. &c. And yet God bore, and forbore: was indulgent, consumed them not: his slacknesse was their safety. And notwithstanding here they proudly and furiously charge him with slacknesse on their behalf.

return unto me] So Zech. 1.3,4. Hos. 14.1. Joel 2.13. Acts 26.18. After he hath laboured with sharp reproofs to over-master & subdue their proud rebellious (stubbornesse, now he comes gently to exhort them and draw them to repentance, at least such of them as would become tractable, & be fairly wonne. And thus ever and anon in the Prophets: yet for all this return ye. Not yet that Repentance is in our own power, when ever we will. But this shews the way and weight of our duty, though we have disinabled our selves; and this urgeth us to seek for it out of our selves, even of him, who hath promised it, and gives it by this means. Jer. 31. 18,19.

and I will return] Puts them in hope of mercy, without which hope man would ever flee from God, and never return to him. God returns by pardoning, accepting, and blessing of them, shewing them signes and pledges of his favour, and reconciliation. Whereas sin unrepented made a separation, and hid Gods face from them, Isa. 59.2. & 54. 7. yet fin though never so long continued in, shuts not out from mercy, if Repentance come in place, See Luk. 19.42. Acts 17.30. Ezek. 18.21,22. Impenitency onely doth it. Yet we must not abuse this mercy, Rom. 6.1. But look to that Prov. 1.24,26. Isa. 55.6. Ezek. 24.13.

wherein shall we return?] Thus before? see on c. 2.17. Here is still a shewd signe of rebellious contumacy & perverseesse. Men the deeper ing ged in the guilt of sin, are the more hardly brought to convictio of it: custom blindes, & hardens them. Isa. 5.20. Ro. 1.28. We say, they are not guilty to our selves, shew us what, and wherein we offend.

V.8. Will a man rob God?] He punctually tells them wherein. Will any man do this? any idolater, any heathen? so Jer. 2. 10,11. This makes to the aggravation of the sin, & to their greater conviction. No heathen will do this that ye do, none so barbarous, that will defraud their Gods of their honour and oblations or deale deceitfully with them. See Gen. 47.22. Care of maintenance for Gods worship is ingrafted in man by nature. We see it in Idolaters, and all Heathens. All bountifull that way. And therefore sacrilege is abominable to all. See Num. 2.22. Act. 19.37.

yet ye have robbed me] So again, v.9. Thus God takes it as done against himself, what is done against the meanes and maintenance of his worship. See the like, Act. 9.4. He owns it as his own what is set apart to the maintenance of his service.

wherein &c.] See on ch. 2.17. Herein they exceed the bounds of impudency it self, being openly so sacrilegious, yet here to say, wherein? as the adulterous woman, Prov. 30.20.

in tithes & offerings] Keeping those things back which are my right, & are to furnish out my service, and for the maintenance of my officers, Neh. 13.10. &c. Tithes paid before the law, by Abraham to Melchizedech chizedech. By Jacob vowed to Gods service, Gen. 28.22. under the law established by Gods statute-law to be paid to the Priests and Levites: and wherein this law is either ceremonial, or judicial, may be questioned. And the rather because by the light and instinct of nature, the Heathens hallowed the tenth unto God. And no question there can be but under the Gospel, God requires as liberal a maintenance to the Ministers of the Gospel, as he allotted to them under the Law, and leaves them not to the arbitrary devotion of the people, see 1 Cor. 9.7—11. 1 Tim. 3.2.& 5.17,18. Gal. 6.6.& 3.15. Pro. 20.25.& 3.9. Lev. 27.30,31.

V.9. Ye are cursed] They complained, that God did punish them without end, or measure, they were cursed: These were their continual clamours, faith God, be it so, and true it is, ye are cursed. But see the cause, thank your selves, the fault is yours, not my rigor.

for ye have robbed me] See v. 8. what marvell then, though I cry quittance with you, and render you a just reward?

this whole nation] An epidemical sin, not a few of them, but as it were a general combination, an universal conspiracy and confederacy in this sin Neh. 23.10. And thus God shews that his curse was not without cause.

V.10. bring ye] God brings all to this issue, as if he should say, in vain ye go on in quarrelling and complaining, here is the best way and remedy, Amend your fault, and ye shall soon fee my goodnes, so Esay 1.16--20. and c. 9.12,13. Lam. 3.48. Remove the cause of the evill, Micah. 6.9,8. Hos. 6.1. and 14.1,2. Too few do thus, Jer. 8.6.

all the tithes] Not a part onely, keeping back what ye can fraudulently, as formerly ye did: willing fo to seem to deal fairely, but in truth deal lying with God, who will not be mocked, and deluding and defrauding his Priests. The vail of hypocrisie will not cover things fo from the eyes of God, Bring them all, voluntarily, faithfully, and cheerfully, not with grudging and repining, see Act. 5. 2. 2 Chr. 31.5. &c.

into the store-house] See Neh. 13.12,13.2 Chr. 31.11,12.1 Chr. 26.20 that there may be meat in my house] For my service, and fervitors, not that God for himself needed thefe, Psal. 50. 8---14. But by thefe he would try in this people to his true & spiritual worship & fervice & stir up their minides to the heavenly things shadowed out by them.

and prove me now herewith] Ye have allated other ways, & in vain ye think this unlikely, yet trie it, prove it. God offers himself to the tryall, whereby it shall foon be seen that causelesly they complained of God, and that truely the fault will be found in themselves, and their sacrilege. See that Judg. 6. 37,38,39. There is an un-lawfull tempting of God, a presumptuous tempting, without ground of promise made, or means prescribed. All contrary to his will, verse 15. As the sin of wicked Ahaz was on the other hand, Isaiah 7. 12.

If I will not] Whether, if ye obey my commandments, I will fail in my promises, Atext much pressing for Tythes, and the maintenance of the ministery, Prov. 3. 9, 10. Some here would have somewhat to be understood, as thus, Let me not be believed hereafter, the windows of heaven] Gen. 7.11. 2 Kings 7. 2, 19. A figurative term, to signifie an abundance of good things. See 2 Chron. 31. 10. Hag. 2.18, 19. Zech. 8.12.

pour you out] Heb. empty out. see Hos. 2.21.22. plenty, & scarcity are the works of God, fecondary means are but his instruments, & subservient to him therein. And is in other things, fo in this of plenty, the power and prevalency of repentance is to be seen. Jona. 3.10. Ps. 107.33.&c.

not room enough] Superabundant store. Deu. 30.9. Joel 2.23,24. Amos 9.13. Lev. 26.4,5,10. Deut. 28.8, 11, 12. See Luk. 11. 17,18.

V.11 And I will rebuke] The caterpillars, and whatsoever destroyeth corne, and fruits, See 1 Chron. 16. 21.

for your sakes] Upon your repentance and amendment, and that in this particular of my tithes and offerings.

destroy] Heb. corrupt. See the contrary threatnings, Hos. 2.12.

cast her fruit] They shall not lose their fruit by any accident.

V.12. And all nations shall call you blessed] Deut. 28.10.& 4.6. See Deut. 33.29. Psal. 33.12.& 144.15.

a delightsome land] A most happy land, and abounding with all things that can be devised in the world. See on Zech. 7.14.

V.13. Your] This is the last charge against them.

words have been stout against me] Before were mutterings & murmurings. Now risen up to open exclamations, as of mad-men, that will give no way to wholsome counsels and admonitions, but bend their tongues against heaven, as Ps. 12.3,4.1 Sam. 2.3. Jud. 15. And thus one sin draws in another: frets like a canker, that they grow worse and worse, 2 Tim. 3.13. God giving them over, Rom. 1.28. And Satan working in them, Ephes. 2.2,3. Till they come to this height.

what have we spoken] Their impudent hypocrisie will never be at an end, They will rather be ready to call the Prophet in question for slander. Hos. 4.4. Nay, they contend with God, quarrel with him.

V. 14. It is vain to serve God] These hypocrites would needs perswade themselves that they served God, and that truly: And being puft up with this conceit, they thought God should thereupon serve them, as they would have him, and they expected: and if he on the other side punish them for their sins, & exercise thé with afflictions, they cry out. It is in vain then to serve God, & fo be way themselves to be prophane hypocritical Atheists but such as serve him in truth are content to deny themselves, & to be humbled and exercised by him; as knowing wel they deserve it: and that he fees it good for them. The others think no such matters, but complain of his injustice in punishing them, & therefore say, it is in vain and to no purpose to serve him. Whereas in truth, except this one thing only, all things else shal be in vain, Eccl. 1.2.& 2.11.19.& 6.11.2. Kin. 17.15. Pf. 39.6.& 4.2.& 94.11. Jon. 2.8. Sam. 13.21. Je. 2.5.1 Cor. 3.20. vain are all the riches, honours, pleasures of this world, without the serving of God.

and what profit] They are all for themselves, for their profit, carnall, fensual men, they make thefelves their God, fo Pf. 4.1 Tim. 6.5. Phil. 3.19. And they can fee no profit in serving God, so Job 21.14,15. Jer. 44. 17,18. Nay what profit is there in all other things besides this? Eccl. 1.3. Rom. 6.21. And what profit is there not in this? Tim. 6.6.& 4.8. Here are spiritual riches, honours, pleasures. Here is Christ, & his benefits, the Spirit, & his heavenly graces: faith, hope, love, justification, fanctificatiō, adoption: that peace, Phil. 4.7. That. joy, 1 Pet. 1.8. Communion with God: and a taft of the powers of the world to come. All things work for the good of such: such being the heirs of glory: Rom. 8.28. Heb. 1.14. So that the Apostles speech, 1 Cor. 15.19. Reacheth not the Christians hope, including that hope in the things of this life, cōfining it to them, which hath nothing to do with Christ, or Religion.

kept his ordinance] Heb. his observatiō. That keeps & contains us in his fear, & good order, and in the observation of his ordinances and our duties. Thus these hypocritical justiciaries falsly boast. For if they had duly weighed his law, & their own lives, thy could never have arrived at this height of self-cōceitednes, & good opinió of themselvs mournfully] Heb. in black. As Job 30.28. Pfal. 38.6. humbly, dejectedly. This God greatly requires, Mica. 6.8. But these hypocrites did but dally with God in this cafe: their heart was haughty enough, as appears in the text. Thus Isa. 58. 3, 5. They here make shew of counterfeit hypocrisie, for true humility, and arrogate so much to themselves, when they have so little, or no goodnes in them. They may have relation to those Pfalms, Zech. 7.3.

V.15. And now] Here comes in their second degree of blasphemy, That they should not only serve God in vain, without his regarding them, or ther fervice: but that he should regard and reward the wicked with his blessings, and spare to punish them.

we call the proud happy] Whiles we do thus, & are in this case, mean while we see the proud & presumptuous sinners, that walk in the stubbornnesse of their hearts, & sin boldly and maliciously, to flourish, & to be happy in the world: and we may well call and count them, fo & not they call us blessed, as v. 12. And we may envy thé for it, not they us: God seeming so to neglect us, & affect them. At least-wise they see all things come alike to al: Ec. 9.2. and therefore vain is their serving of God, & without any profit to them at all. This tentation fometimes puzzles the godly, as hath been said, Pf. 73. 12, 13, 14, 15. see on c. 2. 17.

yea, they that work wickednesse] That make it their trade, as those 1 Joh. 3. 6, 9. & c. 5. 18. the impious contemners of God.

are set up] Heb. built up, as Ex. 1.21,22. by degrees brought up to perfection, to compleat felicity, eſtablished and preserved in it. See Job 21.7. Pf. 73.3. Jer. 12.1. Thus the garithnesse of worldly felicities dazles the eyes of worldings: whiles yet by them they are made nothing the better, but rather fatted to the day of flaughter. A poor happinesis and advancement it is.

yea, they that tempt God] Sinfully, presumptuously, daringly. Of this sin, see Psal. 78.18.41.56.& 95.9. Deu. 6.16. Ex. 17.2,7. Nu. 14.22. Mat. 4.7.

are even delivered] By him, out of dangers, and distresses: as his favourities, protected under his wing.

V.16. Then] Upon their blasphemings: and the prophets preaching, some amongst them, though too cold before, yet then were rouzed up: and then more instamed, to zeal. So that the prophets preaching was not without some fruit, had its effect, by it Gods Spirit working in them as Job 32.19, 20. Jer. 20.9. Psal. 39.1, 2, 3. Act. 17.16.

they] Not all, not the most part, But yet some. And ministers must content themselves, that though the most mend not, yet some do.

that feared the Lord] And again repeated in this v. A true description of a pious and religious man, Gen. 22.12.& 42.18. Deu. 4.10.& 10.12. 1 King. 18.3. a King. 4.1. Neh. 7.2. Job 1.1. Jonah 1.9. Act. 10.2.& 13.26. Some such there were among this heap of blasphemers. In the barrennest times of the Church, yet God hath some that fear him, & that stād up to justifie his truth against the blasphemies of the wicked. In the desperate and most forlorn times, yet God preserves his Church, his flock, his remnant and holy seed, Gen. 6.12. Esay 1.9 & 6.13. Apoc. 3.4. and 11.3. Mat. 16.18. Gods promise and truth is ingaged for it.

spake] What they spake is not set down, the words following are not theirs, but the prophets. But thence may be gathered, That whilst the wicked did blaspheme in this manner, the true believers opposed themselves against them, and strengthened themselves against those temptations, and eſt-soons comforted one another.

often] And not seldom. Often was needfull, as Phil. 3.18.

one to another] To preserve their faith against the poison of these blasphemers, mutually to animate one another to faith & obedience to courage and constancy. And much doth the Scripture speak of our mutual duties to our brethren this way. See Jud. 23. Heb. 3.13.& 10.24. Esay 2.3. Pf. 95.1,2,6. and 34.3. Thef. 5.14. Luk. 22.32. Gal. 6.2.

and the Lord hearkened] God sees well, though the wicked think otherwise, Psal. 94.7. He listens and hears, as Nehemie prayed, Chap. 1. verse 11. See Acts 10.4. such is Gods readineſſe to hear a book of remembrance]Of memorandums. a register book, a book of Records. Like that Ester 6.1. & 9.32. & Ezra 6.1. and Neh.7.5. This is spoken after the manner of men, as that Ps.56.8. To shew that God will never forget to reward the services of his Saints that fear him. Heb.6.10. see Neh.13. 14,22,31. Mat.25.44. Gal.6.9. Neither wants he a book of remembrance for the wicked, Pf.50.21,22. Apoc.20.12.

thought upon his Name] Well remembred, and weighed, and considered, and duely reverenced & esteemed his name, that betheught themselves of God aright: that have his fear alwayes in their hearts and before their eyes, that meditate upon his graces and commandements, that have a care to call upon him, and do actually remember him in all his works.

V.17. And they shall be]Here is the end wherefore God foreganded and recorded them; and whereby it shall appear full well that they did not serve God in vain.

Mine] Mine in a peculiar sort, Exod.19.5. my peculiar lot, inheritance, choice portion, chief treasure, Esay 19.25. Deut. 19. 29.1 Kings 8.51,53. Pfal.33.12. Jer.10.16. And we anfwerably should be his in a peculiar kinde of holy living, 2 Cor.7.1. Pf. 16.8. Tit.2.14.

in that day when]God firſt notes & records, for such as fear him, yet defers & delays for a time, doth not presently fo own thẽ in the open face of the world, But yet afterwards in his time fails not to do it: in that day of his Churches reparation and reſtauration, in his day, and fitteſt opportunity best known to him: wherein we muſt not limit him, or preſcribe to him: But mean-while we muſt patiently bear and wait his good leiſure and pleaſure, as the Saints all have ever done.

my jewels] Deut.7.6. and 14.2. and 26.18. Esay 62.3. my ſpecial treasure, Pſ.135.4. when I ſhall reſtore my Church according to my promiſe, they ſhall be as mine own proper and choiceſt, chiefeſt goods, however they may ſeem to be neglected now.

ſpare them] That is, forgive their ſins, and govern, them with my ſpirit. And moreover pardon their imperfections in my ſervices. They know their beſt actions & affections in ſerving me are imperfect, defective, and defiled, They dream not of an abſolute perfection in this world, Phil.3.12. much leſſe brag they of the merit of their works, or works of ſupererogation. But know they need this pard6 and ſparing even in doing holy duties, and this ſparing I do here promiſe to thẽ.

his own ſon] Pſal. 103. 13. His fatherly indulgence accepts of the will for the work, Heb. 13.18. 2 Cor.8. 12. As a Father will accept In his Childe the deſire for the deed, and if there be a blemiſh in his childe, will pity it, and cover it.

that ſerveth him] With a ſon-like and filial affection. The Father will not uſe him, as a ſervant or hireling. Here is adoption, and ſanctification, and acceptation included.

V.18. Then] At that day, though before ye will not. Then when to late for you.

ſhall ye] Shall all men, yea and ye too. Ye blaſphemers ſhall.

return] The tyde ſhall turne, the ſcene change, the caſe and face of things ſo alter, that even ye ſhall return ſo far to your ſelves, though ſmally to your comfort, to ſee it, and ſay it.

and diſcern] That v. 14,15. and Ch.3.17. He retorts the blaſphemies upon themſelves; making themſelves their own judges and condemners therein. Their own experience ſhall teach and ſchool them, the ſenſe of their own pains and ſigh. of the others happineſs, ſhall turn them now from that ſtupidity and frenzy wherewithal formerly they were poſſeſſed, and make them now to diſcern between things that do ſo much differ.

between the righteous and the wicked]Between them, and their different eſtates, and Gods different dealing with them. That God doth now ſit idle in heaven, and let men live as they liſt, regarding neither right nor wrong; foregoing, or forgetting himſelf, and his part, and office of being juſt, and the juſt judge of the world, They ſhall know to their pain and ſorrow, that he is both the rewarder of the good, and alſo the juſt and fearfull avenger of ſin, and ſinners, though in his un-ſeatchable wiſdom, he did forbear, and let things go on, till his appointed time. See Luke 16.25 between him that ſerveth God]This expounds the former, and ſhews that all ſals in with this as rivers all fall into the ſea. This ſervice of God is the thing that compleats and comprehends all. The ſumme is, you do wrongfully impute to God that he doth not reward thoſe which ſerve him: but if ye ſerved him heartily and uprightly, then you ſhould finde the effect of his promiſes, whereas now you deprive your ſelves of them, becauſe your ſervice is defiled with hypocriſie, and impiety. The Lord will not always ſuffer, bear, and forbear, as now he doth: But a day ſhall come, wherein a ſenſible difference ſhall appear, Pſal.58.11. Eſay 66.14. The full and final ſeparation ſhall be in the laſt judgement, Matt.25.32, &c. 2 Theſſ.1.5, &c.

CHAP. IV.

Verse 1. For] He proſecutes that which was averred in the laſt words aforegoing, ſtill clearing Gods juſtice from their blaſphemous calumniations.

behold] The note of attention, needfully required here.

the day] And again repeated afterward. The day, not of the laſt judgement, as Chriſts ſecond coming, as ſome would, though then that thing ſhall be conſummated, and perfectly compleated, which is here ſpoken of. Neither the day from Malachi till Chriſt coming, wherein the Jews ſuffered many miſeries under the Grecian Kings of Syria, and Egypt, the Seleucidæ, and Lagidæ, the two legs of Daniels Image, Dan.2.33,41,42,43. and c.11. 1. as ſome others would. But the day of Chriſts firſt coming in the fleſh, wherein was accompliſhed what is ſet down in this Chapter, both judgements upon them who would not receive Chriſt, when as God ſhould ſend him for the reſtauration of his Church, where of he had ſpoken, chap. 3. 2,3. and which fell out in the laſt deſtruction of Jeruſalem: And healing and ſalvatin to thoſe that fear the Lords Name. And the ſending of Elias, as Chriſts Harbinger to prepare the way before him.

cometh]Is not far off. No Prophet between Malachi, and John Baptiſt. This, the more to affect them, and raiſe their expectation.

that ſhall burn as an oven] A black day to the wicked and impenitent Jews: a fearfull and fiery day to ſinners, called the great and dreadfull day, v. 5. great and terrible day, Joel 2. 31. Gods wrath and revenge is often compared to fire, and to fire burning as in an oven, or fornace. See Eſay 31.9. Matt.13.42. like Nebuchadnezzars oven, Dan.3.19. ſee on ch.3.2.

and all the proud] Even thoſe, c.3.15. and all like them: they ſhall not be happy, and exalted, as the blaſphemers ſaid, but be as ſtubble. But who are they? He takes up their words, c.3.15. They leaſt meant them of themſelves, they were like thoſe Eſay 65.5. But the Prophet mindes them, as if he ſhould ſay, In that day you ſhall ſee a difference made, and you ſhall ſee what ſhall become of the proud and wicked doers, yea and who thoſe proud and wicked doers are, not thoſe you think of, but even your ſelves, and ſuch like proud blaſphemers, there will this pride and wicked doing be found.

ſhall be ſtubble] fully dry, Nahum 1. 10. See Exod. 15. 7.

and the day] God then doth not in one conſtant and equall tenour of proceeding exerciſe and execute his Judgements in this world, in this life, nor is tied to our lawes & deſires; But hath his own appointed dayes, ſometimes of long-ſuffering and forbearance, and ſometimes of vengeance, and puniſhment, as pleaſeth him.

burn them up] See Eſay 5.24. and 47.14. Pſal.8. 5. 14: So eaſily as fire burneth the ſtubble, can the Lord deſtroy the wicked.

neither root, nor branch]Neither root, nor ſtalk, of the ſtubble ſhall remain: an utter extirpation ſhall be made. Proverbiall terms, as Job 18.16. and 29.19. Eſay 5.24. Amos 2.9. This relates to the laſt deſtruction of Jeruſalem, and rejection of the Jews. A dreadfull judgement for that ſo fearfull a ſin of rejecting Chriſt, and crucifying the Son of God. This ſo fiered and inflamed the wrath of God againſt them, that he inflicted that horible vengeance (as was meet) for ſuch an hellish and un-heard of ſin: An un-parelld crying crime, did cry out for this extermination here threatned. The Jews, even the vileſt ſinners and blaſphemers amongſt them, boaſted of the coming of the Meſſias. And come he ſhould, but in a vengeance to them, the day of his coming ſhould be as that, Amos 5. 18. We ſee then Chriſt came not to ſave all, but in judgement to ſome, John 9.v.39. Luk.2.34. He came to ſave his people, Matt.1.21. his ſheep, his elect: all indeed without exception that believe in him. But now this belief depends not up6 the abſolute power & pleaſure of mans will. God hangs not the merit and efficacy of Chriſts death, the ſuſfilling of his eternall decrees, upon the contingent mutability of mans will But he who made the will, bends and frames it as he will, in whom he will, to the fulfilling of his decrees. And he who is bound to none, gives grace and faith not to all, but according to the good pleaſure of his will, which he had purpoſed in himſelf.

V.2. But unto you] Here is the effect and benefit of Chriſts coming to the godly. He ſeparates theſe here to whom now he ſpeaks, from thoſe groſſe hypocrites and blaſphemers againſt whom he ſpake, and contended before. He tells theſe here apart, that fearfull comminations belongs not to them, that day of Chriſts coming ſhall not be terrible to them, but moſt comfortable.

that fear my Name]See on Ch.3.16. that do not ſleight me, or my words and threatnings, or murmur at them, or deride them, and ſecurely go on in their ſins, but tremble at my word, Eſay 66.5. and fear my name, Deut.28.58. Pſal.111.9. Exod.15.3. Joſh.7.9. See Pſal.19.2. Theſe God referved to himſelf out of the great bulk and body of the ſinfull multitude, theſe had need of comfort, and to them this promiſe is made. Let others periſh that think God bound to thẽ, though they are at open war with him, but do ye lift up your heads, patiently bear your preſent preſſures, and joyfully expect this day of glorious deliverance.

ſhall the ſun of righteouſneſſe ariſe]Chriſt that ſun, Eſay 60.1,2,19, 20. the light of the world, John 8.12. and 1.9. and 9.5. the light of the Gentiles, and the glory of his people Iſrael, Luk.2.32. See John 1.8. This ſun was not ſeen to the Patriarchs and Prophets, only it brought on the dawning of the day, and cauſed a kinde of twilight before, and under the Law: But now it ſhould ariſe in their ſight, as that ſun, Pſal. 19.5,6. as that light, Prov.4.18. Luke 1.78,79. And this he did, as in his own perſon, ſo by the light of the Goſpel, which then brake forth, whereby the heavens ſeemed to be opened, as the phraſe is, Apoc. 4. 1. and 19. 11. See Epheſ.5.14. And he is the ſun of righteouſneſſe, in whom the righteouſneſſe of God ſhould ſhine, and the Lord our righteouſneſſe, Jer.23.6. that we might be made the righteouſneſſe of God in him, 2 Cor.5. 21. receiving from him both imputed, and inherent righteouſneſſe, 1 Cor.1.30.

with healing in his wings]He ſhall diſpel the clouds and darkneſſe of ignorance, ſin & miſerie, and ſhall bring in his rayes the quickning heat, and cheerfull, comfortable light, of life, and health, healing, and all happineſſe. Eſay 53.5. 1 Pet.2.24. Matt.11.28.

and ye ſhall go forth] Ye were, as it were, impriſoned before, in ſins and ſorrowes. But here is your freedom, and manumiſſion. A deſcription of the libertie of the Spirit in the elect, in joy, vigour, and readineſſe of ſpiritual motions. See 2 Cor.3.17.

as calves of the ſtall] Fat and flouriſhing. See Ezek. 34.14. Eſay 25.6. Jer.31.14. Pſal 63.5.

V.3. And ye ſhall tread] A repreſentation of the Churches victories over her enemies, which is very frequent in the Prophets. So that they ſhall not need to envy their preſent jolliie and felicitie, when they ſee them flouriſh and flaunt it out, and Lord it over them, That day ſhall come when this part of felicity ſhall not be wanting to them: even a glorious triumph over their wicked enemies. Not that they ſhould cruelly thirſt after revenge, or want the ſpirit of meekneſs, even to pray for their enemies, But that God in juſtice ſhould thus change the face of things, and uſe his people as his inſtruments therein, who alſo ſhould greatly joy in ſeeing God vindicating his own glory, in his juſt revenge upon his implacable and irreconcileable enemies, Pſal.58.10,11. Apoc.18.20. Eſay 66.24. Some apply this to the Churches ſpirituall enemies, over whom the thus triumphs in Chriſt her head, who hath overcome them for her, that they ſhall no be able to hurt her, 1 Cor.15.55,56,57. Joh.16.33. but work her good, Rom.8.28 in the day that] Till that day they muſt ſtay their over-haſty deſires, and mean-while with patience wait for it, and with joy expect it.

V.4. Remember ye]He ſpeaks not of re-edifying the Temple, as Haggai and Zechariah did, But coming after them, when the Temple was now built, and being the laſt of the Prophets, becauſe the time was come that the Jews ſhould be deſtitute of Prophets untill the time of Chriſt, that they might more fervently deſire his coming, the Prophet exhorteth them to exerciſe themſelves diligently in ſtudying the Law of Moſes in the mean-ſeaſon, whereby they might continue in the true religion, and alſo be armed againſt all temptation.

the law] Mentions the Law only, not the Prophets, yet they not excluded, as being but the Interpreters of Moſes, Appendexes to the Law, mainly aiming at this, to contain the people in the obedience of the Law, and therefore many times conſoyned to the Law, as Mat.7.12. & 11.13. & 22.40. Ties them to the Law, as Eſay 8.20. They muſt not twerve from it, to the left-hand, or right, They muſt not adde to it, or take from it, It is a perfect Law, Pſal.19.7. and ſufficient for them. And this Law would prepare them for Chriſt, and his coming, fit them to receive him. For the Law reveals ſin, Rom.3.20. & 7.9. And works wrath, Rom.4.15. Gal.3.10. And is our School-maſter to Chriſt, Gal. 3.24. And is the Rule of life, when we are in Chriſt, Rom.7.12.16,22,25.

Some make the Eaſt part of that Mount to be called Horeb, and the Weſt part Sinai.

for all Iſrael]And therefore all Iſrael, from the leaſt to the greateſt, Princes and people, learned and un-learned, young and old, men, women, and children, are to remember and remark it, no excuſe may be pretended by any, Deut. 4. 10.

Deut.4.6,8. Pſal. 147.19,20. And their ſin and ingratitude, if they ſhould forget it, or fore-go it.

V. 5. Behold] To fix their attention upon this, till the coming of Elias, and Meſſias.

I will ſend you] God ſends his Prophets, and Miniſters. Mat. 9. 38. And extraordinary men, extraordinarily qualified and furniſhed with gifts, as the extraordinary neceſſity of the times, and ſtate of the Church do require ſends here, after this time of ſilence and intermiſſion.

Eliah] This is John Baptiſt, as our Saviour himſelf tells us, Mat. 11, 13, 14. And again, ch. 17. 11. 12. Elias metaphorically, analegically, who came in the ſpirit and power of Elias, as the Angel Gabriel tells Zacharias the father of the Baptiſt, Luk. 1. 17. And as ſucceſſour in his office, and with his zeal, to reſtore Religion being decayed then, as it was in the dayes of Ahab and Elias. John himſelf ſeems to deny this, John 1.21. But that is in ſuch ſenſe as the Prieſts, and Levites, that were Phariſees, asked the queſtion: He was not Elias the Tiſbite, nor yet had his ſoul by tranſmigration come into him: But yet he was that Eliias foretold by Eſay, ch.40.1. See Mat.3.3 Mat.11.3. And yet the Papiſts, to gain this that Antichriſt is not yet come, and ſo the Pope not he, would feign here underſtand this of Elias in perſon and of the time, not of Chriſts firſt coming, but of his ſecond coming, or Antichriſts coming: and to Elias they joyn Enoch, and make them thoſe two witneſſes, Apoc. 11.3. Such miſerable ſhifts a deſperate cauſe drives wiſe men unto.

the Prophet] J. Baptiſt denies himſelf the title of Prophet, meaning of that Prophet, Deut. 18.15. See John 1.20 25. Luk.3.16. Or of ſuch a prophet, as the prophets, as the other prophets were, for he was greater then they; He could point with his finger to the Meſſias; Joh. 1. 29. Whereupon are thoſe words of our Saviour Concerning him, Mat.11.9,10,11. A Prophet and more then a Prophet.

before the coming] immediately before. This ſhall be the ſign and token of his coming, John the Baptiſt ſhall be his harbinger, and immediate fore-runner, as the hiſtories of the Goſpels do declare. See Luke 1.26,36,56. & 3.2. & John 1.15,26,29,36. Mat.3.13.

of the great and dreadfull day of the Lord]See on v.1. & 6. on ch. 3.2. Dreadfull, occaſionally, by the perverſe, obſtinate, and forlorn way-wardneſs, ſtubbornneſs, contumacy, and rebellion of the Jewiſh nation, Joh. 1.11. But to the godly remnant, and whole Church of Chriſt it was the great and glorious day of joy and conſolation, the day of ſalvation, Luke 2.10,11,14. John 1.12. Hetcunto may be applied, Pſal.118.21. 2 Cor.6.2.

V.6. And he ſhall] The end of Johns ſending, and coming, Johns office and employment, and the fruit and effect of it. After that time of ſilence and interruption of the Prophets, the doctrine of ſalvation ſhall again have its courſe, beginning at John.

turn the heart]Converſion, and that of the heart is the work of the Miniſtery, Acts 26.18, 1 Cor.4.15. Col. 17. Iſa.55.10,11. Joh.20.23. 1 Tim.4. 16. Indeed this work is properly Gods. Regeneration is a greater work then Creation. And yet man cannot make one hair of his head white or black, or adde one cubit unto his ſtature, Matt. 5. 36. & 6.27. But God pleaſeth to uſe the Miniſters as his inſtruments in the work, whence is that, 1 Cor. 6. 1 and God by the feet, graces, and vertue, and power of his Spirit works in them, and by them. He joyns himſelf to the Miniſters, as Maſter in chief in right, but onely communicates his power with them, and graceth his inſtruments with the honour and title of the work. Saint Paul explicates this point, 1 Cor. 3.6,7. and ch.15.10. & Gal.2.8. Sometimes in his juſt judgement for ſin, God by them hardens the hearts of people, as Iſa.6.10. Ezek.3. 2 Cor.2.15,16.

of the fathers to their children] There were at this time many ſects and ſchiſmes, and hereſies, and hot diviſions amongſt them, and bitter heart-burnings thereupon; There were Phariſees, Sadducees, Samaritanes, &c. See Acts 23 6. John 4.9. Luke 9.53,54. Zech. 11.8. As Micah 7.6. and Mat. 10.21,35 Johns office ſhould be to accord theſe diſcords, to reconcile theſe un-natural differences, to bring them to mutual charity in the bond of peace, to turn them to unity: And not ſimply to unity, for there is an unity in wicked conſpiracy: But to bring them both to the ſacred unity of ſaving faith in Chriſt, and ſo to prepare the way before him, to ſuch an unity as formerly in the beſt times they had enjoyed, when they were knit together in the holy bond of unity in faith, and love, and the ſervice of God. See Luke 1.16,17. Or thus, His preaching ſhall be to bring back the children of Iſrael that are gone aſtray, to the true faith and piety of their fore-fathers: whereby Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob, who (as one may ſay) did not acknowledge them, Iſa.29.22,23. ſhall re-accept them for their lawfull poſterity.

leaſt I come]Thus God threatens, becauſe of their obduration in ſin: And thus he ſhews what an abominable ſin, and monſtrous ingratitude it is, to contemne his grace in ſending his Son for mans ſalvation, and that upon the failing of this converſion he will thus proceed.

and ſmite the earth with a curſe] He ſends John to turn and convert ſome, that ſo at leaſt he may ſave a Remnant, and not finally and totally deſtroy the whole nation. See Rom.11.1,2. This curſe makes this day a dreadfull day, v.5. and 1.ch.p.3.2. executed upon the Jewiſh nation, Matt.23.37,38. and 24.2.21. And ſhall be upon all contemners of the Goſpel, Matth. 10.14. 15. and 11.24. Acts 13.51. 2 Theſ.1.8,9. Heb.2.2,3. and 10.28,29.

ANNOTATIONS
On the Gospel according to
S. MATTHEW.

The Argument.

THe Greek word Εὐαγγέλιον, translated Gospel, 1. In general, even among prophane Authours also doth usually signifie Good or Glad Tidings, and it is used also for a reward given to him, that brings such tidings: as also, for sacrifices offered upon such occasions. But in Scripture it is taken sometimes more largely for the Doctrine of salvation procured, and purchased by Christ; either foretold and promised by God and his Prophets, before Christs coming; or by him and his Apostles published after his coming. So is both the Noun and the Verb deduced from it, used Gal. 3. 8. Heb. 4. 2. Matth. 11. 5. Luk. 4. 18. Acts 13. 32. And in this sense Paul calls it his Gospel, Rom. 2. 16. and our Gospel, 2 Cor. 4. 5. as preached by him, and his Fellow-Ministers, and to the Ephesians, Chap. 1. 13. their Gospel, as preached and delivered to them. But taken more strictly in common speech it is used to design the History of Christs birth, life, and death. The word Gospel, whereby we express the Greek word, is an old Saxon word, importing not Gods-spel or word in general, as divers mistake it, but according to the manner of that Language a Gods-spel, that is, a good or gladsome word, and so doth precisely answer to the Greek. The Writers of this History are hence commonly called Evangelists: which term, howsoever it may in generall signifie any Preacher of the Gospel, yet in the Scripture of the New Testament it is more peculiarly applied unto some that were assistant unto the Apostles in their Ministery, and employed by them to settle things in some Churches by them founded, when upon their necessary occasions of departure, some extraordinary things were to be further carried on. Such were Philip and Timothy, Acts 21. 8. 2 Tim. 4. 5. And so the word seems to be taken, 2 Cor. 12. 28. Ephes. 4. 11, but in common use it is more peculiarly applied to those that writ the History of Christs Life and Death, as was before said. Of this kinde we have foure onely, whose writings have been from time to time received by the Church, and approved of by the people of God, as immediately inspired and directed by the Spirit of God in this their employment. Of these, two were Apostles, to wit, Matthew and John: the other Disciples of the Apostles, Mark and Luke. As for other Gospels, as that termed of Nicodemus, that fathered on Thomas by the Manichees, and that among the Nazarens, mentioned by Hierom, and others the like, they were never acknowledged, or admitted as authentical in the Orthodox Churches. The first Writer in order is called Matthew, for so he terms himself, Chap. 9. 9. 10. 3. As also Mark calleth him, Chap. 13. 18. and Luke, Chap. 6. 15. Howbeit, he is also termed Levi by the same Luke, Chap. 5. 27. and said to be the son of Alpheus, Mark 2. 14. But whether of that Alpheus, who was the father of James and John, is not so certain. Some have affirmed that he writ his Gospel, first in Hebrew, and that it was afterward turned into Greek, and of the same there are two Hebrew Copies abroad. But neither is there any certainty, nor probability that he so did, and those Hebrew Copies are from the stile of them deemd by the learned to be of a far later date. He was before his conversion and calling, by profession and employment a Publican, Matth. 9. Mark 2. Luke 5. one that gathered the Emperours Tolls and Tributes, and was from the Custome house called to be an Apostle to gather souls unto God, Matth. 10. 3. as some other of them also were called from being Fisher-men to be Fishers of men, Matth. 4. 18, 19. He begins with Christs Genealogie, Birth, and flight into Egypt, proceeds to his Baptisme, Temptations, and calling of Disciples, relates at large his Sermons, Disputes, and Parables, with the interpretations of them, records many of his famous works and Miracles, and concludes with a large Discourse of his prodition, passion, death and resurrection, shutting all up with a solemn Commission given to his Apostles, before his departure from them. God give us grace so to read, that we may believe in the Son of God, and by trusting in him alone be eternally saved. Amen.

CHAP. I.

THe Book] The word doth not alwayes signifie a large Book, but oftentimes a brief Roll or Catalogue, or enumeration, Jer. 3. 8. ספר Sepher, a book or bill of Divorce 70. βιβλίον; So the Jews did begin their Genealogies, Gen. 5. 1.

of the generation] Luke 3. 23. of the ancestors of our Saviour Christ successively; yet Gen. 5. 1. it signifieth the posterity of the first Adam; this is not the Title of the whole Book, but onely of the beginning of it; it may include not his Ancestours onely, but also the manner of his conception and birth, which is likewise set down in this Chapter, v. 18. and so it may be the Title of the whole Chapter. Matthew purposing to write of the life of our Saviour, begins with his pedegree, because he knew the Iews stood much upon their Genealogies.

of Jesus] The name given him by the Angel with the reason thereof, v. 21. it signifies a Saviour, it was sometimes given to others that were types of Christ, as to Iosua, who brought the people into Canaan; to Iehoshua the high Priest after the captivity, and to divers others as, Acts 13. 6. Colos. 4. 11. but in a more peculiar manner it is given to Christ, who saveth us from our sinnes.

Christ] It is all one with Messias, and signifies, Anointed, it sets out unto us the King and Priest of the Church, for such were wont to be anointed.

the Son] Herein Matthew differs from the other Evangelists. Mark begins with Iohn Baptists ministery, who was the forerunner of our Saviour. Luke with the birth of Iohn Baptist, Iohn with Christ. Divinity; but this Evangellist with his humanity, ancestours and birth. of David] He names onely David and Abraham at first, because to these was the solemne promise made, that the Messias should come of their seed, Gen. 12. 3. and 22. 18. 2 Sam. 7. 12. Psal. 132. 11. Acts 12. 30. And to the one was promised a populous Progeny, Gen 15. 5. and 22. 17. to the other a stable kingdome, 2 Sam. 7. 12. 13. both which are eminently fulfilled in Christ. He names David first, because he was a King; and the Iews, who expected a temporal kingdom with the Messias, looked upon him principally, as the Son of David, chap. 9.27. and 12.23. and 15.22. and 20. 30, 31. and 21.9,15. and 22.42. Mark 11. 10. Luke 1.32. John 7. 42. Also that ambiguity might be taken away; for if he had named Abraham firſt, and then David, men might have thought Abraham miſnamed for a ſon of David. Laſtly, that the Genealogy might go on the more ſmoothly, and having once named Abraham, he might go on with him, not naming David between.

the ſon of Abraham] which David was ſon of Abraham, or which Jeſus Chriſt was the ſon of Abraham, as well as of David. Thus Matthew reckons upon his Genealogy, to ſhew that he was the promiſed Meſſias, and to take away the ſcandals which the Jewes had, becauſe of the poverty of Mary his Mother, and Joſeph his ſuppoſed father.

V. 2. Abraham begat Iſaac] Gen. 21. 3. Matthew brings our Saviour down from Abraham, for the comfort of the Jews, who drew their Genealogies from him, becauſe God had taken him and his ſeed into a peculiar covenant. Luke carries him upward unto Adam, for the comfort of the Gentiles, who were not lineally of the ſeed of Abraham.

Iſaac begat Iacob] Gen. 25, 26.

Iacob begat Judas] Gen. 29. 35.

and his brethren] Theſe are added, not that Chriſt came of them, but to ſhew that he eſteemed himſelf their kindred, and that all the Tribes were included in the covenant, as well as the Tribe of Judah; for this reaſon is Zara alſo named, v. 3. yet Ismael is not added to Iſaac, though he were the firſt-born; nor Eſau to Jacob, although at the ſame time with Jacob, in the womb, becauſe theſe belonged not unto the covenant, which ſaid, Unto thy ſeed have I given this Land, Gen. 15. 18. Gen. 17. 8. and all the Nations of the earth ſhall be bleſſed in him, Gen. 18. 18. & Gen. 22. 18. he ſaith, But my covenant will I eſtabliſh with Iſaac, who was a Type of Chriſt; therefore the Apoſtle ſaith, Gal. 3. 16. He ſaith not unto ſeeds, as of many, but as of one, and to thy ſeed which is Chriſt, and Heb. 11. 18. In Iſaac ſhall thy ſeed be called.

Judas begat Phares] Gen. 38. 27.

of Thamar] Chriſt vouchſafing to come of Thamar, Rahab and Ruth the Moabiteſs, ſhews that he came to ſave great ſinners, as well as they who were not ſo notorious, Gentiles aſwel as Jews, chap. 9. 13. Eph. 2. 1. Tim. 1. 15. it may be alſo a part of his humiliation; as Chriſt took all our infirmities upon him, ſo for our ſake was he not aſhamed of ſuch parents. True vertue, though but humane, cannot be diſcovered by parents ſhame.

Phares begat Ezrom] Ruth. 4. 18. 1 Chron. 2. 15.

V. 4. Aram begat Aminadab] Of theſe to Jeſſe, little is ſaid in Scripture, for either they lived in ſlavery in Egypt, or in trouble in the Wilderneſſe, or in obſcurity in Canaan before the kingdom was ſetled.

V. 5. Of Rahab] This is not mentioned in the old Teſtament, but ſeems to come as a true tradition from father to ſon, as that of Jannes and Jambres reſiſting Moſes, 2 Tim. 3. 8. and Enoch's prophecie, Jude verſe 14. Some think Matthew had this out of the civil Tables of Genealogy, which the Jews kept more exactly than other Nations.

of Ruth] This ſhews that the Gentiles that were not to be deſtroyed, as the Moabites of whom Ruth came, might be ſaved by Chriſt. (See Deut. 2. 9.) as the mentioning of Rahab of the ſeed of Canaan may import, that ſuch as remained of thoſe that were to be cut off, Deut. 7. 2. might alſo be ſaved by him.

Jeſſe] It ſeemeth that he was of no great account, becauſe David is called in contempt the ſon of Iſſe, 1 Sam. 20. 27 30. 31. 1 Kings 12. 16. as Chriſt was called the ſon of Joſeph, Luke 4. 22.

V. 6. Jeſſe begat David] He was the youngeſt of Iſſes ſonnes, 1 Sam. 17. 13. 14 yet Chriſt cometh of him, to ſhew that this line was not guided by natural ſucceſſion, all along, but ſometimes as Gods favour preferred the younger before the elder; ſo in another line, Gen. 48. 14. 18, 19.

the King] The firſt King in the line of our Saviour Chriſt, Davids Kingdome laſted long over Iudah, but Chriſts Spiritual Kingdom, over the Church, is everlaſting, Dan. 2. 44. Luke 1. 32, 33.

begat Solomon] 2 Sam. 12. 24. Chriſt ſucceeding great David, and wiſe Solomon, ſhews that ſome great and noble ſhall be ſaved by him, though not many in compariſon of others, 1 Cor. 1. 20. moſt think that the legall line of our Saviour is henceforth proſecuted by Matthew, as the natural by Luke, who derives him from Nathan, Luke 3. 31. and that here he is reckoned as Heir to Solomon in the kingdome, whoſe race ſome think failed, at, before, or in the captivitie though ſome think otherwiſe. See on Jer. 22. 28, 30. Others, think the line to be natural in either, but the one drawes down to Joſeph, the other to Mary.

V. 7. Solomon begat Rohoam] 1 Chron. 3 10.

V. 8. Joram begat Oziah] Not immediately; for three kings came between, Ahaziah, Joaſh, and Amaziah, 1 Chron. 3. 11, 12. but mediately, as verſe 1. Luke 1. 5. and 13. 16. Iohn 8. 33. 39. it is likely thoſe three kings are omitted, becauſe Matthew intended to keep within the compaſs of fourteen generations here, as well as afterwards: ſome think theſe three kings omitted rather than o-thers, becauſe Gods curſe lay on Ioram (for marrying of Ahabs daughter) to the fourth generation, as the bleſsing was on Ichu, for deſtroying Ahabs poſterity, 2 Kings 10. 30.

V. 10. Ezekias begat Manaſſes] 2 King. 20. 21. 1 Chron. 3. 13.

V. 11. Joſias begat Jeconias] Some read, Joſias begat Iakim, and Iakim begat Ieconias.

and his brethren] Some conceive therefore, that by Iechonias here muſt needs be meant Jehoiakim, (becauſe Iechoniah had no brethren) and that his brethren are here mentioned, becauſe two of them were kings, Iehoahaz and Zedekiah: yet were they all noted for calamity, to ſhew, that it was no ſtrange thing to ſee the royal ſtock ſo low afterwards; yet Iconiah is ſaid to have a brother called Zedekiah, 1 Chron. 3. 16. which cannot be Zedekiah his uncle, that was king after him, for he is reckoned there verſe 15, as the ſon of Joſiah.

about the time] Or, who lived in the time; for Joſias was dead before, and ſo could not then beget children.

V. 12. Jechonias begat Salathiel] 1 Chron. 3. 16, 17. Salathiel is called the ſon of Neri, Luke 3. 27 but is ſaid to be the ſon of Iechonias, becauſe he ſucceeded him in authority, and it is hard to give a reaſon why he ſhould be ſaid to be a meaner mans ſon, if he were a kings; others conceive him to be the natural ſon of Iechonias. See 1 Chron. 3. 17. and notes on ler. 22. 28, 30.

Salathiel begat Zorobabel] He is conceived to be that Zerubbabel that recalled the Temple, Ezra 3. he is ſaid to be the ſon of Pedaiah, 1 Chron. 3. 19. either this was another Zerubbabel, or elſe Salathiel died without children, and Pedaiah took his wife, and raiſed up ſeed to his brother according to the Law, and then he was the legal ſon of Salathiel, and the natural ſon of Pedaiah.

V. 13. Zorobabel begat Abiud] Here the old Teſtament is ſilent, and neither Abiud, nor any of his poſterity is mentioned, 1 Chron. 3. 19, &c. it ſeems the Evangeliſt had the beſt antiquity, either by tradition, or out of the civil records. See on verſe 5. or by Revelation.

V. 16. Iacob begat Joſeph] It ſeems that Joſeph was the naturall ſon of Iacob, and the ſon of Eli by marrying Mary, Luke 3. 23. and this line is carried to Joſeph, becauſe womens Genealogies were not reckoned, but included in their husbands: yet Luke reckons Maries, that it might appear, that Chriſt came of Davids ſeed, though ſometimes they married out of their Tribes.

of whom] Of which Mary, for Chriſt was not the Son of Joſeph, verſe 18.

Jeſus who is called Chriſt] See on verſe 1. he was the Meſsias expected.

V. 17. All the generations] Or deſcents marſhalled here by the Evangeliſts in three ranks, before the kingdom, under it, and after it: ſome of theſe note are omitted to make the number in each equal, 1 Chron. 3. 11, 12.

from Abraham to David] Reckoning themſelves for two, from David], Accounting him and Joſias in the number, from the carrying away] beginning with Joſias, and ending with Joſeph, or beginning with Iechonias, and ending with Chriſt.

V. 18. the birth] See on verſe 1.

on this wiſe] Or, came thus to paſſe.

eſpouſed to Joſeph] God would have her to be eſpouſed for the ſafety and honour of Chriſt in his infancy, and the credit and comfort of his mother. Ierom. adverſ. Helvid. giveth three reaſons: 1. That by the geneſiology of Joſeph, of whoſe Tribred Mary was, Maries pedegree might alſo be ſhewed. 2. Leſt according to Moſes Law ſhe ſhould have been ſtoned by the people as an adultreſs. 3. That fleeing into Egypt, ſhe might have the comfort Guſtodis ſolius quam mariti, of a keeper rather than an husband: the two firſt may ſeem probable.

before they came together] Had knowledge one of another, as verſe 25. or rather before they came to dwell together: for he had not yet taken her home, verſe 20.

ſhe was found with child] It was perceived by Joſeph, verſe 19. that ſhe was with child, gr. Having in the womb.

of the holy Ghoſt] This was not known to Joſeph, till afterward v. 20. the Angel informed him, that it was by the extraordinary power and work of the H. Ghoſt: Luke 1. 35. So this particle ἐκ, oft is often uſed, John 8. 41, 44, 47. 1 John 3. 8, 9.

V. 19. Joſeph her husband] ſo called, becauſe he was betrothed to her, Gen. 19. 8. 12, & 29, 21. Deut. 22. 24.

being a juſt man] Of holy converſation, as Luke 1. 6. and tender diſpoſition.

and not willing] He was not willing to take her to wife, for fear of diſhonour, nor yet to ſhame her, or deſtroy her, by putting her away publickly.

to put her away privately] To leave her to her ſelf, or friends diſpoſal, without publiſhing any reaſon of ſuch deſertion.

V. 20. to take unto thee Mary thy wife] To take her home to thee as thy wife, who is already betrothed to thee.

that which is conceived in her] or bred, to wit, of her ſubſtance; he ſaith, that, not he, becauſe Chriſt took on him the nature, not the perſon of man.

is of the holy Ghoſt] See on verſe 18. as man he had no father, as God he had no mother, Hebr. 7. 3.

V. 21. ſhe ſhall bring forth a Son] Luke 1. 31.

for he ſhall ſave his people] He is called Jeſus, becauſe he delivereth vereth us from our ſins, which would elſe condemn us. See on verſe 1. thoſe are his people, who being redeem:d, believe in him, and obey him, John 3. 16. Heb. 5. 9

V. 22. All this was done] Chriſt was thus miraculouſly conceived.

that it might be fulfilled] It came not by accident, but the counſel of God foretold long agoe by the Prophet Iſaiah, 7. 14. The holy Scriptures, though written by men, are the undoubted word of God, 2 Pet. 1. 21.

V. 23. behold a Virgin] In Iſaiah 7. עַלְמָה ahalma, and in the Greek Text here, ἡ παρθένος in either as an Article to poine out the woman, and to ſet her out plainly, as if you ſhould ſay, that virgin, or a certain virgin.

they ſhall call his Name] Or, his name ſhall be called: we read not any where that he was ſo called; but the meaning is, that he ſhould do that which the name imports well deſerving ſo to be called, as being one by whom God would dwell with us, united to our nature by incarnation, to our perſons by reconciliation. See the like phraſe Iſaiah, 9. 6. and 62. 4. Ier. 23. 6. Ezekiel 48. 35. So the Scripture many times giveth the name from the event; the meaning is, thus it ſhall be, moreal men ſhall ſee Chriſt, God and man, converſant with men. See 1 Tim. 3. 16. 1 John 1. 1. So after Chryſoſtom Theophylact interpreteth, ἀπὸ τοῦ πράγματος διδάσκων ἀυτὸν Θεὸν ὄντα, his works ſhall declare him to be God, converſant with us.

which being interpreted] Some think, this ſhewes that Matthew writ not his Goſpel in Hebrew, for then he needed not to have interpreted Emmanuel, which is an Hebrew word. The old Teſtament was written in Hebrew, becauſe it was the Iewes language, who were then the only viſible Church: but the new Teſtament in Greeke, which was the Language then moſt in uſe in all Countreyes ſince the decay of the Grecian Monarchy.

V. 24. did as the Angel ſaid] Προσέταξεν ἀυτῷ, had commanded him. So the interpreter of the Syriack, ſicut mandaverat ei. This ſudden change of his reſolution to put her away, verſe 19. ſetteth off Iofephs great faith, and ready obedience to God: the Spirit of God imprinted in his mind by that dream, ſuch a confidence of the Truth, as left him no more fluctuant and doubtfull herein: when God ſpeaketh to our hearts, we cheerfully and ſpeedily addreſs our ſelves to that, which before not onely ſcrupled us, but ſeemed moſt inconvetient, unpleaſing to our ſenſe, and unconſiſtent with our own principles of humane reaſon. So Moſes took up the Serpent, Exodus 4. So Abraham departed out of his native ſoil, Geneſis 12. 4. and roſe up early to goe to offer his onely ſonne Iſaac, Geneſis, 22. 4. So when God had ſpoken to Laban, Geneſis, 31. 24. he could ſpeake no evill to Jacob.

V. 25. And he knew her not] Or, but he, &c. ſo this Particle ἕως is uſed, Chapter 28. 19. knew her not: See Gen. 4. 1. Luke 1. 34.

till ſhe had brought forth] She was therefore a pure Virgin when Chriſt was born, as well as when he was conceived: neither doth it neceſſarily follow that he knew her after; for theſe words ἕως ὅ, till, imporieth the excluſion of all former, but not the admiſſion of a later, as Chapter 5. 26. Saidas interpreteth the Ravens not returning, Gen. 8. 7. עַד had, 70. ἕως (untill the floods were dried) by οὐ τὸ παντελὲς ὡς ἐνεστῶτος, never, or not at all returned. So on Pſalm 110. 1. ἕως ἂν, &c. Sit thou on my right hand untill I make, &c. ἐκ χρονικὸν ὅτι τὸ ἕως, ἀλλ' ἰδιωτικὸν ἀ γραφῆς, &c. this (till) importeth not any definite ſpace of time, but is a certain propriety of Scripture ſpeaking. See Jerom. adverſ. Helvid. and Gr. Nazianzen orat. 36. (a little after the beginning) See Geneſis 28. 15. Deuteronomy, 34. 6. 1 Samuel 15. 33. 2 Samuel 6. 23. Matthew 28. 20. 1 Tim. 4. 13. Matth 5. 26.

her firſt-born ſon] Neither doth this import that ſhe had any ſon after, but that ſhe had none before: he was πρωτότοκος and μονογενὴς, her firſt born and onely Son: ſo the Scripture uſeth to call him the firſt-born, non tantum poſt quem & alii, ſed ante quem nullus. Jerom. adverſ. Helvid. not onely after whom others are born, but before whom there was none.

he called his Name Jeſus] Joſeph did as he was commanded by the Angel, verſe 21. and as a legal father. Mary is ſaid alſo to do it, Luke 1. 32. as a natural mother; for mothers ſometimes impoſed names, Gen. 4. 25. and 29. 32. and 30. 11.

CHAP. II.

Verſe 1. WHen Jeſus was born] Luke 2. 6, 7. was newly born: not long after his birth: as Hebr. 11. 23. Before their leaving Bethlehem: that is, within fourty dayes after the birth of Chriſt. Compare Luke 2. 22. with Leviticus 12. 2. 4. their ſhort ſtay at Bechlehem was the cauſe, that little notice was taken of Chriſts birth there in after times: See Iohn 1. 43. 46.

in Bethlehem of Judea] To diſtinguiſh it from that other Bethlehem in the Tribe of Zebulun, Joſh. 19. 15. See Mich. 5. 2. here David was born, 1 Sam. 16. 1. בֵּית לֶחֶם יְהוּדָה beth lechem Jehuda, Iud. 17. 7, 8. 70. Βηθλεὲμ Ἰούδα, that Bethlehem which was in the Tribe of Iudah: Ierom. de loc. Hebr. the name Iudea ſignifieth either all the Province of the Iewes (ſo diſtinguiſhed from other Nations and Provinces) of which, becauſe the Tribe of Iudah was the principal, they received the name of Iews; and their country (which fell to the lot of all the Tribes) Iudea: tamiſerunt vetus nomen Hebræi, et quoniam princeps examinis eorum Iudas erat Iudæ ſunt appellati, & terra quam incoluere, Iudea. Lactant. l. 4. c. 10. the Hebrews loſt their own name, and becauſe Iudas was the prince of their republick, they were called Iews, and the land in which they dwelt, Iudea; or Iudea did particularly ſignifie that part in which Ieruſalem was, containing the two Tribes Iudah and Benjamin as one, (1 Kings 11. 13. and 12. 21.) who cleave to the family of David: this was called Iudea in contra-diſtinction to Galilee as Matthew, 19. 1. Mark 3. 7. Iohn 4. 4. 54. and to Samaria, (Acts 8. 1.) Decapolis and other parts of the ſame Province and Land, which God promiſed, and gave to the Iſraelites.

Herod the king] Herod the great, called Aſcalonita, he was an Idumean, and ſonne of Antipater, as Theophylact ſaith: but (in the right of a Proſelyte) a Iew. See Iſa. Cauſabon Exercit. 1. N. 5 he is here called the King; there was another Herod, who ſlew John Baptiſt, but he had onely the honour of a Tetrarch, this of a King. Chryſoſt. Hom. 6. in Matth. concerning Herods riſing to the kingdom, ſee Joſeph. Antiq. l. 14. c. 26. & 15. 10.

wiſe men] Learned men; it ſeemeth they were Aſtronomers, becauſe God taught them by a Star.

from the Eaſt] In reſpect of Ieruſalem, as Deut. 4. 41. Zach. 14. 4. Some think the word magi to be a Perſian word, and that theſe came out of Perſia, Chryſoſt. hom. 6. Others think they came out of Arabia, anciently famous for wiſe men, 1 Kings 4. 30. and bare Eaſtward from Ieruſalem, Gen. 10. 30. & 25. 6. Iudg. 6. 3. Iob. 1. 2. Iſaiah 12. 14. Ier. 49. 28. their gifts alſo (verſe 11.) ſhew it, which were plentifull in Arabia, to wit, Myrrhe, and Frankincenſe, and Gold, 2 Chron. 19. 14. Pſalm 72. 15. See the learned Iſa. Cauſabon. exercit. 1. N. 19. Their coming ſo far to find Chriſt could move with the obſtinacy of the Iews, who would not receive him who came to them.

to Ieruſalem] where it was moſt likely the King of the Iewes ſhould be born, or at leaſt to be heard of, becauſe it was their chief city.

V. 2. he that is born] Or, the born King, &c.

King of the Iewes] Chriſt a poor child, laid in a craſh, and nothing ſet by of his own people, notwithſtanding, receiveth an honourable teſtimony of his Divine, and Kingly power from ſtrangers, to whom God revealed him.

his Star] As God made known the birth of Chriſt to the Iews by an Angel, Luke 2. 9, 10, ſo to the Gentiles by a new created Star: they knew by it that Chriſt was born, either becauſe it ſtood over, or went toward Iudea; or by ſome old Tradition, or new Revelation.

in the Eaſt] In our own countrey: ſee on verſe 1.

V. 3. he was troubled] For fear of the loſſe of his kingdome; becauſe he was a ſtranger, and might think the Iewes would be glad to have a king of their own, whom they would readily aſsiſt: ipſos terret poteſtas Iua, quos facit eſſe terribiles, Cyprian. l. 2 ep. 2. their own power terrifieth themſelves, which maketh them terrible to others.

and all Ieruſalem] As fearing trouble from Herod, or the Romans: as Iohn 11. 48. or by change of government.

V. 4. the chief (Prieſts)] The heads of the four and twenty prieſtly families, or courſes, 1 Chron. 24. 5, 6, 10. Luke 1. 5. or ſuch as by corruption had moſt authority among the Prieſts. See 2 Chronicles, 36. 14.

Scribes,] Men of ſpecial skill in expounding the Law, 2 Sam. 8. 17. Ezra 7. 6. Theſe were moſt likely to ſatisfie Herods queſtion. See on Luke 20. 1.

where chriſt ſhould be born] He would not acknowledge that Chriſt was born, leſt by ſome means he ſhould be conveyed away from his ſuty, who would gladly deſtroy him.

V. 5. They ſaid unto him in Bethlehem, &c.] See on verſe 1. they read the Propheſies, and thereby could direct others to Chriſt, but not themſelves, they could (like windows of the Church) let in lights to others, but not ſee their own ſelves.

V. 6. And thou Bethlehem] Micah. 5. 2. Iohn 7. 42. The Evangeliſt ſeemeth the words, in likelyhood as the Scribes ſpake them, which was ſufficient to anſwer Herods queſtion, and did not differ from the ſcope of the Prophet.

not the leaſt] Though thou art a ſmall town, yet ſhalt thou be famous, and honoured, by the birth of the Meſsias in thee, a governour that ſhall rule] Or feed, for kings are ſtily called Feeders, or Shepherds of the people: and the Meſsias hath both theſe titles, Iſaiah 40. 11. Ezek. 33. 23, 24.

V. 7. when he had privately called] he would not have it noiſed abroad, leſt his purpoſe of killing Chriſt ſhould have been prevented, but there can be no wiſedom againſt God; therefore vain are all humane policies againſt his determinate counſel. See Pſalm 2. 1, &c. Acts 4. 25, 26, &c.

enquired of them diligently] And learned exactly the time, as appears, Verse 16. possibly intending now the murther of the Infants, in case he would not find out Christ. Compare this with Verse 16.

appeared] First of all.

V. 8. for the young childe] He doth not say for the King of the Jews, as they stiled him, verse 2. he would not so much as in word acknowledge him to be so.

bring me word again] He doth not say, Tell it publickly, lest all the people should flock to him, and so disappoint his purpose of destroying him: it was a great providence of God, that Herod had no suspition of the wise men, and that he sent no spy along with them, which had he done, he might probably have found out Christ.

and worship him] See Herods hypocrisie, pretending to worship Christ, but intending to kill. Rarely is there any eminent wickedness, without some pretence of Religion.

V. 9. which they saw in the East] It did not come before them to Jerusalem, neither appeared to them there; for then they would possibly have shewed it to Herod, and the Jewes, and not haue said onely, We have seen his Starre in the East, verse 2.

and stood over where, &c.] It left them not till it brought them to Christ: it appeared not for a time, that they might by enquiry, acquaint the Jewes at Jerusalem with the Birth of Christ, which in likelyhood they would not have done, if the Starre had led them first to Bethlehem. All this might be a means to keep them from being offended at the low condition wherein they found Christ.

V. 10. when they saw the Starre] This was a great confirmation, that the Star did lead them to the place designed in the Scripture: revelations are not to be credited, that agree not with Scripture.

they rejoyced with exceeding, &c.] First, because they were confirmed in the truth of the birth of the childe. Secondly, because they were directed from heaven to the place, that they might not mistake the person.

V. 11. into the house] The place where Christ was born, Luke 2 7. or it may be, the guests being gone, the was now removed into the house it self.

fell down] A kinde of humble and lowly reverence, Exodus, 34. 4. opened their treasures] Their vessels wherein they brought their treasures.

they presented gifts] Or offered gifts; for with such the men of the Eastern parts, used to present themselves before kings, Genesis, 43. 11, 25. 26. these were the choyseſt things the Countrey could afford, 1 Kings 10. 10. Psal. 45. 12. & 72. 10, 15.

gold, frankincense and myrrhe] Gold was plentifull in Arabia; frankincense so peculiar to the Sabeans a people of Arabia; myrrhe said to be found in Arabia onely, Psal. 72. 15. 2 Chron. 9. 14. God so provided to furnish and supply Joseph, for his flight with Mary and Jesus into Egypt.

V. 12. being warned of God in a dream] Not by such visions as needed interpretations, as Pharaohs Officers were, Gen. 40. and Pharaoh, Gen 41. but they were plainly forbidden to return to Herod: thus God kept them from betraying Christ as he did Abimelech from adultery, Gen. 20 3.

V. 13. when they were departed] Not presently, (some think) but some time after, for (say they) Joseph and Mary were at Jerusalem after this, before they went into Egypt: but seeing we read not of any certainty, how many dayes after the birth of Christ the wise men came to Bethlehem, we leave it to conjecture: it being uncertain, whether that Luke 2. 39. conclude their immediate going to Nazareth again, or whether they first went back to Bethlehem, and afterward home to Nazareth, it being but two dayes journey to Jerusalem.

appeareth to Joseph] Whether at Jerusalem, or at Bethlehem, or at Nazareth is not certain; for they came from Nazareth (where they dwelt before) to Bethlehem to be taxed, Luke 2. 4. and when the dayes of Maries purification were accomplished, they presented him at Jerusalem in the Lord, and offered according to the Law, Luke 2. 24. and when they had performed all these things, they returned into Galilee, to their own city Nazareth, this was their first dwelling at Nazareth: the second is mentioned here verse 23. after the death of Herod, where they dwelt long, until Christ was grown up.

flee] Because the time of his death was not yet come; and because Christ must live to preach and doe many miracles. This flight was part of Christs humiliation.

into Egypt] Far out of Herods reach. See 1 King. 11. 40.

till I bring thee word] This shews that God would provide for them there, and bring them back again.

V. 14. by night] Left his flight should be perceived, and by some means prevented.

V. 15. that it might be fulfilled] That performed, which was in the former shadowed: the deliverance of Israel out of Egypt, being a Type of Gods bringing Christ out of the same place.

out of Egypt have I called] Hos. 11. 1. In the type he calleth Israel his first-born son, Exodus 4 22. Jer. 31. 20. here he calleth Christ his son: his son by nature, and so his only begotten son. See Luke 1 35. John 1. 14. & 3. 16.

V. 16. Then Herod] Not presently after the departure of the wise men; but after Josephs going into Egypt with the childe.

that he was mocked] As he apprehended it; for he knew not, that God had sent them another way, verse 12.

sent forth] Souldiers to kill the children: among whom, some say, he slew his own: whereof when Augustus Cæsar heard, he is reported to have said, It is better to be Herods Hog, than his Son, Macrob. sat. l. 2. c. 4.

all the children] The male children; for the Article is masculine in the Greek; and there was no need to kill the females: it being a male which he sought for. So it was in Egypt, Exod. 1. 16.

in all the coasts thereof] Left Christ should be out of the town.

from two yeers old] Left Christ should have been born before the star appeared and so escape. It was just with God to take away their children, who so lightly regarded his Son, manifested to them so strangely, by Angels, Shepherds, Wise men, and the Star.

and under, according to the time] Some think Herod committed not this murder, till near two years after the wise mens coming to him; and that he went first to Rome, to clear himself of things objected to him by his sons: others, that he would be sure to take time enough before, and after, that Christ might not escape him: others, that those words, according to the time, &c. must not be referred to, from two years old, but onely to the last words, and under: that is, Herod killed onely such as were born, before the wise men came to Bethlehem, and not those that were born after: others think, that the star appeared at Christs conception, and God directed the wise men, to come after his birth; for such tokens use to go before the things they portend. And Herod might put off the businesse, till he was further provoked, for many crosses fell on him in his last year, as Josephus reports.

V. 17. Then was fulfilled] See on verse 15.

by Jeremiah the Prophet] Jer. 31, 15.

V. 18. In Rama] Between which and Bethlehem, was Rachels sepulchre, Gen. 35. 16, 19. 20. in the confines of Judah and Benjamin, 1 Sam. 10. 1. It was a place in the tribe of Benjamin, near Bethlehem, Jerom on Jer. 31. 15. (whence this place is transcribed) transtarath, vox in excelso audita est: there were sundry Rama's, in mount Ephraim. 2 Sam. 25. 1. 2 Sam. 28. 3. Ramath Lehi Judg. 15. Ramath Mispe Josh. 13. 26.

a voyce heard] The cry was so loud, as it it had been heard from Rachels sepulchre to Ramah.

Rachel weeping] The Benjamitish women who came of Rachel, did weep so bitterly for their children led into captivity, as if she her self had bemoaned them out of her grave: and so did the women of Bethlehem now mourn for their slain infants.

because they are not] Because they of whom the Prophet spake, were carried into captivity, and these were killed: See the like phrase, Gen. 42. 13, 36. they were not in being, or dead.

V. 19. appeared in a dream] So God performed his promise, verse 13.

V. 20. go into the land of Israel] Left Christ should be esteemed a stranger in Israel, if he had been bred in Egypt and that they might enjoy the publick service of God, their countrey and friends.

they are dead] The plural number for the singular: Herod is dead. So Exod. 4. 19. others conceive that some of Herods instruments, or of the Scribes, who hated Christ, died also with Herod.

which sought the life, &c.] Not to preserve it, as Prov. 29. 10. but to destroy it, 1 King. 19. 10. Psal 40. 14.

V. 22. that Archelaus] One of the cruellest of Herods issue.

he was afraid to go] It seems he had some thoughts of going thither, peraduenture because Christ was born there, or that he might be nearer the Temple.

being warned of God in a dream] This is the fourth time that Joseph was thus warned, Chap. 1. 20. chap. 2. 13. 19. and here. It is fit time for God to acquaint man whith his will, when rest takes him off from all external distractions, and worldly cares: hereby God also intimates, that he taketh care for his, when they can take none for themselves.

V. 23. spoken by the Prophets] He doth not say by the Prophet, as verse 15. because it is not found in any one Prophet, but in divers, and that not in the words, but in the sense.

he shall be called] See on chap. 1. 23.

a Nazarean] Ναζωραῖος. The word Nazareth was not known in the Old Testament, it must therefore be an allusion to נֵצֶר, netzer a branch, Isaiah 11. 1. a name given to Christ, from thence it is likely that Nazareth had that name; for so it is written in the Syriac ܢܨܪ, notsrith, the application of it to the Nazarites agreeth not with the letters, (this is written נזיר nezeir, the other נצר netzer Judg. 13. 5, &c.) though some expound it so, and apply it to Christ, as typified in Samson, who was a Nazarite from his birth See Is. Casiabon, exercit. 7. N. 1. Fran. Jun. Parallel. Text. in loc. Jo. Drus. ad voc. N.T. com. 1. Nazarens.

CHAP.

CHAP. III.

Verse 1. In those dayes] The Evangelist omits the course of our Saviours life in private, and begins at his preparation for his publique ministery; intending not to satisfie mens curiosity, but to write those things, which may further our salvation. The dayes here mentioned, are not meant of Christs first setling in Nazareth, but while he abode there; for this was above twenty years after his coming thither: about the fifteenth yeer of Tiberius Cesar, when Christ began to be about thirty yeers old. See Luke 3. 1, 23.

came] Gr. cometh, He went not far, but shewed himself then, Luke 1. 18.

John the Baptist] Mark 1. 4. Luke 3. 2. So called, because he was the first that was sent of God to baptize, John 1. 33 John, who through his singular holinesse, and rare austerenesse of life, caused all men to cast their eyes upon him. now prepareth the way for Christ, presently to follow him; delivering the sum of the Gospel, which in short space after should be more fully delivered.

preaching] Having received a special command so to do, Luke 3. 2.

in the wildernesse of Judea] A desert place, more fit for pasture, than for corn: see Luke 15. 4. and full of mountains, Luke 1. 39. yet inhabited, though not so full of towns and houses, as other parts of Judea. 2 Kings 2. 24. Josh. 15. 61. 1 Sam. 25. 1. 2. it seemeth not to have been far from his fathers house, Luke 1. 39, 40 and the place where he lived, till he shewed himself to Israel, Luke 1. 18.

V. 2. Repent ye] So our Saviour begins his preaching, Chap. 4. 17. confirming Johns doctrine. John taught other things also, Luke 3. but this he began withal, and this was the main scope of his doctrine. The word in the original signifies, the change of our mindes from false wayes to the right, and of our hearts, from evil to good: Non ex delicti confessione, sed ex animi demutatione compositum est. Tertul. adverf. Marc. l. 2. c. 24. it is compounded not of confession of sin, but change of the minde. So Greg. ho. 14. in Evan. faith; to repent, is perpetrata plangere, & plangenda non perpetrare, to bewail evils committed, & not to commit things to be bewailed; for he, that so deploreth some sins, as that he commits others, either counterfeiteth, or is ignorant of repentance. He shewes them here what they should do, not what they could do of themselves: repentance is, as it were, fecunda post naufragium tabula, as Jerom speaketh l. 2. ep. 20. Demetr. a second plank after shipwrack. Primus felicitatis gradus est, non delinquere: secundus delicta cognoscere, Cyprian, l. 1. ep. 3. the first degree of happinesse, is not to sin: the second to know our sins, and repent of them. There runneth entire and unstained innocence which may save; here succeedeth the medicine to heal.

the kingdom of heaven] The kingdom of the Messias, whose government shall be heavenly, and lead to heaven, Daniel 2. 24.

V. 3. For this is he] The words of the Evangelists, giving a reason, why John preached thus.

the voice of one crying] Isaiah 40. 3. Mark 1. 3. He spake thus loud and fervently concerning Christ, because it was his office.

prepare ye the way of the Lord] As men make the wayes plain and smooth taking all rubs away, when a Harbinger gives them warning of the kings coming: so do ye spiritually prepare yours hearts to entertain Christ, who is now at hand.

V. 4. his raiment of camels hair] A course rough garment made of that hair, such as the prophets used to wear, Zach. 13. 4. As he came in the spirit of Elias, so in habit he resembled him, 2 Kings 1. 8.

a leathern girdle] Herein also he was like Elias, 2 Kings 1 8. not as was usual with them of the better sort in those parts, of finer stuff, which they used also as purses to carry their money in, see on Chap. 10. 9.

about his loins] Which Parts used to be girt, Luke 12. 35 Ephes. 6. 14. 1 Pet. 3. 13.

meat was locusts] The living creatures called locusts, were not unclean by the law, but allowed Israel for food. Levit. 11. 22. and were eaten of many people in those parts, understand it of a fruit called locusts, growing on the Carob tree. See on Luke 15. 16. and Joh. Druf. praterit. l. Math. 3. 4.

wild honey] Either natural honey, such as is found sometimes on the leaves of some tree: or such as bees make ordinarily in wood and clifts of rocks, of which Deut. 32. 13. Psalme 81. 16. 1. Sam. 14. 26. Theophylatt.

V. 5. Then went out unto him] The scarcity and want of Prophets, his extraordinary manner of preaching, and austerity of life, drew multitudes unto him.

Jerusalem] The people of Jerusalem.

round about Jordan] On both sides of the river.

V. 6. were baptized] Washed by dipping in Jordan, as Mark 7. 4. Hebrews 9. 10. So the Jews used formerly to do with their proselytes, but this was his speciall commission, John 1. 33.

confessing their sinnes] In words professing their detestation of them, and their repentance for them: or by that right acknowledging they were sinners, and that their soules needed cleansing.

V. 7. Pharisees] A sect that divided themselves from others; as more righteous than they; as the name imports; or it may signifie expounders of the Law, though they gave many false glosses. See Chap. 5. 20, 21. & 23. 16, 17. See on Luke 14. 1.

and Sadducees] Another sect, so named from Sadoc their first founder, some say: or as others, because they also professe themselves righteous, though indeed they were mere Libertines, and held opinion destructive to all piety. Acts 23. 8. See on Luke 20. 27.

come to his baptism] Which some of them, it seems, embraced, though their generality refused it. Luke 7. 30.

generation of vipers] Or, O viperous brood] Chapter 12. 34. and 23. 33. a pernicious creature, Acts 28. 3, 4. He meaneth not that they were corrupted from their holy parents, but degenerated, or as Gregor. hom. 20. in Evang. saith. Male fœtes & malorum parentum actionem imitantes, wicked offsprings imitating the action of wicked parents.

who hath warned you] It may seem strange that you could by any man be induced to deem your selves in danger of wrath and destruction, conceiving your selves to be so holy and perfect, as ye outwardly pretend to be: and it may be well doubted, whether this your profession of repentance be indeed found and sincere; you Phariſees thinking you are in no danger of hell, Luke 18. 9. 11. and you sadducees beleeving that there is no hell, Acts 23. 8.

to flee from the wrath to come] By repentance, without which ye connot prevent it; Luke 13. 5. 7. the wrath to come importeth Gods judgement, either in this life, or that which is to come, 1 Thes. 1. 10.

V. 8. fruits] A Metaphor from trees, verse 10. they must not onely have leaves of Legal ceremonies, but also fruits of good life. So men are called trees of righteousnesse; Isaiah 61, 3. and their works fruits of righteousnesse, Phil. 1. 11.

meet for repentance ' Or answerable to amendment of life: actions testifying repentance and agreeable thereunto, Acts 26. 20, let the sincerity of your repentance appear by the integrity of your lives, Daniel 4. 27. Solutam saith well de gub. O. good works are Christianæ fidei quasi tesseræ, as witnesses of Christian faith.

V. 9. think not to say] Think it not enough to say, or say not: as what he thinks he hath, or seems to have, Luke 8. 18. for that which he hath, Matth. 25. 29.

Abraham to our father] John 8. 39. Do not think your selves safe and well, as those that need no repentance, nor have cause to fear judgement, because ye are of the holy Abrahams posterity, Rom. 11. 16. or do not think that God either will not, or cannot cut you off, because he hath promised to continue a seed to Abraham for ever, Jerem. 31. 35, 36. He forbids them not to professe themselves children of holy Abraham; but this he saith, left vainly trusting in that prerogative (seeing they degenerated from the faith and sanctity of Abraham) they should continue in their sins, and nelect the onely means of salvation, how offered them in Christ.

God is able] He can perform his promise to Abraham, though ye all perish.

of these stones] An emphaticall expression, like that, Luke 19. 40, 50. Numbers 14. 12. It may be an allusion to Isaiah 51. 1, 2. Some interpret it as relating it to the Gentiles, whom God would make children of Abraham, that is, true beleevers, and heirs of the blessing; as he did Zacheus, Luke 19. 9. as if he said, God is able to gather him a church of those who seem most unlikely to be converted to the faith of Abraham. See Cyprian l. 2. ep. 3. Gregor. hom. 20. Theophylatt, &c.

to raise up] As to the deceased, feed or issue, Gen. 38. 8. Chap. 22. 24.

children to Abraham] Spiritual ones, Rom. 9 8. by taking away their stony hearts, and giving them hearts of flesh, Ezek. 11. 19. children of promise, Gal. 3. 29.

V. 10. Now also the ax is laid] The Romans are comming quickly to take your city: or the ax of Gods judgements as Theophylatt interpreteth, to root you out of the earth, and cast you into hell, if ye repent not speedily. See acts 17. 30. 31.

unto the root of the trees] The Babylonians lope you before, but now you shall be utterly scattered, and as it were stockt up branch and root.

therefore every tree] Chap. 7 19.

which bringeth not forth good fruit] See Isaiah 5. 5, 6. it seemeth an allusion to Deut. 20 20.

V. 11. indeed] Mark 1. 8. Luke 3, 16. John 1. 26.

baptise you with water] I can only give you the outward element, and the seal: thus John depresseth himself, and extolleth Christ, because the people thought too highly of John, Luke 3. 15, 16.

unto repentance] That thereby you may make profession of your repentance, Mark 1. 4. which by that rite, or seal of Gods covenant, is on mans part obligued to be sealed.

he that cometh after me] Christ, who beginneth shortly after to execute his ministery, as I have begun mine, is mightier than I] He is therefore able to give you the thing signified in baptisme, which neither men nor angels can do whose shoes I am not worthy to bear] As he is stronger than I, so is he so much more excellent than I, that am not worthy to do the office of the meanest of his servants. See 1 Sam. 25. 41.

with the holy Ghost and with fire] With the holy Ghost, purging your soules as fire doth mettals, Isaiah 1. 25. and 4. 4. he sheweth here the effect of baptisme in the regenerate, mortification and cleansing: away sin; wherein appeareth the difference between the law, and the new covenant of grace in Christ; the law indeed peccatum relevat, non revelat, revealeth, but not relieveth, or cureth sin: but the seals of the new covenant, confirm unto us remission of sin by Christ, being made effectual by the inward working of his holy Spirit; without which, none can be saved by baptisme. As in the deluge all perished save onely those who were in the ark; so in this water of baptisme, they perish who are not in the true Church by faith in Christ. August. To. 7. l. 4. c. 1. de bapt. contr. Donat. excellently expresseth this by comparing baptisme to the waters of Paradise: the waters of Paradise when they are out thereof, in Mesopotamia, &c. there is no happinesse there: so saith he, the baptisme of the Church may be out of the Church, munus autem beate vite non nisi intra Ecclesiam reperitur, but the gift of a blessed life is not found any where, but within the Church.

V. 12. Whose fan is in his hand] Who is now ready to make a separation between the good and the bad: the fan signifieth cleansing at hand, that is, division, separating the fruitful from the barren, as Nicetas com. in Gr. Naz. orat. 11. interpreteth, and that partly by general or speciall judgements, Mal. 3. 18. & 4. 1, 2, & Chap. 13. 30. 49. or by the preaching of the gospel. See on Luke 3. 17.

gather his wheat into the garner] That is, his own people into his Church here, and bring them into heaven, the place of their eternal abode hereafter, as men lay up their corn in granaries.

burn up the the chaffe] That is, those who have only a shew of religion, without fruit of good works, and rest secure, onely in the outward communion of the Church: those (which as Theophylact saith, κύριοι εἰσὶ ἐν τοῖς πνεύμασι τῶν πονηρῶν πνεύματων, who are light and driven by the spirit of the malicious fiend: according to which, Cyprian de simplic. prælat. tract. 3. faith, inanes palee tempestate jallantur, it is the light chaffe which is driven away with the wind. They went out from us, they were not of us, faith the Apostle, 1 John 2. 19. All things against the truth, de ipsa veritate corrupta sunt, Tertul. de præscript. c. 47. are corrupted from, and out of the truth, the spirits of errour working that emulation. See on Luke 3. 17. by burning up the chaffe, he meaneth destruction of the wicked here, and casting them into hell-fire hereafter.

fire unquenchable] Isaiah 66. 24. Chap. 13. 30. 42. Mark 9. 45.

V. 13. Then cometh Jesus] Mark. 1. 9. Luke 3. 21. to wit, when John by preaching and baptizing had prepared the people to receive him.

from Galilee to Jordan] He might have sent for John to come into Galilee to baptize him; but he comes to him, that he might more publickly enter into his ministery.

unto John] He shewes his humility in coming to him.

to be baptized of him] He needed not baptisme, having no sin in him; but as he took on him the similitude of sinful flesh, so would he take also the Sacrament of purgation, and remission of sins. As bein circumcised, he declared that he was the Saviour of them that believed in the Old Testament; so by being baptized, that he is the Saviour of us in the New. Hereby also he confirmed Johns baptisme, and sanctified ours.

V. 14. John forbade him] Out of modesty; for though they lived not together before, lest they should have been thought to conspire together, yet no doubt lesse he knew him by revelation. John 1. 33. See Theophylact. in loc.

I have need to be baptized of thee] Inwardly and spiritually, for thou only canst doit; or it is fitter that thou shouldest baptize me, being so far the more worthy person.

V. 15. Suffer it to be so now] Though I am greater than thou, yet suffer me now to be baptized of thee. For three reasons Christ came to be baptized of Joh. 1. That as he became man, so he might fulfill all the righteousnesse of the Law, whereof the first Adam (as Eubymius noteth) fulfilled no part. 2, That by his baptisme, he might approve of Johns Baptisme. 3. That he might sanctifie the flood Jordan, and all other waters, to the mystical washing away of sin: therefore saith he, Suffer it to be so now, that I who have now taken on me the form of a servant, exploam & humilitatem ejus, saith Jerom, may also fulfill the humility of a servant: thus ἐζωγρεῖν γὰρ, οὐκ ἀνθρωπον, ἀλλ' ἁμαρτίαν ἔλυσεν ὁ Θεὸς, Nazianzen. orat. 35. he was baptized as man, but remitted sins, as God.

to fulfill all righteousnesse] As of the law so of the gospel: it becomes me to submit to Gods ordinance, and thee to do thy office: it is just we shou. ld so do.

he suffered him] Being willing to obey Christ, and convinced by the reason given him; he was content to do that, which otherwise he thought in his own reason inconvenient, V. 16. went up straightway, &c.] Or, as soon as he came out, &c. an usual introduction to solemn visions: See Ezek. 1. 1. John 1. 51. Acts 7. 56. this was done now that Christ and John might see the dove descend, and hear the voyce coming from thence.

unto him] To John, John 1. 32, like a dove] To shew the innocency and meekness of our Saviour.

the spirit of God descending] To assure John that this was the true Messias, John 1. 33. and to make Christ known to be so to others, who believe the Gospel: this was because he was presently to enter into his publick ministery.

upon him] Upon Christ. See Isaiah 11. 2. lest any should have thought, vocem patris ad Johannem factam; non ad Dominum, Jerom; that the fathers voyce came to John, and not to the Lord Iesus.

V. 17. a voyce from heaven] The voyce of God the Father, as appears by the words following, confecrating and authorizing Christ to be our Mediatour, and to go about the work of our redemption: here is also a demonstration of the holy Trinity; the Father speaks from heaven, the Son comes out of the water, and the Holy Ghost appears in the likeneste of a dove.

this is] He speaks of Christ, but to the people; he on whom the dove sits, my beloved Son] My natural son, by eternal, and incomprehensible generation, and therefore dearest to me.

in whom I am well pleased] My judgement is satisfied, and my love settled upon him, and in him upon all believers, who were before the children of wrath, Ephes. 2. 3.

CHAP. IV.

Verse 1. THen was] Presently after he was baptized, Mark 1. 12. and solemnly proclaimed the Son of God, by whom mankind was to be reconciled to God.

Jesus led up] Mark 1. 12. Luke 4. 1. relating to the wilderneste, as higher than the confines of Jordan, where he baptized: or it may signifie, led aside, or withdrawne, as Luke 4. 1.

of the Spirit] Or, by the spirit: either by inspiration, as Rom. 8. 14. which was so prevalent, that it is called driving, Mark 1. 12. or guided by that Dove, that rested on him, Chap. 3. 16. as the Israelites were led by the cloud and pillar of fire, Psal. 78. 14. and the wise men by the star, Chap. 2. 9. or lifted up from the earth (as the word ἀνήχθη, here used, may signifie, according to Budæus) and his body carried into the wildernesse by the power of Gods Spirit, as 1 Kings 18. 12. 2 King. 2. 16. Ezek. 3. 12, 14, 15. & 11. 1.

into the wilderneste] Not a place little inhabited (like that wherein Iohn Baptist lived, Chap. 3. 1. but a place not inhabited by men, but by wild beasts, Mark 1. 13. The devil had the more advantage to tempt our Saviour, in a place where no man could hinder him, nor assist Christ.

to be tempted of the devill] Not to be tryed by God with afflictions, as Abraham was, Gen. 22. 1, 2. but to be solicited by Satan to evil, as 1 Chron 21. 1. that he might overcome him, who by temptations overcame our first parents.

V. 2. fasted fourty dayes] As Moses and Elias had done before, Exod. 34. 28. 1 King. 19. 8. the first before the Law. The second under the Law; so now here in the beginning of the Gospel.

and forty nights] He did not eat at night, as the Iewes did, or at some other times, when they fasted or abstained from pleasant bread many dayes, as Dan. 10. 3. but fasted day and night, during this mentioned time.

afterward] It seemeth he felt no hunger till the time expired, but was kept by the power of the Deity; as the three Iewes from feeling the heat of the fire, Dan. 3. 27.

an hungred] The devil takes him at the weakest, and his first occasion of temptation from hence serves, which had been to no purpose before Christ was hungry.

V. 3. the tempter] The devill, whose constant practice it is, to endeavour to draw men to sin, 1 Thes. 3. 5. as Minucius Fel. Octav. faith, The impure spirits, to the comfort of their own calamity, non desinunt perditi jam perdere, being castaways, they cease not now to cast away others.

If thou be the Son of God] The natural Son of God, as was affirmed from heaven Chap. 3. 17. and taught by John Baptist, John 1. 34. or a sonne of God, for the article is not in Greek, and the temptations, answers and Scriptures alledged, are such as may become us in the like temptations. See on Luke 4. 3.

command] Shew thy selfe to be God, by commanding this to be done, Luke 4. 3. Command this stone, that it be made bread; as Gen. 1. 3. or say, that is, speak to God to turn these stones into bread, these stones] Luke 4. 3. Is is this stone, as if Satan had appeared like a man; and pointed to some stone lying there before.

bread] Not flesh, or some dainty thing, Numb. 11. 4. Psal. 78. 18. 20. bread alone would satisfie hunger, though by bread the Hebrews expressed all food, and necessaries to sustain this life. chap. 6. 11. See on Luke 11. 3.

V. 4. It is written] Our Saviour doth not say, I am God, and so drive away Satan by his divine power: but answereth him by Scripture, that he might overcome Satan, as man, and teach us how to doe it; to wit, by the sword of the Spirit. Ephes. 6. 17. Satan was here deceived, he came to overthrow, and was overthrown, ἤγνοει γὰρ ὅτι πέφευγεν ὑπὸ τοῦτο προσδεχόμενον ἀνθρωπον, he knew not, that when he encountred man, he should light upon the Deity, Nazianzen Orat. 18.

man shall not live] Deut. 8. 3.

by bread alone] Bread doth not nourish by its own power, but by Gods appointment: so if he said, though here be no bread to nourish me, God can put the same vertue into other things, or nourish me without any food, and on him will I wait.

V. 5. Then the devil taketh him] Soon after the former tentation, he carrieth him up, as Gods Spirit did Philip, Acts 8. 39. else how could he set him on a pinacle of the Temple? No wonder if Christ suffered Satan to carry him, who suffered his instruments to crucifie him.

into the holy city] Jerusalem, chapter 27. 53. Dan. 9, 24. So called, notwithstanding the wickednesse of it, because of Gods solemn worship there; or in respect of thole good men left there, who were the better, though not the greater part of Jerusalem.

on a pinacle] An out-wing on the top of the Temple? the devil might have set him on some rock in the wildernesse: but he thought Jesus would be more willing to shew himself at Jerusalem: and from the Temple (as Christs kinded did, John 7. 3, 4.) and that if he fell thence, all the Iewes would think him an Impostor, if he died of that fall.

V. 6. If thou be the Son of God] As chap. 3. 17.

cast thy self down] Satan doth not offer to cast him down, for that God would not suffer him, or because he sought to bring Christ to sin, rather than unto death (though he desired both) whereas if Satan had cast him down, Christ had not sinned. Though God permitted the sacred body of Christ to Satan, yet was his commission limited, as Job 2. 6. therefore Satan said, Cast thy self down; he may tempt, and perswade to evil, he cannot compel. The devil (saith Irenæus l. 5. c. 3.) being a spectator Angel, hoc tantum potest, quod egit in principio, seducere, &c. can do that onely which he did in the beginning, seduce and draw away the mind of man to transgresse the commandements of God. &c.

For it is written] Psal. 91. 11. The devil now seeks to foyle Christ with his own weapons, and cites Scripture, as he had done before verse 4. mendacium abscondens per Scripturam, quod faciunt omnes hæretici, saith Irenæus before cited, vailing his lie by holy Scripture as all Hereticks use to do. There is no charge or temptation of Satan more pernicious and dangerous, than that which is coulloured with miss-applyed Scripture, and shew of sanctity: apparent falshood and impiety we more easily avoid: but beware the devil and his ministers, when they are transformed into angels of light. Here appeareth the venom of the old dragon, when he pretendeth the sacred authority of Gods Holy word, to lead men to sin, and disobedience to God.

he shall give his angels charge] As if he said, thou dependest on God (verse 4.) what needest thou fear hurt by falling, Seeing the Scripture testifies, that God hath appointed his Angels to keep thee from the least hurt. See on Luke 4. 10.

they shall bear thee up] A metaphor taken from them that carry children in their armes.

V. 7. It is written again] Deut. 6. 16. Our Saviour doth not alledge Scripture against Scripture, as if one Scripture did, or could crosse another; but shewes that Satan did miss-alledge the former Scripture, by producing a text, which forbids that which Satan would have him to do.

thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God] As if he said; as I must wait upon God for food (verse 4.) so likewise for means of coming down from the temple, else I tempt God by casting my self into a needlesse danger, so might he justly fail me without breach of his promise,

V. 8. Again, &c.] Satan; though foiled, yet giveth not over tempting Christ: when one temptation is past, we must look for another, taketh him up] See on verse 5. and on Luke 4. 5.

shewed him all the kingdomes, &c.] Presents them to his senses, which way the Scripture hath not revealed. See on Luke 4. 5.

V. 9. all these will I give thee] He cometh not now like a friend to advise, as verse 3. or like a divine to direct, as verse 6. but like a Monarch to seduce our Saviour with great gifts. See on Luke 4. 6.

if thou wilt fall down] As if he said, I ask but a small requital of so great liberality, onely one act of submission, in acknowledgement that thou hast all these things from me: hence it appears, why Satan begins not as before; If thou be the Son of God: for he knew that Christ if he took himself to be the Son of God, would not worship him: and if he were not so, he might peradventure be willing to accept of Satans large offer. This was faith Irenæus l. 5. c. 3. as some Apostate surprizing a region, should trouble the inhabitants, ut regii gloriam sibi vindicet, apud ignorantes; that among the ignorant he might challenge to himself to himself the glory of a King. See on Luke 4 7.

V. 10. get thee hence] Luke 4. 8. Tempt me no more at this time: Christ could endure him no longer, when he sought to usurp that which belongeth to God alone.

thou shalt worship the Lord thy God] Deut. 6. 13. & 10. 20. 1 Sam. 12. 3. thou art not God, and therefore I may not worship thee, to get all the world.

V. 11. Then the devil leaveth him] When Christ had exercised his divine power, in commanding him away; verse 10. it is our comfort in temptations, he limiteth Satan, how long, and how far he will permit us to him; and will never suffer us to be tempted above that he will make us able.

angels came and ministred unto him] To render their service and homage unto him, Heb. 1. 6. or to bring him food, as to Elias, 1 King. 19. 5. or to convey him back from this mountain, where Satan had set him. See Luke 4. 14. Homo est quem diabolus tentat, & idem ipse Deus est, cui ab angelis ministratur, Gregor. hom. 16. in evang. he is man, whom the devil tempted, but the same is also God, to whom the Angels minister.

V. 12. Now when Jesus had heard] Mark 1. 14. Luke 4. 14. John 4. 43. It appears that divers things came between, which are set down, John 1. 2. and 3. chapters.

cast into prison] Or delivered up, See Mark 1. 14. Mark 6. 18, &c.

V. 13. leaving Nazareth] Wherein he had been brought up, and had now been a while, Luke 4. he retired into a safer place out of Herods jurisdiction, governed by his brother Philip, a man of a milder temper.

dwelt in Capernaum] Converted there for the most part; for he had not an house of his own, chapter 8. 20. this was a town more famous than Nazareth: so was there more hope of doing good there.

V. 14. That it might be fulfilled] It was first literally fulfilled when that people had some freedom after their afflictions by the Assyrians; but now especially by Christs preaching there.

V. 15. the land of Zebulun] Isaiah 9. 1. The first calamity began there, 1 Kings 15. 29.

by the way of the sea] Of Tiberias, because it was not far from the sea of Tyrus, beyond Jordan] Beside, at, or near Jordan; for it was part of the holy land. See Numb. 32. 19. Josh. 1. 28.

Galilee of the Gentiles] So called, because the cities which Solomon gave to the King of Tyrus (1 Kings 9. 11.) were there: or Galilee of the nations: because by reason of traffick, people of divers nations had concourse thither: or populous Galilee: that part of it which was best peopled, as being a richer soyle than other parts thereof. There were two Galilees: hereof see Drusius Voc. N. T. com. 1. Hieron. de loc. Hebr. Beza in loc. C. Adricom. Theater. sanct. Neptalim. N. 50. The best Authors agree that this was the upper Galilee, the lower was near Tiberias, and the lake, or sea of Genezareth.

V. 16. The people which sate in darknesse] They whose predecessors were first afflicted by the Assyrians, and delivered, being now the the captives of Satan, do first hear of their deliverance by Christ himself.

shadow of death] Deathful ignorance: for this antithetically answereth to the light of knowledge sprung up: and troubles as grievous as death Psal. 23. 4.

light is sprung up] Christ bringing the joyful tidings of salvation to them, Psal. 97. 11.

V. 17. From that time] Mark 1. 14.

Jesus began to preach] To take upon him the publick office of a Prophet, or preacher; for he had doubtlesse taught before: but now John is in prison, he undertakes the care of preaching to the people.

Repent, &c.] Chap. 3. 2. He beginneth as John did, and so confirmeth his doctrine.

V. 18. And Jesus] Mark 1. 16.

by the sea of Galilee] Called also the lake of Genezareth, the sea of Tiberias. Luke 5. 1. John 16. 1. 23. See also on John 21. 1.

two brethren] They were the more likely to assist one another in the Apostleship, because of their near relation.

Simon called Peter and Andrew] They were with Christ before. John 1. 40, 41. but went home again to follow their own businesse, as Nicodemus also did. John 3. 1.

casting a net] Busie in their calling, as the shepherds were when the Angels came to them, Luke 2. 8.

they were fishers] Christ could have sent some of the glorious

Angels,

Angels, or the learned Doctors of the law; but he takes poor fishermen, and fits them for Apostles, that he might have the glory of that great work entire to himself, See Acts 4. 13. 1 Cor. 1. 26. 29.

V. 19. follow me] That is, saith Gregor. hom. 2. in Evang. Imitare, imitate or follow my example: as, 1 Cor. 4. 16. See Eph. 5. 1. Hebr. 6. 12. here is more enjoyned: to wit, that they should also give their names unto him as disciples, and stay with him, that he might teach them in private and publick, to fit them to that ministery, to which he would set them apart.

fishers of men] The world is the sea, unbelievers fithes, the Apostles and succeding Ministers the fithermen; and the Gospel preached the net. See Chap. 13. 47. Luke 5. 10. Thus Christ teacheth them the Ministers duty by their own trade. So David was taught his kingly office. Psal. 78. 71, 72.

V. 20. straightway left their nets] As soon as they had brought their ship to an anchor, or to the haven, and were come a shore. See Luke 5. 11. Mark their ready obedience and willingnesse to leave all for Christ, yet left they not their propriety in their goods, but left them to the care of others. See Chap. 8. 14. John 19. 27. & 21. 3.

V. 21. two brethren] See on verse 18.

mending their nets] Working in their calling. See on ver. 18.

V. 22. immediately] See on verse 20.

and their father] Not neglecting him, but leaving him to the care of his servants. Mark 1. 20. Here was Christs special command: who saith also, honour thy father and thy mother, &c. Where Gods service and honour requireth it, we must forsake all, or we cannot be true disciples of Christ, we must love and honour our dear parents, but Gods honour and service must have the first place: we must love our parents in God, but God above all.

V. 23. went about all Galilee] περιῆγεν. He led about his new called disciples, but ἄγειν is often ever goe. So here, he went about all Galilee, where they were more ignorant than in Judea, verse 15, 16. he did not send for men out of all places, but went into the towns and villages to them.

in their synagogues] A word used for meeting-places civil and sacred: as also the word ἐκκλησία. Acts 19. 39. 1 Cor. 11. 18. Here it is used for the place where people met to worship God in publick: here Christ taught, to take away all suspition of his doctrine; truth loves the light, and rejoyceth to be seen. John 3. 20, 21. & 18. 20. Acts 26. 26. 2 Tim 3. 6. Falshood lies like Tamar in the way to Timnath. Gen. 38. 14. covered with a vail, wrape up in such disguises that the may be embraced unknowne. Christ preached in publik, to encourage the Jewes to the publick service of God, and to gain the more souls, where many were constantly assembled.

preaching] Publishing by authority, as Herauldsdoe the will of kings: and privileidge of subjects.

the gospel of the kingdome] So called, because it brings us into the kingdome of grace, when it is received, and shewes us the way into the kingdome of glory, Chap. 3. 2. 1 Cor. 15. 1, 2 James 1. 21.

healing] By this miraculous healing, he confirmed the truth of his doctrine, and shewed his divine power.

all manner] Or all, so Acts 10. 12. not all the persons that were sick (for he cured not many there, Mark 6. 5.) but as all sorts of men, so all sorts of diseases presented unto him to be cured, as verse 24.

of sickenesse] Such as bring more pain, and are more hardly cured: he could have wrought signes from heaven, but he did such miracles as did good to their bodies, to shew them by his doctrine and healing them, that he assumed an humane body, and reasonable soule, to save them bodies and soules.

diseases] Infirmities lesse painful or mortal, and more easily cured.

V. 24. throughout all Syria] Even to the Gentiles to prepare them to their future conversion; and to make the condemnation of those Jewes the greater, who followed him not.

they brought unto him, &c.] They were more careful of the bodies of themselves and theirs, than of their soules; as those John 6. 26. Hence it is that men seek more to Physicians than to Divines, torments] Most painful diseases, the word properly signifying, a touchstone, was spoken concerning answers] given ἀπὸ τῆς βασανιζομένου, by those who were examined by tortures; or tormented (as upon the rack) to make them confesse Suidas. See ibid. βάσανος.

possessed with devils] So that Satan tyrannized over their reason and senses, that they could make no good use of them: but to the hurt of themselves and others.

lunatick] Such as were more or lesse afflicted, according to the state of the moon; as those that are frantick, or have falling sickneſs.

those that had the palsie] Weak and feeble men, who have their limbs and joynts loosed, and so weakened, that they cannot pull them up, nor put them forth when they would.

V. 25. there followed him a great multitude] Besides those that brought their sick to be healed: some come out of affection to novelty, others to carp, others to learn.

from Decapolis] A part of Syria: so named from ten famous cities that were therein.

beyond Jordan] See on verse 15.

CHAP. V.

Verse 1. Seing the multitude] The people mentioned, Chapter 4. 25. this was the occasion of this large sermon following.

he went up into a mountain] See on Luke 6. 17. as the Law was given on a mount, Exod. 19. 3. 23. Exod. 20. 1. So Christ expounds it here on a mountain: it was also a fit place for so many to hear.

when he was set] As their Doctors used to do, to shew their authority, some think, Chap. 23. 2. See on Luke 4. 20.

his disciples came unto him] Such as usually repaired to him, or constantly attended upon him, as being more familiarly affected toward him, and desirous to learn somthing of him, Euthym. Luke saith chap. 6. 20. he lifted up his eyes on his disciples: not limiting his speech in them, but indefinitely proposing thefe blessings to all, as Chrysostom here noteth.

V. 2. He opened his mouth] An Hebraisme, signifying his beginning to speak, as Psal. 78. 2. Job 3. 1.

taught them] His disciples and the multitude.

V. 3. Blessed are] Luke 6. 20. So David begins divers of his Psalms, Psal. 1. 1. & 32. & 41. & 112. & 119. & 128. blessednesse being the main end that all aymat.

poor in spirit] That are afflicted in mind, in the apprehension of their spiritual wants and sins, Isaiah 57. 15. Isaiah 66. 2. or poor in estate, if their minds be holy and lowly. See on Luke 6. 20. 1 Cor. 1. 26. James 2. 5. they are not blessed because they are poor, but though they be poor, so verse 4. The poor in spirit are they, who are not spiritually proud: but know, and are truly sensible of their spiritual wants and poverty; as knowing themselves (by nature, and of themselves) destitute of true righteousnesse, and in extream need of the riches of Gods free grace in Christ, which they can never merit, but must beg of him. Rom. 7. 18. 24. This was wanting in the Church of Laodicea, Revel. 3. 17. and is wanting in all that pretend to their own merits, or self-excellency.

for theirs is the kingdome of heaven] To them is the kingdom of heaven appointed, See Matth. 25. 34. Poverty is not in it self a blessed condition: but they are therefore blessed, because they shall be rich in heaven. A kingdom is the richest temporal estate: but the kingdom of heaven, in respect of the unspeakable, and eternall blessednesse thereof, surpasseth all earthly and temporal kingdoms. See Psal. 103. 11. Dan. 7. 27.

V. 4. they that mourn] That is, for their sins, as Chrysostome, Euthymius, Theophylact. Hilar. Can. 4. &c. interpret. You see, saith Euthymius, ὅτι τὸ μακάριοι τὴν αἰτίαν τῶν ἐπαίνων ἔνειμεν. Gr. Nazianzen orat. 17. τὸ γὰρ μακάριοι τὴν αἰτίαν ἐνέγραψε τοῦ πένθους, that salvation is joyned with sighing, or sorrow. Tertul. hereto citeth Psal. 126. 5. Isaiah 61. 3. adv. Marcian. l. 4. c. 14. understand here, those who mourn with godly sorrow to repentance, never to be repented of, 2 Cor. 7. 10. or that are in sad condition, by reason of persecution for the profession of the Gospel, verse 11, 12. or any other heavie affliction, they being holy: such are happy, though externally, or otherwise afflicted: not because they mourn, but albeit they mourn. Minucius Felix giveth a good reason; for saith he, calamitas sapius disciplina virtutis fuit, calamity hath often been the discipline of vertue, A Christian may seem unhappy, he cannot be found to be so.

they shall be comforted] In part here, by taking away, or mitigating their sorrows; or inward consolation by Gods Spirit: compleatly in heaven, 2 Cor. 1. 4. John 16. 20. James 1. 12. Rev. 7. 17 & 21. 4.

V. 5. Blessed are] Psal. 37. 11.

the meek] Such as patiently and quietly endure injuries: such as (nec felicitas aut inflat propria, aut urit aliena, Ambros. ep. 84. l. 10.) neither their own prosperity maketh proud, nor others, envious. Admirable is patience which in the storms of afflictions placeth the soule, ἐκτὸς τοῦ ἐυδίου λιμένος, as it were in a calm haven, Chrysostom in Joh. 18. hom. 83. the meek are they, who cedunt improbitatibus, & non resistunt malo, Augustin. de serm. Domini in mont. l. 1. c. 3. who give way to injuries, and resist not evill; those who can be angry, (not those who are ἀνέξικακοι, senseleſſe, or insensible of wrongs, as Theophylact interpreteth) but who contain themselves until they ought to be angry, as Eph. 4. 26. Such as meekly bear, neither provoking others, nor easily provoked by them.

they shall inherit the earth] They shall have a comfortable right to it, enjoy it with inward peace, and be free from many vexations; in which haſty and froward men embarque themselves: this is here promised, because men sometimes take occasion to abuse those most, who are of the most meek and quiet disposition, Isai. 59. 15.

V. 6 hunger and thirst for righteousnesse] Who earnestly long for it, as hungry men do for meat, or thirsty ones for drink; it may be be understood of such as knowing their own emptinesse, long to be filled with Christs righteousnesse; or of such as being persecuted under the title of impious and ungodly, long to be cleared and righted. See on chap. 11, 30.

they shall be filled] Isaiah 65. 13. Psal. 17. 15. Luke 11. 53. Hunger pincheth, but food satisfieth.

V. 7. the merciful] Who being inwardly affected with the miseries of others, do outwardly relieve them according to their abilities, Luke 6. 36. &c. See the contrary, James 2. 13.

for they shall obtain mercy] They may be subject to misery in this world, but they shall find mercy sometimes with men; but always with God.

V. 8. Blessed are] Psal. 24. 4 pure in heart] The single-hearted and sincere; who are not doubly minded, 1 Tim. 1. 5. Jam. 1. 8. Pet. 1. 22.

they shall see God] They shall converse with him familiarly in heaven; or see some evident and glorious signes of his presence there, 1 John 3. 2. for his essence is invisible and incomprehensible, Heb. 11. 14. he cannot be seen (as he is in his essence) visu clarior ---- nec æstimari, sensibus major ---- magnitudinem Dei qui se putat nosse, minuit, &c. Minuc. Fel. Octavio. being more clear than any sight; nor can he be valued, who is greater than all sense (of the creature) he that thinketh he knoweth the greatnesse of God, therein lesseneth it. Augustine (Paulina ep. 112. after Ambrose on Luke) saith well, non in loco Deum videtur, &c. God is not seen in a place, as at the oak in Mambre, or mount Sina. but in a pure heart, when we think he is absent, we see him: and when he is present, we see him not: he is invisible, and yet is seen, cum vult, sicut vult; many have seen him; not as he is, but as he pleased to appear, and manifeſt himſelf unto them.

V. 9. peace makers] Who endeavour to reconcile such as are at variance: either God to man, as the Preachers of the Gospel do, or one man to another, as all should do.

shall be called the sons of God] They shall be so indeed, as imitators of Christ, Colos. 1. 20. and so accounted to their honour, verse 19. Luke 1. 32. John 1. 12. 1 John 3. 1. they are the likeſt to God, and most beloved of him, verse 45. they are the children of the God of peace, Rom. 16. 20. 1 Cor. 14. 33. 2 Cor. 13. 11. Philip. 4. 9. 1 Thes. 5. 23. 2 Thes. 3. 16. Heb. 13. 20.

V. 10. which are persecuted] 1 Pet. 3. 14.

for righteousnesse sake] Not for sin, or for the world, 1 Pet. 4. 15. 1 John 3. 12. Satan, like Pharaoh pursueth those who go out of his dominion, he posſeſseth his own vessels in quietnesse for the present: Pirats will not chase the empty Ship (saith Chrysostom on Isaiah 6.) nor will Satan affail those, in whom he knows, there is no riches of grace.

theirs is the kingdom of heaven] See on verse 3. there are two things most considerable in a kingdom, wealth and prosperity: a kingdom therefore is oppoſed to poverty there, and to adversity here.

V. 11. Blessed are ye] He turns his speech now to his present hearers, to comfort them against perſecutions which were coming on them.

revile you] Reproach you, and miscall you, 1 Cor. 4. 12. 2 Cor. 6. 8. So as reproach is a kind of perſecution. compare, Gen. 21. 9. with Gal. 4. 29. Not onely the Martyrs, but many others, who suffer injury for the truth, and cause of Christ are perſecuted: humility is a sure forteresse against calumny: he that is not ambitious of the praise of men, will not value their reproach; therefore as Augustine said, in Psal. 57 non timebis convitiatorem; si non amat adulatorem; thou wilt not fear a reviler, if thou loveſt not a flatterer.

persecute you] Scourge, imprison, or kill you, chap. 10. 17. Luke 21. 16. John 16. 2. Acts 5. 40. & 16. 22, 23. 2 Cor. 11. 23. &c. all manner of evil, &c.] 1 Pet. 4. 14. for as Jerom saith, ep. 55. with christians. non qui patitur sed qui facit contumeliam, miser est. He is not unhappy who suffereth contumely, but he that doth it.

falsly] Gr. lying, they have no reward, who are punished justly in word or deed; theeves and murderers suffer, but (as the penitent thief said on the crosse) they are justly here. It is the cause, not the passion which maketh the Martyr.

for my sake] For religion, not for other causes: if reviling be for our own faults, that is no mark of happinesse to us.

V. 12. Rejoyce and be exceeding glad] Joy inwardly, and expreſse it outwardly, Luke 15. 32. Phil. 3. 1. and that in tribulation, Rom. 5. 3.

Great is your reward] Gen. 15. 1. Psal. 19. 11. It is impoſſible that he who hath been wicked in this life should escape that which he hath deserved; or that he who for truth and righteousnesse sake, hath here been most afflicted; sub mercede fraudat; should be defrauded of his reward: as Lactantius speaketh, l. 4. c. 19. because God is just.

So they persecuted the Prophets] Who were eminent men; and therefore you may be content to endure what they did, Jam 5. 4.

which were before you] Both in time and office; and therefore ye may expect the like usage with them.

V. 13. Ye are the salt of the earth] I have chosen you to season, and preserve those who are corruptible by sin: as salt suffereth not flesh to corrupt (synes. de regno. Chem. Alexandr. Ped. l. 1. c. 9.) So wholsome doctrine worketh with the mind: reprove them therefore that they may be saved; though you displeaſe some thereby, and suffer perſecution for the same: yet be you savoury in your selves, and by good exhortations help to season others with the salt of grace, that they may be pleasing to God, Colos. 4. 6. Ephes. 4. 29.

But if the salt] Mark 9. 50. Luke 14. 34. It may be understood of Ministers, or of private Christians, who are spoken of before; and in the following verses.

have lost his savour] Μωρανθῇ become foolish: the unsavourineſſe of salt is (as Euthymius saith) debilitas mordacitatis ipsius. The weakneſſe of its acrimony: the meaning is, if you have not grace in you, and zeal to reprove sinners, wherewith shall it be salted?] As nothing elſe can retover the taſte of salt once loſt; so, bad ministers cannot easily be mended by others.

good for nothing] Other things may be good for somewhat elſe, when they decay, salt cannot. So is it with unsavoury Ministers, and relapſing christians, to be cast out] Of the church as unprofitable.

to be troden under foot] As not good for any use. See Luke 14. 35. & 21. 24.

V. 14. Ye are the light of the world] Not originally, like the sun, as Christ is, John 1. 8, 9 but by participation, as the moon and the stars: so are Ministers, Rev. 1. 20. John 5. 35. as also are other christians, 1 Thesſalo. 5. 5. Phil. 2. 15.

A city that is set on a hill] You muſt shew forth good example to others, far and neer, whereby you may be as exmplary to others, as an high hill or city thereon is conspicuous.

cannot be hid] Your lives will be looked on, and scanned by all men therefore see they be good.

V. 15. Neither do men light a candle] Mark 4. 21. Luke 8. 16 & 11. 33. Neither can you reasonable think that I communicate to you divine light, to the end that you should hide it in silence.

and put it under a bushel] God intends that his graces given to his Ministers or people, should be used for the good of others and not kept for their own good onely: the master of a family lighteth a candle for the use of the whole family, Luke 19. 20, 23.

a bushel] Μόδιος. is a measure, some say, containing about a pint lesſe than a peck; others reckon, that it containeth sixteen Sextarios, who (accounting the Sextarios at about a pint and an half) make the great Modius two gallons and a pottle; which is the Modius Pontieus: the Modius Cyprius, is reckoned a peck and a pint.

V. 16. Let your light so shine] Manifeſt the graces that are in you, by your actions, as beams of light.

before men] Who see not your hearts, but your deeds.

that they may see] Not hear of them by others; but see, and be witneſſes thereof. See Phil. 2. 15. 1 Pet. 2. 12.

your good works] Not words onely, but works doth God require: good works, not other mens, but your own: not what your friends, kindred, or predecessours have done, but what you do. See Deut. 5. 28, 29. Rom 2. 13.

and glorifie] Your end muſt be Gods honour, not your own, Matth. 6. 1. &c. though you can adde nothing to the infinite glory of God; yet muſt you conſeſſe it, and give men cause to praiſe him for you, Gal. 1. 24.

your father] All good children seek their fathers honour, and maintain it, as knowing their interest therein: hypocrites seek their own glory with men, but live so, that the holy Name of God is blaſphemed because of them, who profeſſe good, but practiſe impiouſly, Rom 2. 23, 24. we may indeed vainly flatter our selves in that great prerogative of the name of Christian, who yet so do, and live, ut hoc ipsum quod Christiani populus esse dicimur, opprobrium Christi esse videatur, saith Salvian. de gub. Dei. l. 4. that it may seem a dishonour to Christ, that we are called christians.

which is in heaven] Not your earthly fathers onely, but principally your heavenly father, chap. 6. 9 & 23. 9. Mal. 1. 6.

V. 17. Think not that I am come] This is a preface to the following expoſition of the law, wherein our Saviour prevents their misconſtruction thereof: they hearing the law otherwiſe expounded than their teachers used to do, verse 21, 22. might think that Christ did abrogate the moral Law, and bring in a new one: he warns them before hand, not to think so; for as Ambrose lib. 9. ep. 77. faith of circumcision, it is true of the whole ceremonial law; non --- genibus mandata est, sed femini Abraham It was commanded the seed of Abraham, but not to the Gentiles: and that but for a time, till all was fulfilled in the Meſſias exhibited, with all the ceremonies thereof prefigured; and the fulneſſe of the Gentiles was to come in, the moral Law stands still in force though the curse due to the transgreſſours of the least precept thereof be taken away from those that are in Christ by faith, Rom. 8. 1. Galat. 3. 13.

to destroy the law] Gr. To dissolve; he neither by doctrine, or precept destroyed it, nor by practise, nor by absolving those from obedience thereto, which he delivered from the curse thereof.

or the prophets] The interpreters of it I give none other moral precepts than Moses did, nor any other interpretations of that law, than the Prophets gave.

but to fulfil] Both by instruction, observation, and full satisfaction. Rom. 3. 31. & 8. 3. others take it of the fulfilling the ceremonies, types and predictions of the Messias in his own person, which he likewise did.

V. 18. till heaven and earth passe] Luke 16. 17. Till this world come to an end, the moral law shall stand in full force: heaven and earth shall be changed, rather than reduced to nothing.

one jot, or one tittle] Not the least letter, or particle of a letter. A proverbial speech, signifying that exact obedience is due to the moral law, to the worlds end; but not concluding that we have power to fulfil it. This was a needful doctrine because the Pharisees endeavoured to make void some part of it then, by their traditions, chap. 15. 3, 4. and chap. 23. 4. The meaning is, that the least letter, (such as is Jod in the Hebrew, or ι iota in the Greek: a tittle κεραία, such as are the Hebrew points, or accents) should not passe, till all were fulfilled: how much more needful is this doctrine now, when men would make all the law void, and nor obligatory to believers?

shall in no wise passe from the law] No man hath power to abrogate, or dispense with any part thereof; nor that which he thinks least needful.

till all be fulfilled] Gr. Till all be done: that is, nothing contained in the law, shall ever fail, but attain his full effect.

V. 19. Whosoever] Of what ranck or degree soever he be.

shall break] James 2. 10. Disobey in his practise.

one of these least commandments] One of those precepts of the moral law, which the Pharisees and others make least account of, though indeed nothing is little in the law of God because the lawmaker is great: Therefore Salvian said well, nihil leve æstimetur quo Deus legislator. Let nothing be esteemed little, with which God is offended; de gubern. Dei. l. 6.

and shall teach] Or shall teach: as Exod. 1. 15.

he shall be called] He shall be so, and so accounted.

the least in the kingdom of heaven] He shall be of no account in Gods Church here, nor have any part in heaven, as vers. 20.

do and teach] Confirme the law both by teaching and example, publikly or private.

great in the kingdom of heaven] Of great account in the kingdom of grace and glory. Let not therefore thy works confound thy words: let the Minister of Christs minde, life, and mouth accord. See Hieron. Nepotian ep. 1. l. 2.

V. 20. For I say unto you] Whatsoever the Scribes say unto you to the contrary, if you will believe me, it is otherwise.

except your righteousnesse] Your obedience to Gods Law.

shall exceed the righteousnesse of, &c.] The one sort were accounted men of the greatest learning, the other of the strictest life, see chap. 15. 1. ye must go beyond them both; for they made conscience of outward obedience only, verse 21. and of some commitments only, chap. 15. 3. but ye must make conscience of inward obedience also, verse 22. and of keeping all the commandments, as Luke 1. 6.

in no case enter into, &c.] As chap. 7. 21. & 18. 3. & 19. 23, 24. Mark 10. 23, 24. Luke 18. 24, 25. John 3. 5. Act. 14. 22. alluding to Numb. 14. 30. Psalm 95. 11. it is true, their righteousnesse was generally, rather to say than to do good, &c. to be seen of men, rather than in sincerity unto God; and many other blemishes it had: but the sight of an all-seeing God: but the comparison is not intended here between degrees of righteousnesse by the law, but between it (to which only the Pharisees pretended, and cleaved) and the righteousnesse of the faith in Christ, without which no flesh ever was, never can be saved (Act. 4. 12.) So Irenæus l. 4. c. 27. interpreteth this exceeding; the Pharisee in his way could never come to heaven, because he sought righteousnesse only by the works of the law, which made none perfect, in that it was weak through the flesh, Rom. 8. 3. none were able to fulfill it: therefore Israel attained not to the law of righteousnesse, because they sought it not by by faith but as it were by the works of the law, Rom. 9. 31. your righteousnesse must exceed this: as doth the righteousnesse which is of faith in Jesus (who perfectly fulfilled the law for us) or you shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven; for, by the deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified, Rom. 3. 20. and we are justified by faith only, without the works of the law.

V. 21. by them of] Or, to them of old time] It is a received opinion, delivered by tradition from father to son. Of what value prescription, and antiquity of errour is, may hence appear: it is a good observation of Tertul. de præscript. c. 31. from the parable of the Envious mans tares, Matth. 13. it is (saith he) manifest by the very order, id esse Dominicum & verum, quod sit prius traditum: id autem extraneum & falsum, quod sit posterius immissum: that is, the Lords and true, which was first delivered; but that foreign and false, which was afterwards cast in: adde hereto that of Cyprian ad Cæcil. l. 2. ep. 8. if Christ onely is to be heard, non debemus attendere quid alii quis ante nos faciendum præscripserit; sed quid, qui ante omnes est, Christus prior fecerit, neque enim hominis consuetudinem sequi oportet sed Dei veritatem, we must not attend what some before us thought was to be done: but what Christ did, who is before all: neither may we follow the customs of men, but the truth of God: antiquity of truth is venerable; but of errour the more detestable, by how much more it hath misled. The holy Scripture sufficiently determineth what is truth, and what is errour: and no question ought to be moved among Christians where Gods ipse divit hath so determined; lest yee we break the bond of charity (which is the sinews of religion) Augustines rule to Casulanus ep. 86. is to be held: in hac re tales, de quibus nihil certi Scriptura divina, nec populi Dei, vel instituta majorum pro lege tenenda sunt; in those things concerning which the divine Scripture determineth nothing certain, (that is, neither commandeth nor forbiddeth) the custom of Gods people, and institutions of antecessours (or elders) are to be held for Law.

thou shalt not kill] Exod. 20. 13. Deut. 5. 17. they repeated the words of the Law, but built false glosses thereon.

whosoever shall kill] That is, for private revenge; or if it be acted by a private person. The Magistrate or Judge, taking away the life of a malefactor, according to the Law of God and man, sinneth not therein; he sinneth if he executeth not justice; when the murderer is executed, sus sceleri panitur: Salvian. l. 7. it was not so much the Judges, as his own sin that killed him.

shall be in danger of the judgement] Shall be liable to give account, to the lesse court of twenty three Judges, who judged ordinary causes, and persons.

V. 22. But I say unto you] I give you not a new law, but rightly expound the law of God unto you.

whosoever is angry, &c.] They counted nothing sin, but the external act: but unadvised anger is murder of the heart; therefore Minucius Felix Octav. said well, apud nos, & cogitare peccare est, with us evil thoughts are sins: and Salvian. de Gub. Dei l. 8. non sunt longè ab accidentibus, qui animo occidunt idrumt, they differ not much from murderers, who hate with a minde to kill.

without a cause] Rashly; aliud ira, aliud odium, saith Augustine hom. 40. the father is angry with his childe, but hateth him not, but to amend him; so is his anger an effect of love; so the Apostle saith, be angry, but sin not, Ephes. 4. 26. Truely as long as we here live, affections will oftentimes overbyas our reason; yee must we watch over their exorbitancy, moderari & regere possumus, amputare non possumus, Hieron. l. 2. ep. 20. we may (and must) moderate and rule them, we cannot cut them off.

in danger of the judgement] That is, he shall be liable to the punishment to be inflicted by the Judges. Christ speaketh not here of civil judgements executed by Magistrates, but of Gods tribunal before which men are guilty of murder, not onely for taking away the life of man, but also for affecting to hurt their neighbour by reproach; though, as there are degrees of this sin, so shall there be of punishments thereof: but Christ accommodateth this whole speech to the form of the usual judicatures of the Jews: as their judgements by their trium viri, or three men deciding small matters, their twenty three Judges determining greater matters than the former; and their high Court of twenty and one Judges, who judged of the greatest matters within their jurisdiction: Christ expresseth Gods judgements, by these things which were common, and better known to the Jewes.

to his brother] To another man; verse 23, 24. an Hebrew phrase, Gen. 26. 31. one to another, אִישׁ אֶחִיו a man to his brother.

Raca] O vain man, Se Judg. 9. 4. 2 Sam. 6. 20. Syr. רֵקָא coming of the Hebrew word רוּק, vacuus, inanis, Jerom against the Pelagians, l. 2. interpreteth Raca, vanus, & absque cerebro; as a brainlesse fellow: so Hilary on Matth can. 4. vanitatis opprobrium est: it signifieth, saith the learned Tun. Thesaurus, one void of judgement, reason, and brain: understand this of him that saith so in rash anger: otherwise we find the phrase used, James 2. 20. as our Saviour would not have us rashly angry, lest we should be malicious: for ira matris est odii, Labo. de Gub. Dei. l. 5. anger is the mother of hatred: so would he here prevent the effects thereof, prima enim semper ira, ira mala. tela. medicata sunt, & quicquid non possimus imbecilli, optamus iratli, Salvi. ibid. the first weapons of anger are evil speeches, and that which we cannot do, being weak, we with we could, being angry.

in danger of the council] The meaning is he shall be liable to a greater punishment in hell, as a greater offender was liable to the judgement of the Sanhedrim, or great Council.

shall say] Out of rath anger, as before, otherwise our blessed Saviour, who never sinned, used that word, Matth. 23. 17, 19 thou thou fool] A word of greater diligrace than the former, μωρέ, it signifieth unsavory, or without relish: Raca answereth the Greek word κενὸς, empty that is μάταιος, foolish; and a fool is here, by a Metaphor, called insipid, Hebr. אֱוִיל fotes, which we call, Sot.

in danger of hell fire] To be cast into Gehenna, to have the greatest torments of hell inflicted on him; as the greatest offender among the Jewes, was to be judged, either to be burnt alive in the valley of Hinnom, or to have his carkase denied burial, and burnt there, among the carrion cast out of the city, which was the greatest disgrace. See on Luke 12. 5. See Agustine de Civ. Dei. l. 21. c. 4. 10, 23.

V. 23. therefore] Seeing God forbids anger, and evil speaking as well as murther.

if thou bring thy gift] The Jewes thought God like some worldly Princes, more regarding gifts, than the unity of their subjects; therefore offered many sacrifices, but lived still in malice: Christ shews them here, that such sacrifices did not please God. Charity is the salt of the covenant, with which every sacrifice must be seasoned.

to the altar] He speaks according to that present state of the Church, wherein altars and sacrifices were in use: they are deceived who gather hence, that we must have altars and sacrifices now: yet it may teach us by proportion to seek reconciliation before we come to the Lords table.

and there remembrest] It should have been done before: but if it were forgotten or neglected then, it must of necessity be remembred. and done now. This supposition of remembrance relateth to another supposition of a right preparation of a mans self to that duty, which cannot be without a due examination of his own state towards God and man.

hath ought against thee] Si nos eum in aliquo lesimus. Augustin. de Serm Domini in mont. l. 1 c. 20. if any man can accuse thee, or charge thee with any wrong done to him. See Rev. 2. 4.

V. 24. leave there thy gift] Do not carry it away; our sin against man, doth not discharge us of Gods service; but God will not accept our service, till we have fought peace with all men, Heb. 12. 14.

be reconciled] Do thy part to be reconciled; confesse thy fault, desire peace, make satisfaction, Levit. 6. 1. &c. a purpose of reconciliation is not enough, it must actually be fought, before we can be fitted for Gods service.

then come] Then perswade thy selfe God will accept thy service.

V. 25. Agree with thine adversary quickly] See on Luke 12. 58. a similitude taken from a debtor.

in the way] He alludeth to the customs of adversaries in law, going before the Judge: the meaning is, prepare presently (while the accepted time, and day of salvation lasteth) to stand before God as tribunal; agree while you are both alive.

be cast into prison] Lest for thy unwilling Gods patience and long sufferring, thou be condemned and cast into hell fire; the whole is allegorical: by adversaries delivering thee, is meant, lest he whom thou hast wronged, complain to God of thee; and by the judges delivering to the officer, understand, Gods execution of temporal and eternal punishments on the impenitent sinners.

V. 26. till thou hast payd] The meaning is, that God will not forgive injuries done to men, except the injurious make what satisfaction they can. Some understand these two verses litterally, as counsel given us by our Saviour to avoid, and compose suits before tryal.

the uttermost farthing] That is, never, because that by suffering, thou canst, in no finite time, satisfie the infinite and eternal justice of God. See on chap. 12. 29 and on Luke 12. 58.

V. 27. by them] Or to them.

Thou shalt not commit adultery] Exod. 20. 14. The Pharisees taught that the act of this sin, was onely sinful before God, as it was punishable before men.

V. 28. Whosoever looketh] With intent to lust after her; or till he lust after her, Mark 13. 22. Job 31. 7. So that both wanton thoughts and looks are here condemned. See Rom. 7. 7. 2 Pet. 2. 14. therefore Isidores rule is, ὃ ἀφῶν μὴ ἔρχῃ, ὃ ἀφὼν μὴ ὄφῃς. either seeing, lust not, or lusting look not. ep. 173. in this, as Ecthymius noteth. radicem abscidit; he cutteth up sin by the root in the heart and affections; lest it should bring forth death. See James 1. 14, 15. For the most part the actions of the inward man, as lust, shew themselves in the outward man; as, chastity of the inward man passeth to the bodies undefiled chastity; for he that is not acquainted with the hearts adultery is certainly and invincibly modest and chast; therefore, as all seeds, and incentives of sin must carefully be avoided; so this, oculus meretricis, laqueus amatoris est. Ambrof. de pæn. l. 1. c. 14. the harlots eye, is the lovers snare. Lust not after her beauty in thine heart, neither let her take thee with her eye-lids, Prov. 6. 25. Flee fornication, 1 Cor. 6. 18. Fly alfo youthful lusts, 2 Tim. 2. 22. Fugiamus ergo tanquam sequentem, quia non post nos. sed in nobis sequitur. ib. Ambrof. let us therefore fly it, as that which followeth, not after, but in us; how? by dashing the serpents egges ---parvulos ad petram, that is, (as the same l. 4. c. 11. de pœnit. interpreteth) ---infirmas & lubricas cogitationes elidas ad Christum; destroying sin in the thoughts, by recalling them to the dreadful tribunal of an all-seeing Judge.

on a woman] Understand all this to be a common rule: to women as well as men, (which Chrysostom. Theophylact, and Euthymius note) so that when women look with such affections, they sin, and if they adorne themselves to be looked upon, and lusted after, though possibly they do not affect any man, yet ἐκείνας ἐφεμαικον ἐκάρασιν ὡ ἀὸ μοιχὸς πίνι; Theophylatt; they have tempered the poison, though no man drink it. See Tertul. de cult. fæm. c. 12.

hath committed, &c.] For as Jerom saith well, ep. 22. in respect of the sin, mœcit & qui nocere disposuit, he hath hurt, or done evil, who disposeth so to do, see here, jam affectu adulter est, is already an adulterer in affection. Ambrof. l. 9 epist. 77.

V. 29. and if] Chap. 18. 8. Mark 9 47.

thy right eye] Anastasius understandeth this ὡς τὸν φίλον, &c. of friends and kindred, the meaning is general, whatsoever is not useful or necessary to this life, as the right hand, or right eye.

offend thee] Or do cause thee to offend, pluck it out.] The meaning is, there is a body of sin in us, which must be mortified, (Colos. 3. 5.) and all occasions and incentives thereto abandoned, if we will be saved; therefore Jeroms counsel is very good. l. 2. ep. 15 multi parcun, ut soli parcat animæ; spare nothing, that thou mayest spare thy soul.

for it is better] It is better for a christian, ministerio carere quam vita. Salvian. de gub. l. 3. to want the service (of some members) than life eternal; as it is better for a man that hath a gangrene in one member, to cut it off, than to suffer it to infect the rest, and endanger his life; so it is better for you to leave your deares sins, or the occasions of them, than that the whole man should perish by them.

V. 30. If thy right hand] See on verse 29.

V. 31. Whosoever shall put away his wife] Deut. 24. 1. or whosoever will put away his wife: It seems the Scribes misinterpreting the law, taught, that any man that disliked his wife, might put her away, so that he gave her a bill of divorce, whereby it might appear to any other man that desired to have her, that she was set free from her former husband.

V. 32. Whosoever shall put away, &c.] Luke 16. 18. 1 Cor. 7. 10. Matth. 19. 9.

saving for the cause of fornication] For that cause he might put her away, but for none other. Adultery dissolveth the bond of matrimony, which consisteth in their being one flesh.

causeth her to commit adultery] Understand this, if the divorced woman marry to another, her former husband, being yet alive, which the party divorcing occasioneth, by putting her away.

V. 33. by them] Or to them.

Thou shalt not forswear thy self] Exod. 20. 7. Levit. 19. 12. Deut. 5. 11. It seems by Christs answer, that the Pharisees taught, that if men did not forswear themselves, they did fulfil the third commandment; and so allowed or connived at swearing in ordinary communication, and of swearing by creatures: both which our Saviour condemns.

V. 34. Swear not at all] James 5. 12. That is, in your ordinary communication; not at all, except where you have a lawful calling thereto; as in case of witness-bearing before the Judge, or lawful Magistrate, for the ending or deciding of controversies, or further confirmation of just duty. See Jer. 4. 2. Heb. 6. 16.

neither by heaven] See Isaiah 66. 1. Swear not by them, because they are creatures, not God; nor are they thine; they know not the truth of what thou sayest, nor can of themselves punish thee for thy perjury; some interpret this prohibition with this condition, except thou mean to perform vows, or swear truth; for God will punish perjury, though thou swear not by him, but by some creature, Heaven, Earth, Jerusalem, thy head; God is injured when his creatures are called to bear witnesse to a falsehood, or engaged for it. See chap. 23. 16. &c.

V. 35. nor by the earth] See on verse 34.

it is his footstool] Isaiah 66. 1.

neither by Jerusalem] See on verse 34. the city where he is publickly worshipped.

city of the great King] Of God, Psal. 48. 2, 3. with 87. 3.

V. 36. by thy head] See on verse 34. thou hadst it and every hair thereof of him.

one hair white or black] One hair thereof, by giving it that native colour: Art onely imitateth nature, it cannot make any natural thing.

V. 37. let your communication be] James 5. 12. your ordinary communication. See on verse 34.

yea, yea, nay, nay] Affirmative or negative, without oaths for confirmation of that which you say.

whatsoever is more than these] Customary swearing, by whatsoever they swear.

cometh of evil] From Satan, corruption of heart, evil habit, other mens incredulity, or your vain perswasion, that men will not believe you except you sweare, whereas that maketh your assertions more suspected, to good and wise men.

V. 38. an eye, &c. an eye] Exod. 21. 24. Levit. 24. 20. Deut.
19. 21. this imitates that the Jewish Doctors taught, that a private man might revenge himself, so that his revenge did not exceed the wrong; this Christ condemneth, for the Judges were to determine this.

V. 39. that ye resist not evil] Luke 6. 29. Rom. 12. 17. 1 Cor.
6. 7. he doth not forbid private men to defend themselves against injuries by lawful means, or to seek for repair and satisfaction by the use of the lawful Magistrate: but forbids private revenge or publike, out of malice, or by rigorous prosecution of the Lawes.

turn to him the other also] Though he smite maliciously, or in way of disgrace, as Job 16. 10. Micha 5. 1. he so far from rend-ring evil for evil, as that thou be prepared, rather to endure more injuries, than unlawfully to revenge the former.

V. 40. sue thee at the law, &c.] Unjustly: if by force, fraud, unjust cavils vexing suits, or force he get away thy goods.

let him have thy cloak also] See on verf. 39.

V. 41. compel thee to go a mile] Under pretence of authority, compel thee or thy cattel, to carry or serve him; (as pursi-vants, and such messengers, use to take up post-horses) See chap. 27. 32.

go with him, &c.] See on verse 39.

V. 42. give to him that asketh thee] If he have need, and thou canst spare it, Luke 6. 30. Galat. 6. 10. 1 John 3. 17.

from him that would borrow] Deut. 15. 8.

turn not thou away] As those are wont, that refuse to hear or regard those that entreat them. See Isaiah 58. 7. lend him for his need, Luke 6. 35.

V. 43. Love thy neighbour] Levit. 19. 18.

and hate thine enemy] This the Scribes collected (though fally) out of the text, either from the misapplied rule of contraries, or else because they were commanded to destroy the inhabitants of the land of Canaan, Deut. 7. 2. & 25. 17, 19. which rule they, would hold with their particular enemies also.

V. 44. love your enemies] Luke 6. 27. A man may happily do good to some whom he loves not: but here our Saviour requires love of heart to them, who heartily hate us: love your friends in God, and your enemies for Gods sake.

blesse them that curse you] Expresse your hearty love in good words and wishes to them who wish you ill.

do good to them that hate you] Shew your love in good deeds to them, as 1 Sam. 24. 17. Pfal. 7. 4. Gal. 6. 10. Rom. 12. 20 reti-der not evil for evil, but overcome thine enemy with good, which is the most glorious victory of the saints.

pray for them] As Luke 23. 34. Acts 7. 60. 1 Cor. 4. 12. this sheweth, that Christ would have us so far from desiring revenge, that he will not have us pray for it: but in case of injury to commend our cause to God, and to pray him to give them, repentance, and mercy: therefore he would have us blesse them: he saith not, speak well of them who are wicked and injurious (Gods spirit teacheth no man to lye) but pray for them.

and persecute you] See verse 11, 12. this is to imitate Christ, and his Saints, Luke 23. 34. Acts 7. 60.

V. 45. that ye may be the children] That ye may hereby appear Gods children, who being the God of love, doth good to his enemies. See 1 John 3. 9, 10.

of your father] Of God, whom you must imitate, Ephes. 5. 1.

which is in heaven] Chap. 6. 9. whom you must imitate, so may you not earthly fathers, in all things, because they may erre, and do, in some: God is absolutely holy, so is no meer man.

maketh his sun to rise] Causeth his sun to give light, and warmth, and the rain to cool and refresh wicked men in their persons, and their fields, that they may be fruitful.

V. 46. for if] Luke 6. 32.

ye love them which love you] Them onely, verse 47. for we must love them that love us, else are we worse than Publicans or Heathens, verse 47.

what reward have ye?] Ye shall have no reward from God, for that which ye do for your own ends and affections; for ye do but render love for love, and love your selves in loving them.

do not even Publicans the same?] You do no more than the light of nature teacheth men to do. The Publicans, taking up tribute and custom from the Romans, were counted most vile, and impious by the Jews: (see Luke 19. 8. & chap. 9. 10.) according to their sense Christ here speaketh; do not those, whom your selves condemn as wicked, as much? will you not excel them, whom you esteem the worst of men?

V. 47. if ye salute] Or lovingly embrace, or ask of their welfare, as 2 Kings 9. 17, 18, 19, 22. the word ἀσπάζομαι signifieth lovingly to embrace: but the Syriac interpreter giveth it, if ye salute: in this one office of humanity, he understandeth all the offices of civility and friendship.

what do ye more] See on verse 46.

V. 48. Be ye therefore perfect] That is, sincere and compleat in all parts of piety, especially in love towards all men, James 1. 4.
& 3. 2. Colos. 4. 12.

as your heavenly father] Be like him in this, though ye cannot be equal to him, see on verse 45. The Lord commandeth charity not onely through all the Scriptures, but also by his own holy example. Salvian. l. 4.

CHAP. VI.

Verse 1. That ye do not your alms] Or deal not your alms, ἐλεημοσύνην, mercy and almes: some read δικαιοσύνην righteousnesse, so the Syria: words which signifie almes or righteousnesse, come both of the Hebrew root צדק, to be just. 2 Cor. 5. 21. James Elcemosyna, justitia, 1. 21. 1 Pet. 2. 24 Luke 11. 41. Acts 3. 2, Synechd. chiet. pe-
10. &c. See Joh. Druf. præterit. l. 1. cipua justitia species: before men to be seen of them] We may and Ju. Brxtorf. Jun. lex. ought to do good before men, that God may thald Syr. Mart. be glorified thereby. See chap. 5 16. but our Trost. &c. end must not be to be praised of them, but to please God, verse 2. Non est ingrata eleemosyna quæ sic erogatur, sed quæ sit ut videatur, that alms is not unacceptable, which is given, and seen of men; but that which is given to be seen of men. True righteousnesse, which is self-glorious despiseth the applause of the world, à Deo genita cœlum spectat, P. Chrysostomus Serm. 9. being born of God, it looks up to heaven for its reward and approbation.
That righteousnesse, quæ se humanis oculis locat, which hireth it self out to the eyes of men, cannot expect the reward of the heavenly father, It would be seen, it was seen; it would, and it hath pleased men; it hath the reward it looked for, it hall never have the reward which is undervalued Let us take great heed to o'r selves:
a wrong end proposed, depriveth of all the fruits of those things we do, though with never so much labour, cost, or vigilancy.

no reward] The word is usually taken in Scripture, for a free recompence, Rom. 4. 4. See chap. 20. 8.

of] Or with.

your father which is in heaven] See on chap. 5 45.

V. 2. when thou doest thine alms] When thou givest an alms.
See verse 3. and Rom. 12. 8.

do not sound a trumpet, &c.] Cause not a trumpet to be sounded before thee, alluding to the manner of calling the people together, Numb. 10. 3, 4. it may be they did use to sound a trumpet when almes were to be given, that the poor might not go up and down begging, or lose their times in coming, when nothing was yet ready for them: the Pharisees gave their private almes so, that they might have many witnesses of their liberality to praise them, as well as receivers to thank them.

as the hypocrites do] The Pharisees who are counterfeits, as those that act other mens persons in a Comœdie. See on Luke 13. 15.

in the synagogues, and in the streets] This they did, that all the city might take notice of their charity.

that they may have glory with men] That their neighbours might praise, and admire them for good and holy men: the vain glorious hypocrite is, as Jerom. l. 2. ep 23. said of a Philosopher, popularis aurævile mancipium, a base slave to popular applause: but however men ignorant of the heart, praise and canonize the wicked for saints, yet God cannot be deceived; the most rotten wood shineth most in the dark; the light discovereth it: and so that which is highly esteemed amongst men, is abomination in the sight of God. See on Luke 16. 15.

they have their reward] τὸν μισθὸν αὐτῶν, their own reward, or have all their reward: they may make their acquittance: as the word ἀπέχουσι (derived from the word here used, and Phil. 4. 18.) signifieth, they have that which they desired, and aimed at the praise of men. See on verse 1. Having therefore received the reward they proposed to themselves here of men, they cannot reasonably look for it again of God in the life to come. Such was that word which the rich man heard in hell, Luke 16. 25. Be- member that thou in thy life time receivedst thy good things, &c. now thou art tormented: but O quanta apud Deum merces, si unusquisque in præsenti, pratium non speraret? Jerom. l. 2. ep. 14. O how great should be our reward with God, if no man would hope for the reward in this present life.

V. 3. let not thy right hand know] A proverbial speech signifying, that we should be willing to give almes when none see us, or not regarding other mens talking notice thereof: give with a minde so free from ostentation, and divulging thine almes to others that thou maiyest (if it were possible that thou couldst) conceal it from thy self; left thy frail minde should encline to any desire of humane applause.

V. 4. thy father which seeth in secret] Whereas men look for honour and reward for the good they do, how vain and foolish is it to expect these from men; seeing the all-seeing God, who is a most just and plentiful rewarder of all good, seeth the good we do, and will before men and angels publikely recompence even that which men knew not? See Matth 25. 34, 37. Honour is a shadow of merit; which, if thou followest, thou canst never overtake: if thou flieft, it will follow, and not be divided from thee, while the light giveth it appearance.

V. 5, as the hypocrites are] See on verse 2.

love to pray standing in the synagogues,] They affect it, Chap. 23.
6, 7. and use it to be heard of men.

in the corners of the streets] They loved to pray in publick places, as at the cartons, where divers wayes meeting, many, passing to and again, might take notice of their devotion.

have their reward] See on verse 2.

V. 6. when thou prayest] Privately, for publike prayers are to be made in Gods publike worship, in places appointed, and convenient for conventions, and assemblies of people.

enter into thy closet] ταμεῖον properly signifieth any private place, where grain, any other goods, store or treasures were laid up. See on John 5. 2. What then, saith theophylact, shall I not pray in the Church? Yes, but with a well composed minde, and without ostentation: ὁ γὰρ ΘΣ ὁ βλέπων, ὁπὸ ὁ τῶν ΣΣ καὶ ὁ ἐνκρύπ ΣΣ, the place hurteth not, but the manner, and intention: many pray in private to be heard of men.

pray to thy father which is in secret] Remember thy businesse is with God in private, not with men in publike, and seek to please him alone, and not men, as they do, who pray so loud in their chambers, that they may be heard into the streets.

which seeth in secret] This is that soveraign remedy against vain ambition, to recal and set us ever in the sight and presence of God, who beholdeth all things in heaven and earth; yea, the very thoughts and intentions of every heart so that being contented with his knowledge of us, and all our actions, we may faithfully endeavour to approve our selves to him. See Heb. 4. 13. 1 Chron. 28.
9. Rom. 8. 27. 1 Cor. 2. 10. Revel. 2. 23. Psalm. 44. 21. Jerem.
17. 10.

shall reward thee openly] Luke 14. 14. It appeareth when God will reward the merciful in the resurrection of the just. See 1 Cor. 4.
5. He is thy father, who as he is delighted and well pleased with such thy works, Heb. 13. so will he not conceale thy vertues: how willingly do we speak of any excellencies in our childe, or those we love? God will assuredly reward thee, not before a few men of this soon-perishing generation, but before all the world; men and angels.
See on verse 4.

V. 7. use not vain repetitions] Eccles. 7. 14. Eccles. 5. 2. All long prayers are not here condemned: nor such repetitions as are useful to stir up affections, but vain and needlesse ones (See Chapter 26. 44. and Luke 22. 44.) such as Christ upbraideth the Pharisees with, Chapter 23. 14. or Elias Baals priests 1 King.
18. 27.

as the heathen do] It was a shame for the Jews to imitate the Heathens in prayer, whom they abhorred, as impious. See Chap.
28. 17.

they think they shall be heard for their much speaking] This is his first reason to dehort them, what more vain, than to think to please the all-wise God, with such folly, as is irksom to any prudent man? the brethren in Egypt, (saith Augustine ep. 121. c. 10.) are reported to have frequent, but very brief prayers; and those in a manner suddenly ejaculated: lest that intention of minde, which being vigilantly erect, which is very necessary to him that prayeth, should vanish, and be dulled with long continuance: and by this they sufficiently shew, that this intention, as it is not to be dulled, if it cannot continue: so neither is it quickly to be broken off, if it could last. Absit enim ab oratione multa locu- tio, sed non desit multa precatio, si fervens, perseverat intentio; let much speaking be far from prayer, but let not much prayer be wanting, if the intention continue fervent: so speak much in prayer, is (saith he) rem necessariam sine superflua agere verbis, &c. to do a thing necessary with superfluous words.

V. 8. your father knoweth] This is another reason, drawn from the omnificence and goodness of God: you know that God knows your wants before ye ask, and hath a fatherly care towards you; and therefore need not many repetions of the same thing, to acquaint him with your wants, as if he were ignorant of them: Prayer is (as Augustine saith, ep. 120.) necessary to move us, not to enforme God: because he is a gracious father, his care and readiness to give, preventeth your duty in asking: we do not beg to informe God; but to perform our duty, to recount his promises, to shew our filial dependance on him, and to acknowledge him the author and giver of all good.

V. 9. after this manner] This is a true summe, and forme of all Christian prayers, set down both in precept and pattern. See Luke 11. 2.

As in the body, the eye guideth all parts and actions which may be conveniently performed, if the sight be clear, which otherwise must be troublesome, and confused: so in the soul, if the reason be rightly illuminated, all the acts of the soul, will be more easily and orderly performed, which otherwise must needs be exorbitant, and evill.

V. 25. Therefore I say unto you] That you may not with too much care make your selves more unhappy.

take no thought] Take not too much care, no, not for things necessary, much lesse for things superfluous: we may not understand this simply, as if we might take no care, nor use any providence for our selves and ours: (See 1 Tim. 5. 8.) but be not immoderately carefull or distrustfull of Gods care and providence over us. The word μεριμνᾶτε, is derived ἀπὸ τοῦ μερίζειν τὸν νοῦν, from dividing the minde, and distracting it from Gods service, and confident trust in him: they mistake this place, who would hence conclude that Christians may not labour, or take care, but live idlely: The Nicene Council, well determined (l. 3. *bin. Prov. 24. 31. he would teach us, in an holy, and prudent endeavour, to rely upon Gods providence, who feedeth those creatures made for mans use, without their sowing and care for times to come, and therefore will not faile to provide for men, without their vain perplexing themselves: we must labour, but not be over solicitous; believing that God giveth the encrease and fruit of our labours, as the forecited Councell determined.

like one of these] God puts more glory upon one flower, than art and cost can put on the greatest Monarchs; their conjecture, that think Christ here speaketh of that flower, which is now called among us, the Tulipe, is very probable: their reasons are, that the shape so agreeth, that we may think them, both for their leaves and bulbous root, to be a kind of Lily: these are but strangers with us, but grow commonly in the fields in those eastern parts, where Christ conversed: and though, in regard of the strangenesse of the flower, the proper name was also strange, and is now to us of these parts; yet might it be a species of that which the Greeks called κρίνον, which some interpret by λείριον, sometimes put for any flower. Secondly, that admirable and glorious variety of colours to be found in the Tulip, more than in any flower, may perswade us so to think. So lastly may be wondrous beautie and mixtures of those colours in these flowers conclude, Salomons princely magnificence in raiment, for colour, varietie, and beauty overcome by these flowers.

V. 30. If God so clothe] This is another argument from the lesser to the greater, to diffwade us from distrusting care: If God so gloriously clothe the flowers of so short continuance, what will he not do for man, created in his own image to eternity?

CHAP VII.

Verse 1. JUdge not.] See Rom. 2. 1. Judge not rashly of mens persons and actions, as they who misconstrue doubtfull things: nor rigidly and uncharitably, as those who exasperate small faults in others, and are indulgent to great crimes in themselves: such Judges were the Pharisees. See Rom. 14. 4. Periculosum quippe est, de servo alterius judicare, & non facilu venia prava dixisse de rebus, Jerom l. 1. ep. 45. for indeed it is a dangerous thing to judge another mans servant; and to speak evil of the good, is not easily pardoned. οὐ δίδωσι γὰρ ὁ κριτὴς τοῦ ἑαυτοῦ κύριος τὸ δικαιότερον ἢ τὸ δικαίζων, saith chrysostom hom. 85. in John. knoweth thou not, that thou prescribest, and fore-pronouncest to thy self a more grievous judgement, while thou thus judgest another man.

V. 2. with what judgement ye judge, &c.] Oftentimes ye shall find men ready to judge as hardly of you, as you of them, or, God will judge as severely of you, as you do of others: some retaliation shall be. See Luke 6. 38. James 2. 13. Jerem 30. 16. Ezek. 35. 15. Obad. verse 15. Levi. 24. 19 He speaketh here against unjust, and rash judgement: unjust, as when an incompetent judge condemneth (of which Rom. 14. 4.) or when a competent judge. unjustly:

justly: rash, of which 1. Cor. 4 2. See Luke 6. 38. such also is partial judgement; of which Salvian l. 4. de gub. Dei, saith, in the very same crime, punimus alios, nos absolvimus: we punish others, and, absolve our selves.

and with what measure you mete] Mark 4. 24. Luke 6. 38. Judge 1. 7. a proverbial sentence: it is very equal that a man should buy by the same measure by which he sells: you would be loath to be hardly censured by others: do not that to others, which you would not suffer at their hands.

V. 3. and why beholdest thou] That is, thou dost evilly: indeed, as Lallantius saith, l. 2. c. 3. Factilius est de alterius judicare, quam de suis, it is easier to judge of other mens faults, than ones one: the eye seeth not it selfe, nor any thing too neare it: so we hardly see our own sins, but are too quick-sighted, towards others: and as the most ravenous and mischievous birds are most quick-sighted, so are the the most wicked to finde fault with others. He speaks here in the singular number, to shew the need of particular application.

the mote that is in thy brothers] With what face canst thou tax thy brother for small faults, when thou beareſt with greater in thy selfe? Some think it should be read, a splinter, rather than a mote, because that answers best to a beam: but the Syriac readeth, ܩܛܝܡܐ, legello, festucam, the mote.

V. 4. Or how wilt thou say, &c.] Thou oughtest for shame, first to amend thine own faults, before thou censurest another for the same; left thou bear, Physician cure thy selfe: in and self love blindeth men so that they can see no faults at home: and such persons are commonly censorious. See Gen. 38. 24, 25. which rendreth a man unexcusable, and selfe condemned, Rom. 2. 1. 3.

V. 5. thou hypocrite] Rash censuring (melts very strong of hypocrisie; when men would seem to be so good, that they (as blameless) would be correctors of others, and are so bad, that they allow, or dispense with worse faults in themselves.

How shall a man reprove onothers faults, ἀνιὼν ἀφ' ἑαυτοῦ τὸν παραπλαγχθέντα ἐγχωρῶν, Gr. Nazianzen Cæsario ep. 51. his self having no confidence at home, or within his own conscience. First then, examine thy self, whether thou didst never commit the same fault, whether thy self be yet amended, and clear of it, left else, as Nazianzen said, Orat. 1. our selves being full of sores, we only endeavour, βίπας ἰατρεύειν, to cure others, not our selves: in case thou were never guilty of such sin, yet charity said, Cogitemus & nos homines, & habere potuisse, Augustine l. 1. de serm. domini in mont. c. 30. let us remember that we also are men, and might also have had the same faultsit is too sure, we have many others. Lastly, if we have sinned so but do not now, let us remember the common frailty of men, that mercy, not malice, may usher in our reproofs. See Gal. 6. 1.

V. 6. give not that which is holy unto the dogs] Apply not the promises of the Gospel unto prophane men: or speak no more of them, to such as persecute you for your message: or reprove not such, Prov. 9 8. for they are mischievous like dogs, Philip. 3. and will prophane but never profit, by holy things. By no means murmur against him; for he hath revealed enough for our salvation: the old Hereticks, the Valentinians and Marcionites, would so wrest this text, as if they ought always to be to seek in religion, and not to rest in the Scriptures and doctrine of the Apostolical Churches, because Christ said, seek and ye shall finde: it may be said to our modern Seekers, as the Spirit saith to the Church of Sardis, Rev. 3. 3. Remember therefore how thou hast received, and heard, and hold fast: the reason of this present speech is in three things, in the matter, time and manner: that we first consider, what we must seek, when, and how far: we must seek Christ, and the knowledge of Gods will for our salvation in him; untill we believe in him, that we may be saved: but as Tertullian saith, adver. Hæret. cap 8. invenisti, cum credidisti: thou hast found when thou believest: we need not any curious search now after Christ, and the Gospel, Cum credimus, nihil desideramus ultra credere, when we belive, we desire not to believe any thing beyond the truth: for this is that which we believed before, that there is nothing more than what the Scripture speaks of God, and our salvation by Christ) which we ought to believe, Victra Dei verbum nihil invenitur, Hilarie de Trinitat. lib. 2. there is nothing found beyond the word of God: Let us remember, saith Tertullian, when Christ said, seek, and ye shall finde: it was in the first fruits of his doctrine, when most doubted whether he were Christ, we now believing in him, must be no longer staggering, and to seek of our faith and religion.

So full of dangers, obstructions, and lets is this way, that the Holy Ghost saith, 1 Pet. 4. 18. If the righteous scarcely be saved—&c.

wide is the gate] It is easie to go to hell: our own corrupt nature leadeth us that way: the cause of so many and grievous persecutions, is sinners impatience to be pulled out of that path; there is nothing in the world so easie, as to become wicked, because we are born such.

straight is the gate] We must be contented through many pressures and difficulties to go to heaven; for it is like a narrow way, which if we find not, and out of which if we fall, we cannot avoid utter and eternal destruction of body and soul: we have need of Solomons caution, as chiefly when we go into the house of God (where the way to life is opened to us) so in all the whole course of our lives, Keep thy foot Eccles. 5. 1. as there are many crooked lines between two points, but onely one straight one: so are there many ways to errour and damnation, but onely one way to to salvation, Acts 4. 12. inwardly they are ravening wolves] See Acts 20. 29. whatever shews of good will they make, they seek to destroy your soules.

V. 16. by their fruits] By their false doctrine, self-seeking, and wickednesse, verse 13 2 Pet. 2. 1 which at last sheweth what they are, as ripe fruits do trees do men gather grapes of thorns?] Luke 6. 43. every tree bringeth forth its own proper fruit after its kinde, Gen. 1. 11. Jam 3.12.

V. 17. every good tree bringeth forth good fruit] As several kindes of trees bear several fruits; so of one kinde there are some better than others, which the fruit discoverth.

V. 18. a good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit] Not generally and constantly though accidentaly it may fail in some particular: so though the best of the sons of men do sometimes fall into sinne, yet they live not in it, 1 John 3. 9. Romans 7. 15, 17, 20, 25. and these fruits of the flesh, are from the remainder of the old man, and unregenerate part; as sometimes wilde and unsavory fruit, groweth on the suckers of the old stock, which are not pruned off.

V. 19 every tree] Chap. 3. 10.

that bringeth not forth good fruit] Chap 3. 10. We cut down unfruitfull trees, though they bear no dangerous fruit. So men shall perish that live not godly, though they be not prophane or notorious sinners: we must cease to do evil, and learn to do well, Isa. 1. 16 Luke 13. 7.

V. 20. by their fruits] See on verse 16.

V. 21 not every one] Not any that doth hypocritically worship God in word, without a sincere heart; the bare profession of true religion, is not sufficient to save any man. What is a holy name without desert, but ornamentum in luto Sahi l. 4. an ornament in the dirt? And again he saith, Our very religion which we profelle, accuseth our errours.

Lord, Lord] Rom. 2. 13. James 1. 22.

doth the will of my Father] That is, who not onely carefully endeavours to keep Gods law, but also truely believe in Christ; (for this is the will of God, that every one who seeth the son, and believeth in him, should have eternal life, John 6. 40.) and also that herewith bring forth the fruits of sanctification, and holy obedience; for otherwise faith is dead, James 2. and the disservices of professours, are but testimonies, as Salvian said, lib. 4. Mali servi & boni Domini, of the evil servant of a good Lord; qualis enim est illa confessio, quæ sic Deo credit ut pro nihilo ducat ejus imperium? Jerom. ep. 22. for what is that confession which so believeth in God, that it nothing valueth his commandments? this is the will of God, even your sanctification, 1 Thef. 4. 3. To do the will of the Father, is therefore to believe, and walk conscionably, according to the rule of Gods word.

V. 22. many will say unto me] Many shall be so much deceived in themselves, that we have need to beware of false prophets, and to look carefully to our own condition, before it be too late. See 2 Cor. 13 5.

in that day] At the day of judgement.

have we not prophesied] Verse 15. We never thought that we should have been rejected, we expected the chief places in heaven, in recompence of our service which we have done. The best gifts are nothing worth without true godlinesse, and some hypocrites and reprobates, have excellent gifts of knowledge and preaching.

in thy Name] By thy authority, or to manifest thy power: for all the abused gifts of Impostures and wicked men, they shall once hear, what have ye to do to declare my statutes, Psalm 50. 16. It is a most abominable impiety which taketh up the sacred Name of Christ, to cloak and colour it; O unspeakable and prodigious wickednesse, what will not impious mindes do? armant se ad latrocinandum per Christi Nomen, ausi ferem quodammodo sui sceleris Deum facinut, Salv. 5. if they arme themselves to rob by the Name of Christ, and after a manner make God the author of their wickednesse; whereas Christ is the interdicter and revenger of all evils, they say they do that wickednesse they commit, in Christs Name, and for his sake, and the advancement of his cause; the greater shall their damnation be.

wonderfull works] Properly, powers; now these excellent works above nature, are called powers, because therein appeareth the extraordinary power of God.

V. 23. I will profesſe] Or confess, make it known unto them, and to men and Angels.

I never knew you] Luke 13.27. Though you thought so highly of your selves, as in opinion thereof to condemn others; and though others magnified and admired your excellencies, yet I never approved of you, nor owned you for mine, Psalm 1. 6. Rom. 7. 15. 1 Cor. 8. 3. Gal. 4. 9. 2 Tim. 2. 19.

depart from me] Psal. 6. 8.

ye that work iniquity] That live in sin, notwithstanding the excellent gifts which I bestowed upon you, and the sacred profession, which you took on you.

V. 24. therefore] This is the conclusion of our Saviours sermon, upon the mount; wherein he sheweth by a similitude, the firm estate of those that practise the things he taught them in this sermon: and the failing condition of those that only heard them, left any should think they must be saved, because they had heard such an excellent sermon, and that from Christs own mouth.

whosoever heareth these sayings, &c.] Luke 6. 47.

unto a wise man] The first thing that a wise builder goeth about, is to find a good foundation to build his house on.

V. 25. founded on a rock] By rain descending, &c he meaneth troubles and persecutions, like storms and tempests, trying the constancy of Christians: others understand it by the terrible day of judgement: by founded on a rock, he understandeth those that do Gods will, being built upon Christ, who is our rock and foundation, 1 Cor. 10. 4. Ephes. 2 20.

V. 26. to a foolish man] An unwise builder, that layes no good foundation, though he may build curiously in the sight of men.

V. 27. and it fell] He that onely hears, will fall shore of salvation: for he is not founded on Christ the rock. Jam. 1. 22, Rom. 2. 13. Luke 11. 28.

V. 28. the people were astonished] Mark 1 22. Luke 4. 32. See note thereon.

V. 29. as one having authority] Not coldly as the scribes, but boldly as with infallibility of spirit, and authority from God, Tit. 2. 15, or not as scribes grounding on the traditions of men: but delivering what he spake as divine oracles. See 1 Cor. 2. 4. 1 Pet. 4. 11. or, not as a subject or minister, but as a spiritual king in his own kingdom: and therefore he said, ye have heard, but I say, &c. Chap. 5, 21, &c.

CHAP VIII.

Verse 1. When he was come down] And entred into one of the cities. Luke 5. 12.

great multitudes] Those that heard the former sermon, Chap 5. 1. &c. and others coming in to them before they came into the city, where the former miracle was wrought.

V. 2. And behold] Mark 1. 40 Luke 5 12.

worshipped him] By falling on his knees first. Mark 1. 40. and then on his face. Luke 5. 12. a sign of humility.

Lord if thou wilt] He dares not ask to be healed, but leaves it to Christ, to do as he pleaseth; when he had declared his affliction to him: note his modesty; thus is called asking. Luke 5. 12. he obtained what he desired, verse 3. See the like in Hezekiah, Isa. 38 3.

thou canst make me clean] This sheweth his faith: though his disease was incurable by men, yet he is confident that Christ can heal it.

V. 3. touched him] The law forbad to touch a leper, lest other should be infected by them, Lev. 5 3. but Christ was above the law and healed him by touching him: the lepers touching others defiles, Christs touching him cleanseth.

saying] Not out of ostentation, to shew what he could do, but out of pitty to the leper. Mark 1. 41. and to shew his beneficence and readinesse to do good.

I will] It is true as thou sayest; I confirm it by healing thee.

be thou clean] A word of the effectuall command; as Gen. 1. 3. Let there be light.

immediatly his leprosie was cleansed] An argument of Christs divine power, that could heal him suddenly by his word. See Luke 5. 12, &c. There is nothing between the work and command of God; quia in præcepto est opus, saith Ambros, in Luc l. 5. his will is his word, and his word, his work: voluntas ejus mensura rerum est, semo ejus finis est operis. Ambrof. Hexam. l 3. c. 2. init. His will is the measure of things, his word is the end, or finishing of the work Here we see that believers, in afflictions, non patiuntur ad panam, sed jubentur ad coronas, P. Chryſol. s. ſerm. 15. do not so much suffer to be punished, as undergo to reward, and to be crowned.

V. 4 See

V. 4. see thou tell it to no man] Make no thay to tell it or talk of it to any, but hie thee to the Priest as Luke 10. 4. or, do not publish abroad, what I have done for thee. Chapter 9. 30. He might seem by his miracle to be ambitious of fame; but thus he prevents that opinion: and because, in his state of humiliation, he would not be manifested before the due time. See mark 1.44. &c.

that Moses commanded] Levit. 14. 4.

for a testimony unto them] That they may beleeve, chap. 10. 18. 24. 14. Mark 6. 11. or for a testimony against them; to render them inexcusable if they beleeve not: (as Mark 13. 9. Gal. 5. 3. Jam. 5. 3.) and if they should calumniate him as an enemy to the law. See Mark 1. 44, 45.

V. 5. And when Jesus] Luke 7. 1.

there came unto him] Not in his own person, but by the elders of the Jews, Luke 7. 3 (as John spake to Christ by his Disciples, chap. 11. 3.) So he is said to beseech him; that is, by those he sent to beseech him: it seemeth, he first sent, and afterward came unto him himself.

a Centurion] A commander of a band of souldiers, consisting of an hundred men, or more.

V. 6. lieth] βέβληται is cast down, verse 14. as sick men use on their beds; being so feeble and weak that they can neither go nor stand: specially, they that are taken of the palsy, which is a nuggiaous and dissolution of the nerves, leaving the disaffected no strength to move themselves.

at home] This heathen mans care of his servant, keeping him in his own house, and looking out for cure for him, is an example for us, to tender our sick servants.

V. 7. I will come] Our Saviour refused to go to the rulers house, being twice entreated by the ruler himself. John 4. 47. 49 but here he offereth to go, being but sent unto by the Centurion; possibly the other thought Christ could not heal except he came to him, but this man was confident he could.

V. 8. I am not worthy] The best men have lowest thoughts of themselves.

speak the word onely] See on verse 7. and on verse 3.

V. 9. For I am a man under authority] If I being a man under the command of others, yet having others under my command, can thus do; much more canst thou who hast absolute command; thus men should take occasion by their own command over others, and their ready subjection to them, to consider Gods soverign authority over themselves, and be ready to obey him in all things.

go, and he goeth] Not questioning why and wherefore, but without delay doing that which is enjoyned; so will this sickneſſe be gone at thy command.

he marvelled] As man, and shewed some outward signe of admiration to others: as God, he knew the faith of the Centurion, for he gave it; as man he knew not all, and so he marvelled at a faith so rare and commendable.

no not in Israel] That is among the Jewish nation who had been continually instructed in the Scriptures testifying of Christ: Hence it appeareth, that the Centurion was an heathen man, though probably a proselyte. Luke 7. 5.

V. 11. many shall come] Our Saviour takes occasion from the commendation of the Centurions faith, to speak of the calling of the Gentiles, and rejection of the Jews.

from the east and west] From all parts, as Isai. 12. 12. & 43. 5. an allusion made to Jacob, Gen. 28, 14.

shall sit down] A metaphor taken from banquets or feasts, where men of different conditions sit down together, Isai. 25. 6. Matth. 22. 2. Luke 22. 30.

with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob] The Jews scorn to eat with strangers now, but the time shall come when strangers shall enjoy eternal happinesse with their holy ancestours, and they themselves shall be excluded.

V. 12. children of the kingdom] As Chap 9. 15. who were born of those parents to whom the kingdom was promised: and by virtue of the covenant. Rom 9. 4. had still belonged to them, had they not forfeited it by their unbelief and wickednesse.

into utter darkneſſe] The darkneſſe of hell. 2 Pet. 2. 4. Jude verse 6. compared to prisons, which were often times out of the city. Acts 12. 10. meaning, they should be in a state most remote from heavenly joy and blessednesse. This utter darkneſſe which shal be to all that are shut out of heaven, the kingdom of light they shall have no comfort in it; as that darkneſſe hath, in which men at least may rest, or flee from dangers pursuing them; which in utter darkneſſe cannot be, there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth; that is, extreme horrour of soul, grefe and anguish of the damned, in regard of the good which they have wilfully deprived themselves of, and the tortures and bitter sorrows into which they have cast themselves; out of which they have no hope of comming.

weeping] Isa 65. 14. For their sorrow and pain.

gnashing of teeth] A sign of envy at the felicity of Gods people, Psalm 112, 10.

V. 13. go thy way] Take no further care, thy requeſt is granted. So, 2 Sam 14. 8 Mark 5. 34. & 7. 29. & 10. 52. Luke 7. 50. & 8. 48. John 4 50. & 8. 11.

as thou hast believed, so be it done,] &c. Matth. 9. 29. he sheweth in these few words, the admirable power and efficacy of faith, which bringeth it to passe, that these things which according to Gods word, we beleeve, we receive accordingly; this Centurian beleeved that Christ, though bodily absent, could yet by his divine power, every where present, cure his sicke, and according to that faith, which Christ had given him, he also did restore his servant: he only can repaire who made us, see how readily Christ powreth out his mercy, where he giveth a capacity to receive it: he will bear the power of faith, Jam 5. 16. the reason why we so seldom obtain, is because few have faith.

in the self same hour] John 4. 53.

V. 14. And when Jesus] Mark 1. 29. Luke 4. 38. went directly from the synagogue to Peters house, for the Apostle had not left all in their following Christ, so as to retain no interest, they were ready to have left all for Christ, if his honour and truth required it: untill then there was no cause why they should neglect father, mother, family, &c, as far as the service of Christ permitted, they held their proprieties, and supplyed the necessities of theirs. See John 21. 2, &c.

into Peters house] Which was in Bethsaida. John 1. 44. unleſſe he were born there, and lived at Capernaum: or removed his dwelling after he was called to be an Apostle, that he might the better attend on Christ: or else that at Bethsaida was his own house, and this at Capernaum his mother in laws house, which he used to repair to, when he came thither, which is most probable: for the house here specified, appeareth to have been at Capernaum, verse 5. Mark 1. 21. 29. That was still Peters house, though he truely profeſſed, that he had left all: that is, the present use, but not the proprietery.

of his fever] Gr. Of a burning fever, Gr. πυρέσσουσαν, which is of πυρὸς fire, and the Latine word febris, of which our English maketh fever, seemeth to come a feaver, or feaver, which Luke 4. 38. it is called a great fever, the more dangerous for any person in years: all this setteth of the divine power of Christ, to heal all diseases, however dangerous, or desperate, to mans reason.

V. 15. He touched her hand] After he was entreated to heal her, Luke 4. 38. and had rebuked the fever, as one that had authority over it. Luke 4. 39. non stat infirmitas ubi auctor salutis assistit, Chryſol. ſerm. 18. infirmity standeth not, where the author of health assisteth.

and ministred unto them] To shew her thankfulneſſe, and that she was perfectly cured. See John 5. 8, 9. first, she arose, which being sore sick she could not: next, she prepared meat for them; that is a work of the healthy.

V. 16. when the even was come] Mark 1. 32. Luke 4. 40.

possessed of devils] This mischief of possession, it seemeth, was then very common among the malitious Jews: no wonder, where strife, envy, and malice are, that wisdom is devilish, James 3. 14, 15. where love is, there God is, for God is love, 1 John 4. 8. where malice is, the devil easily taketh possession of his own: if Christ own his disciples by their mutual love, John 13. 25. Satan must needs know the malitious and revengfull for his own.

with his word] Not as the blasphemous Jews said, through Beelzebub Chap. 12. but by his own word and power, as being Lord of all the creatures. See Psal. 106. 9. therefore the devil neither would nor durst stay, when he said Go, verse 9.

all that were sick] Of all sorts, or all that came to him to be healed.

V. 17. That it might be fulfilled] It was in a sort fulfilled, by his having compassion on us, manifesting a kinde of participation with us, in all our bodily infirmities, Heb. 4. 15. or by taking away bodily diseases from men, which was a type of healing their soules but it was principally fulfilled, by bearing all the punishment due to our sins: so were we healed by his stripes. Isaiah 53. 4. 1 Pet 2. 24.

V. 18. great multitudes about him] So many, that he could not conveniently converse with them, or attend that which was necellary for himself or his followers, Mark 3. 9 10. 20. which seemeth to have occasioned the commandment following.

to the other side] For Capernaum was situate on the lake of Tiberias.

V. 19 a certain Scribe] See on Luke 20. 1 Syr. חד סָפְרָא, sophrs chad, one Lawyer, or a certain Scribe, it seemeth they were one and the same. See 1 Ch. 13. 13, 5. 1 Cor. 1. 20. & Tit. 3. 13.

whithersoever thou goest] I will leave all to follow thee.

V. 20. foxes have holes] He doth not say, Kings have palaces, but I have none; or rich men have houses and lands, to entertain their followers, but I have none: but, the foxes and birds have, &c. as if he said, thou are deceived, who thinkest of following me for temporal preferment, who possesse nothing secular, no not so much as an house.

nests] Places of abode, or shelter, in trees, or other convenient receptacles, as Psal. 84. 3 & 104. 17.

the Son of man] That live in mean repute, and a contemptible estate among men, hoc nomen impositit, quo se familiarius appellari voluit, &c. Auguſtine Honorato ep. 120. he gave himself this name, by which he would be more familiarly called.

hath not where to reſt his head] Either he lived in an hired house, or lodged with his disciples. He doth not forbid him to follow him, but secretly pointeth at his carnal intention in suc his tending of service: as P. Chryſologus saith, ſerm. 19. non repulit volentem sed fingentem prodidit, he repelled not one willing to follow him, but discovered a dissembler, V. 21. said unto him] After that Christ had called him, Luke 9. 59.

suffer me first] Before I follow thee, and leave my family and domestick affairs, to performe this work of piety to my deceased father.

to go and bury my father] Let me stay till my father be dead, that I may performe the last office to him, and then I will wholly attend on thee.

V. 22. Follow me] Christ called him to preach the Gospel, Luke 9. 60. in which case, parents and all were to be left, Chap. 4. 20. 22. Christ will have his servants prefer his commands, before all the most necessary businesses of this present world; he will not stay until the affairs thereof will give them leisure to serve him, who ought first to be served, See Matth. 6. 33.

let the dead bury their dead] Let them that are dead in sin, bury them that are dead for sin, 1 Tim. 5. 6 it seemeth to be an allusion to the rites of priests and Nazarites, who were forbidden to be present, at the funeral exequies of the dead, Lev. 10. 6. Num. 6. 9 non pietatis obsequium negat, &c. Chrysol. 5. f. he denied not the obsequie of piety, but preferreth the service of God before humane affections.

V. 23. when he was entred] Though he gave commandment to go over, verse 28. yet the Disciples took not shipping, till he was gone aboard himself.

V. 24. and behold] Mark 4. 37. Luke 8. 23. and here verse 2.

the ship was covered with waves] She shipped much water in those overgrown seas, in so much that she was ready to founder, and sink down.

he was asleep] To shew the truth of the humane nature, and the weakneſſe of faith in his disciples.

Vs 25. we perish] Thus they cryed out in their fear and affrightment, and by way of expostulation, as Mark 4. 38. Carest thou not that we perish? and therefore he justly checks them, verse 26

V. 26. O ye of little faith] As Matth. 6 30.

rebuked the winds] To shew his authority over them; lest they might think the suddain allay of the winds, was either naturall or accidental: he commandeth them to cease, that they might know it was by his extraordinary power: and to shew himself the Lord of sea and windes, he speaketh so in his Disciples hearing, to assure them that all the creatures are subject to his command.

V. 27. the men] Which sailed in the ship, or in the other vessels in company, Mark 4 36, Luke 8. 23,

V. 28. When he was come] Mark 5. 1. Luke 8. 26 of the Gergesens] Some think them to be a remnant of the Gergashites mentioned Gen. 10. 16 they are called Gaderenes by the other Evangelists, either because the city had two names: or else both these cities stood neer together on the lake of Tiberias, and the countrey was called sometimes by the name of the one, and sometime of the other. See on Luke 8. 26 See Joseph. de bel. Jud. l. 2. c. 20.

there met him] So great was Christs power over them that they were enforced to come before him, who else would willingly have run from him.

two possessed with devils] Mark 5. 2. Luke 8. 26. mention but one. See on Luke 8. 27. Augustine. to. 4. de consens. Evangelist. l. 2. c. 24. resolves that the one mentioned was, persona aliquius clarioris & famosioris, quem regio illa maxime dolebat, &c. a more eminent and more noted person, whom that countrey specially bewailed.

out of the tombes] Or, from among the tombs: they were made out of the cities, and so, that so men might hide themselves therein, See on Luke 8. 27. Theſe were solitary places, whither the devils carried the possessed from the society of men, to make them in their suddain appearing, formidable to the passengers occasioned to go by them.

exceeding fierce] The devil fils them whom he possesseth with cruelty.

V. 29. they cryed out] Before Christ said any thing to them they felt his divine power conventing them before him, of whom they were much afraid.

what have we to do with thee?] Why comest thou here to us? See 2 Sam. 16. 10. 2 Chron. 35. 21. John 2. 4.

Jesus thou Son of God] This confession of the devils, is either out of fear, or malice, to make the world suspect that to be false, because Satan spake it. It is a true saying, Lyers so bring it to passe, ut nec vera dicentibus credatur. Jerom. ep. Julian l. 1. ep. 2. that none believe them when they speak truth.

to torment us before the time] As if he had said, This is our time to torment others: why dost thou come to torment us before the day of judgement? either they feared that Christ would now send them to Hell to abide there; or it was a torment, in their accompt, to be cast out of those they possessed, as Luke 8 28. 29. the word Exorcizo here used, signifieth to examine by torment, as racking, torturing, &c. importing a very vehement and painfull tormenting.

V. 30. a good way off] On a hill, as Mark and Luke testifie a herd of many swine] Some think these people were of those whom the king of Assyria had placed in Israel long before; others that they were a kinde of Greeks, having a mixt religion, and so kept swine: others, that there was a colony of Romans in those parts. See Isa. Cantabon. exercit. 13. 34. and on Luke 8. 32.

V. 31. the devils besought him] They could not go into swine without his leave, much lesse into men.

suffer us to go, &c.) When they cannot hurt men, they desire to hurt their goods, See Job 1. 10, 11. the reason why they desired to destroy the swine, was, first, that they might be doing some mischief, though they could not do all they would: next that they might have occasion of tempting the worldly Gadarenes to blaspheme Christ, for the losse of their swine: and lastly, that they might affect the Gadarenes carnal hearts with dislike of the Gospel, which brought them such losse, as it here fell out.

V. 32. he said unto them, Go] Christ granted the devils petition, who sometimes, and in some things, denieth ours; to teach us to submit our wills wholly to his, who sometimes granteth in justice, and sometimes denieth in mercy.

when they were come out] Out of the possessed men.

the whole herd of swine ran] About two thousand swine, Mark 5. 13.

ran violently down] Being carried by the power of the spirits possessing them.

into the sea] Into the lake of Genezareth.

and perished in the waters] Christ thus justly punished them who were the owners of these beasts knowing their hearts, who preferred them before their own salvation by Christ; as many now do their pleasures, which God therefore both in justice and mercy taketh from them.

V. 33. they that kept them, fled] For fear, being partly terrified with the sight, partly to tell the news in the city, and possibly to excuse themselves to their masters, lest they should think their servants negligence was the cause of that their losse: yet Gods providence so wrought therein, that Satan, who would ever destroy and hinder the propagation of the truth of Christ, was foiled by his own endeavour, and the power and goodnesse of Christ, made more publique and manifest in this miracle.

V. 34. they besought him] They offer no violence unto him: they knew they could not that way prevail against him, by overpowring him, who could command the very powers of Hell.

depart out of their coasts] Lest they should suffer any further losse by his being there: thus they preferred their swine before Christ, as Esau, a portion of meat before his birthright. Genes. 25. 34. It had been a singular blessing that Christ vouchsafed to visit them, had they made a right use thereof for their salvation, but marke how impious mindes abuse and embitter all Gods favours: Secondly, observe what wretched petitions the blinded worldly men sometimes prefer to God; how many desire that, which if obtained, would prove a severe curse unto them?

CHAP IX.

Verse 1. Into a ship] The ship which had newly brought him thither, chap. 8. 23.

into his own city] Capernaum; for as Chrysost. hom. 30. in Matth. and Theophylact say, Bethlehem brought him forth, Nazareth brought him up, and Capernaum was his dwelling place, Matthew 4. 3. thither he went to abide for a time, after he had been endangered at Nazereth. Luke 4. 29. It is called his city, because he was very often there; after he had gone thorow all Galilee preaching. In the first year of his ministery, he resided in Capernaum; whence it is called of the Disciples his city.

V. 2. And behold] Mark 2. 1. &c. Luke 5. 17, but both anticipate and alter the order thereof: all agree in the substance. 1. The faith of those that brought the sick man. 2. Christ his answer. 3. The Pharisees calumny. 4. Christ his defence. 5. The miracle and effect thereof.

a man sick of the palsie] Which is a disease well known of many; so laxating and dissolving the sinews, that besides the pain, it rendreth one unable to help or move himself; and it is rarely cured by men.

seeing their faith] Theirs that took such pains to carry him to Christ, as his also that would so be brought: he saw their faith, as man, by the fruits of it; in that they brought a man so incurable, let him down through the roof of the house, and laid him before him; saying nothing, as not doubting but that he would cure him if he saw him in that misery. Mark 2. 4. Luke 5. 9. As God, he knew it of his own omnisicience, without these forementioned effects: as he knew the thoughts of the scribes. Mark 2. 8. Luke 5. 22.

son, be of good cheer] Be comforted, and doubt not of the recovery of of thy health, now thy sins are forgiven thee, which were the cause of thy sickneſſe.

thy sinnes are forgiven thee] Which he best knew, who forgave them, as God, and interceded for him as the onely Mediatour between God and man: 1 Tim. 2. 5. hence it appeareth, that sinne is the cause of all diseases and miseries. Secondly, that Christ is that onely Physician, who can cure body and soul. Lastly, that the condition of believers is blessed, in that they obtain more than they could ask or think; as this paralytical man here did, whom he therefore called sonne; because saith made him a Sonne of God. John 1. 12. So good is our God, that saith obtaineth, before it can perceive it hath obtained: so he heareth us before we call. Isaiah 65. 24.

V. 3. Certain of the scribes] Luke mentioneth the Pharisees also; they commonly joyned (as wicked men use to do) to oppose Christ. However, they did dissent among themselves in respect of contrary opinions, or other private interests.

said within themselves] Εἶπον ἐν ἑαυτοῖς. Ver. בלבותם benaphshethaun in their soules: that is, they thought within themselves; they did not onely murmur, but secretly thought impiously, expecting the opportunity of censuring, when they were among other company. See on Mark 2. 6. Psal. 14. 1.

this man blasphemeth] Βλασφημεῖ, is as it were βλάπτων τὴν δόξαν, to hurt anothers fame or reputation: Suidas interpreteth βλασφημῶ· ὅ ἐστι Θεὸν ἐξυβρίζων, one who injureth God with contumelious words, which is either when men detract from God his honour due; or attribute any evil to him. So they thought Christ derogated from Gods prerogative to forgive sinnes, and arrogated it to himself: it is indeed in God alone to forgive sinnes, Isaiah 43. 25. this sheweth therefore that Christ is God; which they would not understand in all his miracles which they saw.

V. 4. knowing their thoughts] See on verse 2. Thus also he shewed himself to be God, by shewing what they thought: they dissembled their calumny in their hearts, he saw it lurking there.

Wherefore think ye evil] Of me, as a blasphemer: he doth not doubtfully object, as one that suspected their thoughts by some whispering, countenance, or outward gestures; but openly chargeth, and reproveth them for the sin of their heart which he saw, which none but God could do.

V. 5. Whether is it easier to say] Ye think it harder to heal the palsie, than to forgive sinnes: ye shal know then, that I have power to forgive sinnes, by my healing this man with my word: it is indeed more to remit sin, than to heal a sick man, but not so easie to convince another, by a thing not seen, as by a work discernable by the eye.

V. 6. The Son of man] See on Chap. 8. 20.

power] Gr. Authority. ἐξουσίαν, which signifieth either power or authority, so Matth. 7. 29. John 17. 2. or jurisdiction, Luke 23. 7. right Mark 3. 15. dignity, John 1 12.

on earth] Though he abide here on earth, and live here as man, converſant with men, and in a state of humiliation.

take up thy bed] That all may know that thou art perfectly healed. See on Chap. 8. 25.

V. 7. and he arose] Suddenly and perfectly cured, taking up his bed, who before, could not move himself. Luke addeth, glorifying God, as verse 8. Christ having proved by this admirable work, that he, as God, had power to remit sin, as well as to take away the most desperate effects thereof: all diseases, (had the spectatours been constant to their own principles, that none can forgive sinne but God onely) they might hence come have to beleeve in him the Messias and Redeemer, but envy and malice had blinded them so, that they could be constant in nothing but sinne and error.

V 8. they marvelled] To amazement and fear, as Luke expresseth it.

glorified God] That is, they divulged the power and goodnesse of God; shewed in that miracle, which is the principal end of miracles; that in consideration thereof, we should beleeve Jesus Christ to be the Son of God manifested in the flesh: which though all did not hear, who marvelled and feared, yet doubtlesse some did; who by the operation of the holy Ghost in them, truely apprehended him to be their Saviour and Redeemer.

unto men] That is unto a man: for such Christ appeared unto them, though the power working these things, was confessed to be divine.

V. 9. And as Jesus passed] Mark 2. 14, Luke 5. 27.

named Matthew] He is called Levi in the other Evangelists, he had two names.

sitting at the receit of custome] At the custom-house: it seemeth to have been by the sea side; Mark 2. 13. It may be he was to receive the customes due from merchants and passengers; Then due to, and imposed by the state of Rome.

and followed him] He adviseth not with flesh and blood, saying, how shall I live, whither shall I go; how shall I bear the malice of the Pharisees, who hate Christ and all his followers, but goes after him instantly. Gal. 1. 16. Luke saith, he left all: that is, his books, and businesses of the customes and that course of life; wholly addicting himself to the service of Christ: we may not conceive that he deserted or gave away his estate, personal or real; for he afterward entertained Christ at his house: verse 10. but so used them, as his calling to Christ, and following him; would permit: So Peter, Andrew, James and John followed Christ: they left their ships and nets, and fishing, yet Peter still retained his house, Chap. 8 14.

V. 10. in the house] In Matthews house, who made a feast for him. Luke 5. 29.

many Publicanes and sinners] Qui vectigalia redimebant, Publicani appellati, &c. Volaterran. de Magistr. & Sacerd. Roman. they that were here together, seem to have been the friends and acquaintance of Matthew, whom he therefore invited, that they also might hear, and be won to Christ and salvation: some here understand two sorts of men, by Publicanes Matthews fellow-officers: and by sinners, those that were of notorious; bad and loose lives, or such as the Jews had cast out of their sinagogues, as, John 9. 22. 34. infamous persons among them. (Of Publicanes see on Luke 3. 12.) Others think them to be all one, and the Publicanes were called sinners, because they were imployed by the Romanes to gather their tributes, and for the most part did it with much rigour and oppression of Gods people.

V. 11. When the Pharisees saw it] It is not likely, that the Pharisees would go into the house of a Publican to see it; but either they heard Matthew invite him, and saw them going along to the house, or else they knew it by report from others.

said unto his disciples] They still catch up any occasion to calumniate Christ. See on Luke 19. 7. they durst not ask Christ, because they knew they were not able to deal with him, but say this to his disciples, to alienate their affections from their Master; seeing that by their tradition, they were not to eat or commerce with Publicans or infamous persons.

V. 12. When Jesus heard that] From his disciples, or overheard the Pharisees speaking to them.

They that be whole, need not a physician] I must converse with these, because they are spiritually sick, and I am the physician of souls; they are sinners, I am their saviour; others think they have not so much need of me: bonus medicus qui infirmitates nostras accepit. Ambros. l. 10. ep. 82. he is the good physician, who took on himself our infirmities.

V. 13. go ye and learn, &c.] You that glory in your knowledge, and will be the onely teachers of all others, are yet ignorant of the main; therefore go learn, for shame.

I will have mercy] Hos. 6. 6. Chap. 12. 7. That mercy is better than sacrifice, See Hebr. 13. 16. God by the Prophet upbraideth them with their hypocrisie, who pretended to much sanctity in their sacrifices and offerings, when indeed, they had within them, neither love to God, nor charity to their neighbour: the prophet put חסד Chesed, benignity, or beneficence: the Greek ἔλεος mercy. Hesea. 6. 6. Chapter 12. 7. for beneficence is a sure effect of mercy.

and not sacrifice] More, or rather than sacrifice, as it is expounded. Hos 9. See the like manner of speaking, Gen. 32. 28. Prov. 8 10. Luke 14 12. 1 Cor. 1. 17. Chap. 6. 19

I am not come to call the righteous] That is, illos justos, qui in sanctitate generis, & literâ legis gloriantur. Paulinus Augustino. ep. those righteous, who glory in the sanctity of their ancestours, and the letter of the law. Such as you Pharisees, who think your selves righteous, and all others, contemptible sinners: I come to convert such as have not yet repented; and how shall I do that, if I converse not with them: though they that are converted are infirme, yet have they not so much need of my presence, as those who are yet in impenitency, and so desperately sick in soul.

sinners to repentance] 1 Tim. 1. 15.

V. 14. The disciples of John] Matthew names these onely, because these were the speakers. Luke names the Pharisees onley, because they set them on work, that they might disgrace Christ, by that authority which John had with the people; Mark nameth both, because both had hands in it.

why do we and the Pharisees] Mark 2. 18. Luke 5. 33. They propose themselves as examples: and the sense is, why do not you fast, as well as we? as reprehending his neglect therein; we have our set fasts, why joyn you not with us therein, See Zach. 7. 5. besides, the Pharisees enjoyned their disciples weekly fasts, Luke 18.

but thy disciples fast not] Either thy way, or ours taught us by John is not right: but we must know that John and Christ had divers schools and disciples, but not contrary: for John was to prepare the way of Christ, and that Johns discipline was much more strict and austere, than Christs school could conveniently bear: therefore the Pharisees liked Johns austerity better than Christs gracious affability, and commerce with sinners: so that they could have found in their hearts to have received John as their Messias. John 1. Luke 3. therefore in this question about fasting, the Pharisees, and Johns disciples joyn.

V. 15. Can the children of the bride-chamber] υἱοὶ νυμφῶνος, or as Nazianzen orat. 26. readeth υἱοὶ νυμφεῶνος, they cannot, that (saith he) is called impossible, which is not reasonable, or convenient, which the interrogation implies: can the, &c. that is, do you think it reasonable, or fit? children of the bride-chamber, after the Hebrew manner, are those called, which are most conversant and familiar with the bridegroom. See on Luke 20. 36. the whole sense is; John Baptist, your master, taught you that I am the bridegroom, Joh 3. 29. that this time of my living here on earth, is the time of my espousals to my Church, Ephes. 5. 25. 27. &c. my disciples are children of the bride-chamber: how can they mourn, untill these feasting dayes be over? that is, the incomparable joy which now have, in gathering a pure virgin Church unto me, and eternall salvation, by preaching of the gospel.

mourn as long] Can they be in heavinesse while I, their Saviour am with them? is it reasonable that they should, in the very time of great joy, which should be to all people. Luke 2. 10. in the day of salvation 2 Cor. 6. 2. the time of rejoycing foretold by the prophet, Isaiah 35. 1, 2. Jer. 31. 13. Joel 2. 23. Zach. 2. 10. Zach 9. 9 when the bridegroom shall be taken from them] When I shall be taken from them into heaven,

V. 16. a piece of new cloth] Or raw or unwrought cloth: ῥάκος ἀγνάφου panniculi impoliti. Budæus. Some interpret thus, as new cloth is not fit to be put upon the old, nor new wine into old cask: so it is not fit to teach this doctrine of the gospel newly manifested to you and the Pharisees, who stand too much upon old traditions: others better thus, as the old garment cannot long bear a new piece, nor the old vessels new wine, because of their weakness: so my disciples cannot yet bear this austere discipline, till I am ascended up into heaven, and send down the gifts of my spirit in a more plentiful measure upon them.

V. 17. new wine into old bottles] See on verse 16. He useth this manner of similitude, that he might shew that he separated Evangelii novitatem à legis vetustate——sicut fructus separatur à semine, the newnesse of the gospel from the oldnesse of the law, ——as the fruit is separated from the seed. Tertul. l. 4. c. 11. adverf. Marcion, so indeed is the gospel to the law; diverfum fed non contrarium, divers, not contrary: the gospel was in the law, as the corn in the blade; understood, but not yet appearing, until maturity in the fulnesse of time; the harvest of which Christ spake, John 4. 35.

V. 18. While he spake these things] While the Pharisees endeavour to calumniate Christs, God giveth him a double occasion to convince them, and manifest his divine power.

a certain ruler] Mark 5. 22. Luke 8. 41. Jairus, whom they call ἀρχισυναγωγὸς a ruler of a synagogue. See on Luke 13. 14.

worshipped him] By falling down at his feet, Mark 5.

lay thy hand upon her] His faith was short of the Centurions, though he were ruler of a synagogue: the Centurion desired Christs word onely, See Chap 8.8.

V. 19. Jesus arose and followed him] Graciously complying with his weaknesse, who could as well have raised her from the dead, by his word onely, absent as present.

V. 20. with an issue of blood twelve years] She had been a long time sick, and as it appeareth by the other Evangelists, had tryed many Physicians, and was now in a wretched condition, having no more means to consult others: yet Christ heals her.

came behind him] Ashamed to confesse her disease: we are ashamed of the effects, not of the cause: of misery, but not of sinne.

touched the hemme] This was an admirable effect of faith, and modesty pium latrocinium, an holy theft. Cyrill. ferm. 33. not wronging the owner, but relieving the taker; Christ was not hereby injured, but the helplesse woman cured.

V. 21. I shall be whole] The physicians could not cure me, onely a touch of the garment of Jesus can do it.

V. 22. turned him about] That he might manifest this work of faith unto the people, that God might be glorified: and that not onely Jairus weak faith might be strengthned, and he the more confidently look for the raising up of his daughter: but that we allo may be assured that he (who now sitting at the right hand of God) hath not lesse power or mercy, than when he was here in the form of a servant) will also heal and help us, if we come unto him in faith: non Christus infirmantibus, sed fides deest; Chrysol. s. 5. Christ is never wanting to infirme, if faith be not.

be of good comfort] See on verse 2.

thy faith hath made thee whole] See on Chap. 8. 13. Christ, by faith apprehended, cured her: so this most true, we are saved by faith in Christ Jesus, not by any merit of our faith, which is the free gift of God, (Ephes. 2. 8.) as is also justification by faith, and salvation by Christ, yet Christ would not here say, I have cured thee, but thy faith hath made thee whole, that he might confirm the woman in that faith, and teach all others the onely way to obtain health and salvation, that is, by faith in Christ, Mark 5. 34. addeth, go in peace, and be whole of thy plague. See Luk 7. 47. 48.

from that hour] She was presently cured, and never troubled with that sickneſſe more.

V. 23 saw the minstrels] It was an usuall thing among Jews and Gentiles to have so mal mourners, and also musicians in their funerals. Jer. 9 17. & 48. 36. So said Jeroin ad Helioid. l. 2. ep. 14. Hesiodus natales hominum plangens, guadet in funere: Hesiod bewailing the nativities of men, rejoyceth in their funeral.

V. 24. not dead, but sleepeth] She is not so dead but that she shall immediately be raised to life again. See on Luke 8. 52.

V. 25. when the people were put forth] He put them forth because they derided him, verse 24. and therefore were unworthy to see the miracle done: or because he would not yet manifest himself by such works.

took her by the hand] As we use to wake them that are asleep, by shaking them by the hand, and calling aloud to them.

and the maid arose] As one out of sleep: so death it self yeildeth to Christs divine power, who is the reſurrection and the life, John 11. 25. It was he that said, O death, I will be thy death, or thy plagues, &c. Hosea 13. 14. in his death thou diest, but we live: we give thee thanks, O Christ our Saviour, who are thy creatures, quod tam potentem adversarium nostrum, dum occiderit, occidisti: Jerom 5. s. ep. 24. that dying, thou hast overcome this our so powerful enemy; though he raiſe us not up now, yet shall he at the last day: thus faith obtaineth, while flesh and blood laugheth at the promises of Christ, and is put out from his bleſſed presence.

V. 26. the same thereof] Or, this fame, verse 31. the fame or report of this his raising Jairus dead childe was noised about through all Galilee, every one striveth to tell it for a marvelous and new thing, though he cha ged them not to divulge it. Mark 5. 43. glory, like the shadow, follows those that flie from it.

V. 27. when Jesus departed thence] Christ unceſſantly doth goods and every place affordeth him oppertunity of manifeſting his divine power.

two blinde men] The circumstances shew that this was not the story recorded, Mark 10. 46. Luke 18 35. but another healing the blinde, which he did sundry times.

followed him crying] He answered them not, untill he came into the house, verse 28. that that little delay might the more kindle their desire of obtaining, and leave a deeper impression in their mindes of the favour received: we too soon forget that which we quickly obtain.

thou son of David] Chap. 15. 22. & Chap. 20. 30 31. meaning the Messias of the posterity of David under which title they usually spake of their expected Messias. See Chap. 1. 1. for now Christs frequent and admirable miracles, began to work in men an opinion that he was the Messias, Chap. 12. 23. John. 7. 31. Matth. 20 30, 31.

V. 28. able to do this] To open your eyes; for so Christ understood their petition presented unto him for mercy, verse 27. though they named not this particular favour.

V. 29. then touched he their eyes] He could have restored them sight onely by his word: but thus he pleased sometimes to do, that they might understand that he was tyed to no means or manner, who ruled all the courses of nature, and could dispense with them as he pleased.

according to your faith] See on Chap. 8 13.

V. 30. their eyes were opened] That is, they could see: for the Jews called blinde eyes, shut. John 9. 26. 30. thus was that fulfilled which was spoken, Psalm. 146. 8. Isai. 35. 5.

he straightly charged them] He forbad them with an earnest commination, So the word ἐνεβριμήθη here used, signifieth, as it were, graviter iis fuit inter-inatus, or, admbitis minis interdixit, He forbad them with threatnings, if they made the work done on them known, as if it were said, cum fremitu interminatus est.

see that no man know it] See verse 25. Either Christ would not have his miracle published yet, or not to the inhabitants of those parts: for all things are not to be published at all times, nor to all persons. See Chap 8. 4.

V. 31. But they] Contrary to his charge they published it all abroad, they could not conceale so great and admirable a mercy of God received.

V. 32. as they went out] Luke 11 14 See on verse 18.27.

a dumb man possessed of a devil] Either he was natively dumb, or made dumb by the devil possessing him: that so he might deprive him of the use of his tongue, which is mans glory, and wherewith he honours God: the latter is most probable; because Christ is not said to loose his tongue, but onely to cast out the devil, and then he spake, verse 33.

V. 33. it was never so seen in Israel] None of the former prophets ever did the like things.

V. 34. But the Pharisees said] These learned men blaspheme Christ, when the ignorant people had more holy speeches, and more reverend opinion of him: so easily doth malice embitter and overthrow all excellencies.

he casteth out devils] Chap. 12 24 Mark. 3 22. Luke 11. 15. It was a work so evident, that they could not deny it; yet they calumniate the means and manner.

the prince of the devils] There seemeth to be an order among devils (the authours of all disorder) they rob God of his glory, and accuse Christ under the notion of a Magitian, as if he had entred into covenant with the prince of the devils, and so gotten power to cast out inferiour devils.

V. 35. And

V. 35. And Jesus went about] Mark 6. 6. Luke 13. 22. See on chap. 4. 23.

in their synagogues] They had synagogues in villages, as well as in cities: so christians had churches. Concerning the word Synague, see on Luke 7. 5.

among the people] He was not like those covetous Physicians, careful onely of rich patients, but negligent of the poor; he healed all.

V. 36. But when he saw the multitudes] Mark 6. 34.

moved with compassion] On their souls; because they wanted instruction. The Scribes and Doctors of the Law, and the Priests should have taught the people; but either they neglected to instruct them, or teaching, with their false glosse, infected them; serving their own ambition, gain, and vain-glory. they little minded their charge, wherein God had made them watchmen over his Israel: therefore Christ pitried their sad condition, who wanted better teaching.

fainted] Or were tired and laid down.

as sheep having no shepherd] See Numb. 27. 17. Scattered abroad not knowing where to get food, and exposed to many seducements, as people without a pastour. See 1 King. 22. 17. they had teachers, but none that tendred their good.

V. 37. the harvest truly is plenteous] Luke 10. 2. It pittied him to see so many Galileans, like corn, ready to be gathered to God, by faith and repentance, and such want of harvesters, that is, Ministers, to bring them in, John 4. 35. The peoples minds were stirred up to expectation of better teaching by Jesus preaching and miracles: this seems to be the occasion of sending the Apostles abroad, chap. 10. 5.

V. 38. that he will send forth labourers] Word for word, ἐκβάλῃ, is cast forth, or as the Syriac interpreter hath it thrust forth labourers; for we are very slow in so holy and important a work.

CHAP. X.

Verse 1. And when he had] Mark 3. 14. Luke 9. 1. He called them unto him now in private, as Mark 3. 13. as to assigne them their mission and commission of going out to preach that which he had taught them: so to further to instruct them, what he would have them to do, and how to carry themselves therein; that as he united the scattered people, so he might also relieve, and lead them by these, as faithful Pastours of their souls.

called unto him] Not to be his attendants and hearers now, for that had he done before, Luke 6. 13. but having kept them with him for some time, to fit them for their publick ministry, and seeing many of the people willing to be taught, he now sends them forth among the Jews, to instruct them, Luke 9. 1, 2. Christ had many Disciples; the chief whereof were the twelve Apostles, whom he would first send out as spiritual Harvesters.

he gave them power] And authority. Luke 9. 1.

against] Or over; No King could give his Ambassadours power over devils, neither could any of the Prophets give this power to his schollers; this onely the Lord of all the creatures could do.

all manner of sicknesses] See on Matth. 4. 23: That such miracles wrought by them, might, as confirme them in the truth of that they preached, and cause them to avow the same with all boldnesse and confidence; so also to assure the hearers, that it was indeed the, infallibly, truth, to which God vouchsafed to give testimony by these signes, exceeding all power and art of creatures, and so appearing to be Divine. See 1 King. 17 24.

V. 2. the names of the twelve Apostles] They are called Apostles, because they were first sent by Christ to preach the Gospel: their names God would have recorded for their honour, who having been instruments of so much good, must not be forgotten: as also that we may imitate them; there were twelve in allusion to the twelve Patriarchs, and relation to the tribes of Israel, chap. 19. 28. Luke 22. 30. Revelat. 21. 12, 14. See If. Casaubon. exercit. 14. N. 5

The first Simon] Theophylatt saith, that Peter and Andrew are named the first ὅτι ἠξιώθησαν because they were first called: and Chrysostom, hom. 33. in Matth.. You see how that ὁ καθ' ἡμᾶς ἀξίαν τιθῶν, &c. they are not placed, or reckoned according to dignity: for he thought John greater than James, after whom he is named. See chap. 4. 18.

who is called Peter] This name Christ gave him, John 1. 42. chap. 16. 18.

V. 3. Matthew the Publican] Of Publicans, see chap. 9. 10. Cal. Rhodigin. lect. Antiq. l. 20. c. 29. saith out of Firmicus. erant (inquit.) Publicani aut vectigalium ærc. Publicans, or Customers, officers of the custom-house, or farmers of customs: Alexand. ab Alexandr. Genial. dier. l. 2. c. 29. saith (with Volaterran, forecited, chap. 9 verse 10.) they that farmed customs were called Publicans: they are deceived who think all the Publicans among the Jews were heathens. See If. Casaubon. Exercit. 13. 71. 73. as also they who think it was, or is a contemptible office; it is true, the proud Jews despised them, as unholy and wicked, because they gathered customes and tribute of them, who were impatient of any subjection. But these were anciently among the Romans, men of good account; as may appear by many speeches of Cicero. Alexander ab Alex. forecited telleth us, the chief of the order of Knight-hood, were in times past Publicans, and the flower of the Roman Knights, was contained in the order of Publicans: it is true that afterward this office was conferred on manumissed servants, and meaner men: and that among the Jews these men were in disgrace: whence some observe his humility, in that though he were now an Apostle, yet he telleth what he had been; so doth Paul 1 Tim 1. 13.

James the son of Alpheus] To distinguish him from the other James, the son of Zebede, and the brother of John, Matth. 4. 21. Mark 3. 17. (firnamed Boanerges, or sons of thunder) he was slain by Herod, Act. 12. 2. but this James is he who was called, James the lesse, Mark 15. 40. and the brother of the Lord, Galat. 1. 19. because he was the son of Mary Cleopas, the virgin Mary her sister: his wife was also named Mary, as Jo. Druſius thinketh, Lebbeus] Called also Judas, the brother of James, Luke 6. 18. who writ the Epistle of Jude, as his brother did that of James.

V. 4. Simon the Canaanite] Or Canite, that is Zelotes, Luke 6. 15. this is added to distinguish him from Simon Peter, verse 2.

Judas Iscariot] A man of Kerioth in the Tribe of Judah, Josh. 15. 25. or of Issachar, Judg. 10. 1. or a man of reward, for he betrayed Christ for money, chap. 26. 15. by this Epithete and the words following, he is distinguished from the other Judas. See on verse 3. See allo on John 6. 71.

V. 5. into the way of the Gentiles] Not yet, till after my death, then ye must go preach to them, Act. 1. 8. when the middle wall of partition shall be broken down (Ephes. 2. 14.) and the time of calling the Gentiles shall be come.

of the Samaritanes] A people mixed of Assyrians and Israelites; 2 King. 17. and hated of the Jews, (John 4 9) whom Christ would not have his Apostles now offend, lest that might cause the weak eleſt among the Jewes, to stumble, or dislike that Religion which the Samaritans would receive: so Gods holy providence disposed lest any thing of it selfe good, might, by reason of mans weakneſse, prove an occasion of evil.

V. 6. But go rather] You must first preach to the Israelites, of whom I come, and to whom I was promised, Act. 3. 29. & 13. 46. and principally first, chap. 15 24.

to the lost sheep] They who belong to Gods election, though yet they continue in their natural condition: he calleth them sheep, quos Deus olim pascebat, whom God of old did feed, Psal. 80. 1. but lost, because now dispersed and destitute of found teachers. Euthym.

V. 7. preach] Cry aloud, or proclaim like Heraulds, as Isaiah 58 1.

the kingdom of heaven is at hand] Luke 10. 9. Teach the same doctrine that John Baptist, and I have done before you. See on Matth. 3. 1. & 4. 17.

V. 8 heal the sick] Confirme the Doctrine you preach by these profitable miracles, which I now give you power to do.

Freely give] Make no merchandise of the gift of miracles, freely bestowed on you: take no money for the cures ye do, neither withhold the power I give you, whensoever you meet with occasion to do good therewith; for indeed, all earthly things, servando totaliter amittimus, sed bene largiendo servamus. Greg. hom. 4. fin. by keeping, we utterly lose, but by well bestowing we keep them: so is it with these gifts bestowed on us for others sakes.

V. 9. Provide neither] Mark 6. 8. Luke 9. 3. or get neither, take none with you for this journey, that nothing may hinder you, and that you may have experience of Gods special providence over you: therefore he asketh them, Luke 22. 35. what they wanted by the way.

gold nor silver] No money of greater or lesser value to buy provision: Christ forbad them not to possesse that which was their own, but would not now have them solicitous for any money to bear their charge, lest they should not have been duely sensible of Gods special providence, which is never so well perceived as in the removal and absence of all ordinary means: here is an excellent document against avarice; no man is born rich, nor liveth so poor as he was born: poverty (saith Ambrof. l. 10. ep. 82.) is not of nature, but opinion: why do we desire an heap of riches, as if it were necessary? nihil tam necessarium quam cognoscere quod non sit necessarium: there is nothing so necessary for us, as to know what is not necessary.

in your purses] εἰς τὰς ζώνας —— in, or into girdles; either because they used to have purses in their girdles, or because (as Euthymius saith) travellers used by the way to carry their purses, Zonis appensas hanged on their girdles: Alexander severus said, the souldier feareth not but onely when he is (well) clothed —— and having aliquid in Zonula; some money in his girdle, that is, in his purse. Æl. Lamprid.

V. 10. nor scrip] To put your provision in for your journey; such such as travellers used to carry victuals in for their journey: knapsacks Souldiers call them. Now he would have them in their journeys depend wholly on Gods providence, left in the ordinary means, they might finde some obstruction, and hinderance to their duty of preaching the Gospel; otherwise, this neither was, nor is to be taken for a prescript constantly binding.

two coats] Two upper coats for change; and so of shooes, for he allowed them sandals, Mark 6. 9.

nor yet staves] For defence or offence: for they might carry a walking-staffe for more ease or convenience. Marke 6. 9.

the workman is worthy] Luke 10. 7. 1 Tim. 5 18. God who imployeth you, will give you food, if men of whom ye deserve it, should neglect you.

of his meat] That is all manner of necessary provisions.

V. 11. Into whatsoever city] Luke 10. 8.

enquire] Of the inhabitants before you put your selves into any mans house; or try who is worthy.

who in it is worthy] That is, who feareth God, who is fit to have the Gospel preached unto him, and to have the honour to receive the Ambassadours thereof.

till ye go thence] Remove not from one house to another, that ye may not offend him who first received you: or that ye may not seem to wander from house to house, as vagrants, or give men suspicion that those were weary of you, by whom ye were first entertained: tarry in that house, till you go to preach to another city.

V. 12. Salute it] By wishing all happinesse to the inhabitants thereof, as Luke 10. 5.

V. 13. if the house be worthy] If they courteously entertain you, like sonnes of peace, Luke 10. 6. this is the token intimated verse 11. such a token of discovery Eliezer prayed for, Gen. 24.14. 18. 29.

let your peace come upon it] Preach the Gospel of peace unto them; or it shall come upon them: as, Luke 10. 6. that is, God will bring upon them all the good you wish them.

if it be not worthy] If they shew themselves unworthy to have the Gospel preached unto them, by refusing you who are the Ministers thereof, Act. 13. 46.

let your peace return unto you] Carry away the Gospel of peace with you, to preach it to others, that shall receive you more kindly, or, God will bring that good on you, that you wished to them. See Psal. 35. 13.

V. 14. Whosoever shall not receive you] Mark 6. 11.

shake off the dust of your feet] As a token that God will shake them off, and destroy them: see Nehem. 5. 13. or to signifie that ye will have no more to do with them: as, Act. 13. 51. God accounteth the reception of his ministers, as if his self were received: the good God, saith Salvian. de gub. l. 8 maketh one and the same honour or contempt common to himself and his servants: Jest any man should think when he hurteth a minister, hominem tantum a se laedi, that he hurteth man onely: without doubt the injury of God himself is mingled with the injury of his servants: God so witnessing, Zach. 2. 8. He that toucheth you, toucheth the apple of his eye.

V. 15 It shall be more tolerable] Grosse sinners that never heard the Gospel, are not in so bad a condition, as they that refuse it, chap 11. 24. See 2 Pet. 2. 21. and Salv. l. 5. f. 1. 4. they do nothing in contempt of Gods Law who know it not: if he lay the Sodomites were lesse damnable than they who neglect the Gospel, what may they hereafter expect, who contemn it, and the faithful ministers thereof?

in the day of judgement] Of the general account, and great affizes of the world, thereof. Act. 17. 31.

V. 16. behold, I send you] Luke 10. 3. I shall send you after my resurrection; for in this journey they had neither want, nor opposition. Luke 22. 35. It is likely that our Saviour being now to send them forth among the Jews, intermixed divers things, that concerned their sending forth after his resurrection, as chap. 24. speaking of the destruction of Jerusalem, he addeth divers things concerning the end of the world.

as sheep] Altogether unarmed. He seemeth here to relate to that which was said, ver. 10. There is no creature more harmlesse, meek, or unable to defend it self, than the sheep: So were the Apostles, unarmed innocent, neither revenging injuries, nor able to protect themselves from them, but wholly depending on Gods providence in the midst of wolves] Into great dangers, where ye shall be compassed about with wicked men, See Psal. 57. 4. Act. 20. 29 Ezek. 22. 27. Zeph 3 3. Matth. 7. 15.

wise as serpents] See Gen. 3. 1. Avoid dangers as far as you lawfully may: and give no just cause to men to persecute you.

harmlesse] Or simple: be like serpents in the one, who avoid dangers by flying and hiding themselves; and like doves in the other, who do not ing to provoke: have the simplicity of the dove (saith Jerom lib. 2. ep. 16. Paulino) that thou mayest not machinate and imagine deceit against any man; and the wisdom of the serpent, lest other mens plots supplant thee: for matter of the fault there is not much difference, vel decipere posse, vel decipi Christianum, whether a Christian can deceive, or be deceived: Christ would have his, wise and innocent; religion and wisdom may not be severed. Lactantius saith well, lib. 5. neither may any religion, without wisdom be received, or any wisdom approved without religion: lb. l. 4. cap. 2, 3, 4. yet of the two, it is more secure to want wisdom, than innocency, as Tertullian saith adv. Valent. cap. 2. errare quam fallere, it is better erre for want of wit, than deceive with too much. The wisdom of the world is excentrick to Gods, therefore the Apostle saith, 1 Cor. 3. 18. if any man among you seemeth to be wise in this world, let him become a fool, that he may be wise, that is, saith Salvian. lib. 6 si vult esse sapiens, fit bonus; quia nemo vere sapiens, nisi vere bonus, if he will be wise, let him be good; because there is no man truly wise, who is not truly good. Let the world count it foolishnesse, as 1 Cor. 1. 18. or madnesse, as Act. 26. 24. it shall appear at last to be the onely wisdom. Let the impious Pharaoh say, Let us deal wisely ---- Exod. 1. 10. all the depth of Satan can never make wickednesse any better, than the most pernicious foolishnesse.

V. 17. beware of men] Here it appeareth, that by wolves he meant cruel men: beware of those men that are like wolves, verse 16. blood-thirsty persecutors.

in their synagogues] Some think that the synagogues were publick places of meeting; as well for civil, as sacred affairs: others, that they did use to scourge men for offences in matters of religion in their synagogues: others, that they had two sorts of synagogues, and did pray in the one, and scourge in the other: but concerning the last of these, we may more probably conceive, that they had their consistories, or Council-houses wherein they executed the degrees of their Council in way of Discipline. See Act. 5. 40. 2 Cor. 11. 24.

V. 18. before governours and kings] Such was Pilot. and after Felix, Festus, Act. 23. 24 25. Herod. Agrippa, Nero, and many succeeding persecutors of Christians. See chap. 17. 2. Act. 23. 24. 25. Act. 12. 25. 26.

for my sake] Ye need not be discouraged; seeing it is not for evil, but for your religion that they persecute you, Matth. 5. 11, 12.

for a testimony] I could keep you as easily from those dangers, as I will certainly keep you in them; but that you shall herein honour God, in testifying his truth, and leave your persecutors inexcusable.

against them, and the Gentiles] Ye shall be persecuted both by Jews and Gentiles: to the one you shall be witnesses for their just rejection, who so judge themselves unworthy of eternal life, Act. 13. 46, 47. to the other of the truth, by you constantly professed unto the death.

V. 19 but when they deliver you up] Mark 13. 11. Luke 12. 11. When they shall convene you as malefactours, before Magistrates, be not dismaid by their power or your own dilability to plead for your selves; God will then enable you.

take no thought] Use no anxious and laborious preparation as Orators and Lawyers do, when they are to plead.

it shall be given you] That is, to you Apostles. See the like, Exod. 3. 11.

V. 20. it is not ye that speak] Not so much you, as the Spirit of God in you, dictating what ye shall speak, as 2 Sam. 23. 2. See also chap. 9. 13. neque enim & hoc ita fit de nobis, tanquam nihil facientibus nobis. Aug. ep. 105

V. 21. and the brother] Luke 21 16. Ye shall be so hated for the truth of religion, that all bands of nature shall be forgotten, verse 35.

V. 22. hated of all men] That is, of very many, or almost all, John 3. 22. Phil. 2. 21. Luke 21. 17. Neither may this anything discourage us from speaking the truth, because it begetteth us hatred, but rather cause us to rejoyce in our conformity to Christ: Gratias ago Deo meo quod dignus sim, quem mundus oderit. Jerom. l. 1. ep. 45. I thank my God that I am worthy to be hated of the world.

he that endureth to the end] Mark 13 13. To the end of this mortal life, the limit and end of all our sufferings, Revel. 14. 13. to the death, that calmest haven, where no breath of evil shall move us Revel. 2. 10. & 22. 3. the meaning here is, he that endureth patiently, and with an unbroken mind, firmly relying on God for deliverance: it is not the beginning, but the end which crowneth actions. See chap. 24. 13.

shall be saved] Yet cannot otherwise be saved, 1 Cor. 10. 33. do all to Gods glory, that is, do nothing to his dishonour. The constant perseverer to the end of trials, shall be saved, and be crowned as the most happy Victors: they shall receive the end of their faith, the salvation of their souls, 1 Pet. 1 9 2 Tim. 2. 5. Rev. 2. 10. Though God permit them power to put you to death, you that shall die for the testimony of the Lord Jesus, shall, even in death be saved, and crowned with Martyrdom: he cannot perish who dieth for Christs sake. The safety of this present life is never secure, nor can be long; neither is it entire or true, if out of Christ the life; the hour of death is ever imminent in this whole life, and must once come, and is ever coming on. But in the life to come there shall be perfect security, eternal blessednesse, no more fear of death, ---- there shall be no more curse ---- Rev. 21. 3.

V. 23. flee into another] Christ giveth liberty for flight, in case of persecution; partly for their own safety, and partly also for the further propagation of the Gospel into other places. See Act. 13. 50, 51. & 14. 5, 6, 7. & 8. 4. Christ taught us this, not onely by precept, but also by practice. In his infancy he was carried into Egypt: so also afterward, often hiding from persecutors, saith Athanasius, apol. de fugâ sua ad Imper. constant. For it was meet that he should as well demonstrate by his hiding and fleeing, that he bare our flesh, and became man, as by hungring, and thirsting, and suffering: see that whole Apology, No. 1. as also Augustine on the same argument, epist. 180. Tertullian also wrote a book to Fabius concerning flight in persecution, though lesse orthodox. Augustines caution is here very requisite, Ne quis temere flationem deserat, nec ergo quemquid perdidit proficit, vel exemplum ignavis praebeat: lest any man should rashly desert his charge, betraying his flock, or give example of lasinesse: we may not flee without imminent danger, nor like false hirelings, for fear of the approching wolfe, leave our flocks to seducers: we may flee, where we are persecuted, and pursued to our destruction: so Paul escaped at Damascus, Act. 9. 24. So fled other holy men in like cases: if our flock be all dispersed by persecution, we may also flee to secure our lives: lastly, if the Church consent to our withdrawing, and they have others able to officiate for us: in such like cases not to flee is to tempt God.

ye shall not have gone over] You shall not end or finish your preaching the Gospel to all the cities of Israel: this thews that they were not to flee onely to secure themselves, but to hasten their work, to teach all the cities of Israel: or the meaning may be, ye shall have some cities to flee unto, and where you may preach.

till the Son of man be come] This coming of the Son of man (that is Christ) is not to be understood of his incarnation, expected of old by the faithful, neither his manifestation to Israel; that was past, and this also performed by John Baptist, Joh. 1. 31. but of the manifestation of his Kingdom, whose person was already professed, and so manifested to Israel. This is to give them comfort in dangers, in assurance of his protection, according to that he saith, Joh. 14. 18. I will not leave you comfortlesse; I will come unto you: and Matth. 28. 20. I am with you alwayes, even unto the end of the world; that is, to assist you (and your successours) in your ministry, and (as may stand with Gods glory) to deliver you from, or in dangers. See on chap. 16. 28 They did not flee from city to city before but after his resurrection: See on ver. 16. & 8. 4 & 21. 1.

V. 24. the disciple is not above his master] Luke 6. 40. John 13. 16. & 15. 20. If they persecute me your Lord and master, you that are in a lower condition must not look to escape: the sufferings of Christ must teach us patience: Jerom. ep. 45. lib. 1. some talk that I am wicked: I being a servant own the title of faith: the Jews also called my Lord Jesus, Magician: it is a great honour, and undoubted signe of goodnesse, to have the wicked revile and raile at us: they should condemn themselves, if they should speak well of any unlike themselves; their censures are thy praises: but their praises call thy goodnesse into question.

V. 25. Beelzebub] It was the idol of the Ekronites, 2 King. 1. 3. called so, either because there were store of flies in his temple, about the blood, and beasts sacrificed: or of the beasts the people troubled with their feavers, sought to him for help: afterwards, as idols were called devils, Deut. 32. 17. So the Jews called the chief devil Beelzebub, in derefation of this idol, Matth. 12. 24. or it may signifie a dung-hill god, &c. See on Luke 11. 15.

V. 26. for there is nothing covered] Mark 4. 22. Luke 8. 17. & 12. 2. Fear not what they can inflict upon you, for your innocency shall be made known here, or hereafter, Psal. 37. 6 or fear not, but preach the Gospel freely, for it will be known and prevail in the end: this sense agreeth best with the following words.

V. 27. in darknesse] What I teach you in private, when others are absent, as they use to be in the night: therefore he addes, in the ear, to shew that he spake of private instruction.

upon the house tops] Openly, as in the highest places: for they could walk on their house tops, Deut. 22. 8. Matth 24. 17. Act 10. 9. and from thence, publish things to multitudes below: they must publickly preach, not as the Valentinians, who cunningly vailed that they taught, lest the absurdity thereof should have appeared.

V. 28. fear not] Fear not man more than God: or so, as to do any evil, either for fear of man (who can onely take away a soon-fading life) to do that which God forbids, or to leave undone that which he commands: let us constantly remember that of Cyprian. l. 2. ep. 6. qui pro nobis mortem semel vicit, semper vincit in nobis: he that once overcame death for us, ever overcometh it in us: and in spight of persecutors, will raise us from death. See Act. 4. 19. & 5. 29. Dan. 3. 16, 17, 18.

them which kill the body] Luke 12. 4. Though tyrants be never so cruel, they cannot hurt you so much for preaching the Gospel, as God can for not preaching it. Seeing therefore the dispensation thereof is committed unto you, and a woe pronounced against you if you preach not: sanctifie the Lord your God, and let him be your fear, and your dread; but let not the fear of man thut your mouthes, or deter you from your duties; but, what ever men designe, threaten, or practice, to the contrary; preach the truth of Christ confidently.

hell] He doth not say, to destroy the soul and body simply or absolutely, so that they should be no more, (for that many men would be contented withal, rather than to run the hazard of prefent perfecution) but to punish them eternally in hell, where the worme never dieth; where it would be an unspeakable advantage once to die, that they might not ever live to torment.

V. 29. Are not two sparrows] He doth not instance Gods providence in the Prophets, or famous men; lest they or we, should think God onely took care for the exellent, but not for us: but in sparrows, little birds, of small price and account.

sold for a farthing] The fourth part of our peny, but with them the tenth part of a Roman peny.

not fall on the ground] When they are shot: nor can the most powerful tyrants kill you without Gods permission: some interpret it, a sparrow cannot light on the ground.

without your Father] Without his permission, who governeth all things in heaven and earth: fear not therefore, he will be more careful of you his children, than of the birds. See on chap. 5. 45. and 6. 32.

V. 30. but the very hairs] See 2 Sam. 14. 11. Act. 27. 34. Not your hearts, hands, feet, and those parts which are (as they say) the partes integrantes; but even those which seem to have been made rather for convenience and ornament, than necessity: if Gods providence be over these, how much more will he preserve unto you your essential parts, and that, without which you cannot live?

all numbred] Every one, not onely known to God, but so kept, as it were by tale, that none can take away one of them without Gods permission; much more are the dayes of your life numbred: and not one of them, without Gods permission, can be taken away from you by the most powerful of the creatures.

V. 31. Ye are of more value] More excellent creatures, of more esteem with God, as bearing his Image, and redeemed with the precious blood of his holy son Jesus; fear you not, he will not neglect you. See chap. 6. 26.

V. 32. Whosoever therefore] Luke 12. 8.

shall confesse me before men] What more equal, than that servants which acknowledge and obey their masters in time of danger, should be owned by them in times of safety and honour: and that such as forsake their masters in troubles and dangerous conditions, should afterwards be turned out of doors? Thus will I deal with you, if you stand to me in times of persecution. I will own you publickly at the day of judgement; otherwise I will discard you.

V. 33. but whosoever] See on verse 32. and on Luke 12. 9. Mark 8. 38 Luke 9 26 2 Tim 2. 12.

V. 34. think not that I am come] See on Luke 12. 51.

to send peace on earth] He endeavours to correct the erroneous opinion of the Jewes, and also the Apostles, who thought that the times were under the Messias should be peaceable, prosperous, and glorious, misunderstanding the Prophets, as if the things they spake of spiritual peace with God, had been meant of worldly peace with men.

but a sword] War, and divisions; as Luke 12. 51. these are not proper fruits of the Gospel of peace; but accidental: while they, who will not be reclaimed from their errours, dissent from them that will, Acts 28. 24, 25, 29. John 7. 40, &c.

V. 35. against his father] The times shall be as unquiet, as those spoken of, Mich 7. 6.

the daughter in law against, &c.] No bands either sacred or civil shall restrain wicked persons from exercising their malice and cruelty against the professours of the Gospel. See verse 21.

V. 36. of his own house] As if he said, such confusion shall come upon the world, that all laws of God and nature shall be trodden down: no humanity or fidelity shall be left among the impious: not that this should be at all times; but to arm the faithful, by forewarning them of these evils to come. See on verse 21.

V. 37. he that loveth father or mother] See on Luke 14. 26.

more than me] As fear of evil, so likewise love of the world, and those things thereof, which are respectively to be loved (as parents, wife, children,) may distract their affections from Christ: this is here forbidden.

is not worthy of me] I count him not fit for my service. See on chap. 5. 8. Luke 14. 26.

he that loveth son or daughter] This is added as a greater trial, because love rather descends than ascends; and some can more easily part with parents than children.

V. 38. he that taketh] Chap. 16. 24. Luke 9. 23. Mark 8. 34. that that is, who doth not willingly bear what God layeth on him: it is an allusion to such as were condemned to be crucified, who used to carry their crosses. See on chap. 27. 32.

his cross] That is yet a greater tryal than before: a man may possibly be contented to lose worldly comforts, that would not endure pain (Job 2. 4, 5.) especially death, and such a kinde of death, as was accursed: but we must suffer any thing for Christs sake. By crosse, is meant the heaviest and sorest afflictions and calamities, by alluding to the custome of Romans or Persians with whom that punishment was used and accounted most ignominious.

and followeth after me] And with such an affection comes unto me: or is contented, if he be thereto called, to be crucified.

is not worthy of me] See on verse 37.

V. 39. he that findeth his life] John 12. 25. that saves it, chap. 16. 25. Mark 8. 35. Luke 9. 24. and 17. 24, 33. 1o Prov. 24. 10. he that thinks he hath secured his life, by renouncing his religion: it is called finding, because worldly men account them all lost, who are dead.

shall lose it] Shall go to Hell, and so lose all comfort of life, as Tertullian said adv. Gnost. c. 11. Perdet in Gehennam, qui se putat negando lucrifacere eam.

he that loseth his life for my sake] That dies for the testimony of the truth of religion, chap. 5. 11, 12.

shall find it] In Heaven for ever, as Tertullian also saith, Perdet eam ad præsens, qui confessus occiditur, sed inventurus eam in vitam æternam he shall lose his life for the present, who confessing is slain, but shall find it to eternal life.

V. 40. he that receiveth you] Luke 10. 16. John 13. 20. that heareth your doctrine willingly, and entertaineth you: this is added to comfort them in distresses; for therein some should receive them, and relieve them.

receiveth me] He shall have more Divine guests. See Hebr. 13. 2. me and my Father. See on John 14. 23. He shall receive me, whose Apostles and Messengers ye are; whose embassie you are to deliver: I will take all that which is done to you, on mine account, and as done to mine own person: as a Prince esteemeth that which is done to his Ambassadours, as if it were done to his own royal person, by them represented (as in the example of David and Hanun appeareth, 2 Sam. 10, 2, 4. &c.) so will it be between Christ the King of Kings, and men, honouring, relieving, abusing, harming, or persecuting the Ministers, or any other servants of his. See Matth. 25. 40.

in the name of a prophet] Not for kindred or civil respects, but because he is Gods messenger.

shall receive a prophets reward] Such a reward as a prophet shall have: or, as is fit for him that hath received a prophet, and so furthered Gods service in an extraordinary manner.

a righteous man] A man fearing God; a religious man, Matth. 13. 17.

V. 42. whosoever shall give to drink] Mark 9. 41.

unto one] How much more, if he give, and be beneficent to many?

of these little ones] Who newly made profession of the true religion ♦ and were as babes in it, Mark 9. 42. Luke 17. 2. Matth. 25. 40, 45. 1 Cor. 3. 1. 1 John 2. 13, 14.

a cup of cold water onely] The least and cheapest curtesie, that can be shewed: how much more if he provide with greater charge to relieve him?

he shall in no wise] He shall be sure of it.

his reward] The phrase is altered; he said before, the reward of a prophet, and of a righteous man, verse 41. here he doth not say, the reward of a little one, lest it should be thought to be a small reward; but, his reward: that is, not a reward proportionable to his work; and affection to the cause of God, (See chap. 25, 34. &c. Luke 14. 14.) but incomparably more, because God is infinite in mercy and beneficence, and so the reward which he will freely give at last, must needs exceed all proportion of mans service done for his sake, and shall be infinitely more than all that which we can ask or think: hence it appears how dear Christs servants are to him, in that for the least office of love and kindnesse done to the meaneſt of them, he will bountifully, and eternally requite and reward it; in which his bounty excelleth the beneficence which all the greatest of this worlds Princes can shew: they can onely reward deseres with temporal gratuities and goods, which are not alwayes such to the receivers, neither long constant to any: but Gods bounty makes the receivers good, and so happy, because eternally so.

CHAP. XI.

Verse 1. Of commanding his twelve disciples] Of giving them precepts how to carry themselves in their journey and preaching, chap. 10. and had sent them away furnished with those instructions in their cities] In the cities of Galilee. See chap. 9. 35. and 11. 9.

V. 2. John had heard] By his disciples, as Luke 7. 18.

in the prison] ἐν τῷ δεσμωτηρίῳ: in the word cometh of δεσμὸς, ligo, vincio, to binde, and signifieth the place where prisoners are bound, or kept in ward. Suidas interpreteth it by φυλακὴ, a keep, or prison: Syr. בית אסירא, in domo vinctorum. So the Hebrews said, בית האסור, beth hassohar Ger. 39. 20. in the house of the prison, or the place where the kings prisoners were bound. So Judg. 16. 21 בבית האסורים, bebeth hassurim, in the house of the bound, that is, the prison. John was cast into prison, because he reproved Herods incest. See Mark 6. 17.

the works of Christ] That is, his miracles; of which verse 4. 5.

he sent two of his disciples] Not for his own information, who was assured by Gods Spirit, and a signe from heaven that Jesus was the true Messias, John 1. 33. and have record thereof, John 1 29 34. but to instruct his disciples, who out of zeal to their master, stood ill affected to Christ, as appeareth, John 3. 26. chap. 9. 14, and very likely did not now acquaint John with Christs great works, out of love to him; but out of envy and respect of their Masters credit.

V. 3. and said unto him] By his disciples whom he sent, for John was now in prison, 2 verse. See chap. 8. 5, 6.

art thou he that should come] The Messias promised in the prophets, and expected by the Jewes, Gen. 49. 10. Isai. 35. 4. Acts 26. 6, 7.

V. 4. again] G. πορευθέντες, as Luke 7. 22. going, or returning them, &c. which in effect is, whereas John hath by you sent his message to me; tell him again from me those things which ye do hear and see.

those things] He doth not answer Johns message otherwise than by his works done, whereof Johns messengers were eye-witnesses, that he might demonstrate himselfe to be the Lords Christ, by those marks which the Prophets had foretold.

V. 5. the blinde receive sight] This is one of the marks which was foretold, Isaiah 35. 5, 6. See John 10. 25, 37, 38.

the dead are raised] This they related to John, Luke 7. 22. 28. whether they saw it, or heard it from some eye-witnesses.

the poor have the gospel preached] Isaiah 61. 1. Christ doth not (as worldly princes use) bestow his favours on the eminent and great, but most commonly on the obscure, poor, and despised of the world 1 Cor. 1. 28. &c. In the prophecy it is, God sent me to preach good tydings, לענוים lanavim, to the meek; the meaning is, the poor in spirit, as chap. 5. 3. those who know themselves destitute of grace and true hapinesse thence ensuing.

V. 6. whosoever shall not be offended in me] At my mean estate and sufferings, chap. 26 31. 1 Cor. 1. 34. or at my familiarity with sinners, differing from Johns austere course, verse 18, 19. the Jews expecting a worldly king for their Messias, glorious, rich and victorious, would not receive nor believe in him; because they were offended at the form of a servant and man of sorrowes: and it seemeth by this part of Christs answer, that Johns disciples were offended at Christ, because he lived not apart from the multitude, nor in that external austerity of life, which they admired in their Master, John Baptist, chap. 9. 14 which Christ so secretly reprehendeth in them, that he might not shame them before the multitude, nor let them go away in their errour. See note on Luke 7. 23.

V. 7. as they departed] Christ would not commend John before his disciples, lest they should still erre in preferring him before Christ; or the people should think he flattered John before his disciples, in hope to ingratiate with him, who had so high authority in the peoples opinion: but after Johns disciples were gone, Luke 7. 24 he commends him to the people, who now might possibly have too mean an opinion of him in respect of his imprisonment.

a reed shaken with the winde] Why went ye into the wilderness by such multitudes? Surely ye would not have gone to see reeds that are shaken with the windes, or such other unconsiderable things, which the wilderness affordeth: and men in fine cloathing you could hardly see there; they are usually in Kings courts: nothing was there to be seen worth your labour, but onely John, whom you than esteemed as a great Prophet: and ye have no reason to think more meanly of him now, in respect of his imprisonment: some by reed, understand an unconstant person: a reed, as the winde bloweth, bendeth this way or that way: but John was no such light person, but a true and constant servant of God, as in his unchangable testimony concerning me, so in his life and doctrine.

V. 8. a man clothed in soft raiment] In silk, or courtly apparel. See on verse 7. John was far from affecting any delicacy of clothing, or diet. See chap. 3. 4. hereby he intimateth that the testimonies, which John formerly gave concerning him, could not be for favour of any: for, the prison in which he was was now, might sufficiently testifie, that he could not flatter Kings or Princes: and therefore notwithstanding his message, which was for his disciples sake; he changed not his testimony for all his bonds. See on Luke 7. 25.

V. 9. A Prophet] See on verse 7. a teacher of the truth. See Chapter 21. 26. an holy and reverent Doctor sent of God.

more than a Prophet] A man preferred by God to an higher office, than any of the former Prophets was ---shewing him now present, who from the beginning was but typically foretold of, Clem. Alexandr. strom. l. 5. and Irenæus l. 3. c. 11. adventum vidit & demonstravit, he saw and demonstrated his coming, perswading many to believe in him; so that he & prophetæ & Apostolis totam habuerit. had the office both of a Prophet and Apostle: it is the office of a Prophet venturæ prædicere, non autem demonstrare, to declare things to come, not to shew them present, as John did, and was therein greater than a Prophet, Gregor. hom. 6. in Evang.

V. 10. Behold I send] See on chap. 3. 1. Mal. 3. 1.

my messenger, &c.] He shewes a reason why John was greater than the Prophets: he was the Harbinger designed by God to prepare the way of Christ, and the Herald to proclaim him now come into the world, who is the King of his Church. See Luke 1. 15, 16, 17. 74, 75.

V. 11. among them that were borne of women] He prefers John not onely before the Prophets, as verse 9. but also before all others that were born before him. Job 14. 1. and 15. 14. and 25. 4.

there hath not risen] Or been raised, as chap. 9. 25. Luke 7. 16. John 7. 52. none greater than he hath appeared among men. The sense is, God hath not by his divine vocation prepared, designed, fitted and brought any more excellent of the sons of men, than John Baptist, to the ministery of Prophet or Apostle; the word ἐγήγερται here used, is sometimes transitively put, as Luke 7. 16. as also ὤφθησαν, Act. 1. 22. προεῖπαν ὑμῖν ὁ κύριος ὑμῶν ἀναστήσει shall the Lord your God raise up to you. So Act. 2. 30. as it were intimating a stirring up him, who of himself, had as little thought thereof, or ability thereto, as a sleeping or dead man, or as if the promise long before made to the fathers seemed to sleep, but now in the fulnesse of time, in his exhibition to Israel it was awakened, remembred, and performed.

a greater than John] In dignity of office, and clearnesse and fulnesse of doctrine, in publishing the entire performance of all things foretold of Christ; as his death, resurrection, ascension, calling of the Gentiles, which John saw not.

he that is least in the kingdome of heaven] The least in the ministery of the gospel hath a more excellent function, in regard of the clearnesse of doctrine to be taught by him. See Luke 7. 28. John 1. 29.

V. 12. from the dayes of John] Luke 16. 16. the Scribes taught the people coldly before, but John hath kindled in their hearts a fervent desire of hearing the gospel.

until now] This zeal lasts in them still, although John be cast into prison, and cannot now preach unto them suffereth violence] Or, is gotten by force, as the Syriack expresseth his Graeca: men run to hear the gospel preached, as soulders run upon a rich town besieged, to get the wealth thereof, Isaiah 60. 4. 8. 11.

and the violent] Only they, who with ardent affections, overcoming all that stands in their way, presse into it, do, and shall attain possession thereof: the violent (saith Ambrof. in Luc. lib. 8.) qui vim facit, vehementi studio properat: he that useth violence, hasteth with vehement desire: the violent, or they that thrust on men, as in storming a town, one thrusts another, to get before him into it; so the people were so encouraged by Johns preaching to come to Christ, that every one was ambitious to come first.

V. 13. prophesied until John] The things they foretold of Christ, and the types of him in the law, began to be fulfilled in the time of John, there needed now no more predictions, but a manifestation of the Messias to Israel, which was Johns office to do. John 1. 31.

V. 14. If ye will receive it] If ye can endure to have the truth told you.

this is Elias] Mal. 4. 5. This is he who should come in the spirit of Elias, Luke 1. 17. not Elias himself, whom the Jews vainly expected, John 1 21. by this prophesie of Malachi he again shews the dignity of John Baptist, recalling to their minds (who had heard it (the word of the Angel, Luke 1. 17, this was Elias, not in person, but in office. See John 1. 21.

V. 15. he that hath ears] see on chap. 13. 9. by this Epiphonema he exciteth us to beleive his doctrine (for to hear, is here put, for to believe) intimating, that although we all have externall ears to hear, we are commonly deaf within: and this he speaketh, as to make us consider our great defects herein; that we may pray the Lord to open our hearts and ears to attend unto his voyce, that we may no longer be deaf with them that shall perish; aures cordis requirit, Greg hom. 15. in Evang he requires the ears of the heart.

V. 16. But whereunto] Luke 7. 31.

this generation] The men of this age, as chap. 24. 34.

it is like unto children] An allusion to childrens sports, who find fault with the furtinesse of some of their companions, who would not comply with them in their pastimes, though they assayed all wayes they could to allure them thereto; one while singing merry songs, otherwhile elogies, or sad funeral ditties. See verse 18, 19. See on Luke 7 32.

V. 17. we have piped] He taxeth the stupidity of hearers, moved neither with the gracious comity of Christ, nor the strict austerity of John, or those who went before him: with those who preached the gladsome tidings of salvation by faith, or the severity of the law, to answer Gods promises or threatnings with faith and repentance.

but ye have not lamented] ἐκόψασθε, this word expresseth the gesture of mourners, and those who are deeply affected at that they hear or see: κόπτεσθαι, amongst other things, signifieth to smite and strike the breast and also to mourn, as chap. 24. 30. so the penitent man smote his breast, Luke 18. 13. so did the spectators of Christ's passion, Luke 23. 48.

V. 18. neither eating nor drinking] He eat locusts and wild honey (chap. 3. the meaning is, he used a most hard and austere diet, far from the common use of other men, abstaining from feasts and luxury.

he hath a devil] By whose assistance he can endure such hardship: because many of those who are possessed, will endure much more hardnesse than others ordinarily can, without much sense thereof: Johns austere course was so far from winning many of them, that it incensed them the more: they thought he hated mankind, as Satan doth. Thus doth malice turn all that to occasion of calumny and blasphemy, which God appointed for their conversion and salvation.

V. 19. eating and drinking] In a more free use of the creatures, and graciously conversing with all sorts of men in a more familiar course of life: his way differed from Johns, but both came to the same end: but the Jews were censorious of both, being wonne by neither.

a man gluttonous] Given to excesse, and abuse of the creatures keeping company with men of loose life.

wisdom is justified of her children] Though there be many that scoffe at all means of grace, yet the wise counsel of God, Luk. 7. 30. in calling sinners home by Johns austerity, and Christs familiarity, is approved (as Psal. 51. 4. Rom. 3. 4. Luk. 7. 29) by the followers thereof, as Luk. 10. 6. which he saith, to shew that neither Christs, nor Johns labours had been fruitlesse to the elect hearers, though (as it commonly cometh to passe) the wicked grew worse thereby, and their judgment more heavy, by their contempt of Gods mercy offered them.

V. 20. then began he] Calling to mind the malicious and invincible ingratitude of the Jews: and particularly of certain cities where himself had taught, and done great miracles. See Luk. 19. 13.

because they repented not] Not because they did not commend him and his preaching, but because they did not amend by it. For the end for which God shewed his power in miracles, was to confirm the doctrine of the Gospel, repentance, amendment of life, faith in Christ, regeneration, &c. to which, when they were not perswaded, they did not make a right use of the power of God, in so many miracles evidently shewed them, neither should they finally advantage them, but more aggravate their judgement. Chap. 7. 22, 23. Luk. 13. 26, 27.

V. 21. wo unto thee Corazin, &c.] These were cities upon the lake of Gennezaret, where Christ converſed much, and taught often.

Bethsaida] The city where Philip, Andrew and Peter dwelt. See John 1. 44.

the mighty works] The great miracles, in curing all diseases, &c. which being joyned to the doctrine which our Saviour preached unto them, might have assured them that it was the word of God, and therefore they ought to have obeyed it, calling them to faith and repentance.

in Tyre and Sydon] Cities of great traffick by the sea, and of very impious manners: therefore, as the Prophets of old denounced miseries to come upon them, Isaiah 23. 1. Ezek. 26. 27, 28. Amos 1. 8. so doth our Saviour here pronounce a woe to them, and threaten great and fearful judgments: to Corazin and Bethsaida who were much more hard-hearted, and lesse apt to repentance than the impious Tyrians and Sidonians. Suidas saith that Tyrus of old was a Metropolis: these were ancient, great, populous, and rich cities of Phœnicia. Sidon fell into the lot of the tribe of Asher, who yet possessed it not, because (saith terom de loc. Hebraic.) they were not able to beat them out: so saith he, Tyrus in tribu Nephtalim.

In sackcloth and ashes] Repenting and manifesting their repentance by such outward signes of humiliation, as of old, and then were in use, with those who repented and humbled themselves for the diversion of any imminent or threatned judgments; and that not only among the Jews, but also among the Gentiles, Job 42. 6. Jonah 3. 6 Hester 4. 1. Jer. 6. 26. Lam. 2. 10. the meaning is, that those miracles might have been sufficient, to have overcome their malice, and moved them to repentance, which the Jews had feen done, and profited not by them.

V. 22. it shall be more tolerable] As there are diversities of punishments in hell appointed for impenitent sinners; so ye, that have refused the gospel, shall at the day of judgement, be more freely handled, then they that never heard it, though they lived more prophanely than ye do, Heb. 2. 2, 3. and 10. 28, 29. So he teacheth here: 1. That there shall be a future judgement, chap. 25. 31, &c. Act. 17. 2. That it shall be at the resurrection. 3. That as there are degrees of sins, so shall there be of punishment to the damned. 4. That the heaviest punishment shall be to those impenitent sinners, on whom God had bestowed the largest means of conversion, and would not be reclaimed. See 2 Pet. 2. 22.

V. 23. which art exalted unto heaven] By my abode in thee, frequent preaching and great miracles wrought. It was a marvellous dignity that Christ the Son of the living God, and King of Kings, would among them auspicate his kingdom, chap. 4. 13. so that it was honoured with the name of his city, chap. 9. 1. that he vouchsafed to make it illustrious by many divine and eminent miracles.

brought down to hell] לִשְׁאוֹל תֵּרֵד, עַד־מְאֹד שְׁחִית, unto the pit or grave, Syr. See note on Luke 16. 23. and Act. 2. 27. שְׁאוֹל sheol with the Hebrew signifieth the grave, which the Greeks give by ἅδης, as Psal. 16. So Gen. 37. I shall go down to my son mourning, εἰς ἅδην, into the grave: the same word is also taken for Hell, the place of the damned, Luke 16. 23. Speaking here of the glory of Capernaum, he saith, it was lifted up to heaven, (that is, very highly exalted in dignity and priviledges, as also in her own opinion) and speaking of her ingratitude, he presently saith, that she should be thrust down to Hell, that is, thy glory shall depart, thou shalt be destroyed and ruined, thou shalt be afflicted with extream and pitifullest ignominy (which probably came to passe, when the Romans destroyed and wasted the rest of Galilee) and thou shalt at last be damned in Hell, who contemnest so great means of salvation brought home to thee.

in Sodom] Which was so wicked, that it was destroyed by fire from Heaven, that sad monument of Gods just indignation against sins and sinners: See Gen. 19. 24. 2 Pet. 2. 6 super impium populum Gebennam missit è Cœlo, Salvian de gub. Dei. lib. 1. he sent upon an impious people. hell from heaven: that is, showers of fire and brimstone, wherewith the damned shall be tormented, Psal. 11. 6. Isa 30. 33. Rev. 19. 20 and 20. 10. and 21. 8.

it would have remained] The Sodomites would not have been so wicked, as to bring that judgement on themselves: either we must understand this with relation to mans apprehension and sense, considering only second causes; as if it were said, in mans reason so great miracles would have converted them, though grievous sinners, and so God would have spared them, as he did Ninevie: or he regarded his own omniscience, as God, foreseeing and certainly foreknowing what effect every cause shall and will work in subjecto determinato, or the particular subject: and if any ask, if God, who cannot be deceived, did indeed foresee, that Sodom and Gomorrah would have repented? it he had given them as much meanes, as he did other sinful cities; why did he not give them, so that they might repent? We must know, that God being debtor to no man, both mercifully giveth the means and the effect to repentance, amendment and salvation where he pleaseth (Rom. 9. 18. 21.) and justly denieth the means, or the effect thereof, where he will execute his justice, and not shew mercy, as Augustine saith (ep. 107.) to Vitalis; Scimus ein quibus datur misericordia Dei gratuita dari: scimus ein quibus non datur, justo judicio Dei non dari; we know that to those to whom it is given, it is given by the free mercy of God: we know that to those to whom it is not given, it is, by the just judgement of God, not given: in this particular the Sodomites were grievous sinners, Gen. 13. 13. Gen. 18. 20. so that their sin is said to have cryed to God: indeed, God had given them a righteous Lot, whose example might have been to them a lively doctrine to have restrained them from such impiety: but their wicked conversation vexed his righteous soul, 2 Pet. 2. 8. they being nothing amended, but left more unexcusable hereby: therefore it was an evident justice of God, not to give them more means of grace, who had buried that talent of the light of natural reason which they had received.

V. 24. it shall be more tolerable] See on verse 22. it shall be more easie damnation to the Sodomites in the world to come (though the righteous God made them examples of his indignation against such sins for future times, 2 Pet. 2. 6.) not because the Sodomites were lesse sinners than the Capernaites, but because the Capernaites despised, or neglected greater knowledge and meanes of salvation than was offered, or afforded the Sodomites. Consider well you whom it now concerneth, what damnation awaiteth neglecters of the gospel, and the administration thereof.

V. 25. at that time] This is said to be when the 70. were returned, and had told our Saviour what good successe they had, Luke 10. 17. 21.

Jesus answered] To the report of the 70 disciples; or answering is put for the beginning of a speech, as often in Scripture.

I thank thee] Or, I confesse unto thee, ἐξομολογοῦμαί σοι, importeth either, or I acknowledge before thee, for יָדָה jadah in Hiphil, signifieth among the Hebrewes; projecit, seu emisit vocem, liberè fassus est, or confessus est, Psal. 118. 1, &c. confession, and free acknowledgement of Gods mercy, is a praising and thanking him for the same.

these things] The mysteries of thy kingdom.

and prudent] From the Scribes, Pharisees, and worldly wise men.

and hast revealed them] By my ministery, and those whom I have sent to teach.

unto babes] Νηπίοις, to simple men and women, who know no more in such things, than children do in worldly affairs, (See Clem. Alex. Pædag. l. 1. c. 1.) that which the Hebrew expresseth by פתי Psal. 19. 8. and 116. 6. in both which places the 70 give it νήπια and Prov. 1. 4. 22. 8. 5. & 14, 15. (which Symmachus gives νηπίῳ) they render by ἀκάκους, harmlesse persons: but Prov. 1. 32. the 70. give the same word νηπίων: which Greek word is used sometimes to expresse young bruites, plants, or that which hath small strength, as an infant: what these here mean may be gathered, chapter 18. 3. Rom. 16. 19. 1 Cor. 14. 20.

V. 26. even so] Nai, yea, Syr. אֵין, etiam, certè, profectò yea, surely, truly.

for so it seemed good] Gods pleasure being known, we must rest satisfied; there needs no other reason, where he will have it so; because his judgements are ever just, though many times unknown to us: and he is Lord of heaven and earth, and may do what he will with his own. Here we see that of Prosper de vocat. Gent. l. 1. c. 24. to be true, Ex Deo esse principium, & profectum, consummationemque, &c. that the beginning, advancement, and consummation of our salvation is of God.

V. 27. all things] Joh. 3. 35. not only persons, but things; so great is the power of Christ. See chap. 28. 18. others understand it of the knowledge of those mysteries spoken of here, 2. 25.

are delivered] Christ then, as man, had not this power and knowledge of himself.

no man knoweth the Son] His divine nature, and eternal generation: or, no man knowes what he is to do, or suffer, but the Father, who hath desigued him to both.

neither knoweth any man] John 6 46.

the Father] That is his essence, or divine substance: or how he will have the calling of the Jewes, or Gentiles to embrace the Gospel, to be dispensed or disposed: the Prophets saw but little hereof, 1 Pet. 1. 10, 11, 12.

to whomsoever the Son will reveal him] None else can know, nor can any know any further than Christ will reveal him. chap. 13. 11. Mark. 4. 11. Luke 8. 10. 1 Cor. 2. 7. Eph. 3. 5. Col. 1. 26. Joh. 1. 18. Joh. 4. 12. 1 Tim. 6. 16.

V. 28. Come unto me] It seemeth an allusion to Isaiah 55. 1. where God calleth all that spiritually thirst to him, with promise freely to refresh them: the meaning is trust in me, ye that are troubled in conscience for sin, and I will bring you to true rest, Gods favour, which by other means ye can never obtain: he calleth them who alone can give both will and ability to come: as Ambrose saith, l. 7. ep. 54. Syricio, he giveth strength to those that follow him; so that the nearer thou art to vertue, the stronger thou shalt thou be: observe here, 1. whom he inviteth, all the labouring and heavie loaden; 2. to what, I will give you rest; 3. with what condition; that they submit to the just and easie yoke of Christ.

all ye that labour] Or are ill at ease; Christ calleth all to faith and repentance, excluding none that are thereto prepared by a deep sense of the intolerable burden of their sin.

and are heavie laden] With the sense of your sins, and a guilty conscience, of all burdens in this world, the most importable, Prov 18. 14. the more heavie we feel our sins, the nearer yee are to Gods mercy to relieve us. See Psal. 38. 4.

I will give you rest] Peace of conscience, in the free remission of guilt and punishment, the assurance thereof, and freedom from the servitude of sin. Rom. 6. 14.

V. 29. take my yoke upon you] Obeying my commandements.

learn of me, for I am meek] Imitate me in meeknesse and humility: which thou wilt do if thou love Christ: for as Chrysostom saith, thou lovest not him whom thou wilt not imitate, and him whom thou wilt not followy, thou doest but feign to love.

ye shall find rest] Jer. 6. 16. your sins remitted, ye shall have peace of conscience, in which your souls shall rest assured of Gods mercy and your salvation in me; and so shall you being discharged of the heavy burden of your sins, which shall not be imputed to you to condemnation, find rest to your souls. See Rom. 5. 1. & Rom. 8 1, 2.

unto your souls] Your outward man may be exercised with many troubles, but ye shall have inward peace.

V. 30. my yoke is easie] That which I command you is good for you and easie. See John 15. 12.

my burden is light] The word φορτίον, primarily signifieth the fraight or balast of a ship, which glides through the waves, as if it had no burden, and indeed cannot go safe without balast: now the regenerate consent to the law of God, Rom. 7. 22. and therefore it is not grievous to them, 1 John 5. 3. not through any strength or will of their own, but by the free grace of God, who giveth faith. Ephes. 2. 8. love, patience, perseverance, and all those things which they have need of, for the accrance, and all those things which they have need of, for the accomplishment of their salvation: the burden of Pharisaical traditions traditions was heavie chap 23. 4. and of oppressours, Isaiah 9. 4. and 10. 27. Hos. 8. 10. the law was a burden, which neither we nor our fathers were able to bear, (said Peter, Acts 15. 10.) it was figured in Moses hand, Exod. 17. 12. Moses hands were heavie. Lex manus graves habuit, Gregor. hom. 23. in Evang. the Law had heavie hands, which strook sinners with an heavie judgement: but Christs burden is light, who requireth onely of us that which is best for us: as to love, fear, and obey him, in which there is true happinesse, out of which there can be none: he exacteth of us onely faith, chastity, sobriety, mercy, sanctity, all which (saith Salvian l. 7. de gub. Dei) non onerant nos sed onerant: do not burden, but adorne us: he commandeth his to believe in him, that they may be saved, John 14. 1. John 3. 16. that they love one another, John 13. 34, 35. John 15. 12. what easier burden than love? what sweeter yoke than that which Gods love makes easie: every commandment of God is easie to him, who loveth; because God is with him, and sheddeth abroad his love in his heart, that he may cheerfully and willingly obey him: as Prosper noteth after Augustine, he that doth any thing onely out of fear, servilely doth it: nor is he a friend of the right, who if it could be, had rather not have that which is right commanded. Christ requireth (to make us blessed) that at least we do hunger and thirst for righteousnesse, that is, that we have a will to be holy, Vide si labor est, ubi velle facie est, Augustine, ep. 45. See whether that be a labour, where 'tis enough to be but willing.

CHAP. XII.

Verse 1. Jesus went on the sabbath day] Mark 2. 23. Luke 6. 1. שַׁבָּת (of שָׁבַת, shabbath of shabath, cessavit; quievit) signifieth a rest, or cessation; as, God rested the seventh day from his work of creation, Gen. 2. 2. sanctified and enjoyned the same for a weekly seventh-day rest, Exod. 20. 10. & 35 2, 3. So it signifies the Lords day, wherein we are to keep an holy rest from all servile work. Secondly, all other solemn festival dayes, enjoyned by the Levitical law to be kept holy, and set apart from all servile work, were called שַׁבְּתוֹן Shabbathon, Levit 23. 24, 39. Sabbalulum. 70. ἀνάπαυσις. So Ezek. 20. 21. they polluted שַׁבְּתוֹתַי Shabbethothai, my sabbaths, that is, my appointed feasts: so Colos. 2. 16. these are called Sabbaths, that is, such rests as were appointed some day of the week to be kept holy, by the ceremonial, not the moral law: for these feasts were appointed by a positive law, onely for the time that the Levitical law and Priesthood lasted; sometimes this vvord imporreth the vvhole vveek, as Luke 18. 12.

began to pluck the ears of corn] Which vvas lavvful for them to do, Deut. 23. 25. though in another mans field.

V. 2. when the Pharisees saw it] Who commonly vvent along vvith the multitudes vvhich followed Christ, not vvith any intention to learn of Christ, but to observe all that he did, or said, that they might cavil and calumniate: as here, it seemeth they vvatched for the same purpose: and vvisely thought, they had now found a just occasion to accuse him of the breach of Gods lavves.

thy disciples] It is thy fault vvho art their master, or suffereſt them in thy presence to do, vvhich if thou be not, or sufferest them in thy presence to do, vvhich if thou be not, or connives at others sins, makes them his own; they so blame the disciples, that they might cast some impious aspersions on their Master, concerning breach of Gods law, though never so far from the mind of the Law-giver.

which is not lawful] Because dressing of meat on the Sabbath was forbidden in the wilderneſse, Exod. 16. 23. in regard of the Manna, (their then present food) which was forbidden to be gathered on the Sabbath; they conceived that the very plucking, and rubbing of the ears was also unlawful, and a servile work forbidden, Lev. 23. 7. and a capital crime, as that Num. 15. 23. thus hypocrites are over-scrupulous in the smalleſt, but careleſſe in the greateſt matters of the law, as charity and equity, as if they were of no consequence.

V. 3. have ye not read] You that glory in the knowledge of the Scriptures, consider what the man after Gods own heart (1 Sam 13. 14.) did in case of necessity, if he have read this, ye might there have found that which might free you from this errour.

what David did] 1 Sam. 21. 6. You must either blame your Patriarch David, or free my disciples.

and they that were with him] David then had some attending on him in his flight, though he be said to come alone to the Priest, 1 Sam. 21. 1. It seemeth they stayed for him in some place nigh, and he brought of the shew-bread thither to them. See 1 Sam. 21. 5. for he being loath then to be seen in Nob, went alone to the tabernacle that so, little or no notice might be taken of him, and that he might have the better convenience to confer privately with the Priest.

V. 4. the shew-bread] לֶחֶם הַפָּנִים, לֶחֶם תָּמִיד, לֶחֶם הַמַּעֲרֶכֶת, as if we should say bread of apposition, or setting before: Syr. לחמא דסדורא lechma dephathur eh femorin. The bread of the Lords table: the Hebr. called it, לֶחֶם פָּנִים, lechem phanim, bread of faces, or presence, Exod. 25. 30. because it stood before the Lord all the week, upon the golden table appointed for that service, Levit. 24. 8, 9. and placed in the formost part of the tabernacle, to the North-side, next after the holy of holies: there was none other use thereof, but to be furnished with twelve loaves or cakes: some say, that thereby the twelve tribes of Israel might testifie and acknowledge, that God did perpetually feed them, and prepare a table for them, or to mind them of the poor: these loaves were made of two tenths of an Ephah, or bushel of fine flower, and were set, by six in a row, upon this golden, or pure table before the Lord: the old bread which had stood there all the week, was taken away, and eaten by the Priests, Levit. 24. 5, 6. and new set in the place every Sabbath day; because they were ever set before the Lord, they were called panes propositionis, and לֶחֶם תְּמִידִים lechem hattamid, perpetual bread, which we call shew-bread, because these loaves did ever shew, or present themselves to the Lord upon that table instead of Israel; for as the Ark signified the presence of the Lord in his Church, so this table with the twelve loaves, signified the multitude of the faithful, presented unto him in his Church, under his view, care, and providence, continually serving in his presence; and lastly, his continual feeding them with the bread of life, Christ. See John 6. 32. Eph. 5 2.

which was not lawful for him to eat] According to the letter of the law: but according to the intent hereof, it was lawful.

neither for them which were with him] It appears hence, that they did eat of the shew-bread, as well as David: and this is added, lest the Pharisees might think, that David might do it by some extraordinary warrant, being a Prophet: they that were with him were no Prophets, yet they also did eat it, and are not blamed, because it was in a case of necessity, to which ceremonial lawes must yield.

but only for the Priests] Exod. 29. 32, 33. Levit. 8. 31. & 24. 9.

V. 5. in the law] In the ceremonial law ordained in mount Sina. Numb. 28. 6. 9.

the Priests in the temple prophane the Sabbath] That is, in your sense, who judge any labour on the Sabbath to be prophanation of the Law: but there are Sabbath-dayes works; therefore the Priests labour bodily, killing cattel for sacrifices on that day, and that in the court of the temple, and yet sin not, because this was their duty enjoyned them by God.

are blameleſſe] Such as you have no cause to complain of; blameleſſe, not only by mercy or connivence, but according to the law. So the Greek word ἀναίτιοι signifieth unreprovable, or without crime: they do not violate the Sabbath, because they do that which appertaineth to the service of God: some note, that the Brethren, though rigid obſervers of the Sabbath; yet held this Maxime, that neceſſity, or danger of life put by the Sabbath: that is, in caſe of neceſſity, there was no breach of the Sabbath, neither was neceſſary labour therein, any servile work See Tremel. note on this place.

V. 6. one greater than the temple] More holy, more excellent; Christ the Lord of the temple, ἡ ἀναβαθμὸς ὧν ὁ πάπᾶ, Chrysost. hom. 40. in Matth. 12. the truth, not the type onely, which preceded in the Priest: if they were blameleſſe, though they cut wood, kindled fiers, ſlew beaſts, and ſacrificed on the Sabbath day, because all this vvas subordinate to the ſervice of the temple, how much more are my diſciples in doing that vvhich enableth them to attend on me in a greater buſineſſe than ſacrifice. That is, propagation of the Goſpel of Chriſt, vvho alone can ſave us, vvhich the lavv, and ſacrifices therein appointed, could never do, Rom. 8. 3. Heb. 10. 4.

V. 7. I will have mercy] See on Hoſ. 6. and chap. 9. 13. God preferreth relieving mans neceſſities, before the performance of his ovvn external ſervice: ſo he concludes vvorks of mercy to be Sabbath dayes works and no prophanations.

V. 8. for the Son of man] I vvho am the Lord of the Sabbath, declare, that the Sabbath vvhich was appointed for man, muſt yield to mans safery and welfare; ſpecially when either of them are in jeopardy, Mark 2. 27, 28. hereto it is obſervable, vvhich Athanaſius To. 1. de ſemente, and others note, that Chriſt vvrought his moſt illuſtrious miracles on the Sabbath dayes, not breaking the lavv, or introducing any new thing contrary to it, Vertul. Marcion. l. 4. c. 12. excellently noteth, for (ſaith he) he here fulfilled the lavv, while he interpreteth the condition hereof, while he doth thoſe things which the lavv excepted from the Sabbath dayes reſt, while he maketh the Sabbath day ſelf, (by Gods bleſſing holy from the beginning) more holy by his doing good thereon.

V. 9. when he was departed thence] Out of thoſe corn fields mentioned, verſe 1. Mark 3. 1. Luke 6. 6. or from the place where the Phariſees calumniated him by thoſe vvords, verſe 2. thy diſciples do that vvhich is not lavvful to do, &c.

he vent into their ſynagogue] See on chap. 11. 1. on another Sabbath he vvent into the ſynagogue of the ſame town, Luke 6. 6.

V. 10. his hand withered] His right hand, Luke 6. 6. the vvant vvhereof made his condition more calamitous.

they asked him] They ſtay not till Chriſt had done this miracle; but by their ſpeech, firſt put him upon it, that they might pick a quarrel vvith him.

V. 11. what man ſhall there be among you] Will any of you that are ſo ſtrict for the Sabbath, let a ſheep perish thereon for vvant of help?

V. 12. a man better than a ſheep] All creatures on earth vvere made for man, it were therefore a shame to save a sheep, and suffer a man to perish: it is lawful by your own tradition and practice, to save a beast on the Sabbath-day, and should not I heal on the Sabbath?

it is lawful to do well, &c.] Legal ceremonies ought not to hinder works of charity: Nulla necessitas major est charitate, Jo. em. l. 1. ep. 37. Chromatio, there is no necessity greater than charity.

V. 13. Stretch forth thy hand] That withered hand: he commanded, and with ill gave him ability so to do; by healing it on an instant, without which he could not have stretched it out: so when God giveth us strength to do what he commandeth us, it is our duty, but his grace and mercy that we can in some good measure doe it.

it was restored whole] So Christ shewed his divine power, as in many other like miracles.

as the other] Whith was sound and well.

V. 14. held a Counsel] The Pharisees went out of the synagogue, leaving the multitude, before whom they durst not for shame calumniate him, for this work of divine power and mercy: and took counsel to destroy Christ.

how they might destroy him] Here appeareth the invincible malice of these adversaries: he healed all their infirmities and diseases, and they consult how to destroy him: to them belonged that which Moses said, Deut. 32. 5, 6, they are a perverse and crooked generation: do ye thus requite the Lord, O foolish people and unwise? the wicked to abuse the mercies of God, that even the good which he doth for them maketh them worse.

V. 15. when Jesus knew it] by his divine knowledge.

he withdrew himself] Though he could by his power have defended himself against all their attempts, yet he would deport himself as a man, and by ordinary means keep out of their hands, till his time of suffering came. See Joh. 4. 1. 3.

great multitudes followed him] The multitude, whom in their pride of heart the Pharisees contemned, as ignorant, and impious (John 7. 49) were more sensible of Gods mercy than they; and therefore followed him withdrawing himself: they envied not his glory: consider what a dangerous thing envie is.

he healed them all] That had need of healing, and desired it. See chap. 4. 23. Mark 3. 10 the malice of some shall not overcome and intercept his mercy toward others.

V. 16. that they should not make him known] Lest the Pharisees, should find him, and endeavour to destroy him before the appointed time, or till after his resurrection, as chap. 17. 9. See also ch. 8. 4.

V. 17. spoken by the Prophet] Isaiah 42. 1. See notes on that place: how little reason the Jews had, to expect a victorious, pompous, and externally glorious Messias, the Prophets by whom the Lord promised him to the fathers, evidently make it appeare, they describing him to be a peaceable, meek, and humble person, so far from contention, quarrelling, oppressing, or injuring of any that he was the man of sorrowes. Isai. 53. not so much as requiring injuries, with any clamour or complaint, but doing good to all, healing his enemies. Luke 22. 51. praying for them. Luke 23. 34.

V. 18. whom I have chosen] To be a Saviour of the word. See Hebrews 5. 5.

my beloved, &c.] Chap. 3. 17.

I will put my spirit upon him] Isaiah 11. 2. & 61. 1. John 3. 34. Colos. 2. 9.

judgement to the Gentiles] κρισιν, by judgement he meaneth the true worship, preaching of the Gospel, the doctrine of salvation by Christ: by Gentiles, those people which were not of the Jewes, such were the Galileans and Tyrians now present, such are we. So was the prophesie then in part fulfilled: also hereby may be meant a setled estate of the Gospel, because Christ was to preach (as here by himself to these Gentiles, so by his Apostles the word) the truth of the Gospel, whereby to cast out superstition, which thing, whereoyer it is done, the Lord doth reign and judge there.

V. 19. shall not strive] He shall do his office meekly and humbly, and not manage his spiritual kingdom by violence, nor unnecessarily contest with the Pharisees, who consulted how to destroy him, verse 14. he shall not strive with violence, vociferations and clamour, as those, who having a bad cause in hand, think to make it good, by importunity and railing.

nor cry] As men enraged, Ephes 4 31 as those, who do all by tumultuous out-cries. See John 18 40.

his voyce in the streets] As those who clamour in the eares of the people abroad and in publick, for vain ostentation, and to be heard of men, out of the house where they teach or pray; but shall teach the Gospel with all meekenesse and modesty.

V. 20. a bruised reed] By these two similitudes are described Christs gracious clemency in dealing with the most infirm; as those who had onely a desire of grace, and some slender beginnings of conversion and faith, as many in this multitude following him, seemed to have: the meaning also may further be, that he shall not condemn such as labour under the burden of sinne, but rather quiet their consciences, chap. 11. 28, 29, Ezek. 34. 16.

smoaking flax] Alluding to the wick of a candle put out, that onely smoaks and gives no light. or very obscurely burning, it seemeth to be a proverbial manner of speaking among the vulgar: Christ would here shew, that he will not extinguish, or cast away the weakest and slenderest measure of grace in any, but foment and cherish it to salvation; as it were distilling and secretly infusing oyle into the lamp, the spirit of illumination into the infirm soule; of which clemency of our Saviour we have daily experience, who spareth us, and followeth us continually with new accessions of grace, who have in our selves a very obscure measure of knowledge and strength to do good, but as a bruised reed.

judgement unto victory] Till he shall bring under, or confound all his enemies, and untill the truth of the Gospel do prevail and overcome, throwing down principality and powers of darknesse, in the Hebrew it is מִשְׁפָּט Leemeth, to truth, such shall the Gospel be acknowledged, in spight of all powerful enemies; though this victory cannot be achelved without hard and dangerous conflicts, the restlesse adversary doing all the mischief he possibly can, to oppose and overthrow it. See Rev. 12. 7. 13. 15. 17.

V. 21. in his name] In him, when they know him aright, lest any should think that this appertained to the Jewes only, he nameth the Gentiles to be converted, and to believe in Christ: in citing this prophecy, the Evangelist like a faithful interpreter, giveth the full sense, though he omit some words, lesse pertinent to his purpose; or vary others, as they best might serve to expresse the matter which he historifieth.

V. 22. was brought unto him] Luke 11. 14. very like it is, that he was made blinde and dumb by the devil that possessed him. See on chap. 9. 32. and now he was brought unto Christ by some friends; when he had in his recesse and withdrawing from the people, shewed himself to be the Messias, by healing many.

V. 23. all the people were amazed] The word and works of Christ have variable effects, as hearers and spectatours, these admire the power and goodnesse of God, but the Pharisees blaspheme.

is not this the son of David?] The Messias, See on chap 9. 27.

V. 24. when the Pharisees heard it] Chap. 9. 34.

this fellow] This man; so it is likely they might here call Christ in contempt, not vouchsafing so much as to name him; though δαίμων among the Greeks, did not always import contempt of the person to which it related: but sometimes it was a note of honour and eminency.

by Beelzebub,] See on Chap. 9. 34. and on Luke 11. 15.

V. 25. Jesus knew their thoughts] They are charged in the foregoing verse to have said so, what need Christ then know their thoughts? The answer may be that they said it in their hearts onely; or that he knew it the same way, by which he knowes mens thoughts without any mans relation, though as man he heard it not his self.

every kingdom divided] As division overthrowes, houses, cities and kingdomes; so must it destroy Satans kingdom; if one devil should give power to men to cast out another. See Luke 11. 17.

V. 27. by whom do your children cast them out?] Some understand this of the Apostles, who were Jewes: others of Exorcists among them, Act. 19. 13. others of such Jewes as did by Christs name cast out devils, but did not follow Christ, as Mark 9. 38. Luke 9. 49. yet none of these were blamed by the Jewes: why then should Christ be so taxed? The first interpretation is most probable.

V. 28. by the Spirit of God] By power from God.

the kingdom of God] The kingdom of the promised Messias under the New Testament. See Luke 11 20.

V. 29. or else how can, &c.] If Gods powerful kingdom were not come among you, how could so many devils, be cast out? they are strong, and will not be driven out of possession by any, but a stronger hand.

V. 30. he that is not with me, is against me] As in war, he that fighteth not for his Prince, is an enemy: and as they which are to gather in their masters harvest, if they neglect it, are fearerers and destroyers; so they that will not defend me against blasphemies (wherein they can) betray my cause and are enemies.

V. 31. wherefore I say unto you] He speaketh this to shew, that either the Pharisees had committed this sin, or to warn men to take heed of it, by them who had come neer unto it.

all manner of sin] Great and small. Mark 3. 28. Luke 12. 10. John 5. 16.

shall be forgiven unto men] To some men, or any sin else may be forgiven.

blaspheme against the holy Ghost] This is conceived to be a malicious opposing the truth of the Gospel, made knowyn to us by the holy Ghost, joyned with persecution of those that professe it, (and that meerly because they do so) with final impenitency: See Augustin. Macedonio ep. 50. paulo ante finem, and Augustin. in Evang. Matth. ferm. 11. post init.

V. 32. against

V. 32. against the son of man] Against Christ by way of disgrace as he is man, or against any man; for it is a grievous sinne, to calumniate or wrong any man, yet pardonable: but to sinne with so high an hand, as verse 31. against God himselfe, as hath been said, is unpardonable, Numb. 15. 30. Heb. 10. 29.

neither in this world, nor in the world to come] That is, never: but shall be punished both here, and in the life to come, Mark 3. 29. 1 John 5. 16.

V. 33. Either make the tree good] Either confesse that I am good, because ye see me cast out devils, and good, or else convince me of any evil action, before ye prejudicate my person, or either being forth good fruits, that ye may appear to be good; or else confesse your selves to be evil, as indeed you are: be what yee seem, or seem as you are.

tree is known by his fruit] So must you and I, by our words and actions.

V. 34. O generation of Vipers!] See on chap. 3. 7.

how can ye, being evil, speak good things?] Hypocrites will speake good things to deceive men: yet sometimes the evil of their hearts breaketh out into their Tongues; lee they Heart agree with thy Tongue.

for out of the abundance, &c.] Luke 6. 45. The heart is the fountain of words and actions; according to the veins and quality thereof, the words do commonly relish.

V. 35. a good man] A man of a sanctified heart and affection, will speake to Gods honour and edification of others, Psalm 37. 30, 31. but a wicked mans heare (like the unheald waters of Jericho, 2 King. 2. 19.) sendeth out onely streams of death and barrennesse.

the treasure] That is, the abundance, and indefieient store, of the Spirit of Sanctification. See John 7. 38. 39.

V. 36. every idle word] Every vain word, as Ephes. 5. 6. or of every false word: much more then for every injurious calumny, prophanation and blasphemy.

give account] A metaphor from accomptants, as Rom. 14. 12. Phil. 4. 17, Eccles. 11, 14. We have need therefore to set a carefull watch before the doores of our lips; it is a good advice of Jerom. ep. 22. lib. 2. Consider long what thou must speak, and being yet silent, take heed thou speak nothing to be repented of; let thy thoughts ponder words, & linguæ officium animi libra dispenset: and let the ballance of thy mind weigh out the task of thy tongue.

V. 37. for by thy words, &c.] See Job 19 22. this also seemeth a Proverbiall and vulgar manner of speaking, that every man should be condemned or justified by his own mouth, or words thereof; but Christ here useth it to a different sense; to shew, that perverse words, as being interpreters, otherwise of the secret malice of the heart, should be enough to condemn them: it is related to that he said before: idle talk condemneth men of levity of mind: so in all other sins of the heart expressed by words.

and] Or, as, Exod. 21. 15, 17. Num. 30. 4, 5, 6.

V. 38. then certain of the Scribes] Chapter, 16. 1. Luke 11. 29. These would pretend a willingnesse to believe, might they but be satisfied, and convinced with such a sign as they required, Luke 11. 16.

sign from thee] A miracle, or sign from Heaven, that we may be ascertained that God hath sent thee to teach us. chap. 16. 1. John 6. 30. 31. for they had seen many miraculously healed, but yet could not believe, or would not acknowledge the hand and power of God therein.

V. 39. adulterous generation] A bastardly brood, Hos. 1. 2. no true children of Abraham, John 8. 39 because so much degenerate from his Faith and Sanctity. See on Chapter, 16. 4. he noteth their vain confidence in being the posterity of Abraham, in such their defection from the love and true worship of God.

no signe be given unto it] No sign shall be given them now at their request, but afterward, one shall be given them in the death and resurrection of Christ, which shall be to the shame and confusion of unbelievers.

the sign of the Prophet Jonas] Whose lying so long in the Whales belly, was a type of Christs burial, or such a miracle as was wrought upon Jonas.

V. 40. For as Jonas] Jonas. 1. 17.

the Son of man be three dayes] Some part of three dayes; for he was buried towards the end of the sixth day, lay in the grave the whole seventh day, and rose not again untill about the dawning of the first day of the week, of which the night was a part; so Hieron. in Jon. 2. 1. saith, that συνεκδοχικῶς, synechdochically, a part is put for the whole.

in the heart] Within the body of the earth, ἐν τῇ καρδίᾳ in the heart; so the Hebrewes say לֵבָב יַמִּים, lebab jamim, Ezek. 28. 2. the heart of the sea, Jonah 2. 4. 70. Ἐν καρδίᾳ θαλάσσης, the midst of the seas, or the deeps, so Deut 4. 11. לְהוֹשְׁכִים לֵב lev hashamaim, the heart of heaven. 70. ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ, in heaven. Targ. עֲרַע שְׁמַיָּא, ad summitatem cæli, Exod. 4. 14. לְבָבוֹ he libbo. 70. ἐν ἑαυτῷ, within himself. And so Hilary interpreteth this ἐν καρδίᾳ, interiora terræ, and Mark 2. 6. ἐν καρδίαις αὐτῶν. The Syriack gives there, verse 8. according to the Greek, ἐν ἑαυτοῖς, בְּנַפְשׁוֹתְהוֹן, benaphshethun, in their souls, or within themselves, or among themselves: so doth it among other things import the midst or the inward part of the earth: so was Christs body being buried within the earth; that is, in the grave.

V. 41. shall rise in judgement] Alluding to the manner of humane Courts of judicature; in which witnesses are said to arise, or stand up, to give in witnesse or evidence, Deut. 19. 15, 16. Marke 14. 57. Acts 6. 13. The very example of the Ninivites, in the day of judgement, shall be an argument of condemnation to the obstinate Jews.

this generation] See on chap. 11. 16.

shall condemn it] Shall cause it to be condemned, as being against the men thereof an argument of condemnation.

because they repented] Jon. 3. 5. They repented at Jonas preaching, who was but a Prophet, a meer infirm man; but the Jewes would not repent at the preaching of Christ, God and man.

V. 42. The Queen of the South] 1 Kings 10. 1. The Queen of Sheba, whose Nation bare South from Jerusalem, and the land of Israel.

shall rise up, &c.] See on verse 41.

from the uttermost parts of the earth] For Sheba was in the uttermost parts of Arabia the happy: and on the mouth or entrance of the Arabian sea. Jerem. 50. 26. and in those times there was not much more of those parts of the world discovered unto them, so that they knew no more beyond that.

to hear the wisedom of Solomon] In things natural and humane, 1 Kings 10. 3. whereas here is another manner of wisdom, that is, unto salvation, 2 Tim. 3. 16.

V. 43. When the unclean spirit] Luke 11. 24. He could as easily have said, The devil will more and more violently carry you into greater sins, untill at last he destroy you: But he useth this parabolical admonition, that the penitent might learn caution, and the rest be lesse exaspirated against him.

walketh through drie places] The devil is compared here to a man cast out of his dwelling, and finding no contentment in dry places, and deserts, incommodious for habitation.

seeking rest] That is, a place to settle in. Truly and properly, the devils rest, is in unrest, disquietnesse, and in doing all the mischief he may; there is no rest to the wicked: they are like the troubled sea, when it cannot rest: you may easily know, whose influence governs those restless spirits, whose sleep departs from them, except they cause some to fall: except they doe some mischief, Prov. 4. 16.

and findeth none] For he resteth not, except where he can doe some mischief: he is like a malecontented exile, so long as he cannot infest man.

V. 44. I will return] When he findeth not some more wicked heare, or some others to pervert to their destruction, he advifeth with himself, how he may make them more impious and damnable whom he hath already corrupted, and set in the way to hell until damnation, into my house] Here appeareth the miserable condition of the wicked; how ever great, glorious, or happy they appear to the sense of the world; they are but the Devils houses, wherein he claimeth and holdeth a perpetual interest; yea, though he sometimes permit them to some more sober fits and appearances of Repentance and amendment, as he did Pharaoh, Ahab, &c.

findeth it empty] And none to hinder his re-entering. Continuing in this allegory, he sheweth their desperate condition who are not guided by the good Spirit of God: they are ever ready, on all occasions, (as in study of revenge, anger, &c. Ephes. 4. 26, 27. envy, James 3. 14. and in incentives to intemperance, lust, &c.) to entertain the Devil in their hearts; in that they desire to serve him, by doing more evil than possibly they can, or dare do: that which he saith in the following words, further expresseth this:

swept and garnished] Either by some formal repentance, or secure, void of all fear of God, living in pleasure, for this is Satans garnishing, whereby the sinner is made ready for him to entertain him again.

V. 45. then goeth he] Finding not the means to doe mischief to others, which he desired and expected, he repossesseth himself of that heart he had before, by carrying the sinner into some more desperate and damnable condition than before he was in.

seven other spirits] That is many, as Revel. 1. 4. seven a definite number is put for an indefinite.

more wicked than himself] To keep the more secure possession, and do the more mischief there.

and the last state, &c.] See Hebrewes, 6. 4. & 10. 26. 2 Peter 2. 20.

to this wicked generation] Which seeks a sign, verse 38. the Jews having been in some sort freed from Satans dominion, by Christs abode among them, his Doctrine and miracles: so that being now willing to destroy Christ, and to entertain Satan again, he intimateth that they should be like a repossessed man, ten-fold more children of the Devil, than before: consider here the inevitable danger, you that relapse and turn again to the filthy vomit of your old sins.

V. 46. while he yet talked to the people] This sheweth a reason, why why he would not presently go to his mother and brethren; because they came unseasonably to interrupt him in his fathers work. See Luke 2.49.

behold his mother] Mark 3.31. Luke 8. 20.

and his brethren] His kinsmen, (as Gen.13.8. see 13.55.) where four of them are mentioned. James, Joses, Simon. Judas.

stood without] Either in modesty, because he was instructing the people: and they could not but know, how unseasonable it must needs be to interrupt him then, or because they could not get in for the preſs.

desiring to speak with him] Concerning what is not recorded: some think to acquaint him with some dangers towards him by the Phariſees: as Acts 13. 16.

V. 47. one said unto him] One at firſt, and afterwards many, Mark 3. 32.

thy brethren] See on verſe 46.

V. 48. who is my mother?]Not that he did in any measure deſpiſe his mother and brethren; but that he preferred the ſervice of God, and ſalvation of the people, and becauſe he would not be unſeaſonably troubled, See John 2. 4.

V. 49. behold my mother] He declareth hereby how he loveth and eſteemeth the righteous, even as his dear mother and brethren: he is the firſt-born among many brethren; and our brother, the word became fleſh, John 1. 12. 13. 14. See alſo Rom. 8.17. and ſuch as we are (as Hilary noteth de trin.lib. 11.) ſinne the houſhold of faith, Gal.6.10.

V. 50. Whoſoever ſhall do the will, &c.] Matth. 7.21. Not every one of you that heareth me, but he that faithfully doth my Fathers will.

and ſiſter] It may be there were preſent ſome of his kinſ-women alſo, though they are not mentioned, or elſe he addes it for the comfort of thoſe religious women, that followed him, and miniſtred to him, Luke 8. 2. 3.

and mother] The holy are near and dear unto me, as thoſe to whom the lawes of nature and fleſh and blood obligeth me; herein grace is better than nature.

CHAP. XXII.

Verſe 1. THe ſame day] On that day: which phraſe although in ſome places of Scripture it ſignifie not preciſely the very ſame day, but about that time, as in the Prophets, Iſaiah. 4.1.& 26.1. yet in an Hiſtoricall narration as this is, it ſignifieth the ſame day, and here appeareth our Saviours unwearied endeavour in preaching ſalvation to the people.

went Jeſus out of the houſe]His going into the houſe is mentioned, Mark 3.19. as it ſeems to refreſh his Diſciples, who by reaſon of the multitudes importunity, had not time to eat bread, Mark.3.20. therefore Chriſt leaves his meat and the houſe, to go into a larger place where he might teach the people: ſo was it his meat and drink to do his Fathers work, John 4.34.

and ſate by the Sea ſide] Mark 4. 1. by the ſea of Tiberias, John 6.1. which lay near unto his own countrey, whither he went, when he had finiſhed the enſuing Parables, v.53.54.

V. 2. great multitudes were gathered. &c. The malice of the Phariſees, deſiring a ſign from Heaven to confirm his authority and doctrine, chap. 12. 38. though Chriſt would not ſatisfie, yet the people flock to him.

ſo that he went into a ſhip] The multitude preſſing him, as Mark 5.31. Luke 5.1. alſo that being freed from the throng, he might the better be heard an ſeen of his auditours, being at ſome diſtance from him. and all their faces towards him; therefore the ſhip was put off a little from the ſhore.

and ſat] This was the uſual geſture of our Saviours teaching: as alſo of their Doctours, Matth. 23.2. See chapter 5. 1. Luke 4.20. although he ſtood when he publickly read the Scriptures, Luke 4. 16. theſe things are of their own nature arbitrary, and therefore are moſt ſafely regulated by the cuſtomes of time, place, and perſons, ſo as that we make no diviſion in things indifferent; but there follow the cuſtome of that Church whereof Gods providence hath made us a part.

multitude ſtood on the ſhore] That they might more conveniently ſee and hear him.

V. 3. He ſpake many things, &c.] He ſpake many Parables, according to the ſeverall capacities of his auditours and their various imployments. Some of them poſſibly were husbandmen; ſome Merchants, others fiſhermen: he teacheth them all in their ſeverall elements: ſuch ſpeeches are ſometimes called Parables, although there be no ſimilitude in them: as Pſalm 49 4. (See on John 10.6.) but here the word ſignifies a leeting forth of ſpirtual things, under certain repreſentations, and ſimilitudes, taken from things ſeculae and worldly: in his Sermon on the mount, wherein he taught concerning bleſſednesſe; the ſenſe and meaning of the Law, &c. he ſpeaketh more literally and plainly, or in Parables very eaſie to be underſtood: but here he ſpeaketh onely in Parables, not expounding them to the people: the reaſon is given, verſe 11. 34. 35. yet Parables expounded (as ſome of theſe are afterwards) much help both underſtanding and memorie, as ſhewing us the face of heavenly things in earthly glaſſes: alſo they work much upon our affections, when they are taken from things which we either love or hate. (See on Luke 5. 36.) and indeed, as the Sun is more eaſily viewed under ſome thinne cloud; ſo is divine truth under ſome ſimilitudes taken from things familiar and nearer to our underſtandings. See concerning allegorica, Jerom.on Amos.l.3.c.6.9. Auguſtin.Tr.6. contr. Fauſt. Manich. l. 12.c.17.18.29 &c.

A ſower went forth to ſow] Luke 8. 5. This is the firſt of the ſeven Parables in this Chapter; wherein is intimated, that the ſeed of eternal life, which is ſown in preaching of the Goſpel, thriveth not ſo well in one, as in another: and the reaſon is, for that men, for the moſt part, either do not receive it, or loſe it or ſuffer it not to ripen: therefore he admoniſheth his hearers, that their flocking after him, would not profit them, except they keep it in in faithfull hearts, and brought forth the fruits thereof in newneſſe of life, which in likly-hood a fourth part of them only would doe: the Lord ſoweth largely (ſaith Athanaſius, de ſemente.) but the fruit bearing is πᾶρὰ τὸ ὑποκείμενον according to the ſubject receiving it; when it withers on the ſtony ground; &c. It is not ἀφθονία καὶ σπόρου, ἀλλὰ ἀ καρπία καὶ τῆς γῆς in any impotency of the ſeed, but in the fault of the earth.

V. 4. Some fell by the wayes ſide] Some high wayes goe thorow plowed Fields, not incloſed in Champian Countreyes, ſuch as it ſeems that was where our Saviour converſed, chapter, 12.1. there the ſeed could not enter, becauſe the ground was hardened by the feet of Paſſengers; ſo the ſeed lying on the ground, was not received into the Earth at all: as ſome hearers receive no benefit by the VVord Preached, either becauſe they hear regardleſſely, or underſtand not what they hear, Verſe 19.

the Fowles came, and devoured] Here is mentioned another cauſe why they grew not: what the Earth received not, the Fowles carried away; what theſe Fowles are, See Verſe 19.

V. 5. Some fell upon ſtony places] VVhere the graine might fall in between ſtone and ſtone, but could find no good rooting: ſo ſome are a little affected at the hearing of the VVord, as Herod was; but it can finde no ſirme ground in ſuch ſtony and hardened hearts, as the flockes of Padan Aram could not be watered, untill the ſtone was removed from the Wells mouth, Geneſis, 29. 3. So neither can the Waters of Life, (whereof the Waters running from the Sanctuary of God, Ezekiel, 47. 1. &c. were a Figure) in the Holy Scriptures contained, be taſted, untill that heavy ſtone, the hardneſſe of the Auditours hearts, be rolled and removed away.

where they had not much earth] Not much care to receive, not much underſtanding to apprehend, not much Faith to believe, not much will to obey, or not much love to retain it.

forthwith they ſprung up] They could not root downward, becauſe of the hardneſſe of the Earth; but ſhot up ſuddainly, becauſe, as Euthymius ſaith; Quia mollicia terrâ occultantur, velociter exoriuntur: Seeds covered with little earth, ſoon ſpring up.

V. 6. when the Sunne was up, they were ſcorched] ἐκαυματίσθη Syr. It ſelt the heat: the heate dried up all the moiſture which ſhould nouriſh them, and ſo they periſhed.

becauſe they had no root, &c.] Another cauſe of their decaying, is want of root which ſhould receive moyſture to nouriſh it, as the mouth doth Food for the body: though the blade wither being blaſted, yet if the root be in any depth of earth, it may ſhoot out again; ſo though a Chriſtian be under ſome ſcorching temptations, dangerouſly blaſted in the outward man, yet if he continue in the Faith, and Love of God, grounded and ſettled, (Coloſſians, 1.23.) He ſhall be like the Tree planted by the Rivers of Water. (Pſalm 1.) but if this root fail, all periſhes.

V. 7. Some fell among thornes, &c.] This had ſome root and growth; but is choaked up with thornes: ſo the Word in worldly hearers findeth ſome love to it, and purpoſes to obey it; but the cares and pleaſures of this world overgrow all, and make it fruitleſſe.

V. 8. fell into good ground] In the application, we may not thinke, that the Heavenly Seed found any good ground, but made it ſuch. Lydia indeed, like good ground, attended unto that which Paul preached, Acts 16. but God opened her heart thereto: the heart muſt be prepared, or the word ſhall never proſper, and profit: Therefore the Prophet ſaith Breake up your fallow ground, and ſow not among thornes. Jeremiah, 4. 3. that is, repent and root out your ſinnes: but the Lord ſaith alſo: I will take the ſtonie heart out of their fleſh, and will give them an heart of fleſh, Ezekiel 11. 19. See 2 Timothy 2. 19. which except he doe, no Art, Power, Wiſedome, or Councell of man can doe it, and brought forth Fruit] The firſt ſprung not up: the ſecond ſprung up, but had not ſufficient Root: the third grew up, but brought forth no Fruit: but this grew up and fructified.

ſome an hundred fold, ſome ſixtie fold, &c.] Gods Word doth not fructifie alike in all; the moſt Fruit is beſt pleaſing to God, John 15. 2. 5. yet he deſpiſeth not the leaſt, Chapter, 12. 20.

ears to hear, let him hear] As if he ſaid the Parable is hard, and requireth diligent attention and conſideration. See Chapter, 11. 15. and Revelation 2. 7. let them whoſe hearts and ears God hath opened, be attentive: all are deaf, untill God open. See Pſalm 40.6. If God have given thee an ear to hear, receive not the grace of God in vain; make good uſe of it, and hearken diligently to his Word.

V. 10. the Diſciples came] To wit, after he had done teaching the people, and was gone out of the ſhip: See Mark 4.10. for it is not likely that our Saviour would leave teaching the people, to confer with the Apoſtles, untill he had uttered all he had to ſay unto the people. (See verſe 36.) at that preſent time.

and ſaid unto him] Two queſtions were now moved to our Saviour: the firſt recorded here: why he ſpake to the people in Parables: the ſecond, Mark 4.10. 13. what was the ſenſe of the Parable? to the firſt our Saviour anſwers, verſe 11. to the ſecond verſe 18.

Why ſpeakeſt thou unto them in Parables?] In ſpeeches more obſcure than uſual, and ſuch as neither they nor we underſtand: This ſheweth a pious charity in the Apoſtles, in that they not only deſired to underſtand theſe Parables their ſelves, but that the people alſo might underſtand them; and it is probable that they apprehended from Chriſts concluſion, verſe 9. that themſelves alſo, yet wanted ſomething of the ear to hear, and underſtand. See Mark 4. 10. So alſo it may appear in that Chriſt reproved them, Mark 4.13.

V. 11. Becauſe it is given unto you to know, &c.] To you that fear God I will interpret the Parables. See Pſalm 25. 14. which not being unfolded, are hidden myſteries; and like the cloudy pillar, dark toward the Egyptians, but light to Iſrael, Exodus 14. 20. Proſper ſaith well, de vocat. Gent. l. 1. c. 24. ut Deus cognoſcatur, ex Deo ſit. that we may know God, it is of God. See Ezek. 11. 19. Jer. 24.7. Prov. 8. 9. Prov. 14.6.

to them it is not given] The underſtanding of things Divine and Heavenly, is to the Faithful: the reſt either know them not, or to their further condemnation, who knew their Maſters Will, and would not doe it: the free Grace of God maketh the difference: See Pſalm 25. 9. 12, 14. Prov 3. 32. 1 Cor. 4.7.

V. 12. For whoſoever hath, &c.] Chapter, 25. 29. It is the cuſtome of the world to give to rich men, and to take away from the poore; this they unjuſtly doe: but God will juſtly reward thoſe that uſe his Ordinances well, and puniſh them that abuſe them.

even that he hath] That which he ſeemeth to have, Luke 8. 18. or thoſe common graces which he did not well uſe when he had them.

V. 13. Therefore ſpake I to them in Parables, &c. The reaſon why theſe myſteries are no more plainly delivered unto them, is for their foregoing obſtinacy: Iſa. 6.9.10. compare the words here following, and ſee alſo Mich. 3.5,6,7.

they ſeeing, ſee not] Though they dayly ſee the miracles wrought by me, yet will they not take any notice of my Divine Power, that they may believe, and be ſaved, John 6.36. See the like, Deut. 29. 2, 3, 4.

hearing they hear not] Though they hear with their outward ears, that which might convince, their errour, and inform them of the Truth, yet they receive it not inwardly, but obſtinately withſtand it.

neither do they underſtand] Nor conceive aright, what is delivered unto them, John 2. 19, 20. & 8. 27. 43.

in them is fulfilled the Propheſie, &c.] This is no new thing, neither did it ſeem ſtrange unto you that they are ſo hard hearted: ſo was it with their Fathers, and ſo it was foretold that it ſhould be with them, Acts 7.51, 52.

By hearing ye ſhall hear] So Mark 4.12. Luke 8.10. John 12.40. Acts 28.20. Rom. 11.8 Iſa. 6.9.

V. 15. for this people is waxed groſſe, &c.] As in the body, when the heart is overgrown with fat, both that, and all the parts of the body, thence deriving vital ſpirits, grow heavy, dull and inactive: ſo it is in the inward man; when the heart is grown ſenſual and obdurate, men cannot apprehend Gods truth for their ſanctification and ſalvation. See Iſaiah 6. 10.

Their eyes have they cloſed] This ſheweth a reaſon of that heavy judgement denounced againſt Iſrael, Iſa. 6. 9, 10. the obſtinate people would not hear, nor underſtand; but as thoſe who wilfully ſtopped their ears, and ſhut their eyes, that they might the more ſecurely run upon their own deſtruction, and neither heare nor ſee that which might ſtay them, and have made for their converſion and ſafety; deafneſſe in a ſharp feaver (ſay Phyſicians) is a ſigne of madneſſe: more miſerable are obſtinate ſinners: the lunaticke have ſome excuſe; the Will is not in fault, where men are not themſelves, ſaid Salvian de gub. lib. 6.) the more condemnable are theſe, qui ſani inſaniebant; who are wittingly mad, where there is wilful malicouſneſſe ἑκοῦσῃ καὶ ἀπροχῇ καὶ χάριτος there is abſence of Graces Cyril. Hieroſol. Catec 6. Therefore God juſtly deſerteth thoſe, who unjuſtly firſt deſerted him, following their obſtinacy, by giving them up to ſpiritual blindneſſe; withdrawing the common light which he had given them: his judgements ever follow, they never preceed mens ſins: where his eternall Decree, and Omniſcience precede, it is to appoint impenitent ſinners to puniſhment, not to ſin.

W. 16. but bleſſed be your eyes] Ye are happy who underſtand theſe Myſteries of ſalvation, Chap. 16. 17. for as Irenæus, ſaieth, l 4.c. 6. nec enim lumen deficit propter eos qui ſemetipſos excæcaverunt, the light faileth not for their fault who have blinded themſelves.

for they ſee] Ye not onely ſee with your bodily eyes, as theſe wicked men do; but alſo with the eyes of your mind: See John 6. 40.

V. 17. Many Prophets and Righteous men] Your condition is better not onely than theſe wicked mens, but alſo than that of the Fathers, who lived in former Ages; for ye know more of me, and heavenly Myſteries, than they did; and where ye doubt, you have one preſent to reſolve you, and plainly and infallibly expound unto you the Myſteries of Eternall Life, and Salvation; which the Fathers ſaw but darkely, through the clouds of the Law, and far off: See Hebrewes 10. 1. Hebrewes 11. 13.

V. 18. Heare yee therefore the Parable] I will tell you the meaning of it, though I conceale it from them, who wilfully ſtoppe their eares, and harden their hearts; their obſtinacy ſhall not hinder you. See on Verſe 3. and Chapter, 15. 15. and on Luke, 5. 36. and here on Verſe, 16.

V. 19. The word of the Kingdome] The Goſpel preached, which brings men into the Kingdome of Grace here, and ſhews them the way into the Kingdome of Glory, to be poſſeſſed hereafter: this is the ſeed before ſpoken of, called alſo the Goſpel of the Kingdom, Chap. 4. 23. and th: Kidgdom of Heaven, Chapter, 3. 2.

underſtandeth it not] Or regardeth it not.

the wicked one] The Devil, who is wicked himſelfe, and endeavours to make all others ſo: here are the ravening Birds, which devour the ſeed: by wicked one, underſtand one or more unclean ſpirits; who are ever ready, watching the Oſcitancy, neglect, ſleepineſſe and careleſneſſe of hearers; whereby they eaſily ſteal away the Word preached from the hearr, and memory of the hearers: Looke how hungery Birds watch the ſowen Fields, to picke away the Seed, ſo doe the Devils watch Audeours while they hear; this the wicked one doth uſually.

That which was ſowen] The VVord preached; which would eſſe bring forth according to the kinde and ſeaſon: as without good Seed ſowen, the Earth bringeth forth onely its owne curſe, Briers, Thiſtles, Thorne s, and Weeds; at the beſt, but graſs for the Beaſts: ſo is it with the Soul of Man, without this Heavenly ſeed of Gods Word, we bring forth nothing but ſin and a curſe.

in his heart] Which he had heard, but regarded not in his heart.

this is he which received the ſeed. &c.] This is he who is likened to that portion of Earth, which being neare the uttermoſt furrowes, receiveth ſome overcaſt ſeed: who though he be joyned in place and number, to and with the People of God, hearing the Word, (as the highway is ſomewhere near the furrowes of corn) yet indeed he belongeth not to the good Earth, but the high way, ſo hardned with treading (that is cuſtomary ſinning, and obduration of heart thereby) that no good can there take root, or proſper.

V. 20. He that received the ſeed] He that is here likened to ſuch Earth, anon with Joy] εὐθὺς Preſently, the Syrian giveth it שׁעתה bar ſhathathah ——The ſame houre, as Chapter 8. 13. and here verſe 5. Forthwith, that which the Hebrewes expreſs by רגעי אחד regah echad—— Exodus 33. 5. in a moment, μιᾷ ῥοπῇ Revelation 18. 17. 19 in one houre: ſuch is the appearance of any good, in the rootleſs Hypocrite, as a morning cloud, and as the early Dew it goeth away, Hoſea 6.4. as thoſe, fructus horarii; ſoon ripe, ſoon rotten: like Jonahs Gourd, בן לילה ben laila Jonah 4.10. the ſonne of a night, which came up in a night, and periſhed in a night: ſuch was Ahabs, Sauls and Pharaohs repentance, 1 Kings 21. 27. &c. 1 Sam. 15. 30, 31. 1 Sam. 24. 16, 17. 1 Sam. 26. 1, &c. Exodus 9. 27 34, 35. &c. Such was Herods attention to Johns preaching, Mark 6. 20. So are many carnall hearers affected with the Word: the ſame inſtant or houre they heare it, and thence it withereth away, and is no more thought of. By this, examine thy condition, whether the word thou heareſt, and the affection it worketh in thee, in that houre thou heareſt it take roote in thy heart, untill it bring fruits of sanctification, in the course and practice of thy life.

V. 21. yet hath he not root in himself] As corn not well rooted may make some shew, till some blast or scorching drought comes, but then it withers, and wilts away: so, they that have not Gods Word rooted in their hearts, may make a fair profession, till trouble come, and then they fall away.

persecution ariseth] When unexspected troubles arise, which frustrate the vain hopes he conceived of temporall peace, and prosperity, by the profession of the Gospel; or those forementioned promises.

offended] Or made to fall. Gr. scandalized.

V. 22. and the care of this world] The care of getting and managing worldly riches, and enjoying pleasures, are compared to piercing thorns choaking up the seed; that is, good intentions wrought in the heart by the Word preached. See 1 Tim. 6. 9, 10. Luke 21. 34. 2 Tim 4. 10.

choak the Word] As overshadowing briers, thorns, or weeds, keeping the Sun-beams from the Corn, and with more strong and rank roots, drawing away the fatnesse of the earth (which otherwise should nourish the corn) and thereby hinder it from all maturity of fruit: so do cares and pleasures in the soul: indeed such a severe justice of God followeth the contempt and neglect of his Word, as that where it mendeth not, it leaveth the hearer much more condemnable. Hence cometh it so often to passe, that when men for the present having their consciences convinced by the Word they have heard and being moved by the evident power thereof to repent, and resolve to become new men; yet they presently fall back again into their old wicked courses: so that (as Salvian. de gub. l. 5. well saith) a man might probably thinke that they had rather repented of their repentance, than of their sins: nec tam prius pœnituisse quid malè vixerint, quàm posted quod se promiserint bene victuros; and that they had not before so much repented, for that they had lived wickedly; as afterward for that they had promised that they would live well: consider this you foolish libertines, who think it enough if you frequent good Sermons; though you presently after return to your filthy sins: indeed Gods Word is the souls Antidote, and sinne it's poyson; but (saith the same Salvian) quid prodesse potest antidotum, cui superfunditur venenum? what can the Antidote profit, which hath more poyson powred down upon it?

becometh unfruitfull] The hearer, or the Word in the hearer becometh unfruitfull.

V. 23. into the good ground] But one ground of foure is fruitfull; most hearers are fruitelesse.

He that heareth the Word, &c.] Here are three properties of a good scholer of Christ; he must hear with his ear, understand with his heart, and practice in his life.

some an hundred fold. &c.] As before, there were three sores of bad hearers, so now also of good ones. all bear not Fruit alike, some are richer grounds than other; so is it here in matters spirituall.

V. 24. The Kingdome of Heaven] See on verse 19.

is likened to a man which sowed] Christ sheweth in this Parable of the Wheat and Tares, or Weeds, that the visible Church, should ever unto the end of the world, have in it some good, and some wicked Hypocrites, united onely in externall communion and profession of Religion, but no found members of the Church, or Body of Christ; which is necessarily to be observed, lest either the Faithfull should be scandalized or the Truth of Religion dishonoured, and called into question, by the evident Apostacy of those who goe out from us, but indeed were no more of us, than the Tares of the envious mans scattering, of the Lords good Wheat.

good seed in his field] In the former Parable, the Seed was the Word preached, here it signifies good men, raised up by God in his Church: except we will allo understand hence the Doctrine of Truth (which instrumentally maketh good men) on the one part; and Heresies, Doctrines of Devils, &c 1 Tim. 4.1. (which evidently render men and women unhappy Tares in the Lords field) on the other part.

V. 25. While men slept] The Devil goeth so cunningly about his night-works, that he may not be descried, or takes occasion by the negligence, incogitancy, or slothfulnesse of those that have the charge of others, to sowe mischief in Gods Church. Isaiah, 56. 9, 10.

his enemy came] The Devil, called שָׂטָן Satan. So 1 Samuel, 29. 4. lest in the battle, be be to us שָׂטָן lesatan an enemy, or adversaries, 2 Samuel 19. 22. that you should this day be to me שָׂטָן an adversary. See Chapter 16. 23. Revelation 1. 20. It impo.teth here, Gods Enemy and ours: for as Chrysost. Hom. 47. in Matthew noteth, his endeavour is all against us, for the malice he beareth to the Holy Majesty of God. See 1 Peter, 5. 8.

sowed Tares, ζιζάνια signifieth that fame infelix lolium (as Suidas interpreter also giveth ζιζάνιον) ours render it ray darnell tinetare, tares, or something very hurtfull to the Corn, (as any of these are among Wheat; hereby are meant, (as Theophylact, Euthymius, August. de verb. Domini. l. Mattheum, serm. 10. clearly gather from verse 38.) the children of the wicked one, that is, Hereticks, Schismatickes, Hypocrites, wicked and prophane men, living in the Church. Vet. Chrysolog. serm. 96. saith also hereses inter fideles, inter sanctos peccatum: inter pacificos lites, &c. Heresies among the Faithfull (that is in the Church) sinne among the Saints, dissentions among the peaceable: Indeed all these are Tares of the envious mans scattering, whereby he maketh men wicked, and disturbeth the peace of the Church, and flourishing of the Truth.

among the Wheat] Not in the world abroad, but in the Church of God: in pervet dominica messis (as Chrysolog. serm. 97. saith) onely to endammage the Lords Crop; for being filled with the spirit of envie, he esteemeth the destruction of men his gain: it is a strange temeritie to desert a Church for some wicked men therein being: where did the Enemy sowe his Tares, but among the good VVheat? perplexæ quippe sunt istæ duæ civitates in hoc seculo invicemque permixtæ---these two Cities in this world, are folded together and mingled the one with the other. Augustin. de C. D. l. 1. c. 35. and a little before he giveth a good caution against uncharitable censure, meminerit sanè in ipsis inimicis suis latere oves suumvel, &c. let them remember that indeed among their Enemies, some good Citizens for the time to come, lie hidden.

and went his way] He would not stand to it, nor have it thought to be his doing; because he can no otherwise deceive, than under some colour of good: it he should appear, and shew himselfe with the impious and heriticall, all would as much abhor them, as feare his stratagems: therefore he transformeth his Ministers into Angels of Light. 2 Corinthians, 11. 14. that is, into seeming godly, religious, and zealous men, without which dresses and disguises, he could never deceive the world by such instruments.

V. 26. When the blade sprung up] VVhen such men first professe the true Religion, they so cunningly hide their principles in obscure termes, and vail their wickednesse with shews of Holynesse, that it cannot presently appear, who are good, and who evil; but afterwards, when good men are nearer their maturity, and the wicked to their height of maliciousnesse; an evident difference appeareth. So Chrysostome noteth the manner of Hereticks, at first, they overshadow themselves untill they gain more confidence and assistance of popular favour and opinion; but then τὸν ἰὸν ἐκχέουσι they poure out their venome with impudence undaunted; and so are known as fault.

V. 27. the servants] Either this is added to fill up the similitude, and need not be applied, as not being after expounded by our Saviour, or else the servants are Ministers and good men, who wonder how these Tares came; and desire to root them out, (See Revel. 17. 6.) but may not doe what they desire: the Minister must handle the cause of God, with Arguments, not stripes: fides non est cogenda, sed docenda; Faith must be taught, not forced. Lactantius said it well; Religio cogi non potest: verbis potius quam verberibus res agenda est. ut sit voluntas, &c. l. 5. c. 20. Religion cannot be compelled: this cause is to be handled with words, not stripes; that the will may have a part, without which can be no sanctity.

T. 28. an enemie] ἐχθρὸς ἄνθρωπος, the Devil and wicked men. (See on verse 25.) for both cooperate in broaching Heresie: the Devil prompteth, and his Ministers act.

V. 29. Nay] This is not any prohibition, of excommunicating or executing malefactours, by the civil power, but a prediction that such shall be in the Church, till the end of time, as our Saviour expounds it, verse 39, 40, as Augustin saith, Ep. 146. donec diluvium transeat, ubi Arca continet corvum & columbam. Untill the deluge pass away, wherein the Arke (the Church) containeth both the Raven, and the Dove.--- let both grow together] For as Gregor. saith Hom. 31. in evang. boni soli, nusquam sunt, nisi in cœlo, onely good men (in any one society) are no where but in Heaven; where Christ will make his Church glorious, not having spot or wrinkle; but Holy, and without blemish, Ephesians, 5. 27. why God suffered wicked men to continue in his Church; there are many Reasons: as, that he might leave the impenitent more unexcusable, whom the society and example of the Holy could not reclaim: that he might shew on them an example of long suffering and mercy, that also they might justly perish, who abuse such mercy, to security of sinning: that he might hereby exercise his Elect, and make their constancy more glorious, whom neither Satan, nor the mischievous examples of Men so nearly united to them, could pervert; among other, Gregory Nazianzen giveth this reason, Orat. 4. post med. though his judgements are ever ready, yet he patiently expecteth, untill sinne, like some putrid and malignant humour, doe quite breake out, and shew itselfe; then is his Justice evidenced in striking: it should teach us a charitable patience in judgeing inferiours; though it is certain, that there is much difference, with what minde, and to what end one spareth who should correct; for as there is sometimes a misericordia pun ens, so also is there a crudelitas parcens, a punishing mercy, and a sparing cruelty, Aug. ep. 54. Macedonio.

V. 30. gather

V. 30. gather ye together] Though both sorts continue mixed together unto the end, yet at the day of judgement a separation shall be of the one from the other, Mal. 3. 18. chap. 25. 32.

V. 31. the kingdom of heaven] Mark 4. 30. Luke 13. 19. the Church is here the seed.

V. 32. the least of all seed] One of the lesser sort of ordinary seeds, for some may be lesse. God raiseth his Church out of very small beginnings; that, it growing up beyond all mens expectation, his mighty power therein may appear.

greatest among herbs] Μείζων τῶν λαχάνων, greater than herbs, one of the greatest sort of herbs. The Greek word λάχανον, Lat. olus, signifieth either pot-herbs, or any other herbs to be beaten or chopped --- as --- herbas contundit olentes --- Virgil, or otherwise eaten, though Varro Vlin. &c. sometimes take olus pro brassica, the Cabbage, or Colewort. Theophr. hist. plant. l. 7. καλοῦμεν λάχανα τὰ πρὸς τῷ ἡμάτρεφον χρεῖαν we call them olera which we use to eat. So Athenæus l. 2.. So also the Syriac here gives it, maximum omnium ירקונא olerum: the same word ירק Syr. is used, Luke 11. 42. where the Greek also hath λάχανον, and we give it herbs; as also 1 King. 21. 2. where the Hebrew hath it also ירק τὸ εἰς κηπον λαχανῶν --- for a garden of herbs. Plin. l. 19. c. 8. taketh the olus, to be of no esteem with the Grecians (as Ambros. saith --- vile olus) of the Sinapi, he saith, coquuntur & folia sicut reliquorum olerum --- on which account possibly it was reckoned among pot-herbs.

a tree] It growes high, and puts forth branches as a tree: it seemeth it was of a great growth in Palestine. See Tremel. on this place. It becometh the greatest or tallest of the plants which are accounted olera, or λάχανα as the Greek hath it here, so that the birds may sit upon the branches, or under the shadow thereof, which the Greek word κατασκηνῶν of σκηνὴ a tabernacle or tent, may well import.

V. 33. another parable] Luke 13. 20. The scope of this parable, is the same with the former.

three measures] σάτα τρία. That is, some say, an Ephe; this containeth about a peck and an half, wanting a little more than a pinte.

V. 34. All these things] Mark 4. 33. Forementioned, he spake all these parables, whereby the godly auditors might be excited to a further enquiry after the precious and vailed sense thereof, and might the more esteem it found out, and discovered unto them; and that the profane, touching onely, as it were, the outward rinde or shell, might not have occasion to despise the hidden truth, which they knew not.

without a parable] See on verse 3.

V. 35. I will open my mouth] Psal. 78. 2.

in parables] The Psalmists parables or proverbial sayings, had some resemblance to Christs manner of teaching here by similitudes and parables.

V. 36. went into the house] Though the Disciples were very desirous to know the meaning of the parable, yet they stayed untill he came into the house; either because they were ashamed to ask him before the people, or unwilling to interrupt him in his teaching.

V. 37. The Son of man] Christ himself, the most excellent Son of man, as verse 41.

V. 38. children of the king dom] Gods elect, appointed to be heirs of the kingdom of heaven. See on chap. 9. 15. and Luke 20. 36.

children of the wicked one] Not by nature, but imitation, children of the devil, verse 19. hereby are not meant all wicked men, but such as live in the Church; See verse 25. 41, 47, 48.

V. 39. The harvest] See Joel 3. 13. Rev. 14. 15 the reapers, the Angels are as the harvesters. This name is accommodate to the present cause, John 4. 34. the Apostles in relation to the Prophets, were also accounted harvesters, or reapers, to which then appertained that which is there said, verse 35. the regions are white to the harvest: and in this Gospel, chap. 9. 37, 38. the harvest truly is plenteous, but the labourers are few, &c. and in chap. 3. 12. Christ with the fanne in his hand, began to purge his floore, by preaching of the truth, and cleansing it from the false and corrupt glosses of the Scribes Priests and Pharisees; but here in the last day, he will perfect that work; then Christ the Judge and King of glory, shall sit on his Throne of Majesty, convene all the living and the dead raised again, and shall separate them to his right hand, and lefts those to the kingdom of glory and blessednesse, these to fire and torments unspeakable, Matth. 25. 31. &c. in these acts he will use the ministry of his Angels, as here is declared, and verse 41.

V. 40. in the end of this world] The end of time, and this state of mortality, then the wicked men shall be cast body and soul into hell fire.

V. 41. The Son of man] He mentions his human nature, because therein he will judge us, chap. 25. 31. John 5. 27. Act. 17. 31.

his angels] As verse 57. chap. 14. 11. Which he made ministring spirits, Hebr. 1. 14. of admirable strength, power, and vigour, to do that which he commandeth them.

things that offend] Or scandals: scandalous persons as chap. 16. 23. See the words following, and verse 42. such as depart from truth of doctrine, Rom. 16. 17. compare Matth. 18. 7 with 1 Cor. 11. 19. or such as are hypocrites and evil livers; who offend good men by their sins; or by being mixed with them. See verse 27.

them which do iniquity] Who customarily sin, chap. 7. 23. Psal. 6. 8. which do wickedly, and so would do: so would not the regenerate. See Rom. 7. 15.

V. 42. into a furnace of fire] The pains of hell are described by that which is most painful and terrible to us. Mark 9. 45, 46. Mal. 4. 1.

wailing] For helpleffe and hopeleffe grief.

gnashing of teeth] Out of indignation, and impatience, as Act. 7. 54. See chapter 8. 12.

V. 43. Then shall the righteous &c.] Dan. 12. 3. they shall shine as the sun, Jude 5. 21. chap. 17. 2. that is, be exceeding glorious.

the kingdom of their Father] 1 Cor. 15. 24. The kingdom of God is the inheritance of his adopted children, and is here mentioned by our Saviour in opposition to earthly inheritances, in which he would have them ever remember that they are but pilgrims and sojourners, that they might aspire to that which is their own eternally. See Colos. 3. 1. &c. Psal. 39. 12. Psal. 119. 19. We are indeed now in regeneration the sonnes of God but it doth not appear what we shall be: but we know, that when he shall appear, we shall be like him, 1 John 3. 2. See also Colos. 3. 4. Phil. 3. 21. the kingdom of God is in us now (Luke 17. 21.) who walk in the spirit; but the light thereof (as Gideons lamps in those earthen vessels, Jud. 7. 20.) shall not clearly shine out until they be broken, and this earthen tabernacle of our body be dissolved. Mean time our state, as to the world is calamitous; we have many failings, and an odious remainder of sin in us, which deformeth the best of the sons of men, and the wicked cast dirt in our faces, by several calumnies, making us seem more odious to men; but in spight of their malice, we shall once be glorious, when our God shall be all in all, 1 Cor. 15. 28. when the wicked shall be clothed with shame:

who hath ears] See on verse 9.

V. 44. the kingdom of heaven] The word of God which sheweth the way to heaven; and openeth unto us the inestable riches of Gods grace and mercy, hid from the worlds beginning, until the preaching of the Gospel.

unto a treasure] Of great value: as gold and silver, in great store laid up.

hid in a field] Irenæus hereby understandeth, Christ hidden in the Scriptures, per typos & parabolas (l. 4. c. 43. Init.) by types and parables: It is rather the truth of Christ therein, which few find, and so understand not how great and excellent these spiritual riches are, verse 45. as men know not the value of an hidden treasure.

he hideth] Not left others alfo should find it, but left himself should lose it: lest men, or Satan should beguile him of it: alfo good men, hearing the doctrine of Gods mercy in Christ, take care to lay it up in their heart, that they may not be deprived of it. See Luke 2. 15. Psal. 119. 11.

selleth all that he hath] This is to shew, that no man can be partaker of this treasure, untelle he value it above all worldly possessions, and be willing to part with all that he hath, rather than miss thereof. Luke 14. 33. Philippians 3. 8, 9.

V. 45. seeking goodly pearls] This parable shews, that men should seek heavenly knowledge with as much affection, labour, cost, and peril, if need be, as merchants do seek the choiceft pearls; in the former, the treasure was found unlooked for; here it is sought: the first seemeth to relate to Gods free mercy, found of them that sought him not. Rom. 10. 20. The second, to mans duty, chap. 7. 7.

V. 46. one pearl of great price] The knowledge of Christ, which far exceeds all other sciences, Phil. 3. 8. and is the onely necessary thing, Luke 10. 42. Phil 3. 13, 14.

V. 47. like unto a net] This parable is to the same purpose with that of the tares: the word σαγήνη is that which we call a saine, probably from thence coming, a drawn net, that sweeps along with it. all that comes into the way, as well trash as fish: it was a fit similitude for some of the Apostles, whom of fisher-men, he made fishers of men, chap. 4. 19.

V. 48. cast the bad away] There are many in the Church, which are not of the Church, 1 John 2. 19 and therefore in the end shall be cast out: but the full and perfect cleansing of the Church from them, is deferred unto the last day. ὅταν πλήρης γένηται, καθαίρεται. No similitude in scripture is wholly applicable. Epiphanius hæres. 77. N. 23.

V. 49. So shall it be] Our Saviour applyes onely the end of the parable: so that we need not enquire what is meant by the sea and shore.

V. 50. and shall cast them] See verse 42. He tells not what shall become of good men in the Church: none may doubt but they shall be happy.

V. 51. all these things] Do you understand all these, &c. the parables I have not expounded, as well as those I have expounded? their desire of exposition might occasion this question. See verse 10. 36, hereby we are taught, that all we hear is loſt, if we underſtand it not.

V. 52. Therefore] Seeing you have profited ſo well. I admoniſh you to teach others that which I have taught you: you muſt not know onely for your ſelves, but for others alſo: the ſun ſhineth not for it ſelf: the trees bear not fruit for themſelves; the fountains ſend not forth ſweet ſtreams for themſelves, but others uſe. See 1 Cor. 12. 7. chap. 5. 14, 15.

every ſcribe] Miniſters are compared to ſcribes, who uſe to teach the people, (chap. 7. 29 Ezra 7. 6, 11.) as well as to write. See on Luke 20. 1.

inſtructed in the kingdom of heaven] Inſtructed or learned in the Goſpel, and fit to be a Miniſter of the Goſpel.

things new and old] Who layeth up proviſions of divers years, and brings them forth for the uſe of the family according to their ſeveral occaſions, and appetites. See Cant. 7. 13. So muſt a Miniſter not onely teach the truth, but ſo, as may fit all mens capacities, and conditions, 2 Tim. 2. 15.

V. 53. He departed thence] Out of the houſe mentioned, verſe 36. Chriſt being the Saviour of all the Elect, would not ſpend all his time and ſtrength in one place, Luke 4. 43.

V. 54. And when] Mark 6. 1. Luke 4. 16.

into his own country] Nazareth, where his Mother dwelt, Luke 1. 26. and he was bred, though not born there, Matth. 2. 23.

whence hath this man this wiſdom?] He being never brought up to learning. See John 7. 15.

theſe mighty works] That is, power to do ſuch works: there ſhined in Chriſt, both an incomprehenſible depth of wiſdom in his ſpeeches, and a divine power in his works: which ſhould have perſwaded them to have believed in him: it ſeems he wrought ſome miracles at Nazareth, though few, verſe 8. Mark 6. 5.

V. 55. Is not this the Carpenters ſon?] John 6. 42. He is of mean parentage, and unlearned: Not brought up in the ordinary ſchooles of the Prophets; whence hath he this profound and admirable knowledge? verſe 16.

his brethren] His kinſmen, Geneſ. 13. 8. See chap. 12. 46, 47.

V. 56. his ſiſters] His kinſwomen, chap. 12. 50.

whence then hath this man] Thus men are ready to lay ſtumbling-blocks in their own way, (as oft as any thing propoſed, or conſidered, exceedeth their carnal reaſon) to bar them from heaven.

V. 57 they were offended in him] Or at him, or with him; they ſhould have bleſſed God, who gave ſuch gifts to him, for their profit and advantage, but they are offended at it: ſo, when in the works of God, men look no higher than ſecond cauſes, they uſually ſtumble, and the good he doth them, makes them worſe, and ſo more damnable.

a prophet] Mark 6. 4. Luke 4. 24. John 4. 44.

ſave in his, &c.] They who know him will not be reproved by him: we eaſily contemn, that which is familiar and known to us.

V. 58. not many mighty works] See on verſe 54.

becauſe of their unbelief] Our unbeliefe keepeth many mercies away from us, and hindreth us of many bleſſings, Mark 6. 5. ſpeaketh more expreſſely: The preſent ſenſe is, that albeit Chriſt gave them ſome taſtes of his power and goodneſſe, in that he there healed ſome that were infirm and ſick, yet their incorrigible ingratitude ſtayed his hand, and left no place for greater mercies, which otherwiſe he was ready to give them. The incredulity and wantonnes of ſinners, do hinder many bleſſings from deſcending on themſelves and others therein to have ſhared with them. Chriſts mercy as it were ſtrived with their iniquity, but he is juſt as well as merciful, therefore when they would not be amended by that he had done, he juſtly leaves them to their own hardneſſe of heart, to periſh therein.

CHAP. XIV.

Verſe 1. At that time] When Jeſus went about Galilee teaching, and doing miracles, for the confirmation of that which he taught.

Herod] The ſecond, here mentioned, was called Antipas. See Mark 6. 14. Luke 9 7. There were three Herods, the firſt was Herod the great, Antipaters ſon, who is alſo called Aſcalonius, in whoſe reign Chriſt was born; he cauſed the children to be ſlain, Matth. 2. The ſecond was called Antipas, ſon of Herod the great, whoſe mothers name was Malthace, or Martace; he was Tetrarch of Galilee, Luke 3. 1. The third, was Herod Agrippa, nephew to Herod the great by Ariſtobulus: he ſlew James, Acts 12. 2. ſo were they all three murderers.

the tetrarch] He had a fourth part of the Kingdom. See on Luke 3. 1. his father, Herod the great, divided his Kingdom by will, to his three ſons: to Archelaus, he aſſigned the middle part, Judea and Idumea: to Philip Iturea, and the region of the Trachonites: to this Herod Galilee; but Auguſtus the Roman Emperour, (becauſe the very name of Kings were in ſuſpition with them) otherwiſe divided the Kingdom (that he might the more eaſily diſtract their powers, and keep them in ſubjection) into tetrarchies, or governments of four parts. Joſeph Antiq. l. 17. c. 10. 13. See Plin. nat. hiſt. l. 5. c. 18 the name is Greek, though of Roman uſe: τετραρχία ſaith Suidas, is, ἀι τέσσαρες ἀρχαὶ four bands of ſixty four ſouldiers, whoſe Captain was called τετράρχης, a tetrarch: ſo happily Demoſthenes called each fourth part of Theſſalie, which was called τετρὰς a fourth, τετραρχίαν a tetrarchie; the word being compounded of τετρὰς and ἀρχὴ.

heard of the fame of Jeſus] That is, (as in Luke 9. 7.) all that Jeſus did; which being ſo much noiſed abroad, even while John Baptiſt was yet living, it may ſeem ſtrange, how Herod ſhould be ſo long ignorant thereof; but that we may conſider his careleſneſſe in religion; the too common policy of courtiers, unwilling to commend or ſpeak of good men (ſpecially to impious Princes) leſt ſeeming to favour them, they ſhould endanger their favour at Court: and laſtly, Herods great diſtractions; yet through all theſe obſtructions, now at laſt the fame of Jeſus breaks into Herods ears: which the Evangeliſt therefore mentioneth, that it may appear that the preaching of the Goſpel was not ſo obſcure, but that the knowledge thereof came to the ears of Kings and Princes, that none might pretend ignorance.

V. 2. ſaid to his ſervants] It was ſaid ſo firſt of ſome others, and then Herod reſtified with a guilty conſcience, eaſily believing what he feared, followed their vain opinion. See on Luke 9. 7.

he is riſen from the dead] Syr. from among the dead; מן בין מיתא men beichj maiche. It may be tranſlated, as ſome give it, ex domo mortuorum, from the houſe of the dead (in and to the ſame ſenſe, (or ---- ab inter mortuos ---ſo בית the preposition ſignifieth ---- Some note here Herods opinion of Johns ſanctity as concurring with the Phariſees, who thought that the holy did eaſily return to life again: See Joſeph Antiq. l. 18. c. 2, the meaning is, as if Herod had ſaid, he hath more power now than he ever had, for John wrought no miracles, John 10. 41 poſſibly Herod might now fear ſome great practices in way of revenge, of his late murdering John Baptiſt. See on Luke 5. 7.

mighty works] Force and power, whereby great works are wrought. See chap. 12. 54.

do ſhew forth themſelves] Or are wrought by him. Which like ſome Divine light declare him riſen from the dead, and that God is with him, to do ſome great and ſtrange works by him. Herod could fear, but not repent. Note what childiſh phancies involve and befool men, when once they caſt off the fear of the Lord: what Panick and irrational fears terrifie thoſe, whom God, for their ſins, ſmiteth with folly and madneſſe, Deut. 28. 28.

V. 3. For Herod] See chap. 4. 12. Luke 3. 19, 20.

laid hold on] Or cauſed him to be apprehended, by his officers: how long that was before this time, is not certain.

his brother Philips wife] Many faults did Herod commit: firſt, that he took another mans wife, while he was yet alive. Secondly, that he put away his own wife. Thirdly, that he took his brothers wife. Fourthly, in that when his brother had children by her, he yet took her to wife, which had not been lawful. if his brother had been dead: So blind and precipitate is filthy luſt, ſuch concatenations have ſins, they ſeldom go alone. Herods laſt ſin was his worſt, he being reproved, added yet this above all, that he ſhut up John in priſon, Luke 3. 19, 20.

V. 4. It is not lawful for thee to have] Levit. 18. 6 &20. 21. obſerve Johns confidence; he doth not fay, it may be dangerous unto thee, but ſpeaks home, it is not lawful for thee; though thou art a King or governour, thou mayeſt not diſpenſe with Gods laws.

V. 5. when he would have put him to death] This ſheweth that he was willing to kill him before Herodias provoked him: ſo hateful is reproof to impious great men.

he feared the multitude] He feared man, but not God. Mark addeth, that he feared John, (whom he then had in priſon) becauſe indeed his conſcience told him, that John was guiltleſſe: the truth is, he feared the vengeance of God on the perſecuters of Gods Miniſters, otherwiſe he would not have feared the people, who feared his tyranny, It is clear, that at firſt, Herod heard and reverenced John: and though poſſibly Herodias ſolicited him to that murder, to which his ſelfe was inclined too much, yet fear did for a time reſtrain him; yet at laſt, the ſin brake out, thus this Court-fox, Luke 13. 32. made ſemblance of one thing, but acted another: and ſurely he deſired to ſee Jeſus, (Luke 9. 9.) with as good devotion as his father did, when he pretended a deſire to worſhip him, Matth. 2. 8.

becauſe they counted him a Prophet] Chap 21. 26. He feared the multitude in reſpect of their general good opinion they had of John, whm many ſuſpected to be their Meſſias. See Luke 3. 15. John 1. 20, 25. and there had now been no Prophets ſince Malachi, who propheſied of this very John Baptiſt, the ſecond Elias, to be the immediate for-runner of the Meſſias, Chriſt.

V. 6. When Herods birth-day was kept] The birth-dayes of Kings uſed to be kept with great ſolemnity, feaſts and triumphs. Gen. 40. 20. that which ſome conjecture here, is not improbable; that that all this tragedy was but an impious compact between Herod and Herodias, that Johns death ſhould be deferred, onely to Herods birth-day; when many Peers and great men being preſent, the daughter of Herodias ſhould dance, Herod promiſed any thing which ſhe ſhould aſk: ſhe being fore-inſtructed, muſt aſk Johns head, Herod muſt ſeem very ſorrowful, but at laſt (for a pretended conſcience made of performing his oath) do what he had promiſed, were it never ſo damnable.

the daughter of Herodias] By Philip her former husband, not by Herod. Joſephus Antiq. l. 8. c. 7. calleth her Salome.

danced before them] Thoſe laſcivious geſture. of a damſel, alone, at a feaſt, before ſo many men; may give us to conſider of immodeſt dancing, to which few come ſober, or go from it without ſome evil incentives: here was like mother, like daughter.

and pleaſed Herod] Mark addeth, and thoſe that ſate with him: theſe were compoſed to Herods minde, and knew how to applaud any thing which the King commended: though indeed how ever it ſeemed to them, yet the circumſtances conſidered, we may ſay with Theophylall ἔτω καλὸς ὀρχήσατο, πάντως κακῶς the better ſhe danced, the worſe it was. Behold here the miſerable depravation of impious minds: Herod is diſpleaſed with holy and wholſome preaching but pleaſed with the laſcivious and impudent behaviour of Salome: you may know what men are, by their delights.

V. 7. he promiſed with an oath] Here is ſet down a miſchievous effect of malice and intemperance; a raſh and dangerous oath, with a promiſe ſo perniciouſly large, what ever ſhe ſhould ask, to the halfe of his Kingdom, which he yet held at Cæſars pleaſure, and not long after loſt. The word here interpreted, promiſed is properly uſed in mutual bargaining, covenanting, &c. wherein one demanded an oath, do you promiſe thus or thus to do? he is ſaid ὁμολογεῖν to aſſent or conſeſſe, and by ſuch promiſe to oblige himſelfe to perform: ſo, ſaith Euthymius, the promiſe here made, he calleth ὁμολογίαν, which word often ſignifieth an aſſent, bargain, &c.

whatſoever ſhe would ask] He excepted not that which was inconvenient or unlawful. So, many in their jollity, raſhly promiſe, what they repent of afterward, verſe 9. or ſhould indeed do ſo.

V. 8. before inſtructed] Perhaps not before the feaſt: her mother poſſibly might be afraid to truſt ſuch a ſecret to her, long before it was to be acted: and Mark 6. 24. ſhe went out to ask her mother, after the King had promiſed.

give me here John Baptiſts head in a charger] The mother was not content that John ſhould be killed, but muſt have his head in a platter, as the moſt deſired diſh of that feaſt, that ſhe might be ſure of his death, and ſatiate her ſelf with the ſight of it: ſo deviliſh a ſweetneſſe is in revenge, unto an harlots appetite: ſo quickly will thoſe wheles of a fierce kind learn to be bloody, eſpecially againſt faithfull Miniſters who reprove them.

V. 9. the King was ſorry] Not ſo much for that he knew John was to be murdered, as becauſe he feared an inſurrection, and the juſt judgements of God following ſo impious an act; for it is not very likely that he was ſorry to commit ſinne, who could not repent when it was committed: but fear of his own ſafety made him ſorry that he had ſuch occaſion to hazard himſelf, or the opinion of conſtancy and keeping his word or performing his promiſe, made before ſo many witneſſes then preſent.

for the oaths ſake] He made no conſcience of inceſt and murder, yet would be thought he made conſcience of an oath, unlawfully made, and more unlawfully performed, as if the ſame God which forbiddeth perjury, did not alſo forbid inceſt and murder. See Jam. 2. 10, 11.

and them which ſate with him, &c] Either he feared they would account him a perjured man; or they in favour to Herodias preſſed him to perform his oath.

V. 10. and beheaded John in priſon] Not in publick, for fear of the people, verſe 5 Johns trial was the more, becauſe he had the means to clear his innocency before the people, at his death, nor any man to comfort him; this God permitted, that he might the more gloriouſly crown this juſt man, and leave an example of comfort, to thoſe who ſuffer unjuſtly, Euthym. Yet obſerve, that God, who will have the memory of the juſt ſacred, leaveth Johns juſtification, and Herods time-outlaſting infamy upon a record; ſo publick, as ſhall be remembred while the Goſpel is preached: and ſo certain, as is the teſtimony of the holy Ghoſt, the Author of the Scripture, 2 Pet. 1. 19.

V. 11. his head was brought in a charger] A ſad ſight at a feaſt, but that which the revengefull moſt hunger for; there is no command of great men ſo impious, but it ſhall finde ſervants to execute it.

ſhe brought it to her mother] This execrable reward of her dancing, is preſented according to command to her: a chaſt and holy virgin would have ſtartled at the ſight, but ſhe carrieth it boldly, as inſulting over her mothers enemy, rendring up to her, theſe bloody gains: what juſt revenge followed all theſe actors, ſee Joſephus Antiq. l. 18. c. 9. See verſe 12.

V. 12. and told Jeſus] Either that he might prevent the ill-like danger, or that they might be taught by him what courſe to take, now their Maſter was gone: this was the end of Johns former ſending to Chriſt, chap. 11. that they might at laſt be entred into his School: the diſciples of John give him an honeſt and civil burial; either taking up the body caſt out, (the Gr. σῶμα, the Syriac giveth מדרה ---Sheladeh the carcaſſe, trunk; or body, as ſome ſay without an head, if we may believe Nicephorus: and Euthymius ſeemeth of the ſame opinion) or elſe by permiſſion of the tyrant, as Joſeph and Nicodemus afterwards did to the ſacred body of Jeſus: this laſt honour contributeth nothing to the happineſſe of the dead; yet is it a teſtimony of our charity; and hope of the future reſurrection: the end of Herods cruelty, was firſt the ſlaughter of his Army by King Aretha, revenging the injury and diſhonour of his daughter Herods lawful wife, whom he put away, for an harlots ſake. Secondly, his own depoſition and baniſhment to Lyons in France, with his inceſtuous Herodias, where, after much miſery endured, he made away himſelf.

V. 13. When Jeſus heard it] Mark 6. 32. Luke 9. 10. of Johns death, or of Herods knowledge of him and his miracles.

he departed thence] From his own countrey; chap. 13. 53. or from the place where he was told of Johns death.

into a deſart place apart] From the parts of Galilee, more frequented, to a more ſolitary place, to ſhun Herods laying wait for him: for the time of his death was not yet come. So chap. 4. 12. & 12. 14, 15.

they followed him on foot] For both places were on the ſame ſide of the lake: he onely went over a creek by ſhips and the people went about on foot: note their zeal, they go as ſoon as they hear he was gone: they go a great way about on foot, leaving buſineſſes, families, and cities of good accommodation, to follow Chriſt in deſert places.

V. 14. And Jeſus went forth] Out of the ſhip, and ſaw the people there before him, Mark 6. 33. ſuch haſte made they.

he healed their ſick] They carried ſick folk alſo with them, which could not be without much trouble: nothing hindred them from Chriſt.

V. 15. When it was evening] Mark 6. 35. John 6. 5. That is, the firſt evening, when the ſun was much declined, about three of the clock in the afternoon, mentioned, 1 King. 18. 29. and the ſecond evening, verſe 23. which began at ſun-ſet: between theſe two evenings, they uſed to kill the paſſeover, Exod. 12. 6.

This is a deſart place] Neither time nor place are fit for proviſions.

The time is now paſt] Dinner-time, or the uſual hour to provide, is paſt. There may be many reaſons why Chriſt, who could have done this miracle at any hour, would thus long defer it: as firſt, becauſe of this delay, he might raiſe the Diſciples minds to a more ſerious attention and marking ſo clear and expreſſe a remonſtrance of his Divine power. Secondly that it might appear, that he did not raſhly, but on urgent neceſſity put forth his power of doing miracles: for indeed he was not at all deſirous of gain, or ambitious of humane applauſe. Thirdly, that the hungry multitude might more deeply apprehend the greatneſſe of the miracle, by their own ſenſe of neceſſity in which they now were. Fourthly, that this miracle, might appear ſo much the more illuſtrious, by how much greater the ſupply muſt be to ſatisfie ſo many, ſo hungry ſtomacks. Laſtly, that he might plainly demonſtrate to them and us, that he hath power ever ready, and providence ever watching to relieve thoſe that depend on him: which he will do when he knows 'tis moſt opportune and beſt.

ſend the multitude away] They were tyed by the ears, in ſo much that they neglected their food: therefore the diſciples ſolicit Chriſt to diſmiſſe them: but nowadayes men think long till the Sermon be done: who take it to be a great merit, and point of religion, patiently to endure a Sermon of an hour.

V. 16. give ye them to eat] Chriſt by feeding ſuch a multitude with ſo little food, intimateth that they ſhall want nothing, which lay aſide all buſineſſes for Gods ſervice, and firſt ſeek the kingdom of heaven, chap. 6. 33.

V. 17. We have here but five loaves and two fiſhes] Comparing their ſhort proviſion, with the multitude of people they marvelled why he ſhould command them to feed them.

V. 18. bring them hither] They fay not, what ſhall we then eat our ſelves? but readily obey him: ſo the woman of Sarepta, 1 King. 17. 12, 13, 15.

to me] Youcan not make a little ſufficient to feed ſuch a multitude; but I can.

looking up to heaven] To ſhew whence his power was to do this miracle: (and whence we muſt look for ſupplyes. See I Sal. 145. 15.) saith Hilari. in Matth. canon. 14.

he blessed.] He gave thanks to God for that provision, and prayed for a miraculous blessing upon it that it might be sufficient for the multitude, and that Gods divine power and mercy, beneficence and glory might appear to them therein.

and brake.] As the master of a family, or chief person in the company used to do, that it might be distributed. See on Luke 24. 35.

V. 20. They did all eat and were filled.] This is added lest any (to extenuate the miracle) should think that they did not all eat, or that they were not all satisfied: so admirable an encrease was here of a little food, that a great multitude of guests were so well satisfied, that they left abundance more than they found at first, See on Luke 9. 17.

took up of the fragments.] The remainder of the fragments: this shewed the truth of the miracle, as also the greatnesse.

twelve baskets full.] See on chap. 15. 37. for each Apostle one basket: these baskets were such as they used to carry bread, and other victualls in, chap. 16. 7. Mark 8. 14. so admirably did these wiands encrease? I know not (saith Hilar. 5. S.) whether on the place of the tables, or in the receivers hands, &c. but admirably were they encreased: how should it teach us confidence in God, and contentment in a little?

V. 21. they that had eaten.] He saith not, they that were present, but they that had eaten, were about five thousand: they are numbred that the miracle might be the more illustrious.

beside women and children.] Which probably were a very great accession to this multitude.

V. 22. Straightway Jesus constrained his, &c.] That is, his attendants in ordinary; not all that came to learn of him. See chap. 13. 14. & 15. 36. & 17. 25, they were willing to have stayed with Christ, and not to leave him alone in a desert, neer night: but yet to prevent their joyning with the people to make him a king. John 6. 15. he compelled them to go before.

unto the other side.] See note on verse 13.

V. 23. when he had sent.] Mark 6. 46. For that present taking leave of them, blessing and praying for them, wishing them now to depart. See Joh. 6. 22. &c.

into a mountain apart to pray.] Christ choosing solitudes for prayer, sheweth us the danger of distraction and deviation of thoughts in prayer; and how necessary it is to choose convenient places to private prayers.

And when the evening was come.] John 6 16. the second evening at and after sun-set. See on verse 15.

V. 24. in the mids of the sea.] Many things concurring, make this tryal the greater: it was a great storme, it was dark. John 6 17. the storme continued till the last watch of the night: Christ was absent, they knew not when he would come to relieve them: thus saith they of him John. 5 1. in Matth 14. he would by degrees accustome them to endure great matters: in the first danger at sea, Chap. 8. he was present, though asleep, they could quickly awake him: but now absent, and that very long.

tossed with waves.] βασανιζόμενοι, tormented. labouring with contrary windes, and rough seas; it is a metaphorical expression taken from men tormented (for βάσανοι are torments, as Luke 16 23 the rich man being in βασάνοις in torments) tumbling up and down for ease; such is a labourfome ship, heaving and setting in a storm.

V. 25. in the fourth watch.] They divided the night into four watches. See Mark 13 35. For so often in the night were the watches in garisons, or armies in the field relieved, by fresh watch-men coming in their stead: now the fourth watch was the three last hours of the night (until Sun-rising) at which the morning watch began, mentioned Exod. 14 24. Christ who well knew in what a stresse of winde and weather they were all night, and in how great danger of being all cast away, would not presently relieve them, as he could if he would, but so long exercise their faith and patience, as he knew should best conduce to Gods honour, and their future comfort in troubles and dangers.

Jesus went unto them.] He came unto them walking on the water, shewing himself to be Lord of the sea also; as he did Exod. 14. 22. we may endure fore stresses, and mighty tempests; yet Christ will never forsake us, if we go when and whither he commandeth us.

V. 26 saw him walking on the sea.] Walking up and down, as on dry ground: all the creatures own, and in their several kinds, obey that word of their Creatour, which at first gave them being and their laws of nature: the deaf sea is sensible of his power and presence yeilding and submitting her swelling waves, even themselves for him to walk on; onely man, is unthankfully rebellious against him, and will not acknowledge him. See Isaiah 1. 3. Jer. 8. 7.

they were troubled.] For they had never seen the like before: they feared this apparition, as they did the storm.

it is a spirit.] φάντασμα of φαίνεσθαι, to appear or seem, a spectrum, that which a man seeth, or vainly imagineth that he seeth: an apparition: thus fear and forgetfulnesse of Christs power discomposeth and troubleth our mindes: they could not know Christ approaching.

V. 27. Straightway Jesus spake unto them.] Christ quickly hears the cries of his servants, and speaks comfort to them, except the cause of his delay be in themselves.

be of good cheer.] be confident: fear often ariseth out of want of confidence rather than the greatnesse of the danger, which others endure with lesse trouble of minde.

it is I.] He doth not say, I am Jesus, as to persecutin' Saul, Act. 9 5. but it is I: as speaking to those who well knew his voice.

V. 28. bid me come unto thee on the waters.] If Christ commanded, he was confident that he also could enable him thereto: true believers are loon comforted with Christs voice.

V. 29. he walked on the water.] This sheweth an admirable confidence, and strength of faith in Peter, that upon one word of Christ, durst adventure to walk on a curst sea.

V. 30. when he saw the winde.] That is, perceived it, by hearing and feeling the effects thereof: for otherwise he could not see it, John 3. so dangerous is it, to look too much on second causes, and neglect the first: here our faith beginneth to fail, and we to sink.

boisterous.] Strong, or vehement.

Lord save me.] By faith he trod underfeet the seas, by diffidence he began to sink, and found what need he had of Christs assistance to save him.

V. 31. why didst thou doubt?] What cause hast thou to doubt, seeing I am with thee? this shewes thy faith weake: the strongest faith hath need of help: it nothing advantageth to be neer Christ in place, if thou art not so in faith, saith Chrysostom hom. 51. in Matth.

V. 32. the wind ceased.] Christ not onely comforts his in trouble, but also puts an end to their troubles: yet the storm did not presently cease when Jesus came in sight, and spake to them: but when he came to them into the ship: their faith was not presently awaked, and exercised enough; it is not without just cause, that God doth so often delay our deliverance from fears and troubles, though he knows them before we cry unto him.

V. 33. they that were in the ship.] The rest of the Apostles, other passengers, or the Sea men that carried them.

came and worshipped him.] They blame not Peter for attempting, nor commend him to walking on the sea; but come directly to worship him, who had delivered them: they had seen lately a great miracle in his feeding the multitude, yet did they not worship him then: affliction taken away, sooner brings men to acknowledge Christ, than prosperity given.

V. 34. when they were gone over.] Mark 6. 53.

the land of Gennesaret.] This lake of Gennesaret was nigh to Capernaum, which is also called the sea of Galilee, and Tiberias, so that the countrey it selfe took denomination from it. See on John 21. 1.

V. 35. had knowledge of him.] By fame, report, or such of them as had seen his miracles.

they sent out into all that countrey.] They would not engrosse Christ to themselves, but enforme others of his coming, that they might obtain health of body and soul of him also: this was their charity, that they wished their neighbours the same good they had attained themselves.

V. 36, the hem of his garment.] The lower part or skirt thereof: this was a signe of modesty, Matth. 9. 20. the word signifieth a selvage, or fringe.

they besought him.] That which the poor woman did not, chap. 9. 20, 21. herein they shew their faith and humility, as they had done their charity.

made perfectly whole.] By the divine power of Christ: in that he healeth the sick, we are taught to seek help of him, in all our distresses: and not onely to run to him our selves, but also to bring others to him, that they may be saved: there is no malady of body or soul so great, but that by his power he can cure it; nor so little, but in his mercy he will. Some think there was a tincture of superstition in that they desired to touch the hemme of his garment, that they might be cured, as restraining Christs power and grace thereto; but this seemeth not so probable as to be avowed, seeing that christs power to heal (the woman of the bloody issue, Matth. 9. 21. who thought, as these here) concurred with such a desire: one thing is certain, that lest he should have quenched the smoaking flax, he mercifully compleyth with their weaknesse, healing their sick, and curing their infirmities.

CHAP. XV.

Verse 1. THen came to Jesus.] After the forementioned miracles: the more famous Gods ministers grow, the greater is the envy of the adversaries: the Scribes and Phrisees left Jerusalem, to pursue Christ into Galilee, Mark 7. 1. which which sheweth their unwearied and vaine malice against the truth of Christ.

Scribes and Phrisees.] In these great pretenders to the law of God, it appeareth, that none more dangerously wound religion, than those, we would before men seem the most zealous patrons, and professours thereof.

which were of Jerusalem.] Not of lower towns, or lesse villages: the more learned and honourable hypocrites are, the more dangerous enemies they are to Christ and the gospel; though there were Scribes and Pharisees in every tribe of Israel, yet they of Jerusalem being more proud, and injurious to Christ (as trusting on their wealth, greatnesse, and popularity) were the most impious. Isai. 1. 21. That faithful City was become a harlot.

V. 2. Why do thy disciples transgresse?] They come not to dispute the case, or to tax the disciples onely, but to quarrel with Christ himself: as if they said, thou so teacheſt or toleratest them.

tradition of the elders.] Which we have received from our ancestours, who were holy men: or which the governours of our Church (whom we ought obey) require of us: they saw the great zeal of the people following Jesus, which the more their envy laboured to quench, the more they enflamed it; so that all their artifices, and plots turned to their disadvantage, nor could they finde any thing justly to object against Jesus, therefore they cavil at his disciples.

for they wash not their hands.] The law of God enjoyned no such necessity of often washings; but the Elders had brought in this tradition. See Mark 7.

V. 3. Why do ye also?] Christ answereth the Pharisees by way of recrimination, satisfying the multitude, verse 10, 11, and the disciples more plainly, verse 15, 16, 17. So he repelleth their malitious calumny about things of no real moment, by detecting their hypocrisie, who would seem to make conscience of transgressing mans laws, but not Gods.

transgresse the commandments of God παραβαίνω, the word here used, signifieth to go beyond ones bounds, which are indeed the precepts of Gods law, the one strait line of sanctity, from which if any man decline to the right hand or to the left, he sinneth; concerning which, God said in the mystery on mount Sina: Exod. 19. 21—— Charge the people that they break not their bounds, Heb. פֶּן ——יהרסו ne forte destruant—הרס signifieth divuit, left uuit, &c Targ. ne—irruant ad Dominum, as presuming transgressours use to doe, until they meet with Gods judgements to destroy them—as Balaam with the Angel. Numb. 22. 23. &c. Most damnable is the transgression of Gods laws, under pretence of godlinesse.

by your tradition] διὰ τὴν παράδοσιν, which the Syriack giveth מסורתא metul, propter traditiones vestras; that you may maintain your tradition, which they called their קבלה cabbala which was saith V. Shindler. Pentegl. doctrina patrum quam (קבל cibel) accepit unus de ore alterius, & tradidit posteris, the doctrine of the fathers, which one received from the mouth of another, and the same delivered to posterity; this was that contained in their תלמוד talmud, which was doctrinalis farrago, a great collection of all their doctrines and traditions: these he called theirs, though received from the elders; because they superstitiously held them against Gods law: and with that grosse pride, that herein they were the most holy and unreproveable men in the world in their own conceit; being of foolish Ticonius mind (Augustin. ep. 48. and lib. 10. 7. contra epist. Parm. l. 2. c. 13. fin.) who said, quod voluimus, sanctum est, that which we will, is holy.

V. 4. God commanded saying.] In this particular, our Saviour proveth the charge he gave them, concerning their transgression of Gods commandments.

honour thy father, and &c.] Exod. 20 12. Deut. 5. 16. by honour is meant all kinde of duty, obedience, reverence, love, beneficence, protection, maintenance: by father and mother, natural parents, princes, governours, magistrates, ministers and superiours.

he that curseth father or mother] Exod. 21. 17. Levit. 20. 9. Prov. 20. 20. Gr. κακολογῶν, which importeth not onely execration, cursing or imprecation of some evil; but also any evil, reproachful, undutiful or irreverend speaking, to the parents injury, or dishonour.

let him die the death.] Our Saviour instanceth in a precept which hath the promise to the observers thereof, Ephes. 6. 2. and an annexed curse to the transgressours, to shew them, and all men, the odiousnesse of this sin before God. θανάτῳ τελευτάτω, Syr. ממת ימות memoth iemuth (Tremel.) let him certainly, unpardonably, or unexcusably be put to death: with them this ingemination importeth a vehemency and certainty, as Gen. 2. 17, in the day thou eatest thereof, מות תמות, moth thamu'h, 70. Θανάτῳ ἀποθανεῖσθε, dying thou shalt die; that is, surely die. Unworthy is that unnatural creature of life, who is injurious to those of whom he received life, who so impiously requiteth their tender care and pains for him.

V. 5. it is a gift.] Mark 7. 11, 12 Ye teach that a man may vow to give all that he hath to the temple, although he have poor parents wanting relief; and after that; he need not, or ought not to relive them: or to say to their parents, that which I have offered to God, will do you as much good, as if I had therewith relieved you. See on Luke 21. 4.

by me] ἐξ ἐμοῦ, out of me, that is, out of my estate.

V. 6. and honour not.] Though he honour not father or mother. Though he perform not that duty of a child toward his parents, which the law of God enjoyneth him, Exod 20. 12. &c.

of none effect.] You neglect it, as if it were of no force; they did not deny it to be a commandment, but upon the matter abolished children from obedience thereto. Gr. ἠκυρώσατε οὐκ ἀνάγκην, is properly, omni authoritate & imperio spoliginitum reddo, I deprive of all authority, command and power: I make void, or of no binding effect: so did they Gods commandment, which by imposition of their traditions, they declared to be of no force, as to a necessary obedience.

V. 7. ye hypocrites.] He condemns them of hypocrisie, because they made the kingdom of God to stand in outward things; and because under a pretence of worshipping God, they overthrew the power of true godlinesse. See on Luke 13. 15.

prophesie of you.] Not of them in particular, but of all hypocrites in general: as if he had said, To you may those words of the Prophet fitly be applied.

V. 8. this people.] Isa. 29. 13. the Jews, the then peculiar people of God; amongst them the priests and the prophets, the teachers especially, were diffemblers in religious acts. See Isa. 28. 7. Hos. 9. 8. Jer. 2. 8.

draweth nigh unto me with their mouth.] He describes their hypocrisie by two characters. 1. That in words, countenance and gesture, they made great shew and profession of a reverend and most religious serving of God; not that all these external things were not convenient & requirable in the worship of God; but because these onely were so far from being enough, that they were double iniquity, in that they made them meere cloaks of sin; 2. that in these fair external shews, they wanted in their hearts, true faith, repentance, love and fear of God.

V. 9. in vain do they worship me.] Christ rendreth here the true sense though not the words of the Prophet, for allbeit (in vain) he not in the Hebrew text; yet Gods denunciation of judgements to come upon these pretenders to sanctity, easily concludeth that they worshipped him in vain: that is not all: but rather depraved and polluted his worship and service; by making it serve as a disguise: their filthy sins, quamodo Deum violat, qui hoc modo placat? Minuc. Fel. Octav. how doth he violate an holy Deity, who thus endeavoureth to pacifie him? Doctrines and traditions of men are not the oracles of God, neither is the observation of them his worship.

teaching for doctrines the commandments of men.] Teaching their disciples and hearers, to observe and keep their precepts; however unconsistent they were with Gods commandments.

V. 10. and he called the multitude.] Mark 7. 14. he lets go the malicious Pharisees, and informeth the better affected people, that might possibly be offended at the fact of his disciples, or corrupted by the false doctrine of the Pharisees: the Pharisees he saw were incurable, and applyeth himself to the people, who were flexible and enclined to learn.

hear and understand.] We must at all times open our hearts and ears to receive Gods word; but this preface is here most necessary, because men are hardly taken off from old traditions, and common and received opinions.

V. 11. not that which goeth into the mouth.] Your meat and drink moderately taken, and thankfully used do not hurt your soul, (for every creature of God is good, &c. 1 Tim. 4. 4.) though you do not with superstitious Pharisees so often wash your hands; but your evil thoughts and words do hurt you.

defileth a man] κοινοῖ, that is, rendreth one unclean or impure: so is it expounded, Acts 10. 15. Christ taketh this word from the custome of the law, to apply to the spiritual estate of man: by the law, a man was to be esteemed, unclean and defiled, who had touched any thing which the law counted unclean, as a dead body, &c. now, a thing which is common (in relation to Gods service) is opposed to sacred; therefore, as they reckoned all things sacred or set apart to the service of God) holy: so they esteemed all things of common use prophane, and such as defiled them: hence were their frequent washings for their pretended purification. Mark 7. 1. &c.

V. 12. knowest thou, &c?] We see in their countenances, and hear by their words, that they are vexed at thee, or it is certain they are displeased, &c. See Exod. 10. 7. 2 King. 2. 3. 5.

were offended.] More alienated from thee and thy doctrine: as John 6. 60. 66.

after they heard this saying.] Or, when they heard, as Ephesians 1. 13.

V. 13. Every plant.] John 15. 2. all doctrines, traditions or persons.

shall be rooted up.] By a metaphor taken from plants (which being plucke up by the roots, quickly wither and come to nought) he sheweth what shal become of hypocrites which abide not in Christ, John 15. 4. Matth. 3. 10. their hopes shall vanish, and shall come to nothing: or if it be understood of doctrine, the sense may be, it ought to be rooted out by bringing men to the knowledge of the truth: this agrees best with the scope of the place.

V. 14. Let them alone] If they will not be reformed, or better informed, let us take no further care for them but endeavour to undeceive those whom they have misled; let, they perish with them: or, do not you hearken to them, lest like blinde guides, they lead you headwinkt to hell. See Rev. 22. 11. A dreadful doome, Hosea 4. 14. I will not punish your daughter, when they commit whoredom.

blinde leaders of the blinde] Luke 6. 39.

both fall into the ditch] It is a mystery to be blinde, but to be led by the blinde, or to be a blinde leader of the blinde, as Euthymius saith well, is certainly duplex malum: a double mischief: a mischief to those poore fouls, who have such ignorant leaders, and a greater misery to such wretched guides as those, who, for fecular gains, or honours, take upon them to teach others, and to lead them in the narrow way to falvation, who have not well learned the fame their felves: these are (as Cyprian faid, l. 1. ep. 7.) non fidei duces, sed perfidiæ magistri, &c. not guides to faith, but masters of perfidiousnesse. See 1 Tim. 1 6, 7. Deut. 27. 18 Isaiah 42. 19. and 59 9, 10. and 59.10. Lam. 4.13, 14. Ezek. 3. 17. 18. and 14. 9. 10.

V. 15. then answered Peter] Mark 7. 17.

this parable] That sentence, verse 11. See Chap. 13. 3. that which thou faidst concerning the difference of meats to be taken away: this he understood as figuratively spoken (whereas it was indeed literall) in which he was afterward more fully instructed by an expresse vision. Acts 10. he calleth it here παραβολὴν, a parable, according to the Hebrew manner, who called any thing obscurely and prudently spoken, משל maschal; so are Solomons sayings called, שלמה משלי mischle Schelomo, the parables or proverbs of Solmon. See on Luke 5 36.

V. 16. are ye also without understanding] No marvel if others understand me not, when ye, whom I have so often instructed, do not.

V. 17. whatsoever entreth in at the mouth] He doth not say all; but whatsoever; that is, all kinds of meat, for of every kinde some remains, in a good conception, of nourishment; our meat comes not into the heart, where sin is hatched: nature keeps something good for nourishment, it sends away the rest, and therefore the species of wholsome meat cannot defile us.

V. 18. which proceed out of the mouth] The heart being the fountain of thoughts, words and actions, is taken (after the custom of the Hebrews) for the understanding, will, and affections; and so being the principal seat of sin, it is that evil treasury whence all wickednesse issueth: and because the greatest part of sin, (as blasphemie, prophanenesse, lies, false witnesse, slandering, reviling, railing, obscenity, heretical doctrines, &c.) cometh through, or is fomented by the tongue, all which render sinners polluted, and sinfull before God and man: therefore our Saviour faith, that those things which proceed out of the mouth (the interpreter of a wicked heart) defile the man, and make him guilty before God.

V. 19. out of the heart proceed evil thoughts] Gen. 6. 5. & 8. 21 the Jews misled by the Pharisees, thought these to be no sins, Mat. 5. 21, 22, 27, 28. these therefore are put first to shew, that all sins, even in thought onely, defile the man.

V. 20. which defile a man] That is, make him guilty before God: out of the premises he inferreth this conclusion; seeing these are things which pollute a man, the Pharisees Maxime, (that to eat with unwashed hands is a fin) is a false calumny: so that Christ here teacheth, 1. That the true worship of God consisteth in keeping his commandments: 2. that humane traditions are but vain worship, fave onely where they are agreeing with, and subordinate to the worship of God commanded in his word: 3. that real pollution of a man is not in unwashed hands, or any such external matter, not forbidden in Gods word, but in the impurity of the heart, and the proceeds thereof, which ought to be cleansed by true faith and repentance, and otherwise cannot, See Acts 15. 9.

coasts of Tyre and Sidon] Which bordered on Tyre and Sidon: that is, in that quarter where Palestina bendeth towards Phenice, and the sea of Syria.

V. 22. of Canaan] Of the stock of the Canaanites which dwelt in Phenicia, neer the sea, Numb. 13. 29 such were the Sidonians, Judg. 1. 31. one of the posterity of the Canaanites which Joshua did not drive out. See Judg. 1. 30, 31.

have mercy upon me] She counts her daughters misery her own; so strong was her motherly affection. And who knoweth not, that it is an evident mercy of God to parents, when he heareth them for the recovery or relief of their sick, or otherwise afflicted, children? 1 King. 17. 18. 2 Sam. 12. 16.

thou Son of David] Thou art the long expected Messias, of the seed of David: the promise of a Messias and redeemer, being much spoken of among the Jews, it is likely that the report thereof came to the eares of the neighbouring nations: as also how Jesus had with so many admirable works, declared himself to be the Messias: hence were such confluences of people to him from those parts, Mark 3. 8. Luke 6. 17. which this woman also hearing of, cometh on the behalf of her afflicted daughter.

V. 23. he answered her not a word] When Christ delayeth, and seemeth not to regard the elect that cry to him, he doth it, for his glory, their advantage and the good of others. Christ answereth her not with his mouth, but speaks unto her by that sweet and secret voice of his Spirit to cry lowder.

for she cryeth after us] They plead for her, not so much out of charity, as to be freed from her importunity. So Luke 18 5.

V. 24. I am not sent, &c.] Chap. 10. 6. & 9. 36. to whom the promise was specially made, Rom. 9. 4. to whom he was first to be revealed. Acts 3. 26. and 13 46. and with whom he did personally converse in his ministery, Rom. 15. 8.

unto the lost sheep] who went astray and erred through ignorance and negligence of their pastors; who were dear unto God as his peculiar. See Psalm. 74. 1. & 79. 13. & 95. 7. & 100. 3. & 119. 176.

of the house of Israel] Of the people of Israel, the remainders whereof were now divied into tribes; but all those tribes came out of Jacobs house, who was called Israel.

V. 25. and worshipped him] Shewing her humility by her gestures, and the constancy of her faith, by renewing her petition. She will not be faid nay, or fit down either with silence or a fad answer believing, as a man may say with reverence, whether Christ will or no.

Lord help me] Few words, but very forcible, Eccles. 5. 11. when thou comest before God, let thy words be few, saith Solomon. St. Peter calls us to be sober in prayer, 1. Pet. 4. 7. without trifling or vain babling, which the wise man calls the sacrifice of fools, the word properly signifies to run at ones cries that cals for help, as the tender mother doth to her hungrie childe when he stirs up his voice and cries lustily.

V. 26. it is not meet] Before, he would not vouchsafe her any answer, verse 23. then he gave her a milde one, verse 24. but now he gave her an harsh denyal with disgraceful terms, yet further to exercise her faith and patience.

the children bread] I must do wonders for Israel, the children, and peculiar people of God, not for the unconsiderable Canaanies, that were as dogs, in respect of Israel. The Israelites were before all nations of the earth, adopted Gods children, Exod 4. 22. Psal. 147. 19. 20. Isa. 1. 2. aliants from the covenant of grace, he calleth dogs, as Phil. 3. 2. See Psal. 22. 16. Rev. 22. 15. the sense is, that the Gentiles must be content to wait until God had refreshed the Israelites with grace and mercy.

V. 27. truth Lord, yet the dogs eat the crumbs] There is enough falling from the table to feed and relieve us, the bread need not be cast unto us: thy power and mercy is so great, that the healing my child can be no wrong to thy Israel, though by thy free covenant and promises to the Jews, the first place for mercy belongs to them; yet when the children are filled unto satiety, thy mercy is sufficient and will extend it self to us, yet unconsiderable Gentiles also. The Syriack addeth ויחאן vechain, and they live: that is, that they also may live: the good master susteineth not his dogs to starve; much less wilt thou, the most contemptible creatures which wait on thee: thou wilt not deny me that which is not denied to dogs: so she compares the cure of her childe, to the crumbs which fall from the table of mercy and beneficence, prepared for Israel, continuing her reply in the allegory which Christ began: as if she had faid, that which I beg, in respect of the ful and continual favour bestowed on Israel, is but as crumbs from a full table: thou bestowest on them spiritual and eternal blessings, the temporal thou deniest not the heathens: seeing all taft of thy bounty, blessed Jesus, send me not away empty.

V. 28. then Jesus answered] Having received her reply, declaring her admirable confidence in the mercy of Christ, and seeing her holy importunity, which would receive no nay; he would now no longer hold her in fulpence, nor conceal his mercy, neither exercise her patience with any more dilatory answers.

O woman] Thus he speaks, as it were admiring the victory of her faith, and applauding it to the multitude: therefore he had all the while seemed to repel her petition, that the consequences might suit to this word; that (faith Christ) σφοδρὸν τὴν γυναῖκα, he might crown this woman.

great is thy faith] He commends her faith, because that was the ground of this constancy of hers, which his self had given her: for accepteth he and crowneth in us, not our merits, but his own mercies.

be it unto thee] This voice was, γενηθήτω σοὶ ὡς θέλεις, of the same kinde of voice, which said at first, Let there be an heaven, and it was made. Gen. 1. 1. crysost. 4. f.

even as thou wilt] She intimated her daughters misery, but had not made her petition in particular, verse 22 now he bids her make her own choice. God will not deny such as be constant and fervent in prayer Chap. 9. 29.

V. 29. Jesus departed thence, and came nigh unto the sea of galilee] Mark 7. 31. Christ ceaseth not to be beneficial, even there, where he is contemned.

and

and sate down there] Either to rest himself, or as Chap. 14. 23. that he might there pray: and also for the more conveniency of receiving them, whom he foresaw coming unto him with their sick and infirm.

V. 30. great multitudes came] Isaiah 35. 5, 6. For as there were many sick and distaffected persons among them, so had they heard of his unwearied power and mercy curing all that came or were brought unto him for help.

those that were lame] By disease, or inward, and inbred weakneſſe, this shews their great charity and pains, that would carry these up the mountain to be healed, verse 29 maimed] κυλλοὺς, maimed: or those who had lost the use of their limbs, as by the palsie, or some disaffection of body, shrinking up the sinews, or weakning them to a kinde of dead and helpleſſe impotencie: for we read not of any to whom our Saviour restored such limbs, as formerly were by any casualty cut off or lost: though he could as easily have done that also, had it so pleased him.

cast them down at Jesus feet] Note their humility and faith: we read of nothing they said, but only that they laid them before him, not doubting but he would heal them, who wel knew the thoughts and desires of their hearts.

and he healed them] So the Evangelist contracteth the large story of his admirable power and mercy, here shewed in curing all diseases into a few words: So Chap. 8. 16. and 14. 35. that we may consider Christs immense power, and inexhausted goodnesse: but why he did so quickly cure all these, and so long delay the Canaanite if any ask, they may first, therein see how he did indeed give bread to the children to the full: and next how he teacheth us, 1. that he most tryed her faith, to whom he had given the greatest measure of faith: God proportioneth our tryals to the measure of faith, which he giveth us. 2. that when he delayeth his favours, it is to the final advantage of his, whose patience he will abundantly recompence at last.

V. 31. the multitude wondered] Because those cures exceeded the course of nature, and the power of art.

and glorified God, &c.] They were far better than the high crested Pharisees, who attributed all Christs miracles to Satan: so bitterly injurious is malice and envy; they had rather the devil should have the honour of these great works, than Christ.

of Israel] That is the God whom Israel worshippeth, as Euthymius well interpreteth; for otherwise he is not onely the God of Israel, and the Jews, but of the Gentiles also. Rom. 3. 29.

V. 32. then Jesus called his disciples] Mark 8. 1. See also Chap. 14. 22. by the following miracle, Jesus shews that he will never be wanting to them that follow him, no, not in a barren wilderneſſe.

I have compassion on the multitude] My bowels yearn towards them, the like he did before, Chap. 14. 14, 19. which he now doth again, to declare his indeficient mercy and power, never weary of supplying them who follow him; therefore he gives them food, whose sicknesse he had cured: he is still our high priest, who is touched with the feeling of our infirmities, Hebrews 4. 15.

they continue with me now three dayes] If they had brought any food with them in that time it might be spent: neither did they leave Christ to buy them any: such was his unwearied mercy to instruct and cure them, and such their zeal and patience, as that it overcame their care for domestical affairs, and bodily supplies.

I will not send them away fasting] Or, I am not willing to send them away fasting; the words expresse, rather an affection, than a resolution to feed them: as Chap. 8. 3. see mark 8. 3. but the effect sheweth both.

lest they faint in the way] Which intimateth that some of them were so weakned with fasting, that they could not get home again without some refection: thus did Christ leave this following miraculous supply, to an extream exigent; to teach us constancy in our dependance on him: though his help come sometimes slow, it will come surely and opportunely in our greatest need, and to our best advantage: so did it here for their present relief and comfort, as also for the future confirmation of their faith.

V. 33. whence should we have so much, &c.] Or, shall we have: it is seemeth they had forgot their former supply, Chap. 14. where our Saviour fed a greater number with fewer loaves and fishes, and more was left. See verse 34. 37. 38.

in the wilderneſſe] No food is here to be sold: See the like diffidence in Moses, Numb. 11. 21, 22. where, to mans reason, there is the least appearance of supplies from the creature, there is Gods power and goodnesse most oppertunely manifested in our supplies.

V. 34. how many loaves have ye?] He knew before, but asketh, tha they might consider the greatnesse of the miracle, and the more clearly see it in the remotenesse of all probable means to supply.

they said seven] Because Christ withdrew himself, and his disciples often into the desart, where no victuals were to be bought or procured, the disciples used to carry some with them, (See Chap. 16. 7.) though very frugal and slender.

V. 35. to sit down on the ground] That they might expect refection from him, and be the more attentive to the miracle. See Chap. 14. 19.

V. 36. he took the seven loaves] In sight of the people, that they might know there were no more, Chap. 14. 17. there were onely five loaves and two fishes: but now seven, and few small fishes: the power of God to relieve us: is tyed to no means: much or little, few or many, are all one to him. See 1 Samuel 14. 6.

and brake them] That they might the better be distributed.

and gave to his disciples] That they might see that done in their hands, which they thought impossible. See 2 Kings 7. 2.

V. 37. of the broken meat] See Chap 14. 20.

seven baskets full] It was a kinde of basket wrought with twigs, of common use among the Jews, σαργάνη the Syriack giveth ספרורין Asperidon, which word both in the Greek and Syriack is used, Acts 9. 25, for that basket, in which the disciples at Damascus, let down Paul by the wall.

V. 38. they that did eat] See Chap. 14. 21. Herein was the majesty of the miracle, that there was no proportion between the men and the meat.

V. 39. and sent away the multitude] Not without a blessing and a great deal of good counsel, Labour not for the meat that perisheth, &c. now that you have eaten and are full, beware that you forget not the Lord your God, Deut 8. 10, 11.

into the coasts of Magdala] Whence some think Mary Magdalen had her name. See on Luke 8. 2. Mark 8. 10. it is said he came into the parts of Dalmanutha which was the name of a neighbouring tract of land. Euthymius thinks that regien had both these names: most probably, fay others, they were so joyned, as that they had fields, or commons lying together, so that when Christ was between them, or on the coast of either.

CHAP. XVI.

Verse 1. The Pharisees] These would be one constant party against Christ. See Mark 8. 11. Luke 12. 54.

with the Sadducees] With the Sadducees: of these two sects, see on Chap. 3. 7. though they were at a great distance, in point of principles, and opinions ones from another, yet they agree together against Christ, as Herod and Pilate, Luke 23. 12. Acts 4. 27. yet against all their power and conspiracy Christ prevaileth: all unity is not good; but that which is in Christ.

tempting him] Their purpose was to finde some occasion to calumniate, and accuse him, Chap. 19. 3. & 22. 18. Some think it was onely to satisfie their own curiosity: but all other their attempts against him conclude them more foolishly malitious.

a sign from heaven] Such an one as Moses did, who fed our fathers with Manna from Heaven, John 6. 31. thus they endeavoured to obscure our Saviours glory, as if he had not already shewed them his divine and heavenly glory and power, in many former miracles exceeding all power of the creatures.

V. 2. when it is evening] Ye are very carefull, and skilful out of experience, to observe the usual signes of fair or foul weather to come.

V. 3. red, and lowring] πυρράζων fad: it is a Metaphor borrowed from the countenance we are said πυρράζειν, when we are troubled at any thing odious or grievous: so the skie is called fad or lowring, when it is overcast with clouds and threatne th rain or storms. So the Latines faid, tristia hyems, fad winter: so the Syriack gives it, שעיא בסידאות Shemaio themirioh, calum triste; so it translateth σκυθρωπὸς, Matth. 6. 16. & Luke 24 17. by the same word, which we gave, sad.

hypocrite] See on Matth 6. 2. and on Luke 13. 15.

ye can discern] γινώσκετε διακρίνειν ye know how to discern, the word διακρίνειν, signifieth to discern, or judge of also, among other significations, probare, explorare, by which the sense of this place may appear.

the face] He putteth here πρόσωπον, as the Hebrews used פנים panim: for the outward shew or appearance of any thing (as Gen. 1. 2. 1 Sam. 14. 25. 2 Sam. 17. 19. &c.) whereby one thing may be known from another.

can ye not discern] Or, ye cannot discern: you set not your minds to it. See Luke 12. 56.

the signes of the times] So to discern, what is like to fall out, by reason to foresee events, and so to dispose of your affairs accordingly: so, the signes of the seasons; that is, of the choicest times, such as this is, the time of the Messias coming long expected, Acts 26. 6, 7. the accepted time, and day of salvation; whereof the miracles by me wrought are signes evident and undeniable; which were foretold by the Prophets, Isaiah 35. 4. &c. Matthew 11. 3, 4. 5.

V. 4. a adulterous generation] See on Chap 12 39. spuria & bolea, a bastardly brood, so he calleth them, because utterly degenerate seeketh after a signe] It was their malitious impudencie, who seeing many evident miracles dayly done by him, which their selves could not deny, John 11. 47. would yet require signes, as if none had been shewed them.

but the signe of the prophet Jonas] Such a one as was shewed on Jonas, the article added in the Greek, intimateth, that was a a notable signe. See on Chap. 12. 39, 40.

and he left them] Not onely that he might go thence to preach to others, as Luke 4. 42, 43. but as being justly offended at the hardnesse of their hearts, Mark 3. 5. they came to tempt him, and not to learn of him, and therefore he leaveth them. Euthym.

V. 5. when his disciples were come to the other side] They forgot it before they came into the ship, and did not until now remember it; possibly when the want thereof minded them of their neglect to provide as they were wont to do.

forgotten to take bread] Probably because of our Saviours suddain taking ship.

V. 6. take heed] ὁρᾶτε; the word among other things, signifieth, to weigh, examine or foresee, as Chap. 8. 4. Mark 8. 15. So the Syriack word ܚܙܝ chasan, is interpreted by prospexit, consideravit, Mart. Trostius Lex. Syr. See Chap. 18. 10. examine and try whether it be found or no, as 1 Thes. 5. 21. 1 John 4. 1. the next word interpreteth it, as the Syriack giveth it, diligenter cavete à, &c. which caution being doubled, sheweth it is a serious and most necessary admodition.

of the leaven] Of their corruptions in doctrine: errour tainteth sound doctrine, taking away the sweetnesse, and sincerity thereof: false teachers are not to be heard, Deut. 13. 3. Jerem. 23. 16. Matth. 24. 26. and if unawares we light on such who corrupt found doctrine by mingling falshoods therewith, as Irenaus lib. 3. c. 19. saith, giving us gypsum pro lacte, lime instead of milk, deceiving by the similitude of colour; therefore we must take heed what we hear, Mark 4. 24. and as Beda saith in Cant. exp. lib 1 exord, concerning the books of the Heretical Bishop, Julian ita carpat botrum, ut & spinam caveat: so let one gather the grapes, that he also take heed of the thorns: in dictis ejus sanos sensus ferentur & eligent, ut non minus vitet insanos; this our Saviour teacheth his disciples by a similitude; and an occasion taken from their present forgetting to take bread, verse 5.

of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees] The doctrine of these two sects differed very much, and were both contrary to Christs doctrine, and would, like leaven, spread to the infection of the hearers; therefore Christ warneth his disciples to beware of both: the Pharisees were much given to the observation of humane traditions even to the adnulling and making void the holy Law of God, Chap. 15. 3, 4, 5. they made fair shews of devotion and strictnesse of life, whereas they were indeed but meer hypocrites, Chapter 23. 5. Luke 12. 1. they were so besotted with the opini on of their own righteousnesse and merit, that thereby they became the most unreconcileable enemies of the Gospel, which teacheth free justification by faith in Christ, these two being altogether unconsistent: for if righteousnesse can be by the law, Christ died in vain. Gal. 2. 21. See Gal. 5. 4. Rom. 9. 30. &c. the Sadducees maintained such points, as overthrew all grounds of religion, Acts 23 8.

Sadducees] See on Chap. 22. 23. & Luke 20 27.

V. 7. among themselves] One said so to another privately: or within themselves, every one thought so in his heart.

it is because] As if they had said, Christ reproveth us for our forgetting to buy bread.

V. 8 When Jesus perceived] Not by relation from them, but by his divine omniscience.

O ye of little faith] The root of diffidence, care and thoughtfulnes about worldly provisions, as if they were our main interest, is want or weaknesse of faith. See Chap. 6, 30. 31.

why reason ye among your selves] As if I could not feed you unless you brought bread with you, or should be beholding to the Pharisees for it.

because ye have brought no bread] As if the occasion of my speech were onely the want of bodily food.

V. 9. Do ye not yet understand?] See Chap. 14. 17. having seen two such miracles of feeding so many, with so very little food, do ye not yet understand that I can if need be do the like for you?

neither remember] This is the third fault objected: the first was unbelief, verse 8. the second ignorance, the third is forgetfulnesse. See Mark 6. 52.

five loaves of the five thousand] That is, wherewith the five thousand were fed.

V. 10. neither the seaven loaves] Chap. 15. 34.

V. 11. how is it that ye do not understand?] This is a question implying some kinde of admiration, and reproof of their dulnesse, and inconstancy in matters of such great moment.

V. 12. then understood they] They might well understand that he spake not of bread: and it seemeth that they gathered by our Saviours last words, that he meant the doctrine of Pharisees and Sadducees, the rather because he used to teach spiritual things by occasion of the temporal.

V. 13 when Jesus came into the coasts] Hereby it appeareth that the former discourse was by the way, or some bye place, whether Christ had withdrawn himself, ere he came to that journeys end, as Luke 9 18.

of Cesarea Philippi] Built by Herod the great, at the foot of Lebanon, in honour of Tiberius: whereas the other called Cesarea Stratonis, stood by the Mediterranean sea, built in honour of Othavius, Josephus de bello Judaico, lib. 1. cap. 6.

he asked his disciples] Not out of ignorance, as if he knew not what men said of him, nor out of ambition, as desiring to hear himself commended; but out of love to his disciples, lest they not rightly knowing him, should fail of those blessed fruits of faith which he intended them whom do men say] Mark 8. 27. Luke 9. 18, that I the Son of man am] Do they think me but an ordinary man? are they offended at my low estate? or do they believe me to be the Messias, promised by God, and expected of the faithfull?

V. 14. some say, &c.] They repeat not the blasphemies of Pharisees, but say what the better sort said of him; though they thought too meanly of him also, verse 19. 20.

John the Baptist] Some of the Jews thought that prophets and eminent men either did rise again, or else that their souls came into other bodies; and that they then became more famous than ever before: hence it might possibly be, that they thought John Baptist was risen up again, See Chap. 14. 2. this must be understood of those that knew not Christ till after Johns death, for others might know them both together; and so that the one could not be the other.

some Elias] Because it was foretold that he should come as the forerunner of Christ, the Messias, Mal. 4. 5, 6.

others Jeremias] Because he was as eager against the priests, and as much hated of them, as Jeremias was, and so might seem to have his spirit in him. Some think that the Jews expected the return of Jeremias, to finde the ark which he had hidden, 2 Mac. 2. 5.

one of the prophets] Or, one of the other prophets; for Jeremias was a Prophet also.

V. 15. but whom say] Christ looks for confession of the mouth, as well as faith in the heart, especially of such as are to teach others.

ye] Ye Apostles, who have seen and heard more than others, and ought also to know me better.

that I am] He examineth them not concerning his doctrine but his person: it much concerneth us to have a good opinion of our teachers: but Christ was not onely a teacher but the Saviour of the world: to know and believe in him is life everlasting. See John 17. 3. John 3. 16.

V. 16. Simon Peter answered] He in the name of the rest, made this confession of Christ.

thou art Christ] Gods anointed to be king and priest over his Church, John 6. 69. & 1. 49. Heb. 2. 17. & 3. 1. & 4. 14. & 5. 6. & 6. 20. Luke 4. 18. Acts 4. 27. & 10. 38.

the Son] The Son of God by nature, not by adoption, as we are: to declare his eminency and excellency, the article is added to every word in the Greek: he had called himself the Son of man, verse 13, and Peter here confesseth him the Son of God, one and the same person consisting of the two united natures, being both the Son of God, and the Son of man; very God and very man. See Chap. 1. 23.

of the living God] This distinguisheth him from false gods which were the works of mens hands; neither able to give life to others, not having life themselves. See Gen. 16. 14. Chap. 26, 63. Romans 9. 26. 2 Corinth. 3. 3, & 6. 16. 1 Thes. 1. 9. 1 Timothy 3. 15. & 4. 10. Heb. 3. 12. & 9. 14. & 10. 31. & 12. 22.

V. 17. blessed art thou] Who believest and confessest to salvation, see Rom 10. 9, 10. and Mat. 13. 16, 17.

Bar-Iona] This distinguisheth him from the other Simons: Simon was his own name before his calling, Chap. 4. 18. John 1. 42. the Evangelist writing in Greek, useth here the Chalde and Syriack word, then in common use among the Jews, instead of a surname; for bar in the Syriack, as בן ben in the Hebrew, is a son, of Iona; it seemeth a contract of Ἰωανᾶ, whereof see John 1. 42. So we read Barrimæus, the son of Timæus. &c. Mark 10. 46.

flesh and blood] That is, neither man, nor the wisdom of man, nor carnal reason; But Gods Spirit. See John 1 13. Gal. 1. 16.

V. 18. Thou art Peter] John 1. 42. that is, a stone: thou hast glorified me by thy confession of the truth, and I will honour thee, by making thee a pillar in my Church, Gal. 2. 9. this name our Saviour gave him in his calling; Mark 3. 16. John 1. 42. to intimate his constancy.

upon this rock] That is, the rock confessed, not confessing upon the rock of thy confession that I am the Messias: for as Hilarie saith (de Trinit. l. 2.) Petra est fidei confessio, this confession of faith is the rock, or Christ confessed is the rock, Ephes. 2. 20. 1 Corinth. 10. 4. See on John 1. 42. See also Hilarie de Trinit. l. 6.

will I build] Christ is both the builder, and the upholder of his Church.

the gates of hell] That is, all the power and policy of Hell: the gates of cities being in ancient time, not onely parts of special strength, but places also of meeting for advice in matters of greatest concernment. Genes. 34. 20, 24. Deuter. 3. 5. Psalm 127. 5.

shall not prevail against it] Either to destroy it, or any of the elect: See John 5. 24. & 11. 25, 26. Revel. 20. 6. 1 Corinth 15. 55. or utterly to extinguish the light of truth, or to extirpate the professours thereof unto the worlds end, maugre all the power, malice, and machinations of Satan, and those instruments which he shall imploy against it. See Acts 5. 39 Peter in few words had confessed the main sum of the Gospel, the truth of God, against which no falshood shall finally prevail. Gods gifts are neither incerta, nor mutabila (Prosper de vocat Gent. l. 1. c. 24.) uncertain, or mutable.

V. 19 I will give] The authority of Gods ministers is from God. See John 20. 23.

unto thee] With the rest of the Apostles: not only to thee, but also to others; for as the confession which Peter made, was the confession of all the holy Apostles, so also the power here given him, was given to all the rest respectively, as may appear, John 20. 23. where the same power is given to them all, See chap. 18. 18. and on chap. 10. 2. and on chap. 20. 24.

the keyes] A metaphor from stewards or officers of great houses to whom the keyes are entrusted. The keyes of Ecclesiastical powers; that is, preaching the Gospel, and administring the holy Sacraments (which open unto us the kingdom of heaven) and whatsoever else appertaineth to faithfull stewards of the mysteries of God. See Luke 11. 52. Isaiah 22. 22.

of the kingdom of heaven] To let in, and shut out of the Church here, and of heaven hereafter, for here in this life salvation is gained or eternally lost: therefore here, the word of the kingdom is to the hearers thereof, a Savour of life, or death, 2 Cor. 2. 16. to them that believe, it is the power of God to salvation, Rom. 1. 16. and the just shall live by faith, Rom. 1. 17. and the ordinary external means thereto, is by hearing, Rom. 10. 16. and hearing; by the word of God, by the ministery of man, which is Gods own ordinance. So that, as the effect of mens hearing proveth in this present life, either by opening the kingdom of heaven to them by faith and repentance, or shutting them out of all hope thereof; by their own unbelief and hardnesse of heart; so shall it be to eternity: for as in the rearing of the temple of Solomon, there was in neither hammer nor ax, nor any tools heard in the house, while it was building, 1 King. 6. 7. for the materials were made ready before they were brought thither, so shall it be with us, lively stones for the spiritual house of God, 1 Pet. 2. 5. here we must be framed, for in the life to come prophesie shall cease, 1 Corinth. 13. 8. and faith end in enjoying.

thou shalt bind] To binde and loose, is to retain and remit mens sins, John 20. 23. this properly belongs to God, as to save, Ephes. 4. 32. Colos. 3. 13. Matth. 9. 6. Mark 2. 10. Luke 5. 24. to man only ministerially as they have the embasse of reconciliation to them committed, 2 Cor. 5. 18, 20 so they remit to those that believe, and retain to those that are offended and gainsay, by the ministerie of the word, and execution of the Church-censures, See Acts 2. 38. & 10. 43.

on earth] Here among men.

shall be bound in heaven] That is, in Gods judgement; for here life is gained or lost, and that according as we believe and obey the word, or otherwise.

V. 20. that they should tell no man] Not that it was not true which Peter had confessed, verse 16. or that it was not needfull to be known: but because the time was not seasonable until after his passion, and resurrection, wherein he was declared the Son of God, verse 21. & Chap. 17. 9. Rom. 1. 4. then were the Apostles to publish the same every where, Acts 1. 8. yet, as occasion served, he taught before, that he was Christ, the Son of God, John 5. 18. Mark 14. 62.

V. 21. to shew his disciples] He acquaints them before with his passion, that they might not be scandalized at those things which they should see him suffer.

go unto Jerusalem] Or go thence unto, &c. Christ was born at Bethlehem in an obscure place; but he was to be crucified in Jerusalem the chief city: that the accomplishment of our redemption might be the more publique, and the more certainly divulged.

suffer many things] Shame, contumelies, slander, reproach, pains of death, &c. which, not the righteous, but wicked men ought to have suffered.

of the elders] Which the Hebrews called זקנים, Zekenim, Deut. 21 2. which was not so much a name of age, as dignity: of these consisted the Jewish Sanhedrim, such as the Latines called Senatores; stiled usually in this sacred story Elders of the people, judges, rulers: this setteth off the bitternesse of Christs passion: it had been lesse dishonour to have suffered the rage of an ignoble vulgar; but here authority, and countenance of religion in the high priests, and chief men condemning him, made the aspersions injuriously cast on him, far more opprobrious.

V. 22. then Peter] Peter is here permitted to temptation; and sin, that he might not be proud of that which Christ had said before, verse 17. here we see, as in a glasse, the weaknesse of the best men; and that the good they have is of God alone, and nothing of or from corrupt flesh and blood, See Rom. 7. 18. 1 Cor. 4 7. John 1. 13.

took him] Took him by the hand and led him aside, as they use to do, who intend to talk privately and familliarly with a friend.

to rebuke him] Out of cranal affection, to reprove him; for not having more care of his own safety.

be it far from thee] ἵλεώς σοι, spare thy self: thou shalt not go: no doubt but he spake this out of good affection to Christ; but here we see what good intentions are without a due knowledge of Gods revealed will: nihil interest, quo animo faciat, quod faciffe vitiosum eft, Lactant. l. 3. c. 15. it skilleth nothing, with what intention thou dost that which is evil to be done.

V. 23. he turned] Away from Peter toward the other Apostles, as displeased with Peter.

get thee behind me] Lead not me, nor give me counsel, but follow me, and learn of me, as verse 24.

Satan] Σατανᾶ, the word generally signifieth an adversary, chapter 4. 10. he called him so, either because he had spoken like an enemy, or had shewed himself an instrument of Satan, set on work by him to disswade Christ from suffering for our salvation: this Christ takes ill, though Peter spake ignorantly, and out of affection to the person of christ. The wisdom of the flesh is enmitie to God, Romans 8. 7. so was this preposterous zeal in good Peter: how easily do we fall into sinne, seeing our best affections are subject to such errour?

an offence unto me] Thou layest a snare, or stumbling block before me, thou offendest, and displeasest me in this thy motion made to me in the corst of my calling, as mediator wherein say some, lie sinned more grievously than afterwards he did in denying his master.

the things that be of God] Although God hath revealed unto thee that I am his Sonne, verse 16. 17. yet he hath not acquainted thee with my passions, and therefore out of carnal affection, thou dissuadest me from that, which is the end of my coming into the world, the fulfilling my fathers will for mans salvation, See 1 Corinth. 2. 14. So much differeth frail man, born up by the grace and assistance of Gods spirit, from himself, left to himself and his own wisdom of flesh: there Peter was pronounced blessed, verse 17. here he deserved to be called Satan, and offence: therein Peter went rejoycing from the Counsel, that he was counted worthy to suffer for the name of Christ, Acts 5. 41. here he would have that done, which would have hindered the great work of our redemption, for which the Sonne of God became the Sonne of man, for our salvation.

V. 24. then said Jesus] Mark 8. 34. upon occasion of Peters failing, he shews them, that not onely his self must suffer, but all his also, if God shall call them, or as many as God would call of them to suffer for the truth of the gospel.

unto his disciples] He called the people also to hear it, Mark 8. 34. for it concerned them likewise, to be acquainted with the doctrine of the crosse; the Apostle saying, 2 Tim. 3. 12. all that will live godly in christ, shall suffer persecution.

will come after me] Will follow me as a disciple, and professour of the gospell, Luke 14. 26. & 22. 39. or desires to come to heaven, whither I am going.

let him deny himself] Let him not have any regard of himself which may in any measure hinder him from those things which he oweth to the service of God. Set aside all worldly respects, so far forth as they impeach or hinder the revealed will of God: Gregory hom. 32. in evang. it is not enough to leave that which we have, except we leave our selves, and yet quo ibimus extra nos? whither shall we go, out of our selves? relinquamus nos ipsos, quales peccando nos fecimus & maneamus nosmetipsi quales per gratiam facti sumus; let us leave our selves in respect of that which we have made our selves by sin: and let us remain our selves in respect of that which we are made by grace. We may here see how hard it is to follow Christ aright: grandis——virtutis eft, & solicitæ diligentiæ superare quod nata fis, faies Hieronym, to Furia, ep. 21. lib. 2. it is a point of great vertue and careful diligence to overcome that which thou art born.

take up his cross] Not bear it unwillingly, murmuring at the burden layed on him: but cheerfully, as he that willingly and readily taketh up that burden, of which he is assured he shall make great advantage.

his crosse] That portion of affliction which God hath appointed for him, and calleth him to suffer, chap. 10. 38. wherein he must (what humane infirmity will permit) imitate Christs willing submission to his Fathers will, who in his bitter agony cried,---not as I will, but as thou (O Father) wilt, Matth. 26. 39.

and follow me] When he hath resolved so to do, he is prepared to be my disciple: or, it is not sufficient that he deny his own will, and suffer for me, unleſſe he alſo imitate me in piety, and all holy converſation, Chap. 11. 29. 1 Cor. 11. 1. Epheſ. 5. 2. or, let him not think much to deny himſelf and ſuffer for me, who ſuffer death for his ſalvation. See Chap. 10. 24, 25. or, let him make account to follow me though afflictions into eternal glory, Luke 24. 26. Acts 14. 21, 22. Heb. 13. 12. 13. this maketh much for the ſetting out the certain truth of Chriſtian religion; that Chriſt never propoſed ſecular riches, honours, or eaſe to thoſe who followed him, thereby to allure them to adhere to him; but contrariwiſe, the malice of an evil and injurious world, perſecutions for his Names ſake, ſhame, poverty, contempt, and death it ſelf: and yet for the certain reward in the life to come, grounded on his word, they have in all ages ſince, ſo conſtantly profeſſed the goſpel, as that Satan by all his rages againſt them, could never deter them from chriſtianity: nay, never more did the goſpel flouriſh, than in the midſt of bloody perſecutions: never were we leſſe overcome, than when we could not by many years ſlaughters be overcome. Reaſon have we to follow Chriſt patiently, whatſoever we endure: had he not ſuffered more for us, than we can ſuffer for him, we had not been ſaved.

V. 25. for whoſoever] Chriſts propoſitions for ſalvation are generall: he is no accepter of perſons; whoſoever believeth, and obeyeth him, ſhall be ſaved, John 3. 16. Galatians 3. 28, 29.

his life] Ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ, his ſoul: it is a Synechdoche familiar with the Hebrews, thereby importing life; or it may ſignifie (as oft it doth) the whole man; for he that ſaveth, or loſeth ſoul or body eternally loſeth both.

for my ſake] That he may gloriſie me in a conſtant profeſſion of the truth which I teach in the goſpel.

ſhall finde it] That is, ſhall be ſaved, and finde eternall joy and bleſſednelſe. See Chap 10. 39. ſo gainfull a loſſe is it to ſuffer for the truth: ſo loſſefull a gain is it, by time-ſerving to provide for preſent peace, and eaſe, with denying or betraying the truth: the whole ſenſe Gregory excellently expreſſeth by a ſimile: ſi frumentum ſi ſervas, perdis: ſi ſeminas, renovas, hom. 32. in Evang. as if one ſhould ſay to the husbandman, if thou keepeſt thy wheat, thou loſeſt it; if thou ſoweſt it, thou reneweſt it.

V. 26. for what is a man profited, &c.] As men deſire rather to preſerve their lives, than their goods, Job 2. 4. ſo do ye much more endeavour to ſave your ſouls, which are of greater value than all the world; which being once loſt can never be redeemed by all the riches of the world.

his own ſoul] Or, his own life, as verſe 25. Or rather body and ſoul himſelf, to eternity: for the one of theſe cannot be left without the loſſe of the other alſo.

V. 27. for the Son of man] I, who ſeem now mere man, the man of ſorrows, contemptible; ſhall yet judge the living and the dead, wherein I will reward my conſtant ſervants, and puniſh others, who feignedly cleave unto me.

in the glory of his father] As God, equal to the Father: or in the glory given him in his humane nature by the Father, like a glorious king. The prince of the kings of the earth, Rev. 1. 5. when all power is given him, in heaven and in earth, Matth. 28. 18.

and then] Not now preſently: here is our place of tryall and ſuffering: we muſt patiently expect ſatisfaction for all our wrongs, at Chriſts ſecond coming, and repair of all our temporal loſſes, in his eternal kingdom.

he ſhall reward] And ſave good men, but condem the wicked, John 5. 29. and indeed, though life eternal, be the free grace and gift of God, which we merit not, yet death is ὀψώνια ἁμαρτίας, Rom. 6. 23. The wages of ſin, the ſinners juſt deſert.

V. 28. there be ſome] He nameth them not, but meaneth thoſe diſciples, who ſaw his glory in the mount, and ſhould ſee him after his reſurrection: for the kingdom of God is here preſens eccleſia. Gregor. hom. 32. the preſent Church. See Mark 9. 1. Luke 9. 27.

ſhall not taſt of death] Shall not die, as Heb. 2. 9. See on Mark 9. 1.

come in his kingdom] As Chap. 17. 1, 2. where they ſaw a ſhadow of his glory, wherein he ſhall come to judge: or in his reſurrection, aſcenſion, ſending of the holy Ghoſt, and propagation of the goſpel by ſignes enſuing. See Chap 28. 18, 19, 20. Acts 2. 30, 32. &c. or coming in power by execution of judgements upon the Jews, to the utter overthrow of that nation, Chap. 24. 3. 26, 27, 34. Luke 21, 6, 7, 24.

CHAP. XVII.

Verſe 1. AFter ſix dayes] Mark 9. 2. Luke 9. 28. See note thereon.

Jeſus taketh Peter] He took with him Peter; the prime Apoſtle in order; James who was firſt to ſuffer for him, and John the beloved Apoſtle; who was to out-live the reſt, and when he raiſed the damoſel, he took with him theſe three only, haply as beſt beloved and more zealous than the reſt, See Mark 5, 37. See on Luke 9. 28.

into an high mountain] A fit place for his transfiguration, for height and ſcereſie. Some think this was mount Tabor, others are of other opinion: mount Tabor being (as Hieronym. de loc. Hebraic. ſaith) in the midſt of a field of Galilee; but v. 22. it appeareth that this was done out of Galilee, vid. Mark 9. 30. If. Cauſabon. exercit. 15. N. 26. defendeth the ancient tradition of the Church, that it was mount Tabor. St. Peter calleth it the holy mount, 2 Pet. 1. 18. it is not expreſſed in the goſpel, and therefore we may be ſafely ignorant hereof: Luke 9 28. it appeareth that he went up to the mount to pray: Secret prayers are more ardent, the minde being more attentive thereto, from diſtractions by external things: therefore he ſaith, when thou prayeſt, enter into thy chamber, or cloſet, ſhut the door; Matth. 6. 6.

V. 2. was transfigured] The ſubſtance of his body was not altered; but his countenance was far more glorious than before; (as Moſes face ſhined, Exod 34. 29, 30. 2 Corinth. 3. 7.) ſo were his garments, that the glory then appeared, quâ venturus erat poſtea in regno ſuo, Hieronym. in which he would afterwards come in his kingdom.

did ſhine as the ſun] In a moſt glorious manner. See the like manner of phraſe, Chap. 13. 43. Dan. 12. Judg. 5 31.

his raiment was white as the light] It was glorious alſo, to an extraordinary excellency, and heavenly and divine majeſty ſhining on his humanity.

V. 3. Moſes and Elias] Some conceive that Moſes body was now raiſed up again; others are of other opinion: Moſes was the Prophet by whom the law was given, and Elias a principal Prophet; theſe were fitteſt to ſpeak concerning Chriſts paſſion; for as Hieronym. ſaith, the law (repreſented here by Moſes) and the Prophets (by Elias) did frequently declare the paſſion and reſurrection of Chriſt; theſe ſhew that Chriſt was the Lord of the Law and Prophets; the ſcope of which was to declare him the onely Saviour, Acts 10. 43. theſe chief witneſſes, appear now to ſtrengthen the diſciples faith, againſt the ſcandal of the enſuing croſſe: if any ask how the diſciples knew Moſes and Elias; let them conſider, that beſides Chriſts talking with them, wereby they might be enformed in this admirable preludium of light and heavenly glory they might as eaſily have a ſpeciall revelation, as Paul a divine, rapt to hear unſpeakable things, 2 Cor. 12. In the ſtate of innocence, Adam knew Eve preſented to him, to be fleſh of his fleſh, &c. Gen. 2. 23. and here the Apoſtles knew Moſes and Elias whom they never before ſaw; it is moſt likely that in the ſtate of glory, wherein God ſhal be all in all; (our knowledge ſubordinate to the happy communion of Saints) ſhall be more excellent, than in the ſtate of innocency, or regeneration here begun, talking with him] About his paſſion; as Luke 9. 30.

V. 4. It is good for us to be hear] How delectable will heavenly glory be, when this glimpſe thereof did ſo ravith Peter, that he deſired to abide here.

V. 5. While he yet ſpake] 2 Pet. 1. 17. That is, while Peter was ſpeaking the forementioned words,—let us make here three tabernacles, &c. It was an inconvenient motion of Peter, in their fear, not knowing what to ſay, Mark 9. 6. and therefore Chriſt anſwered nothing to it; but God, as it were by a new ſcene entring that holy theatre, covered with a glorious cloud, breaketh of that ſpeech.

a bright cloud] Not now a black dark one, as on Sina in the giving of the law: this cloud was to convey Moſes and Elias away from them. God ſometimes deſcending to informe mans capacity, and ſpeaking more familiarly with him, ſhewed his preſence from the clouds of heaven: (Exod. 16. 10. Exod. 40. 34 Numb. 11. 25.) as it were the curtains of his moſt glorious throne, who dwelleth in the unacceſſible light of divine majeſty, ſee Pſal 104. 1, 2, 3. Job 36. 29. &c. pſal. 68. 34. 35. now this was not a dark cloud in which God manifeſted his glorious preſence, with dread and terrour, as in the giving of the law, which had but dark ſhadows of things to come. Exod. 19. 9. Heb. 10. 1. but now in a bright and ſhining cloud, portending and ſhewing the manifeſtation, of a moſt comforable, unvailed, and clear truth of Chriſt our Saviour.

This is my beloved Son] Chapter 3. 17. Not a ſervant as Moſes, Hebrews 3. 5, 6. and the Prophets; but a Son; alſo the double article here againſt differenceth Chriſt from other ſons: he is a Son by nature, but we by adoption: therefore he is called the firſt born among the brethren; becauſe though he be of right, the onely Son, yet is he chief among many, in that he is the fountain and head of our adoption Coloſ. 1. 13. Epheſ. 1. 6.

in whom I am well pleaſed] See on Chap. 3. 17. duo grata vocabula, filius & dilectus (ſaith the Author of that tract. de baptiſm. Chriſti, apud Cyprian.) theſe are two words which are pleaſing to God; Son, and beloved.

hear ye him] He is the Prophet, of whom Moſes ſpake, Deuterenomie 18. 15. Acts 3. 22. 24. He is the truth and eternall word of the Father, who ſpake by the Prophets: he onely can reveal the counſel of God, concerning our ſalvation, which is in the boſome of the Father. John 1. 18. God ſpeaketh by him. Hebrews 1. 2. if we muſt hear him, and his ipſe dixit muſt be our rule; then it is of no great great concernment what men ſay; except their aſſertions be according to that which he ſaith, we may ſecurely neglect them: God hath ſaid, hear him. See Cyprian l. 2. ep. 3 If Chriſt only is to be heard (who now ſpeaketh to us by his miniſters, Luke 10. 16. Matth 28. 20.) we muſt not ſo much attend, what others before tradition of the Church, that it was mount Tabor. St. Peter calleth it the holy mount, 2 Pet. 1. 18. it is not expreſſed in the goſpel, and therefore we may be ſafely ignorant hereof: Luke 9 28. it appeareth that he went up to the mount to pray: Secret prayers are more ardent, the minde being more attentive thereto, from diſtractions by external things: therefore he ſaith, when thou prayeſt, enter into thy chamber, or cloſet, ſhut the door; Matth. 6. 6.

V. 6. They fell on their face] For fear, as by the words following it ſeems they did, John 18 6.

V. 7. touched them] To raiſe him up, and to comfort them againſt exanimat ing fear.

V. 8. ſave Jeſus alone] To aſſure them that the voice from heaven concerned him alone, for Moſes and Elias were gone into the vail of the law and the prophets taken away, we ſee Chriſt the end of the law and the prophets to them that believe, 2 Cor. 3. 13. &c. See Hieronym. in loc.

V. 9. The viſion] Which they ſaw with their eyes: ſometimes the word חזון chazon (which the ſeventy commonly give by ὅρασις a viſion) is uſed for that which men ſee in a dream, but here it was a viſion of waking men. See Mark 9. 9. 11.

to no man] See on verſe 20. (and Chap. 16. 20.) no not ſo much as to your fellow diſciples, leſt it might either ſeem incredible, to them, that Moſes, many ages paſt dead, and Elias taken up into heaven, had now appeared to them on the mount: or poſſibly left after ſo great a glory of Chriſt ſhewed unto them, the ſcandal of his croſſe might in them prove incurable: yet to theſe three appointed witneſſes, he ſhewed it: firſt to perform his promiſe mentioned, Chap. 16. 28. ſecondly that theſe and others by their example might more ſteadfaſtly adhere to Chriſt their head, the Son of God, ſo avowed by Moſes, Elias, and God the father from the cloud of heaven: thirdly to help their infirmity againſt the ſcandal of the croſſe, when they ſhould conſider that he dyed not by humane compulſion, from which he could eaſily have delivered his ſacred body, but that he offered himſelf up a voluntary and ſatisfactory oblation for ſinners.

V. 10. Why then ſay the ſcribes] Hearing of his reſurrection from the dead, which they ſo little underſtood with relation to Chriſt (of whoſe reſtoring a temporal kingdom to Iſrael they dreamed) as that they reaſoned among themſelves what he meant thereby, Mark 9. 10. it is probable that they remembred what the ſcribes in their ſynagogues uſed to teach concerning the return of Eliat, to go before Chriſt the Meſſias, whom having ſeen now talking with Chriſt, they demanded, how theſe things agree together. See Chap. 11. 14. Mark 9. 11. The ſcribes abided that propheſie of Mal. 4. 5. To make the people believe that the Meſſias was not yet come.

that Elias muſt firſt come] Before Chriſt come: how canſt thou be our expected Meſſias, ſeeing Elias thy forerunner, is not yet come, except this be his coming which we have ſeen, and that he ſhal now go and manifeſt himſelf and thee to all Iſraelits and if he muſt declare thee, why doſt thou forbid us to declare, and teſtifie to the people what we have ſeen and heard concerning him? See Auguſtin. de C. D. l. 20. c. 29. and Tertullian de anim. c. 35.

V. 11. Shal firſt come and reſtore] Gr. ἔρχεται ἀποκαθιστάνει cometh that is, the ſcribes ſay true, that Elias muſt come before the Meſſias: but they underſtand not what they ſpeak of.

reſtore all things] See Mal 4. 6. Luke 1. 17.

V. 12. Elias is come already] That is, John Baptiſt in the ſpirit of Elias, verſe 13. Chap. 11. 14. Luke 1 17.

they knew him not] Becauſe they looked for Elias in his own perſon. The Scribes and doctors of the law would not acknowledge John Baptiſt to be the forerunner of Chriſt, ſpoken of by the Prophet, Mal. 3. 1. becauſe they would not acknowledge Chriſt to be the Meſſias and Saviour, but contrariwiſe decreed to excommunicate any that confeſſed him to be ſo. John 9. 22.

of them] Of the Jews.

V. 13. Of John the baptiſt] See on verſe 12.

V. 14. And when they were come] Mark 9. 17. Luke 9. 38.

kneeling down to him] In an humble manner, as men that tender petitions uſe to do, with an earneſt deſire to obtain relief for his afflicted childe: he would omit no meanes or importunity thereto probably conducing.

V. 15. He is lunatick] He means troubled at certain times of the moon, with the falling ſickneſſe or ſome like diſeaſe: whereby the devil probably took advantage about thoſe times, to torment him more, verſe 18. by joyning himſelf to ſecond cauſes. See Chap. 4. 24. for he that is a murderer from the beginning, taketh all occaſions he poſſibly can, to anoy and afflict men, except Gods providence (which preſerved, and at laſt cured this childe) reſtrain his malitious endeavours.

he falleth into the fire] When the evil ſpirit drives him.

V. 16. They could not cure him] Though they had caſt out ſome divils, yet theſe they could not. See Chapter. 10. 8. and verſe 21.

V. 17. O faithleſs, &c.] He blames the want of faith in the father, who doubted of Chriſts power, Mark 9. 22. the unbelief of the people which hindred Chriſts doing of miracles ſometimes: Chap. 13. 58. and the unbelief, or weakneſſe of faith in his diſciples. verſe. 20.

how long ſhall I be with you] teaching you, and confirming my doctrine by miracles, and yet ye believe not.

bring him hither to me] Though he were offended with them, yet he would heal the childe; that they might know that he could do what he would, which belongeth to God alone: ſo refelled he the cavils of the Phariſees in curing this wretched young man.

V. 18. rebuked the devil] ἐπετίμησεν αὐτῷ He rebuked him: that is, the evill ſpirit in him: as, Mark 1. 23, 24. See Luke 9. 42.

V. 19. Then came the diſciples] To wit, when they were come into the houſe, Mark 9. 28. Underſtand this of the nine Apoſtles which were not on the mount with Chriſt, who having the occaſion offered them by the father of the childe, verſe 16. could not caſt out the devil that afflicted him.

why could not we caſt him out?] They were aſhamed that the Scribes and Phariſees had ſeen their inability; and poſſibly they were alſo afraid leſt they had loſt the power which Chriſt had given them, Chap. 10. 1. and therefore ask this queſtion.

V. 20. becauſe of your unbelief] That is weakneſſe of faith, not an utter want of it: they had very little, as the words following import.

if ye have faith] Luke 17. 6. Underſtand this of faith of miracles: we may have a good and ſufficient meaſure of juſtifying faith unto ſalvation, and yet not have any faith of miracles.

a grain of muſtard ſeed] In a very ſmall meaſure. See Chap. 13. 32.

ye ſhall ſay unto this mountain] This expreſſion is uſed to ſet out the greateſt miracle, as, 1 Cor. 13. 2. no prince with his army could ever remove a ponderous mountain: that is more than to lay it plain, which yet is a great work. Zach. 4. 7. See on Luke 17. 6.

nothing ſhall be unpoſſible unto you] Nothing needfull for the confirmation of the doctrine taught by you, and to procure authority thereto, nothing which may promote Gods glory and propagation of the Goſpel, yours, or others ſalvation in believing the ſame, for faith apprehendeth and layeth hold on the truth of almighty God, to whom nothing which he will do, is impoſſible. Luke 1. 37.

V. 21. this kinde] God poſſibly at ſome times for cauſes beſt known to himſelf, gives more power to ſome evil ſpirits than to others: they that had long poſſeſſion, were very unwilling to part with it, Mark 9. 21. 29 and faſting] Which is uſed on extraordinary occaſions as a means to render our prayers more fervent, 2 Cor. 20. 3. Ezra 8. 21. Dan 9. 3. Jonah 3. 5, 7, 8. and ſo, much more prevalent (Jam. 5. 16.) by how much more fervent.

V. 22. While they abode in Galilee] Chap. 20. 17. Mark 9. 31. Luke 9. 44.

The Son of man ſhall be betrayed] He often puts them in minde of this, leſt they ſhould be offended at the ignominy of the croſſe; and to draw them from their opinion of a temporal kingdom, which they ſo much dreamed of, Mark 10. 35. 37. Luke 24. 21. Acts 1. 6.

V. 23. They were exceeding ſorry] Now reſenting that which our Saviour ſo often ſpake of, they were very ſad.

V. 24. tribute money] δίδραχμα. Matt. 22. 14. calleth it κῆνσον and Luke 20. 22. obolum—the didrachma was half the ſhekel of the ſanctuary, which the Iſraelites were by the law, Exod. 30 13 to give for every mans offering: but after the Romans ſubdued them, they exacted the ſame for poll-money, or tribute; as they did alſo that cenſum which was a kinde of levy on their fields, or houſes. See Joſeph. Ant. l. 19. c 15. ſome value this didrachma, at fifteen pence: ſome at a little leſſe: the ſilver ſhekel was haf an ounce in poiſe; this tribute-money ſaith Maſter Beza, hath on its, Samaritan letters, and on the one ſide, that ſacred pot in which the Manna was kept, with the letter Aleph on the top, ſignifying that it was a ſingle ſhekel: the double being as much more, in value four of their drachmas, with this inſcription שקל ישראל ſhekel Iſrael, the ſhekel of Iſrael: on the other ſide Aarons rod which budded; with this inſcription ירושלם קדושה Jeruſalaim kodſ-chah. Jeruſalem the holy: it had this Image. vid. Beza in loc.

V. 25. Jeſus prevented him] He knew what he would ask, and by preventing him, ſhewed his divine omniſcience.

Of whom do the kings] Secular princes take it not of their sons, how much leſſe ought they to exact it of the ſons of God? or, the Emperour is but Gods deputy; therefore he ought not to take tribute of his onely Son.

V. 26. then are the children free] And much more I, who am the onely Son of God by nature.

V. 27 leſt we ſhould offend them] Leſt we ſhould give them occaſion to think that we deſpiſe authority, or leſt we ſhould give an example to others ſo to do, to the diſturbance of peace and order; thus would he teach us obedience to ſuperiours, though in our perſonal wrongs, and rather, in things lawful, to recede from our right, than to diſadvantage our religion, by adminiſtring any matter of offence unto thoſe who are in authority.

Go to the ſea] Here he ſheweth Peter indeed what he ſpake in word, that he being the Son of God, ought to be free; for as much as (beyond the power of all the kings of the earth) he both knew the ſecrets of the deeps, and could command the creatures therein to do his will, and the fiſh of the ſea to become tributary to him: this ſheweth, as Chriſts power and omniſcience, ſo alſo Peters admirable faith, obedient in things to remote and diſtant from the reach of carnall reaſon.

a piece of money] A ſtater anſwering the Hebrew ſhekel, in weight, it is half an ounce of ſilver, in value two ſhillings ſix pence, after five ſhillings the ounce. See on verſe 23.

CHAP. XVIII.

Verſe 1. At the ſame time] τῇ ὥρᾳ, in the ſame hour, at that time when he was at Capernaum in the houſe whence he had ſent Peter to the ſea of Geneſaret, to fiſh for tribute. Mark 9 33 Luke 9. 46. ὥρᾳ an hower, properly was put for the twelfe part of their day, Matth. 20. 6. John 11 9. yet doth it alſo ſignifie a certain time appointed, Luke 22. 14. and ſometimes an age, 1 John 2. 18.

came the diſciples] After they had diſputed by the way, which of them ſhould be greateſt; and were aſhamed to tell Chriſt what their controverſie was, though he asked them (as appears in the other Evangeliſts) at length they are bold to propound the queſtion to him: yet ſomewhat reſervedly; for whereas they controverted which of them ſhould be greateſt, here they propound a general queſtion, neither limiting it to themſelves, nor any other particulars; and they adde, in the kingdom of heaven: either in their own ſenſe (who expected a ſecular kingdom of Chriſt) or elſe to palliate their ambition with pretence of their deſiring nothing but heavenly things.

Who is the greateſt] τίς ἄρα, Who then is the greateſt, as if the occaſion aroſe from Chriſts pronouncing himſelf free from tribute, as being the Son of the heavenly king: this was a dangerous weakneſſe of the Apoſtles; for as Tertullian ſaith cruely; de baptiſm. c. 17. amiſſato ſchiſmatum mater eſt; emulation is the mother of ſchiſme in the kingdom of heaven] The kingdom of heaven importeth the kingdom of grace here, and the kingdom of glory in the life to come: but ſeeing ambition is a ſtranger and enemy to the croſſe, it is moſt likely that they enquired concerning the temporal kingdom which they expected.

V. 2. a little childe] A young child whom he might take in his arms, Mark 9.36. ſo the Prophets often taught the people by outward ſignes, and actions; as Jer. 27. 1.

V. 3 except ye be converted] The Hebrews expreſſed repentance by converſion, intimating a change in the courſe of life, and going another way, as men that have gone wrong, turn about in the right path: it is likely that our Saviour here intendeth, that except they leſt the dangerous precipices of ambition, and became as little children, in humility of minde, it could not be well with them.

become as little children] Not in ignorance and infirmity, but in lowlineſſe of ſpirit. 1 Cor 14.20. he never ſaid, Peter, or James, or John ſhall be greateſt (which doubleſſe he would not have left undetermined, if he would have had any one of them primate, and above the reſt in authority) but equally dehorteth them all from vain and pernitious ambition; therefore he ſet the childe in the the midſt of them, as an embleme and pattern of humility appertaining to them all.

Ye ſhall not enter into the kingdom, &c.] No man can be ſaved without humility: ambition caſt the angels thence; except ye learn humility, you ſhall be ſo far from being greateſt in heaven, that ye ſhall not come there at all.

V. 4. Whoſoever therefore ſhall humble himſelf, &c.] Whoſoever doth not think highly of himſelf, no more than this little child doth; humbleneſſe of minde is the right way to preeminence.

V. 5, one ſuch little childe] One like ſuch a childe, in the quality before mentionod: See Pſalm 131. 2. and 119. 141. receiveth me, that is, I will take it as done to my ſelf. So Chap. 25. 2.

V. 6. But who ſo ſhall offend] Mark 9. 42. See on Luke 17. 2.

one of theſe little ones] One of an humbled ſoul; as verſe 5. See on Luke 17. 2. Or the ſenſe may be, whoſoever ſhall injure, or cauſe to fal one of the little ones of them that believe. See verſe 10. & Mark 9.42, it were better for him] If he might ſo end his puniſhment, it were better for him to be caſt into the moſt helpleſs condition temporal, than to endure eternal damnation in hell fire.

that a millſtone] Poſſibly ſome great malefactors were ſo executed, to which cuſtome Chriſt might allude, or it may intimate the moſt deſperate condition, as to any hope of eſcape, concerning this preſent life.

V. 7. Wo unto the world] Many miſchiefs will fall on mankinde, by reaſon of offences; for of them are both the offendants, verſe 8 9. and the offended; verſe 10.

becauſe of offences] Lets and hinderances which ſtop the courſe of good works: the Greek word σκανδαλα ſignifieth things which we ſtumble at. See on Luke 17. 1.

it muſt needs be] Neceſſitate conſequentiæ: becauſe of the wickedneſſe of men, it will certainly be ſo. See on Luke 17. 1. and God juſtly permitteth the ſame, for cauſes to him beſt known. See 1 Cor. 11, 19. offences are inevitable.

but woe be to that man] This is added to ſhew, that Gods permiſſion, neither enforceth mans will, nor excuſeth any evil act.

V. 8. Wherefore if thy right hand] See on Matth. 5. 30. Mark 9. 45.

V. 9. It is better for thee, &c.] καλὸν ἐστί &c. Underſtand here μᾶλλον, rather good for thee; that is, ἀνεκτότερον, as, Chap. 10 15. more tollerable.

V. 10. Take heed] ὁρᾶτε — See, as Chap. 16. 6. and 24 4.

that ye deſpiſe not] See on verſe 6.

one of theſe little ones] Not in years, but in humility; as verſe 3. God takes care of every one of them, that are of an humble ſpirit, and ſo, little in their own eyes, as 1 Sam. 15. 17 Saul once was.

their angels] God ſets his angels to guard and take ſpecial charge over thoſe that are leaſt able to defend themſelves, ſee Pſal. 34. 6, 7, & 91. 11.

behold the face of my father] Wait for Gods command, to be imployed for the good of poor infants and humble believers. Heb. 1, 14. they behold the face of God, non ſicuti eſt, ſed latente ſub natura in ſpecie quâ voluerit apparere, Auguſtin. ep. 112. Paulino, not as he is (in his incomprehenſible being) but his nature being concealed, he appeareth in what form he pleaſeth: not as he is in himſelf, ἀλλ' καθόσον ἡ αὐτοῦ χρηστότης, &c. as much, or, as they are capable, Cyril. Hieroſol. Cat. 6.

V. 11. to ſave that which was loſt] No not onely men contemned of the world, but ſuch as were dead in treſpaſſes and ſins Epheſ. 2. 1. and ſo of themſelves loſt, ſee Chap. 15. 24. Iſa. 27. 13. Luke 19. 10.

V. 12. how think ye] Luke 15. 4. Be ye you your ſelves judges, and weigh the matter by common rules of experience: thus God ſometimes ſeemeth to appeal to mens conſciences. See Iſa. 5. 3. 1 Corinth. 11. 13 one of them gone aſtray] As Jer. 50. 6; ſee Pſal. 119. 176. Ezek. 34. 6. Matth. 9. 36.

doth he not leave ninety and nine] So many are much more worth than one; yet ſuch is his love and care of that one, that he leaveth them all to ſeek it, ſee on Luke 15 4.

V. 13. He rejoyceth more of that ſheep] Becauſe the other were ſafe before, but this was in a manner loſt: ſee on Luke 15, 5, 6, 7, 9 &c.

V. 14. It is not the will of your father] It is not pleaſing unto him, that any of them ſhould periſh. Ezek. 18. 32. and his eternal and unchangeable decree is, that they ſhal all be ſaved, ſee Iſa. 54. 10. & 61. 8. John 10. 28, 29. Rom. 8. 38. 2 Tim. 2. 19. Heb. 6. 19.

V. 15. If thy brother ſhall treſpaſſe] Levit. 19. 17, ſee on Luke 17. 3.

againſt thee] By doing thee a perſonall injury: or by ſaying, or doing ſomething impiouſly, or irreligiouſly againſt the law of God, whereby thou art juſtly ſcandalized or offended.

Go and tell him his fault] tarry not till he come to thee, if he neglect his duty go to him: ὕπαγε, ſeemeth to prohibit delay; as wounds of the body, ſo ſinnes, which are the wounds and ſickneſſe of the ſoul, grow more uncureable by too much delay; why ſaith he not here; as Chap. 5. 24. go and be reconciled to thy brother (ſee alſo Chap. 6. 14.) the anſwer is, that there he treateth of reconciliation onely, and the neceſſity of forgiveing one another, but here he ſpeaketh of brotherly corruption; where remiſſion of the offence commonly amendeth not, but indulgence often makes the offender worſe; therefore he ſaith, tell him of his fault; for as Chryſoſtom de Lazar. ſaith, reprehenſi in melius ſunt, quos amor non emendat. See on Luke 17. 3.

between thee and him alone] That he may evidently perceive that thou doſt it not to diſgrace him, nor to inſult over him; but out of deſire of his ſpirituall good, and the reparation of the wrong done.

if he hear thee] If upon thy admonition or reproof, he ſhall confeſſe his faults, ſatisfy thee, and amend. See on Luke 17. 3.

thou haſt gained thy brother] Thou haſt got a friend of him: or thou haſt been an inſtrument to ſave his ſoul. Jam 5. 20. The end of our reproving muſt be, the gain of our brothers ſoul: the Apoſtle propoſed this end of his whole miniſtry; See 1. Cor. 9. 19.

V. 16. take with thee one or two more] That he may the more reſpect the words and thou mayeſt have witneſſe of thy brotherly proceeding with him, if thou ſhalt be forced to complain publickly: what if my brother, being reproved, grow more obſtinate and pertinacious, muſt I give him over to himſelf, as deſperate and hopeleſſe? by no means, but take witneſſes with thee, that thy candor and fair dealing may appear before men, as it doth before God the ſearcher of hearts in the mouth] An Hebrew manner of ſpeaking who ſaid עַל־פִּי hal pi, in the mouth, Deut. 19. 15. that is, by the word or teſtimony. So is פִּי mouth, put for עֵדָה hada or עֵדוּת heduth witneſſe or teſtimony. See Deut. 17. 6. See v. Schindl. pent. in עוד פְּרוּחָה et in See John 8 17. 2 Cor. 13. 1. Hebr. 10. 28.

every word may be eſtabliſhed] Every matter or thing teſtified (as Luke 1. 37.) may be accounted certain and out of further queſtion.

V. 17. if he ſhall neglect to hear] If he do not vouchſafe to hear them, perſwading him to confeſſe his fault, and to repair thee, and give thee ſatisfaction: if he continue obſtinate, and will not hearken to good and peaceable advice.

tell it unto the Church] Unto the Miniſters, or Governours of the Church: or to the publick Congregation, or multitude (as Vatablus interpreteth) he ſpake here to the Jews, to whom he preſently oppoſeth, an Heathen or Publican: So that, becauſe the power of judicature concerning thoſe things, was then in their Sanhedrim, or Colledge of elders, he remitteth them in ſuch caſe, to complain to them for redreſſe: ſo he calleth thoſe who had the authority in matters Eccleſiaſtical, the Church which Luke 22. 66. calleth πρεσβυτέριον τοῦ λαοῦ θεοῦ. the elders of the people, and the chief prieſts, and ſcribes.

let him be unto thee, &c.] Thou mayeſt then carry thy ſelf towards him, as towards a prophane ſtranger, and contemner of government and religion: ſo the Jews accounted all heathens, and ſhunned their company. See chap. 9. 10. & 1 Cor. 5, 9, 10, 11. 2 Theſſ. 3. 14.

V. 18. Whatſ ever ye ſhall binde on earth] John 20 23. 1 Cor. 5. 4. &c. by convincing men of ſin before God, or of wrong done to men. Some underſtand it of juſt excommunication of obſtinate ſinners.

in heaven] Before God.

whatſoever ye ſhall loſe] By reducing to repentance through your miniſtry and preaching the word: others underſtand it of abſolution, or freeing from the ſentence of excommunication, upon good and juſt ground.

V. 19. If two of you] Here he ſpeaks to them, as to private men met together to make peace, and to accord differences between party, and party; or for any work of piety and charity: or it may be underſtood of the party wronging, and wronged; or of the wronged and parties taken in to aſſiſt, though they be but two.

ſhall agree on earth] This word συμφωνήσωσι, is transferred from things bodily, to the ſpiritual; ſymphonie is properly in muſical notes and cordes: ſignifying harmony, or conſent: but it is here uſed to import a conſent or agreement of minde and will.

touching any thing] Any good thing well carried, or well deſired, and to a good end; or about the reconciliation before mentioned.

V. 20. Where two or three] He promiſeth his gracious aſſiſtance to, and preſence with his Church, be it great and numerous, or ſmall: thus he confirmeth the authority of Eccleſiaſtical cenſure, and comforteth them who unite in truth, and holy duties.

gathered together] In prayer, or any other religious works, agreeing together therein, as verſe 19.

there am I in the midſt of them] This is an argument of Chriſts divine power, and ſpecial preſence with his, as chap. 28. 20.

V. 21. How oft] The queſtion is moved by occaſion of our Saviours former ſpeech, v. 15. Luke c. 17. 4. is repeated the occaſion of Peters quare, which this Evangeliſt omitteth.

V. 22. Until ſeventy times ſeven] As oft as he ſhall repent, and aſk forgivenеſſe: here is a definite number for an indefinite; Peters ſeven is multiplied into ſeventy times ſeven, Luke 17. 4. See Gen. 4. 24.

V. 23. Therefore] To this end I do tell you the enſuing parable, that ye may be willing to forgive often, who have had ſo many ſins forgiven you.

the kingdom of heaven] Gods ſpiritual government in the Church, re-eſtabliſhed by the Meſſias.

V. 24. Ten thouſand talents] Of a talent. See on 1 Chron. 22. 14 and Tho. Godwin. Moſes and Aaron. l. 6. c. 10.

V. 25. And his wife and children] As Tertullian de reſur. carn. c. 37. sheweth the ſenſe is to be taken ex materiâ diſti; from the matter of the ſpeech: in parables, we are to conſider the ſcope and intention of the ſpeaker, and not over-curiouſly to diſcuſſe every particular: ſo here we muſt know, that God doth not always ſhew extream rigour, until the vindication of his juſtice, or the compuſſion of a ſinner to repentance (which light afflictions do not alwayes effect) neceſſarily require it: onely he ſheweth, that if God ſhould deal with us according to the rigour and ſeverity of his juſtice, we could not anſwer him one of a thouland. See Pſal. 143. 2. and therefore our onely ſanctuary is his mercy, and the way thither by humble ſupplication. and charity in forgiving each other: this was the courſe of old, when men had not to pay, to ſell them an i theirs, for ſlaves, Levit. 25. 39. 2 King. 4. 2. See on chap. 20 7. to be made] ὠνηθῆναι to be given from thence to ſatisfie the creditour.

V. 26. worſhiped him] Or reverently ſalured him: this was a civil reverence, which was very uſual in thoſe eaſtern parts, Gen. 27. 3. & 33. 3.

have patience with me] God is ſaid in ſcripture to be ſlow to anger, Exod. 34. 6. that is, patient, not eaſily provoked, and not to ſtir up all his wrath, Pſal. 78 38.

V. 27. Forgave him the debt] Did more for him than he asked; he deſired but dayes of payment, and the King remitted the whole debt. See Luke 7. 42. Gods mercy (which can have no cauſe but in it ſelf) is the ſole cauſe of our ſins remiſſion in Chriſt, we can thereto contribute neither merit nor ſatisfaction.

V. 28. an hundred pence] The Roman peny, is the eighth pare of an ounce, which a ſtter five ſhillings the ounce, is ſeven pence halfpeny, a ſmall ſumme in compariſon of that which was forgiven him: teaching that if God forgive us a debt incomparably greater, than we can have to forgive one another: then muſt we forgive, or elſe we ſhall be unexcuſable: concerning their peny, ſee Godwin, Moſes and Aaron, cited verſe 24.

V. 29. his fellow-ſervant fell down at his feet] This was a great degree of humiliation before his fellow ſervant: but nothing can move that heart to pity which i hardened to deſtruction.

V. 30. he would not] He that had found greater favour from a ſuperiour, denies a leſſe curteſie to an equal: the King had forgiven him the whole debt of 10000 talents, and he denies his fellow ſervant time to pay an hundred pence.

V. 31. told unto their Lord] Out of their compaſſion, they tell all, with the circumſtances of the cruelty: theſe words are not to be ſtrained, as if God were enformed by any; for the evidence of every fact ereyth to him: onely it teaches us, that we have (beſides our own conſciences) ſo many adverſe witneſſes crying to God againſt our cruelty, as are acquainted with our ſins: becauſe they cannot but be ſorely offended at our injuſtice or cruelty.

V. 32. I forgave thee all the debt] This aggravates his faule, who would not for give his brother: and ſetteth off Gods admirable mercy, who forgiveth all, where he forgiveth any one ſin.

becauſe thou deſiredſt me] Upon thy entreaty without further ſatisfaction: even after that, or becauſe thou entreatedſt me: this becauſe in the application, doth not import a cauſe, but a condition of obtaining mercy: the ſenſe is, ſeeing that at thy entreaty, I was contented to forgive ſo great a debt; thou oughteſt to have ſpared thy fellow ſervant at his entreaty.

V. 33. on thy fellow-ſervant] Thou hadſt reaſon to pity him: he was thy fellow-ſervant, and might have ſatisfied thee; thou couldſt never ſatisfie me, nor merit any mercy, yet I forgave thee.

V. 34 tormentors] Thoſe that keep men committed to priſon, in much hardſhip: ſome ſay, the Romans (under whoſe Laws the Jews now were) uſed not onely to impriſon, but alſo cauſed them to be beaten there: the meaning is, God delivereth the unmerciful to perpetuity of torments, which they juſtly ſuffer, who would not be amended by mercy. Compare this here with that which is ſaid, v. 27. and it may be demanded, whether God ever recals his pardon graneed, or finally condemns that ſinner, whom he had once forgiven: I anſwer,

1. As before, and elſewhere, parables are not over-curiouſly to be ſtrained ſo as to make every particle to agree in the moral and explication thereof: ſimilitudes they ſay, run not on four feet, they will go current if they agree in one, or few points according to the ſcope thereof, and intent of the ſpeaker. So here this parable is to ſhew; 1. The uncharitable temerity of men, who would find mercy at Gods hand, but ſhew none to men for Gods ſake, and at his command. 2. The vain hopes of malicious perſons: without mercy ſhall they be judged, who ſhew not mercy before they are judged.

2. God ſeemeth to remit the ſin, where he deſereth execution of the puniſhment, or where he diverteth a plague or puniſhment denounced, in things concerning this life; as we may ſee in the ſeveral plagues in execution on Pharaoh and his people, or threatned as in the example of Ahab, 1 King. 21. 29. and others, whoſe ſins God forgave not; however the puniſhment temporal was either ſo diverted, or deferred to the next life, that it became not exemplary in this.

3. The gifts and graces of God are χαρισματα, Rom. 11. 29. ſuch as he never repenteth of, nor wholly recalleth; as in election, ſanctification, remiſſion of ſins Where the Scripture ſpeaks of Gods repentance as, ſo giving the Kingdom to Saul, or the like, they deſcen I to mans capacity therein: for properly God cannot repent, because he cannot erre who is omniscient, or mistake in his election so as to repent, or recall his own grant, who foresaw the event of his giving. So that, as where God remitteth the guilt of one sin, he remitteth all; so to whom soever he forgiveth sins, he forgiveth them for ever; yet here, where the punishment is not presently (or possibly all the sinners life time) remitted and taken off; as in David may appear, 2 Sam. 12. 13, 18. 2 Sam. 15. 2 Sam. 23. but God never finally condemnes that sinner, whom he had once forgiven.

V. 35. so likewise] This parable informs us, that they shall find God severe and implacable, that do not forgive their brethren, although they have been divers'ly and grievously injuried by them.

from your hearts] Sincerely, not in shew only; neither seeking revenge, nor affecting it, no nor so much as remembring injuries, Levit. 19. 18. Rom. 12. 9. for so would ye have God forgive you, Ephes. 4 32. Colos. 3. 13.

every one] Of what rank or degree soever: superiours must as well forgive inferiours, as look for forgivenesse from them, or from God, who saith upon the matter, as Joseph, Gen. 43. 3. 5. ye shall not see my face, except your brother be with you.

his brother] Not his fellow-servant, as before, but his brother, verse 15. that very name carrieth a convincing argument of forgivenesse in it self.

their trespasses] Of all sorts, great or small.

CHAP. XIX.

Verse 1. WHen Jesus had finished] Mark 10 1. when he had performed his ministry in Galilee: this was the last journey which Christ made to Jerusalem. See Luke 9 51 hereof Christ spake chap. 16. 21. and 17. 22. to shew his constancy to do Gods will to the death. Luke saith chap. 9. 51. τὸ πρόσωπον αὐτὸν ἐστήριξε, he strengthened his, or set his face to go to Jerusalem: it is an Hebrew manner of expression, signifying a fixed resolution to do something, as Ezek. 4. 3. וחזית אתה פניך vehachinotha eth phanecha--- See also 2 King. 12. 17. & obstruxit facies tuas: the circumstance of time is here mentioned, to assure us, that Christ now set himself in the way with a constant resolution to die for the Elect. See on Luke 9 51.

he departed from Galilee] He passed over the water out of Galilee into Judea.

V. 2. healed them] See on chap. 12. 15.

V. 3. tempting him] Seeking to entraphim: as chap. 22. 16, 36. if he should pronounce all divorces unlawful he should seem contrary to Moses and so expose himself to the odium of the Jews, who religiously observed the Law: if he should allow of all divorces, he should contradict his own doctrine, chap. 5. 32. and allow of the perverse and uncharitable practices of the Jews, who on every slight occasion put away their wives.

to put away his wife] To give her a bill of divorce, and so dismisse her. See on v. 7, 8.

for every cause] Or for any cause κατὰ πᾶσαν αἰτίαν, ainlα importeth, both a crime, and a cause: vid. Budæum ætiol. --- Col. 2. here it better accordeth with the latter, seeing that the Jews used to put away their wives for deformity also, Deut 24. 1. which if it were a cause, could not be a crime: and here πᾶσαν may be translated any, (according to the Hebrew expression, Psal. 103. 2. & 147. 20.) specially if we understand, cause, distinct from crime: none doubting but that some crime might be a just cause of divorce.

V. 4. Have ye not read] He reduceth them to the first institution of marriage set out in scripture. See on chap. 12. 3.

that he which made] Gen. 1. 27.

male and female] He made but one wife for Adam, though he could have made him many, that if one had not pleased him, he might have put her away, and have taken another: but God, the universal Parent and Creator of all, in the beginning, made onely one man and one woman, Mal. 2. 15. therein declaring his holy will concerning Matrimony, between one man, and one woman. Polygame was never lawful: for God never dispenseth with any moral Law.

V. 5. And he said] God inspired Adam to say so, or God said so by Moses.

For this cause] Gen 2. 24. Ephes. 5. 31. Because in the beginning God joyned one man, and one woman, in holy Matrimony: and for as much as the woman was taken out of the man, being flesh of his flesh, and bone of his bone, Gen. 2. 22, 23, 24.

leave father and mother] This is not to be understood simply; for God cannot be contrary to himself, in prohibiting duty to parents, which is the first commandment with promise, Ephes. 6. 2. But to declare the strict bond of unity between man and wife; the sense, is rather forsake father and mother, than thy wife: thou must dwell with thy wife, 1 Pet. 3. 7. thou are not bound to dwell with thy parents; except in case of their necessity.

shall cleave to his wife] He shall dwell with her: (as 1 Pet. 3. 7.) in holy conversation, comfortably, in loving and individual society of life: they mutually esteeming themselves so bound to cherish, assist, and comfort one another, as if they were members of one and the same body; to the uttermost of their power, defending themselves from the attempts of Satan, and his agents; as also the advantages which he, too often attaketh, on men and womens inordinate passions; lest he should thereby get any occasion of dividing them; or in the least measure alienating, or embittering their affections towards each other.

they twain shall be one flesh] 1 Cor. 6. 16. They which were two, became one: this word flesh, is taken for the whole man, or the body, after the manner of the Hebrews: The meaning I, they who before their marriage were two; in their marriage become one in respect of the bond, and their conjunction. See 1 Cor. 6. 16, 17. 1 Cor. 7. 4.

V. 6. no more twain] For the twain is the wives head, Ehef. 5. 23. and the head and body are no more twain, but one flesh. See concerning this argument, Augustin To 7. de nupt. concup. l. 1. c. 9. 10. 17.

God hath joyned together] Those who are joyned together according to Gods ordinance, and by his providence.

let no man put asunder] On any other termes than God hath appointed. See on chap. 5. 32. and here v. 9.

V. 7. Why did Moses] Deut. 24 1.

a writing of divorcement] Which Moses calleth, ספר כריתות Sepher cherithuth, βιβλίον ἀποστασίου, the seventy give it, Librum repudii, that is divorce or parting away; which they in ‘ after-times wrote, accoiding to this or the like tenour. I. N. willingly, and without constraint, have dismissed and cast out this ‘ N. who hath hitherto been my wife: and do grant her licence ‘ and power, to go at her pleasure, whither she will: and any man ‘ may marry her, neither let any presume to prohibit her: in witnesse whereof I have given her this bill of divorce, &c. V. Schindler. Pent. in כרת: see also a more large form. Henr. Ainsworth, on Deut. 24. 1. and D. Godwin. Moses and Aaron l. 6 c. 4.

and to put her away] ἀπολύσαι, to loose her from, to wit, the band of Marriage: thus the Jews did when their wives displeased them, though they were chast, and they conceived that they had authority from Moses so to do.

because of the hardnesse of your heart] The common fault wherewith this people was branded, Exod. 33 3 and 34. 9. Deut. 9. 6. and 31. 27. Isaiah 48. 4 Ezek. 2. 4 and 3 7. Acts 7. 4 1. left when once they displeased you, ye should use them cruelly, Moses permitted you to put them away; not allowing such divorce, but preventing a greater mischief.

suffered you to put away, &c.] They say Moses commanded, verse 7. Christ saith, Moses suffered it, to wit, in his political ordinances (wherein he could not but comply somewhat with the disposition of that hard-hearted people) not as being a minister of the moral Law; or Moses winked at it, but gave no law so to do; for Moses words, Deut. 24. 1. may be read thus, and he hath written her a bill of divorcement, and given it, &c. and she hath departed, and gone and been another mans wife; and the words of the 4. verse sheweth the main scope of that sanction to be, not a precept of putting her away, but a prohibition of a future reception and taking her again, for that is abomination before the Lord --- See Jer. 3. 1. though Moses suffered this to those who could not be perswaded to keep their wives, and commanded such to give a bill of divorce, for the future indempnity of the wife, against the husbands implacable rage, yet he never gave a law, that the man should therefore put away his wife, for any lesse cause than adultery; neither were they any better than adulterers before God, who (except in case of adultery) put away their wives (verse 9.) and married another. See chap. 5. 32.

from the beginning] From the first original and institution of this ordinance concerning marriage.

V. 9. and I say] Or, but I say, as chap. 11. 19. See chap 5. 31. Mark 10. 11. Luke 16. 18. 1 Cor. 7. 11.

except it be for fornication] The band of marriage cannot be broken by a divorce, except it be for adultery; yet that needed not, had they duely executed the law concerning punishing adultery with death: but it seems that in the neglect thereof, our Saviour addes this caution: as to tax that neglect, and perverse indulgence to adulterers, and adulteresses; so also to condemn their rash judgements, and unwarrantable practices, who divise other causes of anulling marriages: let all take heed that they presume not to controule the wisdom of their heavenly Master, by assigning other causes of parting them whom God hath joyned, than God hath ever declared in his word.

V. 10. If the case, &c.] If a man be so strictly and inseparably tyed by this ordinance: thus flesh useth to reason receive this, &c.] This the Greek word χωρεῖν properly signifieth: and metaphorically, as the Syr. interpreter gives it, non quivis est par huic rei: all are not so continent, as to live chastly single. See 1 Cor. 7. 2, 8.

V. 11. all cannot] Cannot live continently without wives, nor all wives without husbands.

To whom it is given] By some peculiar means verse 12.

V. 12. Which were so born] Unfit for marriage by nature, or not desiring it.

made eunuches] Gelded: such were appointed to keep the concubines of great men.

made themselves Eunuches] Not by dismembring themselves, but τῶν πονηρῶν λογισμῶν τὴν ἀνάρρησιν, &c. Anastas. Sinait. q. 66. ex Chrysost. hom. by taking away evil thoughts: the meaning is, that to be abstemious, and chast, βασιλικὴν ἡρακλῶν ἐστι ῥᾴδιον. as Epiphan. hæref. 21. 5. in expectch, is a life of the Kingdom of heaven: a gift of grace fitting them for the Kingdom of heaven.

he that is able] If any man have received the gift of continency, that he can in single life, keep himself an undefiled member of Christs mystical body: otherwile, take heed that temporal advantages, cast thee not eternally into hell-fire. See 1. Cor. 6. 9, 10. 1 Cor. 7. 9. Heb. 13 4.

V. 13. Then there were brought, &c.] Mark 10. 13. Luke 18. 15. after th y saw how he helped and cured people of ripe years; the pious mothers began to hope that he would also bestow some blessing and heavenly grace on their children, if he would but lay his hands on them (which was the customed form of blessing, as appeareth in the story of Isaac, Gen. 27. 21, 22. and Jacob, Gen. 48. 14, 17. therefore they brought their children to our Saviour.

and pray] They who were excellent in gifts, and eminent in authority, used to bestle inferiours, by imposition of their hands. (See Heb. 7. 7.) which was a symbolum, and sign of blessing: so the Priests were appointed a form of blessing, which (as representing God) they were to pronounce to the people, Numb. 6. 24. &c. therefore these parents defired this solemn ceremony, and Christs prayers for their children, who were presented unto him, in fide parentum, in their parents faith, as Euthymius speaketh: this shews the great desire they had of their childrens spiritual good.

The disciples rebuked them] That is, those that brought them, Mark 10. 13. it may be because they brought their children ἀκόσμως δὲ καὶ τυφλῶς καὶ μετὰ θορύβου καὶ ἀταξίας disorderly, and tumultuously, as Theophylact thinks: they thought it a thing troublesome to Christ, and not worthy of his greatnesse and excellency, to meddle with children, who were not yet of capacity to learn the high mysteries of the kingdom of heaven, and needed no miraculous healing.

V. 14. of such is the kingdom of heaven] Ye have no cause to blame them for bringing their children to me; for they have interest in the kingdom of heaven, as well as those of riper years: and unlesse ye be like them, ye shall never come there, chap. 18. 3. they have no appetite of revenge against those that hurt them; when the parents correct them, yet they cleave to them, and prefer them before all others: if a Queen in a diadem and purple robes should be offered (saith Chrysostom. hom. 63. in Matth.) they would rather fee their mother though fordid and poorely clothed, than another in the most princely attire: they desire nothing beyond necessity; when they are satisfied, they let go the breast: they are not distracted with cares of this world; nor know they many sinnes, wherewith years and maturity acquainteth the best of the meer sons of men: if we will be saved, let us imitate these harmelesse patterns, which come neerest to our lost state of innocency.

V. 15. He laid his hands on them] It is not said, that he prayed, as they that brought the children desired verse 13. but onely that he laid his hands upon them: whereby he shewed that he had power of himself to blesse them: So Mark 10. 16. it is said, he put his hands on them and blessed them.

V. 16. And behold one came] See Luke 18. 18. Mark 10. 17. he is said in Luke, to be a certain ruler, a chief man in eminency or authority, not a vulgar obscure plebeian: it seemeth he came not to Christ treacherously, as the Scribes and Pharisees used, but with a mind to learn of him, whom he reverenced; yet in his story appeareth, how dangerous an obstruction and let to salvation, love of riches and the world is.

good Master] This preface, with other circumstances shew, that he meant willingly to embrace the doctrine of Christ; and how little, fair intentions profit, where any thing is loved more than God, and our salvation!

What good thing shall I do?] Mark the question, you that will understand Christs answer to him; he saith not by what means must I be saved? to which undoubtedly Christ would have answered, believe and thou shalt be saved. (See Acts 16. 31.) But what good thing shall I do, &c? he knew it was not in saying or professing good, but yet he dreamed of merit of works; whereby he (as the Pharisees) thought he must be saved. See Rom. 9 30, 31.

V. 17. Why calleth thou me good?] Seeing thou supposest me to be meer man: he understood his hypocrisie, or presumption on his works: therefore he here insinuateth that which he laid, Luke 6. 46. why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say? He denyeth not his goodnesse, sed magistri abjique Deo excludit errorem, Jerom. but excludeth his errour, who took him to be a teacher without a Deity.

none good but one] None good so as God; that is, Originally, Essentially, Absolutely, Immutably good, 1 Sam. 2. 2. James 1 17.

keep the commandments] He speaks not this as if any man might be justified, and saved by the works of the law; but in answer to his question, verse 16, and to draw him from ceremonies to moral duties. See on verse 16. sanctity is via regni, the way to the kingdom, though not causa regnandi, the cause of reigning. Lernard. See Heb. 12. 14. and compare it with Rom. 3. 28. Rom. 4. 14. Gal. 2. 21.

V. 18. Thou shalt do no murder] Exod 20. 13. He mentioneth not the ceremonial Law, which the Jews strictly observed, nor the duties of the first table, whereof they seemed very zealous; but of the second table, wherein they were very negligent, chap. 23. and wherein they commonly fail, who hypocritically make fair shewes of devotion in the first table. See Isai. 1. 11. &c. and 66. 3. Jer 7. 9, 10, 21. Mich. 6, 6, 7, 8.

V. 19. Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thy self] This is the sum of the second table, Rom. 13. 9. Luke 10. 27. Mark 12. 31. Matth. 22. 39 Gal. 5. 14.

V. 20. All these things have I kept] In the literal sense, and externally, he could not keep them in the large extent of the Law, which reacheth to the thoughts, and secret corruptions of the heart: he might be unreproveable before men (as Paul was Phil. 3. 6.) he could not be so before the all-seeing God, vid. Psal. 143. 2. 1 King. 8. 46. Jam. 3. 2. the best on earth are but partly spirit, Gal. 5. 17. Rom. 7. 17, 21, 23. Matth. 5. 22, 28.

V. 21. If thou wilt be perfect] If thou wilt indeed shew thy self to be such as thou sayest thou art; Christ shews not here, wherein eternal life consisteth (for this precept is not universal) but hereby he detects, and convinceth the false opinion he had of his own righteousnesse; and wherein he had hitherto securely deceived himself: therefore Mark and Luke say, yet one thing is wanting: as if he said; thou art not yet perfect, as thou vainly dreamest.

sell all thou hast] Christ well knowing his covetousnesse, thus toucheth the secret sore of his mind, to shew him how imperfect he yet was: and as God giveth with this special commandment, which he disobeying, discovereth a breach of the first precept of the Law, and so indeed, kept none.

thou shalt have treasure in heaven] Thou shalt not part with thy goods to such as change them for those that are incomparably better: in stead of transitory ri hes which thou canst not long keep, thou shalt have eternal, which can never be lost; then riches become our goods when to Gods honour we bestow them on the poor.

follow me] Be my disciple, and abide with me, that I may imploy thee in the ministry of the Gospel. See chap. 4. 19.

V. 22. He went away sorrowful] It troubled him much that he had moved the question, not finding Christs answer according to his desire and expectation.

for he had great possessions] Possibly he would have parted with some part for Christ, but he would not leave so great an estate for him, or his sake, to wit, that he might become a disciple and follower of Christ; or for the hope of that which Christ had conditionally promised, treasure in heaven: see what dangerous lets to salvation, are ing eat riches and possessions of carnal men.

V. 23. To his disciples] Not that they were rich and so in danger of losing heaven thereby; but that they should not in after-times be offended, if they could not bring rich men to God by their ministry. See 1 Cor. 1. 26. neither should attain to riches themselves.

a rich man shall hardly enter] Because it is hard for them not to trust in riches (Mark 10 24.) not to see their hearts on their encreases; to love them too much, to keep them from distracting them from Gods service, and from choking up the seed of Gods word, and all good desires and intentions of the heart: lastly, because it is hard for them, not to be covetous which exposeth them to the snares of Satan, 1 Tim. 6. 9, 10. The sum is not in the possession, but in the possessours mind. Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, &c. were both rich and holy: good men become so much better, by how much more means they have to do good. Barnabas will sell his lands to advance the propagation of the Gospel by relieving the poor brethren. Dorcas will provide coates for those that cannot provide for themselves. Obadiah will hide, and feed the Prophets of the Lord, in time of persecution. So the Saints lay up treasure in heaven; as chap. 6. 20. a good foundation against the time to come, that they may lay hold on eternal life, 1 Tim. 6. 19.

V. 24. It is easier for a Camel] Theophylact saith that some say that κάμηλον signifieth not here the living creature (that is a Camel) but τὸ παχὺ σχοινίον, &c. a great rope, &c. That is, a cable, but indeed this is a proverbial manner of speaking, which Caninius noteth out of the Talmudists; though they, the Elephant; and Christ mentioneth the Camel, a beast better known in Syria, and likely according to their usual proverb, of their opinion which Theophylact citeth in Eli. Cretens. com. in Gr. Nazianzen. orat. 11. but Suidas saith, κάμηλος τὸ ἀχθοφόρον ζῶον, a burden bearing beast; but κάμιλος τὸ παχὺ σχοινίον, a great rope, or cable; see Joh. Drus. præterit. lib. 1.

V. 25. They were exceedingly amazed] Understanding the way to heaven to be much harder than they formerly conceived it had been: and no wonder; for, before their calling to the school of Christ, they having been hearers only of the Scribes and Pharisees, must needs be seasoned with some ill relishes of their leaven and doctrine, as in the expectation of the Messias temporal Monarchy: the coming again of Elias the Tishbite, &c. So also of salvation by works of the law, free-will, &c. these and the like principles, caused their amazement at the doctrine of Christ, concerning the strait and difficult way to life eternal.

Who then can be saved?] What rich man can be saved? or who can be saved? for how little soever a man hath, he is naturally unwilling to part with that at all, and to be left destitute, to the mercy of an unkinde world. Now if the rich man (who according to the Pharisees opinion might by good works make him an easie way to heaven) shall so hardly be saved; What shall become of others who have not so much means to do good?

V. 26. Jesus beheld them] As intimating that he knew their thoughts: for the Disciples probably did not speak out, but whispered among themselves, Mark 10. 26.

with God all things are possible] Be not troubled at what I said; for God can and will save some rich men; such were Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Job, Zacheus; and all his elect: not for their merit, but for the sole merit of Christ.

V. 27. Then answered Peter] Mark 10. 28. Luke 18. 28. in the name of all the rest, as often on other occasions.

we have forsaken all] We were not commanded to sell all; and if we had in what condition should we have left our families? yet have we left all: for they had left their trade, which was their livelyhood.

V. 28. in the regeneration] Ye have followed me in preaching the Gospel, for the regeneration of the Elect: or he meaneth that in the absolute renovation in the resurrection, they should sit, &c.

When the Son of man] Though your reward be not in this world, ye shall be sure of it in the world to come, chap. 16. 27.

ye shall also sit] Luke 22. 30. Ye shall have a prerogative above others in this behalf.

judging the twelve tribes] He alludeth to their manner of judgement, when their twelve tribes were entire and flourishing; he meaneth the universal Church consisting of the carnal and spiritual Israel: and he speaketh of twelve thrones, according to the number of the Apostles, that they might know, that they should all equally share in dignity and honour; Judas excepted, into whose honour and office Matthias succeeded: you shall sit judging either by your doctrine, or by attending on me in a special manner.

V. 29. every one] Not ye Apostles only, but all others; no man shall lose by obeying me.

or father, or mother, &c.] That is, in case thou canst not cleave to Christ, except thou forsake them: honour thy parents in God; and as farre as his honour and service will permit; but where it is otherwise, praferenda est religio necessitudini, pietas propinquitati saith Ambros. l. 7 ep 56. Romulo. religion must be preferred before friendship, and godlinesse before kindred: that, saith he, is true godlinesse, which esteemeth things divine, before humane; and eternal, before temporal. Sanctis omnia est Deus; God is all in all to the Saints.

for my names sake] See on chap. 5. 11.

an hundred fold] In secular goods, Mark 10. 30. for a little which the righteous have, is better than great riches to the ungodly: or in spiritual riches, and content, which is far better; for godlinesse with contentment is great gain, 1 Tim. 6. 6.

V. 30. But many that are first] Chap. 20. 16. Mark 10. 31. Luke 13. 30. the Gentiles whom the Jews now despised, shall be preferred before them; and among these again, some, that in regard of former evil lives, now truly repented of, shall be preferred before some others who basely esteemed them, and thought highly of themselves: or many of highest esteem and reputation for religious life here, shall be shut out of heaven, as the Pharisees, chap. 5. 20. when despised ones shall be saved; or, the last converted shall be rewarded as much as the first, chap. 20. 1. 16. See Luke 13. 28, 30. & 7 29, 30. and 18. 9, 14. chap. 8. 11, 12, & 21. 31. &c. See also Wisd. 5. 1, 2. &c.

CHAP. XX.

Verse 1. FOr] This causal particle, and the repeating of the end of the last Chapter, here, verse 16. shews that this parable is inferred to expound the former conclusion.

the kingdom of heaven] The equity of Gods dispensation in the kingdom of heaven, is as if an householder, &c.

early in the morning] ἅμα πρωΐ together with the morning: so they said, ἅμα τῇ ἡμέρᾳ with the day, and the Latines, cum primâ luce: with the first light: that is, as soon as it was day: God from the beginning of the world, had a care to provide workmen for his vineyard, the Church, Isaiah 5. whom he sent into it with the first light, the knowledge of him, and his will concerning mans salvation: the vineyard is the Catholick Church, which brought forth so many vine-branches, quot sanctos, &c. from Abel the just, unto the last-born Elect: Gregor. hom. 19. in Evang. mane mundi fuit ab Adam usque ad Noe: the morning of the world (saith the same) was from Adam to Noah: the third hour, verse 3. was from Noah to Abraham: the sixth hour was from Abraham to Moses; verse 5. the ninth hour; verse 5. was from Moses to Christ: and the eleventh verse 6. to the end of the world. See here also, Hilary canon. 20. in Matth. Theophylact and Euthymius, understand this of the divers ages of man, childhood, youth, middle-age old age, wherein they are called to the faith in Christ: Augustin de verb. domi. secundum Joh. serm. 59. proposeth both these interpretations.

V. 2. When he had agreed] συμφωνήσας. See on chap. 18. 19 when he had made a contract or covenant for a peny] The Roman penny, is the eighth part of an ounce, which, after five shillings the ounce, is seven pence half-peny, chap. 18. 28.

V. 3. About the third hour] This sheweth the continuance of Gods care for his Church unto the end; because he is compared to an husbandman, that still looks out for workmen. See on verse 1.

standing idle in the market-place] Whither idle persons used to resort, chap. 11. 16. Acts 17. 5. and where they who expect, or desire imployment, are wont to wait.

V. 4. whatsoever is right, I will give you] God promiseth a reward to his servants, to encourage them to the work, Psalm 19. 11. & 58. 10, 11. 1 Cor. 15. 58. In the application of this parable, we may not understand that any man can merit the least good at Gods hands; that which he giveth is of free grace, not of mans desert, as with men, the workman is worthy, or deserveth his wages or hire, Luke 10. 7. Matth. 10. 10. but between God and man the case is thus --- if by grace, then it is no more of works: otherwise grace it is no more grace: but if it be of works, then it is no more grace (or a free and undeserved gift) otherwise, work is no more work, Rom 11. 6. Unconsistent therefore are mans merit, and Gods grace and free mercy in Christ. What then? consider well, and chuse which of the two thou wilt stick to for thy salvation. The Apostle telleth thee, that Israel attained not to the law of righteousness, because they sought it not by faith (in him who freely, and without any merit of man, justifieth sinners) but as it were by the works of the law, Rom 9. 31, 32. Let him therefore boast of his merit, who will renounce the grace and free mercy of God in Christ: for, if righteousness came by the Law, then Christ is dead in vaine, Gal. 2. 21. See Aug. Enchirid. ad Iau. c. 3.

V. 5. About the sixth, and ninth hour] See on verse 1.

V. 6. about the eleventh hour] An hour before sun-set, or somewhat more; for the first hour began at sun-rising, in the equinoctiall; that is, at six of clock with us, for their day was twelve hours, John 11. 9

V. 7. Because no man hath hired us] This might import their excuse, who make no good use of those excellent parts which God hath given them; under pretence that they have no calling to the Ministry: but (as hath been formerly noted) parables may not be overcuriously stretched to answer in morality to every particle, which they seem to point at: but the scope of the speaker, is chiefly to be observed: and so here, as Euthymius noteth after Chrysostom, those things are to be expounded onely, quæ opportuna videntur --- cætera vero non sunt curiosè scrutanda; which are opportune, but the rest may not be curiously examined. See on chap. 18. 25.

V. 8. So when even was come] This need not be applyed, as being rather to fill up the parable, than otherwise: yet it is true, that God will in like manner appoint Christ, in the end of the world, to reward all his Ministers and people, for all their service done here, in his Church, Chap. 16. 27.

V. 9. they received every man a peny] That is, (saith Hilari cant. 20. in Matth.) obedientiæ justus præmium, the reward of his obedience, saith Euthymius, as much as was promised to the first, and more than the last could expect

V. 10. They supposed] We must not think, that any that go to heaven will complain, that any have too much, or themselves too little: (there is no envy or repining there, where all are full) but this is added, to give occasion, in the words following, to shew; that Gods liberality in rewarding some that have laboured less than others, is no prejudice to his truth or justice in rewarding others.

V. 11. They murmured] See on verse 10. The Jews murmured, that God had equalled the Gentiles with them, in their interest in Christ, (See also, Luke 15. 29, 30.) but there can be no such discontent in heaven.

V. 12. have wrought but one hour] Or have continued one hour onely, and thou hast given them a reward equal with ours. So began the Lord with the last, quia ad Paradisi requiem, prius latronem quam Petrum perduxit. Gregor. hom. 19. in Evang. for he brought the penitent thief into the rest of Paradise before Peter.

V. 13. I do thee no wrong] See on verse 10

V. 14. Take that is thine] By agreement, verse 2, 13. Gods people shall receive all that God doth promise them; yet still we must remember, that God freely justifie sinners, and that through grace, not any merits of those whom he justifieth.

V. 15. to do what I will with mine own] I give onely that which is mine own: I have payed thee according to my agreement with thee; and thou hast no cause to complain of me, for giving to others what I please, out of mine own estate.

is thine eye evil] Doest thou envy them for my free liberality, wherein wherein I doe thee no wrong? the Hebrews by עין רעה ain rah hen mean an envious eye. Prov. 23. 6. So the seventy eat thon not with ἀνδρὶ βασκάνῳ; Jerom. cum homine invido, with an envious man; according to this, Christ saith, an evil eye proceedeth from within, out of the heart of men, Mark 7. 21, 22. So also Deuteronomy 15. 9. עינך רעה תרע 70. ἔσται σοι πονηρὸν ὀφθαλμός σου. So here, ὀφθαλμὸς πονηρὸς an evil or envious eye. See Eccles 14. 7. contrary hereto is, עין טוב the good eye, which Solomon saith, shall be blessed. Proverbs 22. 9. according to which, Syrac saith, Eccles. 35. 10. ὁ ἁγαθὸς ὀφθαλμὸς, with a good eye give the Lord his honour, and diminish not the first fruits of thy hands; that is, with an heart free from envy. See on chap. 6. 23.

V. 16. So the last] See on Chap. 19. 30.

for many] Some come short of them and their reward, who were much superiour to them in the worlds esteem; because they are onely outwardly called by the Word, but are not elected to eternal life; or the last shall have reward, which the first shall fail of; because plerique Deum vocibus sequuntur, moribus fugiunt. Gregor. hom. 19. in Evang. most follow God in words, but in their manners fly from him; they profess that they know God, but in works they deny him. Tit. 1. 16. but why (say some) doth not God shew the same mercy to all those whom he calleth? we know his judgements are ever just, though in many things we cannot understand the cause; let us say therefore with Prosper. de vocat. Gen. l. 1. c. 15. quid calumniamur justitiæ occultæ, qui gratiæ debemus misericordia manifestæ? why calumniate we his secret justice, who owe (all possible) thanks to his evident mercy?

V. 17. And Jesus] Mark 10. 32. Luke 18. 31.

going up to Jerusalem] Up, either in regard it stood somewhat higher than the plain about it, Jer. 17. 3. and 21. 13. or, as men are said to go up to some chief place in a countrey, or head city of a kingdome: howbeit the word ascending, is oftentimes put simply, for going or travelling to a place, 2 Kings 22. 4. 6. 12. Jer. 34. 21. and 37. 5.

apart in the way] To acquaint them privately with his death and resurrection, who were to be special witnesses thereof, Acts 10. 41.

V. 18. we go up to Jerusalem] Christ foreseeth with his readinesse to suffer for us, by his words here, and by his going before them, Mark 10. 32.

the Son of man shall be betrayed] He had acquainted them with his passion twice before, chapter 16. 21. and 17. 22, 23 yet now he mentioneth it again, because they understood not, why he would wittingly go among his enemies; and afraid what would become of themselves, they willingly declined that journey, Mark 10. 32. therefore he repeateth this hard lesson to them again, that, when, they saw one part of the prediction come to pass in his death, they might be confirmed concerning the other part, his resurrection from the dead. The first time he told them of his death in generall; The second time he declareth the mean, by treason: now he telleth them of the manner, by condemnation and crucifying: and in his last supper he reveals the trayeor to them; all this did he, that they might not be dejected nor scandaled at that which he should suffer; considering, that nothing came to him by chance, nor the power and will of man, but the determinate Counsell of God, unto which, he wittingly and willingly submited himselfe, Chapter 16. 39. 42. this, in the present perturbation of minde through fear and sorrow, though they did not now understand, yet they afterward consented: See Acts 4 27, 28.

unto the chief Priests.] Who, though they were ordained of God to be pillars of the Church, guides, and comforts to the people; yet in their corruption, became the most violent suppressours of Religion, and pertinatours of the Ministers and children of God, Ier. 20. 1. and 26. 8. Acts 4. 1. and 5. 17 shall condemn him] Shall cause him to be condemned: for they had no power to do it themselves, the Romans having taken from them the power of judicature, in matters capitall, and concerning life and death.

V. 19. and shall deliver him] See on verse 18.

to mock] They shall afflict him with words, stripes, and death. See chapter 27. 27, &c. John 19. 2. thus they as chief instruments, delivered him to the Roman power: but still we must consider the supream mover, and the ultimate end, without which none of the rest could have prevailed. God the Father delivered him for our redemption, Rom. 8. 32. Christ delivered up himselfe, Gal. 2. 20. John 10. 11, 18. Judas the trayeour delivered him: the chief Priests and Scribes delivered him, for they perswaded the people to cry crucifie him: and Pilate delivered him to death: yet in this delivery God is just and itereifull, but man unjust and impious, because in one and the same thing, there was not one and the same end proposed: God delivered his Son to death for us, that he might deliver us from eternal death: Judas betrayed him, because Judas was covetous: the Jews delivered him up, because they were envious: Pilate delivered him to be crucified, to gratifie the Jews; the end and impulsive causes make the difference of actions. See on verse 18. Acts 4. 27, 28. and Augustine ep. 38. ad Vincent.

to crucifie him] After the manner of the Romane execution of the malefactours: so did he make his Grave with the wicked: so was he numbred with transgressours, Isaiah 53. 9, 12. so became he obedient to the death of the Crosse, Philippians 2. 8.

the third day] By this he comforteth them, and instructeth them against their sorrow, and his ignominy, lest they should be scandaled at his sufferings. See on chap. 12. 40.

he shall rise again] See Chapter 16. 21. it was a great trial of their faith, that he, whom they believed, and professed to be the Son of the living God, the Messias and Saviour of the world, should be permitted to such impious hands, such ignominy, and a death so shamefull; but in his resurrection he was declared the Son of God with power, Romans 1. 4. by his resurrection the third day, death and hell were conquered, and we freed from the sting and power thereof.

V. 20. then came to him] A little time after, in the same journey: it is likely they came to him apart, and privately. See verse 24.

the Mother of Zebedees children] Mark 10. 35. saith, James, and John, the sons of Zebedee, came unto him, saying, &c. it seemeth their mother came with them, and solicited for them: these were James the elder, and John the beloved; the mothers name was Salome, Mark 15. 40. this Iames Herod slew, Acts 12. and John was the beloved Disciple, and Apostle, who lived long after.

worshipping him] Adoring him, Syriack: either kneeling down to him, or with such reverence, as might import, and present an humble and hearty petition.

V. 21. what wilt thou?] It seemeth hereby that she petitioned at first indefinitely, as some use; will you grant me one thing? not presently saying what: but Christ well knowing what the would aske, would yet have her expresse her request; to teach us, that no wise man may grant indefinite Petitions, as impious and foolish Herod did; and also that he might have the more evident occasion of reproving their ambition.

these my two sonnes] Probably, she had heard from the two Apostles, her sonnes, what our Saviour had said, Chapter, 19. 28.

the one on thy right hand] Let them have the highest Degree of Honour in thy Kingdome; which they (not yet understanding the Spirituall Kingdome of Christ) did suppose should be with external honour and greatnesse. See 1 Kings 2. 19. Psalm 45. 9.

V. 22. ye know not what ye aske] Ye think that they who are principal in my kingdome shall have much secular honour and ease, with all affluence of worldly accommodations; but you will find it quite contrary, for they must be more exposed to troubles, and sharp encounters, than others.

of the cup that I, &c.] A metaphor taken from a man condemned to die by drinking poyson. See Psalm 11. 6. Isaiah 51. 17. John. 18. 11. Ezek 23. 32. can ye suffer perfection for the confession of the truth of the Gospel? It is inopportune and preposterous which ye desire: you must first taste of my sufferings, and then talk of honour after the victory, this question hath the value of a deliberation; as if he said, consider first, how you will be able to suffer, which is the present condition of my kingdome, (Chapter 16. 24.) and do you already talke of rejoycing with me? Such is our naturall affection, we would fain be crowned before the conflict: and they are most ambitious, who are most impatient of the Crosse, or performing their duty: the onely bridle of ambition, is meditation of the Crosse; no man shall share with Christ in Glory, who doth not first in sufferings, 2 Tim 3 12.

to be baptized] Shall you be able to endure those overflowings of afflictions, which like deep water-floods must compasse me about; See Psalm 69. 2. 15. Psalm 124. 4. and 126. 3. hence he taketh his expression from the manner of Baptizing them, by immersion or dipping over head and ears in the water. See on Luke 12. 50. which in these hot Countries was more safe for infants, or weak persons, than in these Northern and cold parts it can be.

we are able] Taking it literally; they knew they were able to do it; for they had often drunk of his cup, and had been baptized as he was.

V. 23. of my cup] Ye shall endure afflictions as I shall; so they did both; for Iames was slaine, Acts, 12. 1. and John was banished, and suffered many sad things, Revelation 1. 9. See Ierom. catal. script. Eccles. & Adricom. All. Apost. Anno Christi, 98. 99 129.

but it shall be given to them, for whom, &c.] Or save to whom; so the word is used, Mark 9. 8. Christs power of disposing of it, is not denied; but he sheweth onely to whom it is to be given.

V. 24. when the tenne] All the other Apostles, among whom was Peter, yet we reade of no peculiar exception made by him, concerning his primacy; probably they all promised themselves high Dignities. Ambition troubled the Churches infancy; but much more in the growth thereof; as may appeare in the severall contentions of Bishops, especially that which was between those of Rome and Constantinople, concerning the title of universall Priest or Bishop, Mauritius the Emperour, favouring John Bishop of Constantin ple, granted him that Prerogative; Gregory Bishop of Rome much stomaching it, invighed sharply against it; stiling that same John, proud, wicked, foolish, antichristian, &c. as appeareth in several Epistles of his, Ep 188.l. 1. ib.ep. 192. ib Ep. 194. he saith, ego autem fidenter dico, quod quisquis se UNIVERSALEM SACERDOTEM vocat, vel vocari desiderat, in elatione sua ANTICHRISTUM præcurrit, quod superbiendo se ceteris præponit, I say confidently, that whosoever calleth himself universal priest, or desireth so to be called, he forerunneth Antichrist in his pride; in that, in being arrogant he preferreth himself before others. Bonface the third, having at last obtained that primacy, by the favour of Phocas, the then Emperour (which Phocas had murdered his Soveraign Lord, the Emperour Mauricius) it was continued in the wofull effects thereof, which are mentioned in many Histories. In the Council of Constantinople, it was ordained, that every Bishop should keep within his own jurisdiction: To 1. Canon. 2. So To. 1. Concil. Nicen. Can. 6. over the banks of which channel, when ambition of Prelates once swelled, it overflowed the Christian world, with many sad calamities.

against the two brethren] Because they sought to be above them, who were too much inclined to the same fault, Mark 9. 33. 34.

V. 25. Iesus called them unto him] That he might appease this emergent contention. that he might reprove the ambition of one party, and the envy of the other, he would thus hear the matter, and reconcile them.

Ye know] See on Luke 22. 25. as before. Chapter 18. upon the like occasion, where he would quench those unhappy and dangerous sparks of ambition; he pleaded not any primacy granted to Peter: so neither doth he here, which doubtlesse he would not have omitted, had he intended any such right by his owne Donation, and right by himselfe formerly placed in Peter.

that the Princes of the Gentiles] He speaketh this to his Disciples, intimating thereby, that they were not to expect secular honours and dignities, by following Christ; much lesse, ambitiously to seek after them: but to carry themselves humbly one towards another, according to his example. Primacy and dominion is proper to secular Princes; therefore whatsoever subject affecteth that, would usurp that which God hath not given them. See on verse 26.

V. 26. it shall not be so among you] Another manner of life and state must you look for, such as I have undergone before you: you must not dominere (1 Peter, 5. 3.) but teach and be subject to Princes, and labour in the Gospel to save souls. See on Luke 22. 26.

V. 27. let him be your servant] Let him carry himself humbly towards his fellow-servants: or let the most ambitious be least esteemed: let him that most faithfully laboureth in the word, and is of most holy conversation, be had in most honour: this is the chief dignity of Ecclesiastical persons, rather to be good than great.

V. 28. as the Son of man] Here he proposeth his own example, as John 13.13. I who am the Lord of all, yet have so humbled my self, as to take on me the form of a servant, Phil. 2. 7. and to lay down my life for the redemption of the Elect; how much more ought you to serve in the ministration of the Gospel, for the saving of your fellow servants?

not to be ministred unto] Not to be attended on as a King in this world; but in the form of a servant and man of sorrows, to work and accomplish your salvation, Phil. 2. 7. yet as God, to be worshipped in Spirit and Truth John 4. 23. John 5 23.

to give his life, John 10. 11.

a ransome] λύτρον, a satisfactory price of redemption. The Apostle calleth it ἀντίλυτρον, to free us from Gods wrath due unto us for our sins.

for many] Sufficiently for all in regard of the worth and merit of it; though not efficiently in respect of the illue and event thereof: or they are many that are saved by Christ, chap 26.28. Rom. 5. 15. 19. though they be few in comparison of them that perish, chap. 7. 13. 14.

V. 29. as they departed from Iericho] Mark 10. 46, Luke 18 35. John 6. 26, 1 Kings 16. 34.

V. 30. two blind men] But one of better note than the other, called Bartimeus, in S. Mark: these two were healed when Christ came out of Jericho: some think S. Luke mentioneth another healed before he went into it: and that is most probable. See on Luke 18. 35.

sitting by the way side] As beggers use to do: it seemeth they were very poore, as well as blinde.

when they heard that Iesus passed by] By the multitude going with him, and discoursing of him; or it may be they had asked some of them, and they told them.

have mercy on us] See on chap. 9. 27.

V. 31. the multitude rebuked them] Either disdaining their condition, as not fit to speak to Christ: or thinking Christ could not heal them: or it may be they were offended at the high Title which they gave Christ: or misdoubting they would but disturb and retard his passage; or supposing they meant to beg something of him.

but they cried the more] They were perswaded that Christ could heal them, and would not be dismayed, because the multitude would not give them leave to pray: true Faith (the effect whereof is fervent prayer, Psalm 116. 10. 2 Cor. 4. 13.) like as in the conflicts betwen the wind and the fire, the more it is opposed, the more it is inflamed.

V. 32. and called them] Speaking his self to them, and not sending others to call them.

what will ye] He knew what they did desire, and would aske; but he would have them to declare it, that the people might be the more attentive to the ensuing miracle.

V. 33. that our eyes may be opened] The eyes of them, who by reason of any defect, cannot see, are as it were shut up, therefore they would have them opened, that is, their sight restored. See on Chapter 9. 30. they beg that which no meer man could have given them: it is a short Prayer, but the effect of great Faith, by which they apprehended both his power to do it, and mercy to perform it.

V. 34. Iesus had compassion] He granted both their suits: that which is specified, verse 30. by pitying them. and that which is mentioned, verse 33 by restoring them their sight. The Fountain of this miracle was the mercy of Christ, whereby he pitied them: the externall means, his touching their eyes: Sometimes he only said, Receive thy sight, Luke 18. 42. sometimes he annointed them, John 9. 6. to teach us, that he can help by ordinary meanes, without meanes, and contrary to the ordinary meanes.

presently their eyes] This is a certain Argument of Christs Divine Power: God onely can in an instant by his Word, and touching them by his repayring hand, give sight to the blinde, heal every infirmity, or repair any decay or dammage of men.

and followed him] They became his Disciples: this was an evident proof of their recovery, bodily and spiritual: and of their gratitude, who did not as many, after they had obtained their Petition, go away home; but they followed Christ, that they might be further edified and confirmed: and for others sakes, that they might confirm them, by testifiing the power and mercy shewed on them, which Luke 18. 43. is called glorifiing of God; true Faith is ever thankful: this also is the end of our illumination and spiritual healing by Christ; that we may follow (not our own darknesse any more, but) Christ our Light. See Ephes. 1. 17, 18, &c. Ephes. 5. 8.

CHAP. XXI.

Verse 1. When they drew nigh] Marke 11. 1. Luke 19. 29.

to Bethphage] See on Luke 19. 29. it was a Sabbath-dayes journey from Jerusalem: the Valley of Jehoshaphat (divided by the Brooke Cedron) being between that and Jerusalem. See Ioseph. Antiq. lib. 20. cap. 6.

mount of Olives] A little hill on the East side of Jerusalem, planted with Olive-trees, Zach. 14. 4. Acts 1. 12.

V. 2. over against you] This it seemeth he spake διανευσάμενος, pointing to it with his hand: therefore he named it not, it being then in sight.

straightway ye shall finde] Ye shall not need to look up and down for them, ye will soon see them: this he saith, lest they should think their finding it to accidentall or by chance.

a colt] Not yet weaned from the dam, or a young one.

V. 3. If any man say unto you ought] He furnisheth them with this answer, lest they should be put off, or retarded in that which he determined should be done.

The Lord hath need] I who am Lord of all, and have more right to them, than they have use of them: therefore he would not have them say, our Lord, or your Lord, but the Lord of this universe; the Lord of all would thus use this mans goods, being made poor for us; though the earth and the fulnesse thereof be his. See 2 Cor. 8. 9. yet he would not have them taken up for his use against the owners will; but would have him perswaded by two arguments of his just dominion and present necessity.

he will send them] He made the owner willing to let them go: thus he declareth, as his omniscience, who foreknew, and told them the event; so also omnipotence, who could rule the wills and affections of all men, to that which he would have done: or he will send them, may import, the Lord will presently restore them, or send them back again; the former agreeth best with Mark 11. 6. and the Syriack interpreter, & confestim dimittet eos huc.

V. 4. all this was done] Christ did not send for the asse to ride into Jerusalem, for ease of his journey, or ostentation, but that he might declare himself to be the Messias, whose coming in this very manner, was foretold by the Prophets.

V. 5. Tell

V. 5. Tell ye the daughter of Zion,] Isaiah 62. 11. Zach. 9. 9. John 12. 15. the citizens of Jerusalem, which was built on mount Sion: it is an Hebrew phrase often used in the Lamentations. See the like Psalm 45. 12. and 137. 7.

sitting upon an asse,] As eminent persons, or Judges use, Judges 10. 4. and 12. 14. or to shew the peaceablenesse of of his kingdome.

and a colt] He rode on the one, though both be mentioned, as a marke of Evidence, shewing the fulfilling of the Prophesie.

of an Asse] ὑποζυγίου, the foal of an Asse under the yoak used to draw in the team.

V. 6. and the Disciples] Mark 11. 4. they made not excuses, as unwilling to undertake that office, either as unworthy of them, or uncertain of the event; but resting assured of the success they find it as they expected.

V. 7. put on them] Probably on the one, though both are named. See ver. 5.

their clothes] Their upper garments, which being worn loose, were large and long, and so might the more commodiously be cast over beasts to be rid on.

set him thereon] Upon their garments: so did the captains, when they proclaymed Iehu King, 2 Kings, 9. 13.

V. 8. spread their garments in the way] They covered the way with them for him to ride on: as Kings at their Coronations, or at some solemnities of State, use to have their way upon cloth.

cut down branches] Posibly such as had no loose garments to spare, cut down boughes of trees, and laid them in the way: these were signs of festivity and solemnity: whereby Gods all-disposing Providence gave them to understand, that the end of the Law was now come, and the true Tabernacle in which God dwelt, now present, Revel. 21. 3. Colos. 2. 9.

V. 9. cried, saying] Thus they used to cry in the feast of Tabernacles, or Booths, made of boughs, Nehem. 8. 15. and it may be at other solemn times also.

Hosanna] Save now, or save we beseech thee: taken out of Psal. 118. 26. which Psalm, as some observe, was wont to be sung often in their synagogues, and to be expounded concerning Christs coming: and it was a solemne form of acclamation (and therefore left by the Evangelists in the Hebrew, as a thing commonly known among them) specially in their feast of Tabernacles, wherein they were to carry boughs in their hands, by the commandment of God, Levit. 23. 40. here their הוֹשִׁיעָה נָּא hoshiana na (a word compounded of the two words הוֹשִׁיעָה hoshiha na save or help I pray) importeth as much as. Lord prosper, or give good successe to our Messias which the next words import. See notes Tremel in loc. See on John 12. 13.

to the son of David] They desired God to preserve their new King, the son of David, and so acknowledge Christ to be their King by this solemnity. See on chap. 9. 27. though posibly the generality of this people, thought not of Christs spiritual Kingdome; but these popular acclamations might be in order to their consent unto his secular kingdome, which the most knowing among them, dreamed of.

blessed be he, &c.] Psalm 118. 27. Well be it to him that cometh in the Name of the Lord, that is to say, whom the Lord hath promised, and now given us for our King.

in the Name of the Lord] This is an Hebrew manner of speaking, importing him, who is, as it were the peculiar Ambassadour of the Lord.

in the highest] Blessed is he that is in the highest, Luke 2. 14. or, save him, that he may save us, not onely here, but in Heaven also, Psalm 20. 9 which might be the vote of the faithfull and true believers in him, confident that Christ Iesus was the very promised Messias, and Saviour of his people.

V. 10. And when] Mark 11. 15. Luke 19. 45. John 12. 13.

he was come into Ierusalem] The noise began at the descent of the mount of Olives, and the company (specially by such unusual acclamations) might probably increase in the way: but at his entering the City, the people thereof, must needs take notice thereof.

all the City was moved] All the Citizens of Ierusalem were affected, as to strange a noise, confluence, and postures of the people: See Chapter 2. 3. Ruth 1. 19. Posibly the malitious Scribes and Pharisees, did either foment and put on this designe among the people, to cry him up as their King, that they might destroy him by the Roman power, as aspiring to a kingdome: or that they tooke occasion at least from these voyces of the people, to accuse him hereof to Pilate: though we must still remember, that those things which men do wickedly, God, who created light of darkness, turneth to that which shall advance his Glory: as here these acclamations (who ever moved them) gave the Faithfull knowledge of their Messias now exhibited: and left the unbelieving so much the more unexcusable.

who is this?] They doe not generally doe this, as if they knew him not, who had done so many and such unparalled things among them, as drew all eyes and thoughts to admire, but they speak as amazed, what this sudden pomp should mean, what these acclamations, and the noyse of the multitude, as at the inauguration of a King: so was Adonijah troubled, 1 Kings 1. 41. 45. and Athaliah 2 Kings 11. 13.

V. 11. This is Iesus, &c.] Probably some tooke him for the Messias, and others esteemed him as some great Prophet; who called him the Prophet of Nazareth, in regard of his Education, and his Parents abode there, Chapter 2. 23. Luke 14. 16. 24.

V. 12. into the Temple of God] Not to Towers, or fortifications; but to the Temple which might have satisfied them, what manner of Kingdome his was; whereof also some shew appeared in his Harbingers, taking up the Asse for his service: by the Temple is here meant, that Court of the Temple, wherein the people prayed, Luke 1. 10.

he cast out] He shewed himself to be the High Priest, and Lord of the Temple, by purging it. He had done this on e before, Io in 2. 15. but doth it now again, because they had polluted it again. The first purging thereof seemeth to have been about the beginning of his publike Ministery; and this about the latter end of it: this was done the second day. See Matk 11. 12. 15.

all them] He spared none. great nor small.

that sold and bought] Cattle, or Doves for sacrifice. See on Iohn 2. 14.

overthrew the Tables] Shewing thereby that they ought not to be set up again. See on John 2. 14. there, for any such use as money-changing.

of the money changers] Which changed forraign coin into money there currant, that those which dwelt far off, might there according to the Law buy sacrifices, and pay their oblations. See on John 2. 14.

that sold Doves] Poor mens offerings, Levit. 5 7. 11. and 14. 22. Luke 2. 24.

V. 13. it is written] Partly Isaiah 56. 7. partly. Ier. 7. 11. which he citeth to shew us how we must deal with the adversaries of truth by Scriptures; and how reformations of abuses in the Church, ought to be according to Scripture, not humane inventions, which many times make the cure worse than the disease.

my house] God calleth the Temple his house, Isai. 56. 7. not that he can be included, or dwell in Temples made with hands (Acts 7. 48, 49.) but because it was a symbolum, and pledge of his gracious presence with his people: hence by a Metaphor it is called his rest (Psalm 132. 14.) and here Christ appeareth Lord of the Temple, in that he reformeth it.

but ye have made it] Ier. 7. 11. Mark 11. 17. Luke 19 46.

a den of thieves] A place to exercise your traffick and fraud in: whereby under colour of promoting Gods service there, your care and study is to enrich your selves, and so make my Fathers house like such a den or cave, where thieves ly in wait to spoyl men passing by, making it a shelter for themselves, and a receptacle for their purchases, or stoln goods, Hosea 6. 9. he reproveth not onely the money changers, but the Priests also, who made gain by them τὸ γὰρ φιλοκερδὲς, κληρικὸν πάθος ἐδί, saith Theophylact, for desire of gain is a thievish affection in that he said, my house shall be called the ho, e of Prayer; he sheweth what by right it should be: but in that he saith, ye have made it a denne of thieves, he declareth the imporiation and abuse thereof. So Mal. 1. 8. there is much difference between that which is, and that which should be.

V. 14. and he healed them] To shew his divine power in his Temple, into which he was to come, Mal. 3. 1. and to stop the mouthes of Pharisees, if they should again question him for purging the temple, or medling with matters (as they conceived) being peculiar to them and their office and jurisdiction; and none other person whatsoever, except by their permission and leave.

V. 15. saw the wonderfull things] The miracles which he wrought on the blinde, lame, &c. which were performed to him to be healed as ver. 14. &c. They take no notice of them, though they saw them; but exclamniare him for suffering the children to expresse his honour due.

V. 16. hearest thou what these say?] As if they said, their blasphemy is so palpable, that thou couldst not for shame but rebuke them, if thou heard'st them.

have ye never read] See on chap. 12. 2. thus he reproveth their ignorant malice, and approveth the acclamations of their children, by the testimony of David.

out of the mouth] Psal. 8. 2. the word ἤνεσιν here used for, (of infants) signifieth not only a child in yeers (coming of πὸ ἀ privative particle, and ἐπ-ῶ-, a word. as if we should say, one that hath not a word to say, or can hardly speak) but also a simple man, or one contemptible before men (See on chap. 11. 25.) unlearned, rude, ignorant, of slender understanding. 1 Cor. 3. 1. here σπαργάνων, of sucklings is set as Psal. 8. 2. for the more full expression of the sense, which is to shew the admirable power of God to set forth his glory, in and by the weakest and most improbable means.

thou hast] These children doe not blaspheme, but God hath stirred them up, to acknowledge me to be the Messias, to his Glory.

perfected praise] Psalm 8. 3. יסרת עז issadata hoz, thou hast founded strength, which here is called praise: that is, strong praise, See Psalm 29.1. and 96. 7. and 118. 14. therefore the 70, which this Evangelist followeth, giveth it αἶνον, praise: the word κατηρτίσω, here used, imports a firm decreeing, or appointing a thing which in Gods counsel is a perfecting that which cannot be altered, nor miss effect, Esther. 1.8. and mouth is here taken for testimony, as Chap. 18. 16. Theophylatt interpreteth it, that the Spirit of God spake by them.

V. 17. went out of the citie] He would not stay in the City in the night, to avoid all suspition of his affecting a temporal Kingdome, and to have the better convenience of solitude for prayer and private instruction, necessary for those whom he would send to preach the Gospel to all Nations.

to Bethany] A little Village near Jerusalem, John 11. 18. about two miles off, that he might further confirm and comfort Lazarus (whom he had lately raised from the dead) and Mary and Martha his sisters.

V. 18. he hungred] Shewing thereby that he was subject to humane infirmities; and also that he might have occasion to work the ensuing miracle. See Chapter 4.2. possibly he had eaten no supper, but spent the night in teaching those present, or praying, as he often had done.

V. 19. and when he saw] Mark 11. 13.

Let no fruit grow on thee] See on Mark 11. 13. some conceive that our Saviour intended hereby, to foreshew the destruction of Jerusalem, because they brought forth nothing but leaves of ceremonies: others think it was onely for an occasion of the ensuing exhortation, verse 21.

V. 20. when the Disciples saw it] On the morrow, as they passed by again, Mark 11.20.

how soon is the Fig-tree withered] They wondered at the event, who did not so much consider the cause: it was more to be admired, why Christ cursed this tree, who was ever wont to blesse and preserve his creatures. See Mark 11. 20, 21. ξηραίνει ὧν τὸ δένδρον, might amend men, saith Theophylatt: hereby shewing them the condition of the Jewish Synagogue.

V. 21 If ye have faith] See on chap. 17. 20.

and doubt not] μὴ διακριθῆτε, the word signifieth a doubting, wherein a man doth, as it were with opposite opinions, contend with himself, recounting such difficulties as render him diffident and fluctuant, as not knowing what to resolve, or which way to encline. See Romans 4. 20. and on Acts 10. 20 but herein he meaneth that effect of faith in prayer which asketh τὰ συμφέροντα, things profitable, and convenient, as Theophylatt well noteth.

ye shall say unto this mountain] As if he had said, there shall be nothing (which conduceth to Gods Glory, and your salvation) so hard or seeming impossible to man, but stedfastly beleeving, ye shall attain it. See on Chapter 17. 20. and on Luke 17. 6.

V. 22. all things] Agreeable to Gods Will, 1 John 5. 14. Mark 11. 24.

believing] Prayers without Faith are fruitless, πιστεύοντες, this Participle includeth a condition of obtaining; See James 1. 6.) believing that God can, and will give. See on Chapter 7.7,8. yet when God doth not give to the prayer of Faith, Prospers rule is ever to be held, nec ejs iniquitas apud Deum, qui sæpe postulata non tribuit, quæ postulare donavit, contr. Collat. cap. 26. neither is there unrighteousness with God, who oftentimes doth not give those things desired, or entreated, which he gave (Faith and an Heart) to entreat, that he may give something better, as more conducing to his Glory, and the Petitioners salvation: See Deuteronomy 3.23,24,25,26. 2 Sam. 12.16.18. 2 Cor. 12.8, 9.

V. 23. when he was come into the Temple] To teach the people, and to performe this part of his Priestly and Prophetical Office. See Mark 11.27. and Luke 20.1.

the chief Priests and Elders of the people] These men seeing the glory of his Miracles, the people following him, his casting out the buyers and sellers out of the Temple, where the Priests permitted them to be, they stomached him, as concluding, that if he thus proceeded without their leave to meddle with the government of the Temple, and teaching therein; their authority and honour, must soon suffer a totall Eclipse, and come into contempt: therefore they question his authority. Envy ever calumniateth good things, (as Euthymius noteth) it is the black shadow which ever waiteth on those, on whom prosperity, or any popular opinion of excellency shineth.

by what authority] They question not now his Doctrine, which they knew they were not able to gainsay; nor his miracles, which clearly enough appeared to be the works of God; onely they move a captious question: if he should have said, by Divine authority, they would have accused him of blasphemy; if he should have answered by humane authority, their selves were the rulers, who in an ordinary calling, had care and charge of the Temple; if he should have said, without authority, they would have accused him of sedition.

V. 24. I also will aske you one thing] As they asked not with any mind to learn, but to find some calumny against him; so neither doth Christ answer them so directly as they expected: for as Theophylatt saith well, τῇ κακίᾳ ὡς ἐφωτῶσιν, ὧ φιλ ἀποκρίνεται: we must not answer them, who malignantly enquire, or question; but in that he answereth by his question concerning John, they might have understood, that his authority was supream, he being the very God and Lord of the Temple; if they had indeed beleived John, who openly testified him to be the onely Son of God; so therefore Christ answereth them by a dilemma-tical question. verse 25, 26. so he taketh the subtle in their subtlety 1 Cor. 3.19.

V. 25. the baptisme of John] That is, Johns Ministery and Doctrine, who preached the baptisme of Repentance, Mark 1. 4.

reasoned with themselves] They beat their heads about it, and musèd or laid their heads together, well perceiving their unavoydable errour, and that they must be convicted in their answer to either part of Christs question from Heaven] From God (as appears by the opposition. So Dan. 4. 28. Luke 15. 18. 21.) that is, of Divine authority, and institution.

he will say unto us] Thus the Hypocrites conscience is self-convicted: they feared that Christ by saying thus, would make their unbelief and obstinacy appear to the people, whose good opinion was a great part of their ambition.

V. 26. If we say of men] See note on Luke 20. 6.

we fear the people] Left they should stone us.

all hold John as a Prophet] Chap. 14. 5.

V. 27. we cannot tell] They could, but durst not. See verse 25, 26. See on Luke 20. 7.

V. 28. But what thinke you] He thinks it not enough to stop their mouth; but, by a parable, he makes them to condemn themselves, as Nathan did David, 2 Sam. 12, and the disguised Prophet Ahab, 1 King. 20. 38, &c.

a certain man had two sons] These are expounded to be Publicans and Pharisees, verse 31. 32. by some Interpreters.

V. 29. afterward he repented] Thinking more seriously of the matter, he undertook and went about that work, which he formerly declined and refused:

V. 30. and said likewise] As verse 28.

I go] Ἐγώ I, he understood, ἀπέρχομαι, will go, or will do as thou commandest: hereby he noted the Pharisees, who professed much readinesse and willingnesse to serve God, but did not: the speech is elliptical, usual in case of answering commands, or offering service, wherein they said, הנני hinnen behold I, or I am ready: so Israel promised, Exod. 24. 3. 7. See Gen. 37. 13. 1 Sam. 3 4, 5, 6. Isaiah 6. 8.

V. 31. the first] Hereby they confess by just consequence, that the repenting Publicans and sinners were better than themselves, with all their fair pretences and shews of good works.

into the Kingdome of God before you] They made haste to the Kingdome of God, and ye are slow and remiss; you should at least have followed their example: this word, before, is improperly taken in this place, where none follow: they shall go to Heaven, rather than you; or, so shall not you: or these whom you despise, as unholy, might be guides and patterns for you to follow, but that your pride and malice blind you.

V. 32. John came unto you, &c.] Chapter 3. 8. by way of Righteousnesse; he meaneth, living uprightly, being of an Holy and honest Conversation, and perswading you to doe so: as the Hebrews use the word, דרך derech, for life and manners, Psalm 119. 1.

repented not] Of your evil deeds, or of your unbeleiving John.

V. 33. Heare another Parable] In the former Parable, he had shewed them their neglect of Johns Doctrine: in this he setteth forth their cruelty, shortly after to be exercised on himself; and ushers it in by their fathers cruelty to the Prophets.

which planted a Vineyard] Isaiah 5. 1, &c. Jer. 2. 21. Mark 12. 1. Luke 20 9. God planted the Jewish Church, as his Vineyard Psal. 80. 9. &c.

hedged it] Herein is implyed Gods care of the safety and prosperity of it, Psalm 35. 27. the meaning is, he defended, and preserved it from the incursions of the enemies, which otherwise would have destroyed it.

digged a Wine-presse,] Furnished it with all things necessary.

built a Tower] Made the place strong; for a Tower, between the curtains, is as a butteris and strength of the wall.

let it out to husbandmen] To the Priests.

went into a far countrey] Left it wholy to their care; in outward appearance, as if he had been absent; whereas indeed, as Theophylatt saith, ἡ ἀποδημία τῷ θεῷ ἡ μακροθυμία, the peregrination of God, is his long-suffering: he seemeth as if he slept, or were gone farre off, when he forbeareth long, and doth not presently punish sinners; or doth not manifest his presence to men of this world.

V. 34. sent

V. 34. sent his servant] The Prophets whom the Jews slew.

V. 35. beat one] See on Luke 20. 10. So Pashur the Priest beat the Prophet Jeremiah, Jer. 20. 2. and Zidkijah, Michaiah, 1 King. 22. 24.

another they killed] Many others they slew. Which of the Prophets have they not persecuted? Act. 7. 52.

stoned another] As if they had been blasphemers: so Joash used Zechariah the son of Jehoiada, 2 Chron. 24. 21, 22.

V. 36. more than the first] They had more Prophets a little before the captivity than formerly. See 1 Sam. 3. 1. with Isaiah 1. 1. Hosea 1. 1.

V. 37. sent unto them his son] Christ himself, who here foretells his own death. See on Luke 20. 14.

V. 38. come let us kill him) See Chap. 26. 3. John 11. 53. Gen 37. 16, 20. See on Luke 20. 14.

let us seize on his inheritance] Let us give lawes, and rule the Church according to our own will, as we have many years done.

V. 39. they cast him out of the vineyard] Delivered him to the Romans to be condemned: and slew him without the city, Heb. 13. 12. See on Luke 20. 15.

V. 40. What will he do?] He makes them judges, having spoken the parable concerning them; meaning to condemne them out of their own mouth, as verse 31. See on Luke 20. 15.

V. 41. He will miserably destroy] κακοὺς κακῶς ἀπολέσει, it is a kind of Greek proverb, meaning he will with grievous punishments consume those impious tenants, and provide him better.

V. 42, Did ye never read] Psal. 118. 22. Act. 4. 11. See on chap. 12. 3.

which the builders rejected) Those whom before he compared to husband-men, here he compareth to builders.

the head of the corner] The chief stone in the corner is called the head of the corner; which being the strength of the walls, the builders usually make choyce of some principal stone for that place. So Christ is to the Church, though refused of the Priests, Eph. 2. 22. he is as Euthymius saith, conjunctio populorum, the stone which united the (two walls) the people (of the Jews and Gentiles) See Act. 4. 11. In unam fidem Abrahæ colligens eos, qui ex utroque testamento apti sunt in ædificationem Dei, Irenæus lib. 4. cap. 42.

This is the Lords doing] That is, God appointed him to this office, though the Jews through malice and emulation rejected him, See Hebr. 5. 4, 5.

V. 43. the kingdom of God shall be taken from you] That is, the gospel, the scepter of his kingdom; the word and ministery, whereby men are gathered into his kingdom, and his protection, as Euthymius interpreteth. See Act. 13. 46. Rom. 11. 8, &c.

and given to another nation] As he foretold the rejection of the Jews, so also the calling of the Gentiles. See places fore-cited.

the fruits thereof] Every kingdom hath its own proper fruits: the fruits of Gods kingdom are the fruits of the holy spirit, not of corrupted flesh. See Galat 5. 22. Ephes. 5. 9. the fruits here spoken of, must be, not onely meet for repentance, but alsò befeeming Gods kingdom; not onely leaving evill, but alsò doing good, see Isai. 1. 16, 17.

V. 44. Whosoever shall fall on this stone] Isaiah 8. 14, 15, Rom. 9. 33. 1 Pet. 2. 7. the meaning is, as Theophylatt after Chrysostom interprets, σκανδαλιζόμενοι ἀπὸ τοῦ λόγου, they who are offended in Christ; as contemners and unbelievers, who blasphemed him: or as taking offence at my humility; he shall not hurt me, but destroy himself.

shall be broken] As a man falling upon a rock, breaketh not it, but his own bones.

it will grind him to powder] Which Chrysostome and others understand of temporal and eternal destruction. See Daniel 2. 44.

V. 45, his parables] These two fore-mentioned, ver. 28. 33.

they perceived he spake of them] Their own consciences interpreted the parables concerning themselves: yet were their hearts so hardened, that they could not repent.

V. 46. they feared the multitude] Wicked hypocrites abstain from sin: only for fear of punishment: so for the present, these enemies of Christ (though in great authority) are awed by fear, left the people who honoured Christ should fall upon them. Evill Magistrates are sometimes kept from using cruelty, for fear of inferiours; their breaking Gods Lawes, gives example to the people to break theirs: this is just with God, though the people sin in so doing.

took him for a Prophet] The people deservedly took him for a Prophet, whom the Priests unjustly, and invioufly accounted as an impostor. chap. 12. 24. Mark 3. 22. See Deut. 18. 18. John 1. 45. Act. 1. 45. Act. 3. 20. &c. Act. 7. 37. &c.

CHAP. XXII.

Verse 1. JESUS answered] To the thoughts of Pharisees, who were offended at the former parables: or he added more parables to the former: it is usual with the Hebrews to say, he answered, instead of, he said, or began to speak. St. Luke recording this parable, sheweth the occasion of Christs speech was, that which one said unto him, who fate at meat with him in the Pharisees house, to wit, blessed is he that shall eat bread in the kingdom of God. Luke 14. 15, 16.

by parables] See on chap. 9. 17. and 13. 3. 18. Luke 5. 6. in the former parable he had threatned destruction to the Pharisees, here to all the people: he shewes the manner also, to wit, by sword and fire; and that after his death the gospel should be preached to the Gentiles, &c.

V. 2. the kingdom of heaven is like] See on chap. 20. 1.

a certain King which made a marriage for his son] That is, prepared a marriage feast so magnificent as became a kingly state. That which the Greek calleth here γάμους, the Syrlack interpreteth by משתותא meshtutho, (that which the Greeks called συμπόσιον) a bibendo; for משתי shetho, bibere, is properly to drink: but by a Synechdoche, to celebrate and keep a marriage feast: so Gen. 29. 22. Laban made משתי mishte, which the 70. give as here, ἐποίησε γάμους, he made a wedding feast: that is he sent the tidings of Christs incarnation, or the gospel; which is compared to a marriage feast full of joy, made by a king, therefore full of state; not for a servant, or friend, but for his Son. God maketh this marriage between Christ and his Church of Jews and Gentiles. Jerom.

V. 3. his servants to call] His Prophets to foretell the coming of Christ into the world, and invite men to receive him with joy (See Luke 14. 17.) signifying the houre or instant time, that they might prepare.

them that were bidden to the wedding] Those who were formerly invited: that is the Jews, who had been before certified, and instructed concerning the coming of Christ our Saviour.

and they would not come] He sent John Baptist, the twelve Apostles, the disciples to invite the Jews to repentance, Matth. 3. 1, 2. Mark 6. 12. Luke 3. 3. and 9. 2. 6. but would not. See on Luke 14. 18.

V. 4. other servants] The Apostles, &c. as verse 3. After the Prophets he sent the Apostles, and Ministers of the Gospel to invite men to him, that they might believe and be saved. See 1 Cor. 5. 20.

I have prepared my dinner] This is another call, to let the guests understand, that on Gods part all things are ready, and he expects their coming to him.

fatlings are killed] τὰ σιτιστὰ, altilia, or saginata, as divers of the ancient Latines translate it: it is of σιτίζειν, to feed, as they use fatting beasts, or fowls. The word ταῦρωμένα killed, of ταῦρος properly signifieth things sacrificed; but is used alsò to signifie things killed for a feast, the reason whereof might be, for that even prophane Princes used to ausspicate their solemn feasts with sacrifices. See Isaiah 25. 6.

V. 5 one to his farm] So worldly men look after fecular riches, not valuing the eternal: so pleasures and avarice keep men from Christ and salvation.

V. 6 entreated them spitefully] Calling them prophaners, pestilent fellowes, movers of sedition, imprisoned, scourged, and put them to death. See Act. 5. 40. and 21. 32. 2 Cor. 11. 24. Act. 12. 2. Act. 7. 58. Heb. 11. 37, 38. See also Joseph. Antiq. l. 20. c. 8. what more spitefully could be done, than so ingratefully, and unworthily to require them with injuries, who had none other end but to advance Gods honour in their salvation: we must not think much of our sufferings; Christ foretold us, the world shall hate you: See Phil 1. 28, 29, 30. and Joh. 12. 2.

and slew them] So did the Jews, Stephen, Act. 7. and Herod, James, &c.

V. 7. he was wroth] See Luke 14. 21. Gods anger is the just execution of his judgements on the wicked and impenitent.

sent forth his armies] The Romans (as Theophylatt, Jerom, &c. interpret) called Gods armies, because imployed by him to destroy Jerusalem, as was foretold Dan. 9. 26.

those murderers] The Jews who slew the Apostles; verse 6.

and burnt up their city] This was done to Jerusalem by the Romans, wherein (as Josephus de bel. Iudaic. l. 7. and others report) perished 11 millions of men, women, and children; the rest being sold for slaves, or otherwise scattered among all nations; their temple and city were fired and demolished.

V. 8. the wedding] The wedding feast.

were not worthy] The Jews for the most part were unworthy. Act. 13. 46. See also on chap. 10. 13.

V. 9. go ye therefore] Jerom and Theophylatt understand by these fecond messengers, the Apostles sent to the Gentiles: which being true, we must also understand the ministers sent after them untill the fulnesse of the Gentiles be come in.

into the high wayes] The meaning is, Go preach the Gospel where greatest confluences of people ought to be in Gods service, or use to be in the Churches of the Gentiles: or preach to the most abject, and those whom the Jews despise. See Luke 14. 21.

as many as ye shall find, bid] God calleth us, when we think not of it, Isaiah 65. 2. Rom. 10. 21. and inviteth all without exception, in the rule, Mark 10. 15. Matth. 11. 28. though in some some cases, according to his just judgments, for causes best, and only to him known; he sometimes restraineth, either in the general, as Matthew 7 7. 6. or the particular, as Act. 16. 6, 7. See on Luke 14 23.

V. 10. both bad and good] High and low, rich and poor, prophane and civil; for men of all sorts were to be found among the Gentiles. See chap. 13. 38. 47, 48. only remember that God findeth none good to be invited, but maketh them such by his invitation the wedding was furnished] Literally, the place where the wedding was furnished, or the tables were furnished with guests; spiritually, the Church was, by the preaching of the Gospel, full of those who gave their names to Christ, though of these, some were true believers, and some hypocrites.

V. 11. when the King came in] Some understand this of the day of judgment, others of the time of the gospel here: wherein God, observing the hypocrites in the Church, takes them away by death, and sends them to hell: the sence is when God cometh to judge: and this which followeth seemeth partly inferred to prepossesse an objection, which the Jews might have made; doth God reject us to call the Gentiles? are there not as wicked among them, as us? Yes: but he will come and examine who hath the wedding garment, and who not, and judge them accordingly: by this one word but the wedding garment, are understood all those, qui societati sunt malitiæ, Jerom. who are combined in maliciousnesse. And here is a grave admonition to us, that we may not think it enough for us to take up rooms in the Church of Christ, if we vvalk not vvorthy of our high calling in him, God will find us out.

had not a wedding garment] Conversation becoming the calling of a Christian. See Ephes. 4 1. Phil. 1. 27. 2 Pet. 1. 10, Revel. 19 8. and 3. 18.

V. 12. Friend, how] He calleth him friend, because he had invited him to the wedding, Jerom; yet hath it the sence of a sharp reproof of him, that so unworthily required Gods gracious calling, in that he, who had obtained so much favour in a friendly invitation, vvould so dishonour the company with an unseemly habit, that is, such impiety and vvicked course of life, as became not the gospel.

how camest thou hither] As if he had said, quâ fronte? how could est thou for shame come hither, into such company, so fordidly habited (under this similitude God reproveth the secure impudence of those, who continuing in their filthy impurity of sins, yet dare associate themselves with true Christians) not having a wedding garment] Divers diversly expresse this, but all to one purpose: obedience to the moral law, and gospel---quæ novi hominis efficiunt vestimentum, Ierom; vvhich make the garment of the nevv man. Prosper de promiss. & prædict. part. 2. cap. 1. saith it is, as 1 Tim. 1. 5. charity out of a pure heart, and of a good conscience, and of faith unfeigned: Hilary can. 22. seemeth to understand it of the gifts of the Ghost, and heavenly calendar of holy conversation, as Phil. 3. 20. Chrysostom, Theophylact, Euthymius, &c. understand by the forsaid garment, sinful uncleannesse, and want of mercy and charity. Greg. hom. 38. in Evang. faith also, that the wedding garment is charity. Note from all this, 1. that Gods all-seeing eye of justice easily findeth out hypocrites: 2. that a bare profession of Christianity, and assembling in holy duties with them, shall never save any man, except he adorn that profession with newnesse and holinesse of life; without peace and holinesse no man shall see the Lord, Heb. 12. 14. 3. that no man is called for the wedding garments sake, neither accepted without it, that is, saved for his good works, nor without them; we are called κλῆσει μόνη χάριτος, all by free grace, as Chrysostom, Theophylact, Euthymius, &c. here note.

he was speechlesse] φιμώθη, he was muzled, 1 Cor. 9. 9. he could say nothing for himself; his own conscience condemned, and silenced him: so shall it be to all those, who now under the name of Christians, dishonour the gospel, and possession of Christ.

V. 13. to the servants] That attended on the guests, that is, to the angels and ministring spirits.

bind him hand and foot] Make him sure, as they do condemned men: it importeth that the damned shall have no power to resist, nor possibly fly from Gods severe judgments.

cast him] ἐκβάλετε cast him forth; so the Syriack interpreter ejicite.

into utter darknesse] See on chap. 8. 12. that is, as Prosper understandeth it, de vit. contempl. l. 3. c. 12. expulsion from the blessed presence of God, who is mentium lumen.

weeping and gnashing of teeth] This importeth their bitter sorrows, who shall be condemned to eternal death, non videndi sensum habituri sunt, sed dolendi, Prosper q. 5. they shall not have sense of seeing, but of sorrowing.

V. 14. for many are called] Chap. 20. 16. many that are called do not come so far as to profesSe religion, or any care for the life to come: and among them that do profesSe well, many are not saved for want of faith and holy conversation.

but few are chosen] That is, (as Augustine saith to Paulinus epist. 59. few are, secundum propositum vocati, in quibus Dei procul dubio præscientia falli non potest, called according to his purpose (Rom. 8. 28.) in whom doubtlesse the foreknowledge of God could not be deceived; neither is there any unrighteousnesse with God, who foreseeing the whole masse corrupted, in mercy chose some to be vessels of honour, to whom he doth freely give believing, and obedient hearts, that they may be saved; and in justice leaveth others to their own sinful wills; who disbelieving, and disobeying the gospel, which calleth them to faith and repentance, are the immediate causes of their own just condemnation, as Clem. Alexandr. strom. lib. 1 saith, ἃ δὲ μὴ θελήσαντες πείθεσθαι ἑαυτοὺς κρίνομεν ἀπιστεῖν, but those who would not obey, doubtlesse withdrew themselves from hope of eternal life.

V. 15. then went the Pharisees] When the Pharisees had attempted all means to destroy Christ, and could not prevail; at last they take this counsel. See Mark 12. 13. Luke 20. 20.

entangle him] παγιδεύσωσιν ἐν λόγῳ, how they might ensnare him in his answers; this word is properly used for catching as hunters do, with gins, snares, or toils; their intent was to bring Christ into danger, by occasioning him to answer something prejudicious to the Roman Emperour, and so they might deliver him to Pilate the Deputy, to be put to death as a mover of sedition, Luke 20. 20. or that which must offend the people, and then the Pharisees might destroy him without fear of the multitude, which now mainly awed them, Chap. 26. 5.

V. 16. they sent to him their disciples] They would not go their selves to him; having been so lately foyled by him, chap. 21. but sent their disciples who should feigne themselves just men, that they might avoyd suspition, and that Christ dealing more freely with them, might more easily be entrapped, Luke 20 20.

with the Herodians] They were men who joyned with Herod to patch up a religion, mixed of Heathenisme and Judaisme: in likelyhood they maintained the lawfulnesse of paying this tribute, and the Pharisees the unlawfulnesse of it; so that if he said it was unlawful; the Herodians were ready to accuse him to the governour: if he said it was lawful, the Pharisees were as ready to accuse him to the people: though these so much differed in their own opinions, yet both readily agree together against Christ: See the like Chap. 16. 1. Luke 13. 12. See on Chap. 16. 6. the Syriack giveth it, דְּרַבְּרוּת הוֹרְדוֹס deberth Hiraudis, of the houshold-servants, or Courtiers of Herod, Jerom and Chrysostom understand Herods souldiers.

the way of God] The way to Heaven, revealed by God.

in truth] Truly and sincerely: thou speakest, neither for fear nor favour of Pilate or Herod Theophylact. Thus are they selfcondemned while they seek accusations against him: they confesse they know that he is true, why then did they not believe in him, that they might have been saved?

neither carest thou for any man] Thou are not so afraid of any man, as therefore to conceal the truth of God.

the person of men] That is, the outward appearance, estate, or condition of men.

V. 17. tribute] κῆνσον, it is a Latin word made Greek: properly signifying a valuation of goods or estate, a taxing: according to the proportion whereof they payed tribute in the subdued provinces: and it is here taken for the tribute it self, chap. 17. 24. it is called δίδραχμα the half shekel of the Sanctuary; they ask if it were lawful to pay this to Cæsar? The colour of this quære was, that God in the law had commanded it to be paid to him yearly, for the use of the temple, or tabernacle, Exod. 30. 13. The Romans conquering Judea, did impropriate, and take it to their own use; for which they afterwards making land cesses by appointment of the Romans, called it tribute. So Augustus commanded all the provinces to be taxed, Luke 2. 1. this was layed on every family (Joseph. antiq. lib. 19. cap. 11.) now the Jews murmured every where at this, as an impious, or at least unworthy thing; that prophane men should thus invade Gods right, and dishonour them; hence was the insurrection of Theudas and Judas, Act. 5. 36, 37. mentioned.

V. 18. Jesus perceived their wickednesse] Their malice and mischievous mind against him.

hypocrites why tempt ye me?] Hypocrites; for you would seem to be holy, but are impious; and you come to me with pretence of your good opinion of my truth and sincerity; when yet I well know you come to tempt me, and to ensnare and betray me: he is God, and therefore cannot be deceived with vvords and fair pretences, as Chrysostom noteth: an hypocrite is he, qui aliud est, aliud simulat. Ierom. who is one thing, and counterfeiteth to be another.

V. 19. shew me the tribute money] He calls for it, that he might take occasion from the sight thereof, to confute them the more effectually, verse 21.

a penny] In value seven pence half-peny, the Syriack interpreter hath, denarium argenti capitationis, a peny of silver, pole mony, or head-mony.

V. 20. whose

V. 20. whose image or superscription] Or inscription; he so attemperateth to their captious question, as that, if they would acknowledge truth and reason, he had most appositely answered them: seeing Cæsar had power to appoint coines among them, he had therewith power and right to impose tribute on them.

V. 21. They said unto him Cæsars] The Emperours ever used to have their images and superscriptions stamped on their coyn: probably containing some words, expressing their Empire over the Jews and other nations to them subject; which might have satisfied any, but the impudent and malicious. See on Luke 20. 19. for this whole story.

render therefore] As a debt. Rom 13. 7. not as a benevolence, or arbitrary contribution, which in some cases is fit and necessary for subjects to relieve their princes withall, but that which being commanded by lawfull authority ought to be payed. See Rom. 13. 7.

unto Cæsar] Ye think your payments to maintain Gods service, see you from paying tribute to Cæsar: but you must maintain, both religion and civil power.

which are Cæsars] His stamp upon them, shews ye are his subjects, and therefore ought to pay tribute unto him: for coyning was ever a sign of soveraign power. See on Luke 20. 25.

unto God the things that are Gods] Tithes, first-fruits, oblations, and sacrifices, Ierom: above all, true sanctity; for as Augustine saith well, epist. 48. Armentario, he thus said, that man might knovv quod Deus exigeret ab homine, imaginem suam in homine ipso; sicut suam Cæsar exigebat in nummo; that God requireth of man his own image in man himself; as Cæsar would have his, in his coyn.

V. 22. they marvelled] That he should perceive their close machinations, and so prudently dissappoint their subtility. See Psal. 9, 15. Prov. 21. 30

V. 23. The same day] Mark 12. 18. Luke 20. 27. So vigilant is malice, that they give Christ no rest.

the Sadducees] Who are interpreted justi, saith Ierom. Chrysostom saith, the Evangelist admireth their impudency, who durst assail him, the same day that the Pharisees were confuted. See on chap. 3. 7. and on Luke 20. 27.

which say there is no resurrection] Acts 23. 8. as believing no spiritual substance severed from a body, and therefore that soul and body must die together.

V. 24. Moses said] Deut. 25. 5.

If a man die having no children] That is, if he have never a son, for daughters raise no name to their father, but go into another family: and in Deut. 25. a son only is mentioned both of him that is dead, and of him that marrieth his wife to raise up seed to him. See on Luke 20. 28.

V. 25. left his wife unto his brother] According to the law.

V. 26. Likewise the second] This is added to make the thing seem more absurd, the more husbands the woman had, as they conceived.

V. 27. the woman died also] Before her death there was no question, therefore her death is mentioned.

V. 28. whose wife shall she be, &c.] As if they had said, in the resurrection, which ye suppose shall once be, vvhich of the seven shall be esteemed her husband? or shall all have her to wife? See on Luke 20. 33.

for they all had her] See verse 26. &c.

V. 29. not knowing the Scriptures:] Not acknowledging the books of the Prophets out of which the resurrection might be more clearly proved: nor yet, understanding the law of Moses; which ye acknowledge to be Gods word, for so the Sadduces did, though they rejected the rest, therefore Christ here, having to deal with such, cited no other Scriptures of the old Testament, but only Moses writing, which they allowed for canonical.

nor the power of God] Ye consider not how well God is able to raise the dead; as he hath promised. See Philip. 3. 21.

V. 30. in the resurrection] In the state of glory, which shall follow the resurrection.

given in marriage] Neither do men take wives, nor parents give their daughters in marriage.

as the Angels] Not without bodies, but without marriage, or any bodily necessities, to which they are subject in this mortal life, but of a spiritual conversation, as Jerom speaks. See hereof Augustin Consent. ep. 146.

V. 31. Have ye not read] See on chap. 12. 5.

unto you] You acknowledge it to be Scripture, and to binde you.

V. 32. I am]. Exod 3. 6.

The God of Abraham] This was spoken when they were all three dead. He doth not say, the Lord of Abraham, for he is Lord of liveleſse things also, chap. 11. 27. Psal. 24. 1. but, the God of Abraham in covenant with him. Now seeing this covenant of God was with the bodies of these three Patriarks, as well as with their souls, as appears by their circumcision; it followes, that as their soules were then alive, so their bodies must needs be raised from the dead, and be made eternally happy.

but of the living] Θεὸς γὰρ ζώσι πάντες οἱ κατὰ Θεὸν ζῶντες, all live with God, who lived to God, or according to his will, Gr. Nazianzen orat. 21. This place is very considerable for the confutation of the modern Saduces, who were herein less knowing, than many prudent heathens, who acknowledged and professed the immortality of the soul, which these pretended Christians shamefully deny: but if they will not stand to the infallible authority of holy Scripture, we leave them with that Rev. 22. 11 he that is unjust, let him be unjust still. Unworthy are they to know God and be saved, who blaspheme his truth: if they do acknowledge the Scriptures, let them answer, how is God the God of the living in this instance of Abraham? not in respect of the present state of the body, which lived not without the soule, and he in his time died. Gen. 25. 8, 9. and was buried in the cave of Machpelah? it then Abraham soul lived not, how was God, the God of living Abraham? or in what respect did Abraham live, if neither his body (as the Scripture saith) nor his soul (as these new Doctors affirm) did then live? let these be ashamed of their Atheisme, and quickly repent, submitting to Gods truth, or they shall too late finde, that their soules are immortal to torment, who would not believe the truth, that they might be saved.

V. 33. The multitude] The people gave more respect to Christs doctrine than the Sadduces did.

V. 34. But when] Mark 12. 28.

he had put the Sadducees to silence] They thought it would be a great honour to them, to silence him that had silenced the Sadduces.

they were gathered together] They advised about the businesse; or, they came together about Christ: as verse 41. to dispute with Christ: for they thought themselves much more knowing and learned men, than the Sadduces. Though they abominated as impious and heretical the tenet of Sadduces, yet they envied Christs victory who had refuted and silenced them; therefore, though they also had often been overcome, yet presumed they once again to reencounter him, in hope to blast the honour of his late victory before the people, of whose good opinion and applause they were extreamly ambitious.

V. 35. a lawyer] He is called a scribe, Mark 12. 28. See chap. 2. 4. & chap. 8. 19. and on Luke 20. 1.

tempting him] Some think it was not out of malice, as verse 18. and elsewhere: but out of desire of knowledge, as the Queen of Sheba proved Solomon. 1 King. 10. 1. but rather conceive it was a captious question, to the end he might expose Christ to the hatred of the people: non scire desiderans, sed tentans. Jerom. not desiring to know, but tempting. Theophylact saith he came ἐξ ἀμείκτου φθόνου: out of unreasonable envy; though being something better informed, and answering discreetly, he were not far from the kingdom of God. Mark 12. 34.

V. 36. the great commandment] The greatest: because some counted those concerning sacrifices chiefest, as is intimated, Mark 12. 33. Some; that of circumcision: Some, that of the sabbath.

V. 37. Thou shalt love the Lord] Deut. 6. 5. Where we read, with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy might, here left out, is added ---- Luke 10. 27.

with all thy heart] With all the faculties of thy soul.

with all thy mindes] This is added, to Deut. 6. 5. and with all thy strength or might, left out here, is added, Mark 12 30. Luke 10. 27.

V. 38. The first] In order: for God must be loved before, and more than all men.

great commandment] It was none pt the ten commandments in particular, but contains all the commandments of the first table, and therefore is counted the greatest, for the whole is greater than any part thereof.

V. 37. is like unto it] Not equal to it: for duty to God is above duty to man: but like it in greatnesse, because it containeth all the duties of the second table, as the other did of the first.

Thou shalt love] Levit. 19. 18.

thy neighbour] Another man. Luke 10. 27. 29, 30. 1 John 3. 13. Rom. 13. 8. nec enim Dominus vere sine proximo, nec proximus vere diligitur sine Deo. Greg. hom. 30. for neither is God truly loved without our neighbour, nor our neighbour truly loved God. See 1 John 4. 20.

as thy self] As truly, as thy self: sincerely, though not vvithout some inequality of degrees: as, John 17. 21. Acts 3. 22.

V. 40. all the Law and the Prophets] This is the contents and summe of them all, and by either law or Prophets, proposed as the duty of man; whatever they command, caution, admonish, teach, or ordain, is hereto reducible, and all our duties to God and man, fall, like several lines into this one centre, love, vvhich is the fulfilling of the Lavv.

V. 41. While the Pharisees] Mark 12. 35. Luke 10. 41. The Pharisees vvho arrogated to themselves, the onely knowledge of the Lavv and Prophets: but were extreame blinde concerning the mystery of salvation by Christ: in the knowledge of vvhome onely, is eternal life, John 17. 3.

Christ

Christ therefore very fitly questioneth them herein.

V. 42. What think ye] You who boast of the key of knowledge, and interpretation of Scriptures: what do you believe concerning Christ?

of Christ] Christ proveth, that though he be truly Davids son, according to the flesh, yet that he is also Davids Lord, as being God eternal: which the Pharisees not understanding, were not able to answer his question, and not believing that, they could have no profit of the Messias now exhibited, whom the Patriarks, Prophets, all the faithful before them, so earnestly longed for, they taking Christ for meer man, and not the saviour of his Israel, the elect.

Whose son is he?] Of whose stock, or family? for the Hebrews called a mans posterity, his sons.

of David] See on chap. 1. 1. They knew so much, that according to the promise of God, Christ was to come of the linage of David; so much they commonly read and interpreted to the people: but they neither knew, nor expected in Christ, any more than the person of a man: therefore, thus much and no more could they answer Christ: they thought he should be ἄνθρωπος ψιλὸς, meer man, saith Theophylact.

V. 43. How then doth David in spirit] Non erroris incerte, saith Jerom: but by inspiration of Gods spirit, he reproveth them, not for confessing him to be the son of David; but whereas they taught the vulgar, to expect only a fecular external kingdom under the Meslias: he hereby gives them occasion in the presence of the multitude, to consider the glory and divine Majesty of his kingdom: as he is the Son of God, and Davids Lord. He saith, how doth David in spirit; Mark addeth the holy spirit: thus David spake, Psal. 110. 1. See 1 Pet. 2. 19.

V. 44. The Lord said unto my Lord] David professed that God the Father said so unto Christ, Davids Lord.

V. 45. call him Lord] See on verse 42.

V. 46. Neither durst any man] None of his adversaries durst ask him any thing, after this, in the way of tempting him, for they saw plainly that they could not prevail against him; being ever convicted by evident truth, and divine wisdom: therefore they came with violence, to destroy him by power: the venome of envie may sometimes be easily overcome, but hardly ever rest.

CHAP. XXIII.

Verse 1. To the multitude] Gr. Multitudes: to many gathered together.

and to his disciples] When he saw there was no more hope to do good on the Pharisees, he addresseth himself to the people, and his disciples, to undeceive them, and fore-arm them against their corruptions.

V. 2. sit in Moses chair] As Masters and Teachers, verse 7. 8. 10. and expounders of Moses law: for καθέδρα, importeth the office of teaching the word of God, law and gospel: belonging to the Priests under the lavv, and the Ministers under the gospel: because while they taught, they were wont to sit: Suidas interpreteth καθέδρα by ἀντίχεισις, a sitting or tarrying.

V. 3. all therefore] because God appointed teachers of the law, therefore Christ would have them to be heard, though their persons were wicked: while they who have a calling to preach, desire the truth; they must be heard, though not imitated, where they practice not, See Mal. 2. 7. Thus he speaketh saith Chrysostome, hom. 73. lest he should leave the hearers any occasion of disobedience; to their greater condemnation: or contempt of their Ministery, whom he should after send: in the Ministery, the ordinance of God is to be considered; sive Paulus, sive Judas baptizet, Christus pectorum ladet, absolvit, & dolet: whether Paul or Judas baptize, Christ washeth away, forgives, and putteth away sin. de bapt. Christi (inter opera. Cyprian) that observe and do] If they teach according to Moses law, as they professe to do; and go not out of the chair by their traditions: for in such a case our Saviour forbids men to obey them. Matth. 16. 6. 12. true sanctity is in doing good, not in saying onely.

But do not ye after their works] He calleth them their works, which he here condemneth in all this speech following; as hypocrisie, ambition, avarice, pride, &c. for these things are no fruits of Moses chair, but of Satans; which sheweth how careful Ministers ought to be, lest they call down in works, what they would build in words: but withall, that auditors may not compose themselves to the examples of frail men, but to the truth of Gods holy word.

for they say and do not] They speak well, but live ill: they are the sonne (Chap. 21. 30.) who said he would goe, and work in the vineyard, but did not: qui autem docent tantum, nec faciunt, ipsi praceptis suis detrahunt pondus; saith Lactantius l. 3. c. 16. they who only teach, and do not (as they teach) their selves, take away the weight from their own precepts; for who will obey, when teachers teach men not to obey: teach by example thou who requirest obedience of others: be thou not like those stones set on the partings of high wayes, which stand onely, (by their inscriptions) to shew others which way to take, not to move themselves; it is a shame for teachers, not to do what they bid others do; but a greater shame to do that which they forbid others; thou that teachest another, teachest thou not thy self? Rom. 2. 2. by you the name of God is blasphemed amongst the enemies; See 1 Cor. 9. 27. of all the world which perished by the deluge, least so be pitried were they, who built an ark for believing Noah, not themselves.

V. 4. For they bind heavy burdens] Luke 11. 46. They presse others to the strict observance of Gods law; See Acts 15. 10. This verse interpreteth the foregoing; they say, they binde heavie burdens to other mens shoulders; that is, they presse their consciences, telling them rigidly enough, what they must do, or be damned, but do not their selves; they will not move a finger to that duty their selves; It is a metaphor taken from some cruel Master, laying intolerable burdens on his beasts and servants (under which they groan) but is moved with no compassion to ease or help them, not so much as with a finger.

with one of their fingers] They will not touch them, much lesse lay them on their own shoulders; thus hypocrites, are commonly severe exactours of those things, which themselves chiefly neglect; as it was objected against the Athenians, they knew what was right, but would not do it; every one can speak great things, but few do as they say; example is the most powerful thetorick, for as Gr. Nazianzen saith. Theodor. epist. 81. ἃ γὰρ ἔστιν ὁ λόγος & πείθει τὰς πολλὰς, ὡς ἡ πρᾶξις ἡ σιωπῶσα παρέδειξεν, for truly, words do not so much perswade many men, as action, which is a kind of silent exhortation. Non eloquimur magna, sed vivimus, said Minucius Felix; after Cyprian serm. 3. de bon. pat. who after the like manner saith, qui virtutum conscientiam magis quam jactantiam novimus, &c. we, who are rather acquainted with the conscience, than the ostentation of vertues, who do not speak great things, but live, as the servants and worshippers of God do.

V. 5. to be seen of men] They do works indeed sometimes which seem morally good, but out of vain-glory, and so wanting the right end, which is the glory of God, they are but (as Moses said Deut. 32. 32.) the vine of Sodom, and of the fields of Gomorrah, their grapes are grapes of gall &c. the fruits growing near the dead sea, where those cities stood, are fair without, but only dust and rottennesse within.

They make broad] Broader than other mens. So ambitious are hypocrites in all semblances of good. (See Numb. 15. 38. Deut. 22. 12.) Specially in things external, for they are ambitious of honour within men, they have not learned of David, Psal. 16. 8. To set the Lord always before them; but of Saul, 1 Sam. 15. 30. honour me now I pray thee, before the elders of my people.

their phylacteries] φυλακτήρια, conservatories. Chrysostomes interpreter calleth them, quadam custodientia, means to keep in memory, to wit, the precepts of the lavv thereon vvritten; for these vvere ribbands of blevv silk; or as some think of parchment, vvhich they vvore upon their garments and fore-heads; not in obedience to God so much, as ostentation before men, of their singular zeal, and love to the lavv of God, as if they vvere very careful observers thereof. See Deut. 6. 8.

and enlarge the borders of their garments] Hypocrisie easily learneth to abuse any ordinance of God; so here, God commanded that they should make them, ציצת tsitsith. Numb. 15. 39. 70. κράσπεδα, fringes in the borders of their garments, that they might look upon it, and remember all the commandements of the Lord, and do them—they enlarged them for shevv to men; as if all sanctity had consisted therein, that others might take the more notice of them, and think them to be the onely religious men.

V. 6. and love the uppermost rooms] Mark 12. 28, 39. Luke 11. 43. πρωτοκλισίαν the first place to lye down in feasts; for they lay on pallets to eat, and their tables vvere beds; they might have taken the uppermost rooms, when due, and offered unto them; but they loved them, and ambitiously contended for them πρωτοκαθεδρίας the uppermost seats in the synagogues likewise,

V. 7. and greetings in the markets] To be first saluted, as if the chief honour and respect were due to them before all others; and that in publick,

Rabbi, Rabbi] Ραββὶ, ῥαββὶ, רבי rabbi, signifieth great, or excellent, &c. whence cometh רב, a master, or one excellent in any art, and רבי rabbi, was taken for a title of dignity and eminency, importing those, who by imposition of hands were declared to be wise men: it signifieth here, one preferred before other teachers, because of his abundant knowledge, which makes him to be instead of many: their fault was, that they ambitiously affected that title above others, and took it to themselves without giving due honour unto God their teacher: they loved to hear the title doubled, or often used.

V. 8. be ye not called so] Jam. 3. 1. they could not barre men from calling them so; but they should not take pride and pleasure in it: he addresseth this to his disciples, whom he meant to furnish with an extraordinary measure of knowledge and largeness of heart, that they might be the teachers of the world; lest thereby they should be vainly puffed up, and fall into Satans snares: for ambition begets love of eminency, and authority over others; and affectation of Prelacy, ushered in Antichrist. Chrysostom noteth here, hom. 73. the great mischiefs which came into the Church by the ambition of Prelates: for which, he said, he could not abstain from tears, when he heard, or thought of the first places, &c. It is true, they that labour in the word and doctrine, are worthy of double honour, 1 Tim. 5. 17. and much to blame are those who deny it them: the contempt of the ministry is a wide door open to herefie. Will the impious and ingrateful world, or no, they are the ambassadors for Christ, 2 Cor. 5. 20. and stewards of the mysteries of God, 1 Cor. 4. 1. but the dignity of the Ministery is one thing, and the ambition of Ministers another.

one is your master] Your principal teacher: he alludes to Isaiah 54 13. Jer. 31. 34. arrogate not the glory of God to your selves; for what have you excellent in you, which you have not received, and learned of Christ?

All ye are brethren] All ye Apostles are not Masters one of another, but all fellow-disciples of Christ your Master. The main scope of this place is, to hold the disciples within the limits of humility and knowledge of their own imperfection; lest they should affect Primacy and power to lord it over their brethren, 1 Pet. 5. 1. (which we well knew would miserably afflict the Church) which they do who are ambitious of high titles.

V. 9. Call no man your father] He speaketh not this in a simple and literal sense: children may call their natural parent father, and the people may without offence, use this name in reverence to their spiritual Fathers: so Isaac said to Abraham, Genesis 22. 7. אבי my father. So Jacob to Isaac, Gen. 27. 18. &c. So 1 Sam. 20. 2, 2 King. 2. 12. 2 King. 13. 14. but he taxeth here the flattery of those who were the Pharisees sycophants, giving them too high titles; and the pride of those who ambitiously took the same, which is a greater title than Master, and so he attributeth it to his heavenly Father, and the other to himself in the next verse. See more on verse 7, 8.

For one is] Mal. 1. 6. The Universal Parent, by right of creation, redemption, adoption in Christ, and preservation. God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ; of whom the whole family in heaven and earth is named, Ephes. 3. 15.

your Father which is in heaven] See on chap. 6. 9

V. 10. Neither be ye called Masters] Governours: for teaching Masters were mentioned, verse 8. guides of the way, verse 16. chap. 15. 14. Rom. 2. 19, 20. the Scribes, although they were but blind guides, yet did they ambitiously affect such titles; but the Apostles must not.

V. 11. He that is greatest] Here it appears that different places and titles, are not prohibited; but ambitious seeking of them, and proud glorying in them shall be your servant] That is, let him be so: as, chap. 20. 27.

V. 12. Whosoever shall exalt himself] Luke 14. 11 and 18. 14. this is contrary to the course of the world: for men esteem more of such, as see forth themselves, though with contempt of others: but God hateth and resisteth the proud, and giveth grace to the humble; the sweet water-courses find out the low valleys, which have the blessing of fruitfulnesse, while the high mountains are barren: the seeming excellency of the proud, like rising smoak, vanisheth as it greatneth.

V. 13. But woe unto you Scribes and Pharisees] Luke 11. 52. This word is used, either to denounce the judgement of God, imminent punishment, temporal or eternal: or it expresseth the sympathy of those who deplore and pity. This was the last time he would warn the Scribes and Pharisees of their condition; and therefore having admonished his Disciples, and the people to beware of them, he now layes open to their consciences, their principal sins, and the miseries to which they were liable for the same.

hypocrites] Christ using this term in his sharpest reproofs, shews us that nothing is more detestable than hypocrisie; a hypocrite is he who counterfeiteth, or acteth another mans person. See Budæ. ὑποκρίνομαι.

Ye shut up the kingdom of heaven] Ye are so far from opening the dore, that when it is opened by John Baptist, and me, ye will neither enter into it, nor permit others to enter, who shew some willingnesse thereto, John 7 48, 49. by threatnings, John 9. 22. or ye challenge the key of interpretation to your selves, and would not suffer any truly to interpret those scriptures that treat of the Messias, and his kingdom; such fruit beareth your abused authority in the Church.

against men] ἔμπροσθεν τῶν ἀνθρώπων, in the sight of men, or before the face of men, when they are at the very door, and ready to enter: for many came to Christs teaching, ready to embrace the Gospel of the kingdom, whom the Pharisees disheartned, by their blaspheming of Christ, tradicing his doctrine; or by threatnings, and decrees of excommunication, endeavouring so to do.

V. 14. Ye devour widows houses] Mark 12. 40. Luke 20. 47. Ye oppress and injure widows, who have none to help them, till you leave them not so much as an house to live in, Hos. 4. 8. it is said, they eat up the sinnes of the people: that is, the sacrifices offered for the expiation of the peoples sinnes; the meaning here is, that ye perswade foolish widows to give you entertainment, or to bequeath their estates to your society, pretending that you will gain them salvation, by your continual prayers for them. See 2 Tim. 3. 5, 6. he nameth widows here, to aggravate their impiety, but we may conceive, that they also abused many others in like manner.

for a pretence make long prayers] Vitia non decipiunt nisi sub specie umbráque virtutum. Jerom Lata. l. 2. ep. 17. You make long prayers, that widows thinking you to be zealous and religious men, may trust you with their estates, which you defraud them of: you would be taken for godly men, because you make long prayers; so wrong you God and man therefore ye shall receive the greater damnation] Greater than other oppressours or impostors: and that first, because ye are so cruel, as to beguile and impoverish helpless widows; God taking on him the protection of them and orphans. See Exod. 22. 22. Secondly, because as all sin is out of measure sinful, (as being committed against an infinite justice) yet most damnable is that sin, quod titulus benitatis accusat. Salvian de Gub. D. l. 4. which a title of goodnesse accuseth: it more aggravateth our cause before God, si deteriores sumus, & meliores esse dicamur, saith the same, if so be we are evil, and are reported to be good; how much more, when we take up, and abuse the holy name, and worship of God, for a cloak of cruelty and wickednesse? this is an high injury to the holy Majesty of a just and all-seeing God: therefore (as Chrysostom hom. 74. in Matth. well saith) whereas all that sin, are worthy of punishment, most grievously shall he be punished, who covereth wickednesse, using such a pretence.

V. 15. compasse sea and land] Ye travel sea and land; ye take great pains to convert Gentiles to your religion: as if ye were very zealous for Gods glory.

to make one proselyte] προσήλυτον, A stranger (Hebrew גר, ger, of גור, which among other significations importeth, peregrinatus fuit, congregavit) coming over from heathenish superstition, to Judaisme.

a child of hell] Much worse, and so more damnable. This word υἱὸς sonne, or sonnes joyned with a substantive of denominating sense, with the Hebrews, was very emphatical; as in these severall instances may appear, child en (or sons) of wrath, Ephes. 2. 3. that is, tra ves devoti & obnoxii: בן תמותה, ben hamaveth, a son, or child of death: qui capitalis criminis reus est. So sonne of perdition, John 17. 12. a hopelesse, desperate cast-away. So here.

V. 16. It is nothing] 'Tis a matter of nothing: he is not guilty of perjury who thus affirmeth an untruth: this is no oath, or he is not bound to perform his vow, by the Temple.

he is a debtor] He is bound to perform his oath or vow, who sweares by the gold of the Temple; or he is guilty (if he perform not: so the Syriac חייב reus fuit, or debuit; potuit: debitor rove Mar. Trost. 134. So Rom. 13. 8. So they expressed a debtor or guilty man, by one and the same word; whence it seemeth that poverty is called in the Lords prayer, chap. 6. 12. forgive us τὰ ὀφειλήματα ἡμῶν our debts that is, the sins whereof we are guilty: this seemeth to be out of the Syriac manner of speaking which was the language of our Saviour.

V. 17. that sanctifieth the gold] That causeth the gold to be counted holy, because it is sacred, as for a part from common use, unto the service of God, for the use of the temple.

V. 18. swear by the altar] This Christ speaketh not to allow any swearing by creatures, though of the most holy use; but to tax the foolish vanity of their traditions.

V. 19. the gift or the altar] The gift was not holy, before it was brought to the altar to be offered to God: but the altar was holy before, as being long before they gift consecrated to the service of God, in that use which he appointed it, and so denominates the gift thereon offered, holy or sacred to the Lord.

V. 20. and by all things therein] He is as much bound to perform his vow, as if he did swear by all those things because they all pertained to it: he doth not allow any swearing by creatures, though he condemn perjury, when men swear by them. See on chap. 5. 33. 34.

V. 21. and by him] That is, in Gods account he is tyed to perform, as if he had sworn by God himself.

that dwelleth therein] Not locally or circumscriptively, for he is infinite and comprehendeth all things. See Act. 17. 24. Jer. 23. 24. but because he chose and appointed that place for his publick worship.

V. 22. by the throne of God] See Act. 7. 49 Heaven is called the throne of God; because as the greatest Majesty of Kings is seen when they sit on their thrones: so God manifesteth his glory most in heaven, and to the heavenly creatures.

V. 23. for ye pay] Luke 11. 42 that ye may seem exact observers of the law: this was commanded by the law, Levit 27.

30. Numb. 18. 23. See hereof D. Godwin. Moses and Aaron, lib. 6. cap. 3.

omitted the weightier matters] Hypocrites are careful in small matters, but negligent in the greatest: Καρκάρια, is a comparative relating to tithing mint, &c. which they did by tradition, the law commanding tithes alſo of more important kindes: for it was as well juſtice to give the Prieſts their tithes, as to render to any other that which was their own. See on Luke 11. 42.

judgement, mercy, and faith] Juſt dealing with all men, mercy in relieving the poor, and faithfulneſſe in covenants, promiſes and contracts.

Theſe ought ye to have done] He blameth not thoſe who do the ſmalleſt things commanded; but ſuch as think when they have done theſe things, they have done all that is required, and ſo ſecurely neglect the greateſt duties: theſe, &c. that is, juſtice, mercy, and truth; and not to have omitted your paying tithes: here is taxed the prepoſterous traditions of Phariſees. See on Luke 11. 42. and Doct. Godwin. Moſes and Aaron l. 6. c. 3. Eccleſiam fraudare ſacrilegium eſt. Jerom Negotian. ep 14. l. 2. It is ſacrilledge to defraud the Church.

V. 24. Te blinde guides] It is a wretched blindneſſe, not to ſee the abſurdity and impiety of ſuch courſes; the worſe becauſe they were to lead others in religious practices. See Iſaiah 42. 19. wickedneſſe is ever pernicious: but then worſe, when the wicked thinks he needs no amendment; but worſt of all is it, when he thinketh himſelt a ſufficient guide, and reformer of others, who is himſelf incorrigible; Chryſ. in loc. this they owed to their malice: the God of love is light without darkneſſe. 1 John 1. 5. but Athanaſius epiſt. ad ſolitar. vit. Agent. malice is truely blinde.

Strain at a gnat] It is a proverbial ſpeech, the ſenſe is: you make a ſcruple of ſmall things, but nothing care for the maine.

V. 25. For ye make clean the outſide of &c.] Luke 11 39. Hypocrites make much adoe about ceremonies, their own traditions, or things externa and indifferent, but for the inward and moſt neceſſary parts of Gods worſhip, they are very careleſſe. See Mark 7. 4.

full of extortion] Getting of other mens goods away from them by oppreſſion, ravage and violence, verſe 14. Ezek. 18. 16.

and exceſſe] In the intemperate uſe of the creatures: how admirable a folly was this in the Phariſees, to be over nice in having clean houſes, and utinſels, with ſouls ſo foul? without controverſie, external cleanneſſe and decent compture is commendable, and neceſſary, but the ſouls cleanneſſe is of concernment incomparably greater; for the purity thereof ſhall make us eternally bleſſed, chap. 5.

V. 26. Cleanſe firſt that which is within] He recalleth them from hypocriſie, to a ſincere and inward purity in which they ſhall have comfort, Tit. 1. 15. this conſiſteth not in external ceremonies, &c.

V. 27. whited ſepulchres] See Acts 23. 3. Like thoſe ſumptuous tombs which cover ſtenchie and corrupted fleſh and bones of dead carcaſes. See verſe 6, 7, 14, 15 23. So were the Phariſees onely externally and to the eyes of other men, religious; but inwardly vitious and wicked; and ſo more abominably impious, than they who are apparently ſo. Noſcio enim quamdiu turpiora ſunt vitia, quæ virtutum ſpecie celantur; faith Jerom ep. 22. l. 2. Celantur vitia, quæ virtutum ſpecie celantur; faith Jerom ep. 22. l. 2. Celantur, for I know not how, more filthy are thoſe vices which are covered with ſhew of vertues: vizours of religion cannot deceive Chriſt our Judge: labour for cleanneſſe of heart, which David prayed for, Pſalm 51. 10, If we have true purity there, all things ſhall be pure to us; it is onely ſin which defileth a man, whoſe root or fountain is within in the heart; if that be cleanſed, then (as it was ſaid of the unwholeſome waters of Jerico healed, 2 King. 2. 21.) death and barrenneſſe ſhall be no more in the words and actions

V. 28. Even ſo ye alſo, &c.] Thus our Saviour applying his ſimilitude, ſheweth himſelf the ſearcher of hearts, and detecteth their ſecret hypocriſie, which men ſee not: as thou ſeeſt the fair outſides of a ſumptuous Tombe, thou canſt not ſee the rotten bones therewith covered: ſo thou ſeeſt the outward appearance onely of the hypocrite, thou ſeeſt not the ſecret wickedneſſe of his heart: but the Lord ſeeth not as man ſeeth: for man l. ɔbeth on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart. 1 Sam. 16. 7.

V. 29. Te build the tombs of the Prophets] Ye are like your fathers, though you diſavow their cruelty againſt the former Prophets: you are injurious in perſecuting the living Saints, and would ſeem religious in honouring the dead: you build and adorn the tombs and monuments of the Prophets, and other juſt men, whom your fathers ſlew for preaching the truth, and reproving their ſins: and ye perſecute Chriſt and his diſciples for the ſame cauſe, and think ye are yet religious. See on Luke 11. 47.

V. 30. and ſay] You pretend you would not have done ſo: thus as if your fathers vices were your vertues, you can remember and confeſſe them, but not your own ſins.

V. 31. Te be witneſſes] Your own words and actions teſtifie.

unto your ſelves] Or againſt your ſelves; as, Mark 6, 12, Luk. 9. 5.

That ye are the children of them which kill'd, &c.] Ye imitate them in their impiety; though as yet ye cannot compaſſe your deſign; for even now ye are plotting what they practiced: you ſeem to honour the ſilent dead, becauſe they reprove you not; but the ſurviving teachers of the ſame doctrine, you hate to the death, as your fathers did the former Prophets.

V. 32. fill ye up] Since ye will needs do ſo; that your judgement may come upon you. See Gen. 15. 16. God permitteth not the malice or impiety of any perſon or nation, to encreaſe above a certain meaſure by him limited and bounded, ſo that they ſhall no more exceed the ſame, than the raging ſea her full; to which when her proud waves come, they ſhall ſoon finde their ebb: ſo when iniquity is come to a certain heigth, then comes divine revenge to make the conſummation, Jer. 30. 11. ſinne can have but a definite meaſure: Seeing therefore ye will not be perſwaded to repent and leave your ſins; take your courſe, go on.

The meaſure of your fathers] They ſtored up to themſelves great wrath, by their killing the Prophets, but yet the meaſure is not full; there remaineth ſomething which you will do to exceed their wickedneſſe, and beyond which there can be nothing more impious: they ſlew the ſervants, but you will ſlay the Son of God; the Lord of all the Prophets: nihil eſt ultrà Dei injuriam, gravius peccare quod poſſint. Ambroſ. in Luc. l. 7. c. 11. there is nothing beyond the injuring of God himſelf, that men can more grievous ſin.

V. 33. ye ſerpents] This he ſaith to intimate their kindred in wickedneſſe (as Chryſoſt. ſpeakes) like their parents, in veneno malitiæ ---- (as Euthymius expreſſeth it) in the venome of malice.

generation of vipers] See on chap. 3. 7.

How can ye eſcape] Seeing your malice is innate, as the vipers poiſon, and your thirſt of the Saints blood hereditary; what hope can you conceive of eſcape, more than the vain hope of beguiled hypocrites? Though ye may eſcape mans judgement, ye cannot Gods: or, whoſoever eſcapes hell, certainly ye cannot, who ſin out of ſo deſtinate a malice.

of hell] See on chap. 5. 22. Eternal damnation of body and ſoul, in the moſt intenſe torments of hell fire: there is no way to eſcape that moſt wretched ſecond death but the living way Chriſt Jeſus, whom you hate, and ſeek by all meanes to put from you, or deſtroy: the invincible hardneſſe of your hearts will not ſuffer you to believe and repent, that you may obtain mercy: now however your fair ſemblances of, and pretences to ſanctity before men acquit you from their cenſures and judgement, yet no diſguiſes can deceive God, who ſeeth the very ſecret thoughts of all men, and whoſe judgement is inevitable, ſuch as none ſhall eſcape, 2 Cor. 5. 10.

V. 34. Wherefore] Seeing ye are ſo cruel, ye ſhall have matter to exerciſe your cruelty: Gods work muſt be done, mans impiety cannot overcome Gods mercy; nor the abuſers thereof eſcape his juſtice.

I ſend unto you] After my reſurrection and aſcenſion into heaven. Here appeareth the unſpeakable goodneſſe of God, and mercy of Chriſt, ſtill ſending his ſervants to invite the obſtinate jewes to faith and repentance, that they might live: yea after they had put him to death with all the ſpightful aggravations thereof, which the power of man could act, or Satans malice invent; notwithſtanding all this, he that ſaid of old to the rebellious Iſrael, yet return unto me, Ier. 3. 1. after all theſe injuries foreſeen, ſaith --- behold, I ſend unto you Prophets -- that is, as I have formerly ſent you Prophets, ſo will I ſend you wiſe men, ſcribes, that is, learned men, though I know before hand, you will likewiſe kill, and perſecute them.

Prophets and wiſe men, and Scribes] He calls the Apoſtles and Paſtours under the Goſpel, by that name of Prophet, which was beſt known to the jews; and mentioned verſe 30. that they that honoured the dead Prophets, and their wiſe men and Scribes; might know what account they ought alſo to have made of the Apoſtles, that were more excellent than they. See on chap 11. 11.

V. 36. All theſe things] All theſe puniſhments: the juſt revenge on an impious nation, for the blood of the ſervants of God, ſhed for the teſtimony of his truth: however vengeance on them was ſlow, yet it was ſure, to their utter extirpation and diſperſion of their remnant unto this day.

See Ezek. 18. 31.

V. 38. Your houſe is left unto you deſolate] Your city and temple ſhall be deſtroyed: God often and long offereth mercy, but at laſt (as Cardan ſpeaks of *Valer. See Joſeph. l. 7. c. 9, 10. 18. *de bel. See Ier. 7. 4. So juſt is God in rejecting them: ſo long as the malady ſeemeth to promiſe any hope of recovery, the Phyſician uſeth gentle means of recovery, but when he deſpaireth of the cure, then as Athanaſius ſaith, *de pradit. tell us] Here are three diſtinct queſtions propounded; the firſt concerning the deſtruction of Ieruſalem and the Temple: the ſecond, about Chriſts coming, not to judgement, but as they dreamed, to his temporal kingdom: the third, concerning the end of the world: the anſwer to the firſt, (as ſome conceive) reacheth to verſe 23 to the ſecond, from thence to verſe 36. to the third, from that verſe to the end of the chapter: but indeed, to the firſt and third, he anſwereth ſomewhat promiſcuouſly, ſo that ſomethings muſt be underſtood of the deſtruction of Ieruſalem, and ſome things concerning the end of the world.

V. 4. That no man deceive you] Satan will be buſie to ſeduce you by many and variable impoſtors, which he will ſend into the Church to corrupt the doctrine, which I have delivered you, but be you vigilant, that you be not deceived.

V. 5. in my name] Some pretending that they are authorized by Chriſt: as, Acts 19. 13. Some that they had the ſame authority with Chriſt; or that they were Chriſt the Meſſias: as here verſe 23. John 5. 43. Some promiſing them temporal deliverance; which they expected, Luke 24. 21. See Acts 5. 36, 37. and 21. 38.

ſhall betray one another] The Apoſtates ſhall betray thoſe who will not with them deny the faith, and run to deſtruction of body and ſoul for company.

V. 11. Falſe Prophets] Acts 20. 30. 2 Corinth. 11. 13. 2. Tim. 2. 18. Such as ſhall feign themſelves to be the moſt holy teachers of truth: many ſuch ſhall riſe intruding themſelves into the work of the miniſtry, unto which they are not called of God: neither ſhall they be eaſily diſcovered, but ſo ſubtily act, as cloſely to carry on their deſignes under fair pretences of ſingular zeal for the cauſe of Chriſt; in ſo much as that they ſhall deceive many good and knowing men.

V. 12. Iniquity ſhall abound] Becauſe of their cruelty toward Chriſtians, love to God and man, ſhall grow cold, not ſhewing it ſelf as before in offices of piety and charity. See 2 Tim. 4. 16. the abomination of desolation] These words are taken from Dan. 12. 11. where we read, that from the time that the daily sacrifice should be taken away, to give, or set up שקוץ משם shikkuts shamem 70. as here, τὸ βδέλυγμα ἐρημώσεως the destructive abomination; or as the Hebrew is given by some, abominationem stupendam, or obstupefacientem; thus the Prophet called the prophanation of the Temple, whether we understand it, with Theophylatt, of Cæsars image there set up; or of the setting up of the Eagle (the signe in the Roman standard) in the 13. year of Nero, in the moneth of May, in Judea, according to the word of the Lord by Moses, Deut. 28 49 The Lord shall bring a nation against thee from far; as, נשא ה׳ אליך גוי מרחק yide hannasher, the Eagle flyeth; in similitudinem aquilæ volantis ὡς Hutter: as a flying Eagle: a nation whose tongue thou shalt not understand: or that which (after the Roman Eagle was seen there in their flying colours) fell out in the time of Cæsar Adrianus; who for the Jews rebellion under their pseudo-Messias, Barcochebas, interdicted the Jews return to Jerusalem; and to that purpose, not onely changed the name of Jerusalem to Elia, but also caused the marble statue of an Hog (which was an abomination to the Jews) to be set up over that gate of the city which opened toward Bethlehem; it was a certain signe and token of their desolation and finall destruction; their sceptre departed; they subjected to the Roman Empire, their Temple demolished, their daily sacrifice ceased, and they scattered over the world; was the completion thereof, which Daniel foretold, about 670. years before it came to passe; and this was about an hundred years after the blasphemous Jews had cryed out, his blood be on us, and on our children: Gods justice is ever sure, though sometimes slow. See on Luke 21. 20. &c.

by Daniel] See Daniel 9 27. & 12. 11.

in the holy place] In Judea, the holy Land: before the holy City. See Isaiah 63. 18. or as Theophylatt thinks, Cæsars image set up ἐν τοῖς ἁγίοις τοῦ ναοῦ, in the inward parts of the Temple.

let him understand] Let him take notice, that when they see the Roman colours flying in Judea, the Temple and City shall be destroyed, and the Nation of the Jews finally scattered, according to the Prophet Daniels prophesie, Dan. 9. 26.

V. 16. Then let them] being warned by these signes, let them flee to save their lives. See on Luke 21. 21.

into the mountains] For there would be no safety in any of their cities. So Gen. 19. 17.

V. 17. Not come down] If he can escape with life some other way; let him make all the haste he can to be gone, and not stay to save ought of his goods.

V. 18. His clothes] His coat, or cloak, or other garment, such as men use not to work in, in the fields; left carrying too long in the city, the Roman siege shut him up to destruction, with the rest which shall perish there: ἱμάτιον signifieth either house furniture, carpets, coverlids, &c. or a coat, Budæus, ex Athenæ. l. 12.

V. 19. That are with child] Such could not well flee, at the enemies approach, because of their burden; nor nurses from their children. See Luke 23. 29.

V. 20. Not in the winter] Because bad wayes, and foul weather might hinder them.

Neither on the sabbath-day] They not understanding, that in case of necessity, it was lawful to flee or make defence on the sabbath-day, might more be exposed to the fury of the enemy, neither could they that day get things necessary, by reason of their strict observation of the sabbath. Christ accommodateth this speech unto the infirmity of the Jews the time whereof is, that they should pray unto the Lord, whose divine providence ruleth over, and disposeth of all, that nothing might befal them which might make their afflictions more grevious and dangerous unto them, or hinder their flight from their enemies, and the fury of the war to come upon them; as incommodiousnesse of wayes, shortnesse of dayes, cold, stormy, winter-weather, &c. or importunity of the sabbath, wherein they might be troubled in conscience, if necessity should compel them to flie beyond the short measure of a sabbath-dayes journey, which would not set them beyond the lines of a besieging enemy: finally he admonisheth his disciples hereof, that they might acquaint those Christians among the Jews the survivers, that when they should see these things drawing nigh, they might by no meanes delay, but speedily be gone (as Eliah said to Ahab before the storm, 1 King. 18. 44.) that the shower stop you not: or as the Angels said to Lot, Gen. 19. 17. escape for your lives, look not behinde you, neither stay in all the plaine, escape to the mountaine, lest you be consumed, and the storme overtake you. Remember Lots wife, Luke 17. 32.

V. 21. Such as was not, &c.] To that nation, Luke 21. 23. Exod. 9. 24. Luke receiteth some kindes of those tribulations under the name of the dayes of vengeance upon the Jews; to wit, that they should fall by the edge of the sword, be led away captive into all nations, &c. which accordingly came upon them.

V. 22. No flesh be saved] He speaketh of the calamity of the Jews (as may appear in that our Saviour said, Luke 21. 23. there shall be great distresse in the land, and wrath upon this people) and in his speech relateth to the same; the meaning is, none of the Jewes should be saved from that slaughter, except the Lord should shorten those dayes of affliction before mentioned: flesh is by a figure, taken for mankind, and here, as Jer. 12. 12. and 45. 5. for the Jews.

for the Elects sake] For the Elects sake. διὰ τοὺς ἐκλεκτούς. Theophylatt, of themselves; or, which were among the Jews which should perish.

those dayes shall be shortned] He meaneth τὰς θλίψεις καὶ τὸν πόλεμον. Theophylatt, those (dayes of) afflictions and wars, which were coming on the Jews: had they long continued, they must have all perished by the sword and famine: but they had a speedier end of their calamities; the obstinate impiety of reprobates provoked Gods justice, to have continued them long; but his mercy prevailed for the Elects sake to shorten them, and quickly end that bloody war, by giving the Roman a speedy conquest: so that Jerusalem was taken in five moneths, or there about; which could have been, but that the seditious citizens burnt up their own store of corn. See Joseph de bel. Jud. l. 6 c. 1. and the many fortified towns in Judea and Galilee, were taken in a year and halfe: which was then imputed to the hand of God, favouring and prospering the Roman; Joseph q. l. 3. c. 11. l. 7. c. 16. all which God did for his truth and Elects sake: for from that miserable slaughter, Jerusalem being rendred, there escaped above four hundred thousand persons. Joseph q. l. 7. c. 15. which were dispersed among the nations.

V. 23. Then if any man, &c.] Mark 13. 21. Luke 17. 23. Then when Satan shall be loosed, Rev. 20. 3. and become a lying Spirit, in the mouths of seducing impostors. See 1 Kings 21. 22. 2 Cor. 11. 13, 14, 15. 2 Thess. 2. 9. &c. Rev. 12. 12. Wherefore men ought not to give credit to whatsoever men seem in excellency, or authority, if they preach otherwise unto you, than that you have received, let them be accursed, Gal. 1. 8. hear them not.

V. 24. false christs] Either such as John calleth Antichrists, 1 John 2. 18. or such as shall feign and call themselves Christ.

false Prophets] Those who teach lyes; falsely interpreting and applying the word of God to sinister and impious ends: as do Sectaries, Schismaticks, and Hereticks: men pretending to much godlinesse and gifts, with power to exercise the same in the Ministry, to which God calleth them not: to their opposition of the truth of Christ denominated, and therefore them false, and their usurping the Ministry, Prophets, but false ones; and therefore not to be heard of those that love the truth that they may be saved: See 2 Thess. 2. 10, 11. 12. for otherwise they could be but false and erring laicks, or people, they had not so much as a semblance of Prophets. Some understand here the false Prophet, mentioned, Rev. 16. 13. and some, Mahomet.

shew great] μεγάλα σημεῖα: they shall give, or openly shew forth: so the Hebrewes use their word נתן nathan.

signes] That is, lying wonders; as, 2 Thess. 2. 9. Revel. 13. 13.

deceive the very Elect] Not among the Jews onely, but among the Gentiles also, called to the faith of Christ, which they did dangerously attempt, by their specious pretences, and shews of extraordinary zeal and godlinesse: for, as Minucius Felix saith, incauta credulitas circumveniuntur ab his quos bonos putaverunt, the incautious-ly-credulous are circumvented of these, whom they thought to be good men.

V. 25. Behold I have told you before] That your selves by this forewarning, may be armed against their delusions, and may not be troubled, when you shall see so many falling away from the truth, and giving heed to the spirit of errour. See John 16. 14.

V. 26. He is in the desert] That is, Christ, or his true Church where he is present, is in the separation, and among those who withdraw themselves from the publick professours of Christianity: for those false Christs, and their instruments, used to draw men and women out into the desarts, where they might more securely, and without discovery or resistance, make head, and gather congregations.

in the secret chambers] In the inward rooms, and private places, apt for conveniciles: it is true, honesta semper publice gaudent, scelera secreta sunt: things honest ever rejoyce in being publick, impieties are secret: which though it be not always so because the best are most perfected and suppresst, and God is just in bringing wickednesse to light; yet ever the good would appear, and the vitious would be concealed.

V. 27. As the lightning] They need not seek Christ, his kingdom, or coming to judgement, in this or that peculiar place; he will appear like the lightning in a moment to the startled world.

V. 28. For wheresoever] Luke 17. 37. A proverb used concerning things every where alike: the meaning is, it will be found of those who look after it.

V. 29. Immediatly after] The like calamities shall befall the Roman Empire, that had by them afflicted the Jews before. See Revel. 6. 12, 13. These things may be spoken allegorically: as, Isaiah 13. 10. & 24. 23. Ezek 32. 7. Joel 2. 10. 31. & 3. 15. Job 30. 28. Jerem. 15. 9. Amos 8 9. Some understand it literally to be fulfilled a little before, or at the last day; but that useth not so to be described, but by fire, 2 Pet. 3. 12. others take these things literally for strange sights in the heaven, either before the destruction of Jerusalem, or before the day of judgement: of which time they who understand it conceive that he saith, immediately, that men may ever watch and provide for his coming: as, Phil. 4. 5. Heb. 10. 37. 2 Pet. 3 8. or immediately after the troubles of the Church under Antichrist, which some think intended in the former verses, as, 2 Thes. 2. 8. or after the great troubles of the Church. Rev. 20. 7 8. 9. whereof these Jewish or Gentile troubles might be a foregoing signe: some think the certainty of the thing here intended, and not the neerneste of time. See on verse 33.

shall the sun be darkned] Mark 13. 24. Luke 21. 25. See on Acts 2 19. certainly he foreetelleth the signes which shall precede the last day: but how the sunne shall be darkned, the moon obscured, or the stars fall, it is rather to be expected than defined by us.

the powers of the heavens] The spheres and stars of heaven; except we take it allegorically, as some do.

V. 30. signe of the Son of man] Such as shall testify that Christ is coming to judge: what that signe shall be, whether some extraordinary comet, as some conjecture, or the signe of the crosse, or some other glorious light; the Scripture not determining, we should but vainly enquire.

all the tribes of the earth] All families and kindreds: it is an allusion to the Jews distributed into tribes.

shall mourn] They shall be in such sorrow, that they shall smite on their breasts, as with horrour of heart; and confusion of face, by reason of those grievous and inevitable judgements then upon them, for their contempt and abuse of this Gospel. See on Luke 21. 26.

They shall see the Son of man] Rev. 1. 7. At his last coming, sitting on the clouds, as on a throne of glory, chap. 25. 31. Acts 1. 9. 11. 1 Thes. 1. 17.

with power] With all the holy Angels attending him, 1 Thes. 4. 17. chap. 16. 27. & 25. 31.

and great glory] With a visible brightnesse; and divine Majesty.

V. 31. And he shall send his angels] See 1 Thes. 4. 16. and chap. 13. 41. That is, his holy Angels, who are his ministring spirits, sent forth to minister for them that shall be heirs of salvation. Heb. 1. 14. this he here speaketh to comfort his, against the terrour of that most dreadful day of the Lord, which shall come as a snare and destruction upon all the children of disobedience. See Luke 21. 28. 1 Thes. 4. 18.

with a great sound of a trumpet] Or with a trumpet and a great voice: as, Exod. 19. 19. & 20. 18. See Psal. 47. 5. 1 Cor. 15. 52. 1 Thes. 4. 16.

shall gather together] As the manner was to gather the people together with a trumpet, Numb. 10. 2.

from the four windes] From all quarters of the world. See Isa. 43. 5, 6. Rev. 7. 1 Zech. 2. 6. See on chap. 8. 11.

from one end of heaven] In respect of our sight: otherwise, heaven is round, and hath no end. See Psal. 19. 6. Deut. 4. 32. & 28. 64. from east to west, from north to south.

V. 32 yet tender] In the spring, when the sap riseth, and shooteth out into the branches. See on Mark 13. 28.

putteth forth leaves] Cant. 2. 13.

V. 33. When ye shall see these things] When ye shall see these things befall the Jews, look for those things which shall shortly after befall the rest of the world also: for the one is the forerunner of the other, as the putting forth of the leaves of the fig-tree, is of the summer. Or when ye shall see those extraordinary things mentioned, verse 29. look for Christs coming to judgement speedily.

is near] The coming of the Son of man, Christ Jesus, verse 30. or trouble is near coming on the Gentiles, when Jerusalem is destroyed: then it is neer, as it were certain at the door. See Gen. 4. 7. Iam. 5. 9. Phil. 4. 5. Rev. 1. 3.

V. 34. this generation shall not passe] Some alive shal see all fulfilled that I have spoken, concerning the destruction of Jerusalem, and the troubles accompanying it.

all these things] That are shortly to come, opposed to that day, verse 36. where he speaketh of the last day.

V. 35 heaven and earth shall passe away] Mark 13. 31. may sooner passe away, than any of my words prove false: as chap. 5. 18. Luke 16. 17. Isa. 54. 9, 10. Pet. 3. 10.

V. 36. of that day] Of the day of judgement, and of the end of world of which, verse 30. 31. which was expected of all Gods people, 2 Tim. 1. 18.

hour] The time and season, 1 Thes. 5. 1. hour taken at large, as 1 John 2. 18. Rev 3. 10. & 14. 7, 15.

knoweth no man] God hath hidden that day and hour from us, that we might never be secure, but always prepared for it; ut pendulo expectativnis incerto mens solicitita---adventui diem semper expectans, semper expectando speraret, &c. Hilar. de trin. l. 9. that the minde solicitous with a pendulous uncertainty, always expecting the day of his coming, might in expecting always hope for it, and have a watchfull care against that uncertain, certain hour. So saith our Saviour, be ye also prepared, because ye know not what hour the Son of man will come. See Luke 12. 40.

not the angels of heaven] Much lesse sinful men on earth, who are far below them in knowledge.

V. 37. for as in the dayes of Noah] Gen. 7. See on Luke 17. 26.

so shall also the coming &c.] That came suddenly when the secure world thought of nothing less; and so also shall Christs coming be, to judgement, when the secure world least expected him, 2 Pet. 3. 10. 1 Thes. 5. 2, 3.

V. 38. they were eating and drinking] Men were then also given to brutish sensuality, and secure luxury, as here, verse 49. φαγοντες καὶ πίνοντες, eating by gnawing, which is proper to beasts: he reproveth luxury, not a sober use of the creatures. See on Luke 17. 27.

giving in marriage] See on chap. 22. 30.

V. 39. and knew not] Took no more notice of it, than if they had heard nothing at all of it, not believing what Noah had foretold.

took them all away All the secure unbelieving world; of which number Noah and his family were not.

so shall also] So unprepared shall men be at the day of judgement, as if they had never heard thereof: and many of them who cannot but believe, or at least fear it will come; yet vainly procrastinate, and put of their repentance and preparation from day to day, untill death and judgement suddenly come upon them, and finde them unprovided.

V. 40. Then shall two] See on Luke 17. 36.

in the field] At their harvest work, other labour in sowing, about their cattle, or other like employment.

the one] One of the two: they shall not be taken by families, as Noah was: but one friend shall be taken by Christ into heaven, and another left for the devil to carry into hell. Some think it also relateth to the destruction of Jerusalem.

shall be taken] As led by the hand out of the common danger and destruction: an allusion to Gen. 19. 16. the Syriack giveth by a word, which among other significations, importeth to lead out, or into, as John 16. 13. Rom. 8 14. or to take to ones self, John 14. 3. See on Luke 17. 36.

V. 41. two women] Bondwomen, or of the meanest condition, such as used to grind at the mill, Exod. 11. 5.

V. 42. watch therefore] Mark 13. 35. watching is enjoyned all Christians here, and Ministers after, verse 45. Luke 12. 41. we must by faith expect our Saviour perpetually, and be ready to receive him, verse 44. qui enim pœnitenti indulgentiam promisit, dissimulanti diem craftinam non proipondit, Prosper ep. for he that promised mercy to the penitent, hath not promised to morrow to the dissembling, So also Greg. hom. 12. in evang. we must therefore alwayes expect the last day, which we can never foresee.

V. 43. But know this] Luke 12. 39. 1 Thes. 5. 2. this you must necessarily know, except you are willingly ignorant: as 2 Pet. 3. 5. this is evident to common reason.

in what watch] Matth 14. 25. that is, in what hour of the night, which they divided into certain watches.

broken up] Digged through, as thieves use to do, Exodus 22. 2.

V. 44. such an hour as ye think not] Unlesse ye watch; for the Master of the house dreams not of the coming of the thief. The secure man thinketh not of the suddain coming of Christ which will be more terrible.

V. 45. who then is] Luke 22. 42. See note thereon: as if he said, Faithful Prelates are but rare, but ever blessed, as verse 46. such a one is, as Theophylatt ex presseth him, σπάνιός ἐστι καὶ θυσιαστὸν, rare and hard to be found.

ruler over his] As a Pastor over the flock, or a steward of the mysteries of God, 1 Cor. 4. 1. See on Luke 12. 42.

household] Over his servants, sui & familiæ suæ, over his service, or over the rest of his servants, familitium, interpreted, Theophylatt, over the sons of his house, or family: Syr. over his domestical servants.

to give them meat] As Gods steward: that is to preach the doctrine and knowledge of Christ, which like those five loaves which Christ blessed, is not diminished, but encreased by giving out to many, or like the widows oyl, 2 Kings 4. encreased, onely by pouring out.

V. 46. blessed, &c.] Happy shall they be, if they persevere in their faithfull diligence, and care for the people of God: though perhaps they may suffer many unworthy things of a present impious world, as the Prophets, Apostles, Martyrs, and most faithful Ministers, ever did; yet happy shall they be when Christ, appearing to call them from hence, shall finde them vigilant over the flock committed to their charge.

V. 47. Ruler

V. 47. ruler over all his goods] All that he hath: of a steward he will make him overseer of all his estate, Gen. 36. 4, 6. he shall advance him to a greater command and dignity. See Revel. 2. 26. and here verse 45. the meaning is, he shall reign with Christ, and be partaker of the riches of his grace, and blessedness.

V. 48. that evil servant] But if the evil steward neglect the salvation of the people, if he tyrannize over them.

say in his heart] If he think with himself, Psal 14. 1.

my lord delayeth his coming] It will be long ere he comes: as 2 Pet. 3. promising himself a long life, and time to repent in, and to make his peace. So securely contemning and abusing the long sufferings and patience of God; presuming to do any violence and injury to Gods people, because he doth not presently appear against them, and their impiety.

V. 49. to smite] To exercise any kinde of cruelty on his fellow-servants (by virtue of his authority) for whose good and welfare he was put into that office, which therefore he ought to have had the more care of, 1 Pet. 4. 10.

with the drunken] If he give lewd example of luxury and intemperance, making him scandalous, his ministery lesse effectual, and the very doctrine he preacheth despicable, to causing the name of God to be blasphemed.

V. 50. when he looketh not for him] Of which (day) he thought not, saith the Syriack interpreter: the judgements of God are not so much as in the thought of the wicked: they cry, peace, peace, till sudden destruction come upon them, then are they the most dejected men of the world. See 1 Samuel 28. 20. and Daniel 5. 1, 2, 6, 7.

V. 51. cut him asunder] Διχοτομήσει αὐτὸν, cut him in two pieces; either by renting his soul from his body; or body and soul cast out of Gods blessed presence, divided him from the elect to damnation. See on Luke 12. 46.

his portion with hypocrites] He shall have greater punishment than ordinary: as also hypocrites must expect; because counterfeit sanctity is double iniquity. See Job 20. 29. Psalm 11. 6. weeping, &c.] Matth. 8. 12. & 13. 42. 50. & 22, 13.

CHAP. XXV.

Verse 1. THen] The evangelist prosecutes the conclusion of Christs last sermon, concerning his glorious and sudden appearance to judgement, and our duty in watching, lest that day finde us unprepared, or unfaithful in our duties: then, in the day of Christs coming, mentioned Chap. 24. 51.

the kingdom of heaven] The Church in this world, Greg. hom. 12. in Evang. as Matth. 13. 41. or the condition of men in the Church of God.

virgins] The custome then was to make marriage feasts in the night: the bridegroom used to come with a choice company of young men, which were called the children of the bridechamber, chap. 9. 15. certain virgins of the acquaintance or kinred of the bride, used to go meet the bridegroom, attending him unto the wedding house: to which custom Psal. 45. 14. alludeth; she shall be brought unto the king, in raiment of needle work; the virgins her companions that follow her shall be brought unto thee: by virgins here are signified pure souls, as 2 Cor. 11. 2, 3.

which took their lamps, and went forth] They carryed them forth (as the custome then was) lighted for the service of the bridegroom and his train; in which there was both solemnity, and accommodation of light for the company passing by the way.

V. 2. Five of them] He faith not this to intimate that there were as many wise or good men, as wicked which are truly foolish: the whole world (unregenerate) lieth in wickednesse, 1 John 5. 19. but he simply noteth the difference, in an equal condition; in which all Christians alike, professe their hope of salvation by Christ, and their expectation of him to judge the living and the dead: yet among these there is much difference, some truely believe, some are hypocrites: some professe in words onely, but not in heart, having a forme of Godlinesse, but denying the power thereof: they confesse they expect a judgement, but live as if they thought in their hearts there were no God to call them to account. See Psal. 14. 1. &c. none but the foolish can think, and do thus; or hope to impose on Gods all-seeing justice: but they are wise, who truely fear God, and endeavour to serve him faithfully (Psal. 111. 10.) though there are but few such.

were wise] So shewed they themselves such, in providing timely for their present employment.

were foolish] These shewed themselves such, in neglecting the main, for which they were called, and came together: such are they, who professing faith in Christ, yet prepare not themselves against his coming. For as Augustine saith, de verb. Domini serm. 23. these are not qualescunque animæ, fed tales, quæ habent catholicam fidem, & habere videntur bona opera in Ecclesia Dei, not every, or any soul, but such as have (or professe) the Catholique faith, and seem to have good works in the Church of God. In his 120. epistle to Honoratus, he interpreteth this something neerer, of men (altenâ laude lætantibus, & propter ipsam inanem laudem, non propter conscientiam suam; ubi illis testis est Deus, bona operantibus) rejoycing in others praising them, and doing good, not for their conscience sake, where God is their witnesse, but for vain praise of men.

V. 3. took their lamps] By which is represented, profession of faith and sanctity.

but not oyl] Besides that which was burning, and spent ere the bridegroom came, verse 8. that is, they had no good works of faith, (charity and sanctity) without which faith is dead, and inactive. See Galat. 5. 6. James 2. 26. so Jerom on this place saith, they have no oyl, who seem to confesse the Lord with like faith: sed virtutum opera negligunt, but neglect good works.

V. 4. oyl in their vessels] In their lamps: the meaning is, they prepared to meet Christ, with faith, repentance, and charity; which is, (as Jerom saith) lumen indefinens, a light which shall never fail, or go out: See 1 Corinth. 13. 8. faith shall end in this enjoying, but charity shall be perfected, not ended in heaven: this oyl then is that which the Apostle speaketh of, 2 Corinth. 1. 12. the testimony of their consciences: this is to carry oyl with them, not to buy of those that sell, that is of flatterers, Augustine ep. 120. who do good, ut laudetur Deus, that God may be praised.

V. 5. while the bridegroom tarried] It was not a little time, inter priorem & secundum adventum vomini, Jerom, between the first and second coming of the Lord Christ: Christs coming must be expected with holy patience, Habak. 2. 3. Mora sponsi pœnitentia temporis est. Hilar. can. 27. the bridegrooms tarrying is the time of repentance.

all slumbred] Some died (as Jerom interpreteth) others after long attendance, and expectation, began to be pollished with secular cares, distracting their thoughts from a present watch; and lookers for Christ; so Augustine ep. 120. which slumber, elect and reprobates are in severall degrees, subject to. Good men are at reprobates are in severall degrees, subject to. Good men are at some times somewhat more negligent than they should be; but they always keep a good conscience, and an heart prepared, in some good measure to receive Christ, Acts 23. 1. and 24. 16. 2 Corinth 1. 12. Cant. 5. 2 their fecurity is but of infirmity, and their estate was made sure before; the carnal and worldly have, at best, but the lamps of profession, and want the oyl and substance of religion, that is, the power thereof, 1 Tim. 1. 5. 2 Tim 3. 5.

V. 6. at midnight] Subitò quasi intempestâ nocte. & fecuris omnibus, suddenly, as in the still of the night, Jerom, Euthymius, because he will come ἀνάπτως, unexpected, as Theophylact speaketh: or Hilary can. 27. cunctis ignorantibus, in a time which none as knows; Christ will come when he is least looked for: as the bridegroom came at midnight, later than the usuall manner was.

a cry made] This is generally understood, by Chrysostome, Theophylact, Euthimius, Jerom, Hililary, &c. of the voice of the Archangell, and the trumpet of God, to awaken all, even those who are in gel, and the trumpet of God, to awaken all, even those who are in the graves, and depths of the seas, of which John 5. 29. 1 Thes. 4. 16. 1 Cor. 15. 52. which is most certainly true: but this circumstance relateth also to the custom, and accommodation of the parable: and in the substance of the matter, we may understand this noise, to be also the voice and importunity of them, who exhort, and admonish us to prepare, and meet Christ.

the bridegroom cometh] Christ cometh: so will he do by his divine providence and comforting spirit to call us hence at our death and day of judgement.

V. 7. trimmed their lamps] Which is to be understood of the wise virgins, the foolish carried onely dead lamps, without that which Christ commanded, chap. 5. 16. an allusion to Exod. 30. 8. 2 King. 9. 30.

V. 8. gone out] Or going out, which in the temple should not be, Exod 27. 20. the moral whereof was, we ought to persevere in faith and sanctity, chapter 24. 13. Revel. 2. 10. Colos. 1. 23. Hebr. 3. 14.

V. 9. not so, lest there be not enough for us and you] Not fearing the failing of their own store, as if they were uncertain of their own salvation, but because (as Jerom saith) neque possunt in die judicii aliorum virtutes, aliorum vitia sublevare, in the day of judement, the vertues of the one cannot relieve the vices of the other: See Ezek. 14. 14. & 18. 20. so saith Augustine ep. 120. Non desperanter, sed humiliter dictum est, it is not (by them) spoken despairingly, but humbly; for who can so presume on his own confidence, that he can be certain, that it can sufffice him in Gods judgment, except the merciful God iudge in mercy, not the rigour of justice, in which none can stand? Psal. 143. 2.

go ye rather] Not that the just shall send the wicked at the day of judgement to purchase grace: but it shewes that they who neglect to get it here, have no meanes left to get any then: so Elijah mocks the priests of Baal. 1 Kings 18. 27.

buy] Isaiah 55. 1. Revel 3. 18. This word seemeth here inserted, only for the accommodation of the parable.

for your selves] Every one must be saved by his own faith, Rom. 1. 17. Rom. 14. 12. 22. Gal. 6. 4.

V. 10. while they went to buy] This is spoken to shew us, that (as there was no manna to be found on the sabbath) so shall there be no place for repentance and good works in death: and that the faithful onely, who in a carefull watch, continually expect the coming of Christ, shall be saved. See Job 14. 14. Luke 12. 37.

the doore was shut] They who neglect Gods call, and are not ready when he cometh, shall be shut out of the gate of mercy, Psal. 95. 11. here life is gotten or lost to eternity. They that were ready with their lamps burning, that is, with faith and good works, as Augustine forecited, interpreteth, went into eternal joy with Christ, the rest were shut out.

V. 11. Lord, Lord] Chap. 7. 22, & 25. 37.

open to us] To wit the door of mercy: receive us also.

V. 12. I know you not] Chap. 7. 23. the Lord knoweth who are his, 2 Tim. 2. 19. but he will not own those in judgement, who will not own and obey him now, when he offereth mercy. Admirable is the power of faithful prayer, and timely repentance; but as Jerom saith, quid prodest, voce invocare, quem operibus negas? what availeth it to invocate him with thy voice, whom thou denyest in thy works? See Psalm 50. 15, 16. Esaus too late tears shew us the danger of deferring repentance and conversion unto God. See Hebr. 3. 13, 15. 2 Corinth. 6. 2. Eccles. 12. 1.

V. 13, watch therefore] Chap. 24. 42. Mark 13. 33.

V. 14. as a man travelling into a far, &c.] Luke 19. 12. hereby is intended Christs ascension into heaven, and abiding there till the day of judgement, chap. 21. 33.

delivered unto them his goods] Put them into several offices, and places for the good of his Church, Ephes. 4. 11. 12.

V. 15, five talents] Of a talent. See 1 Chron. 22. 14.

according to his several ability] According to the skil and wisdom in dealing which was given them, 1 Corinth. 12. 7. according as he knew they had knowledge to manage that which was entrusted to them: this ὑπάρχειν, the Syr. interpreter giveth, juxta facultatem suam. Jerom, secundum propriam virtutem, that is, as his self interpreteth, pro accipientium viribus, according to the abilities of the receivers: who yet considereth not in his servants, so much luceri magnitudinem, the greatnesse of the gain, as studii voluntatem, the willingnesse of their care and endeavour. Prosper noteth well here, de vocat. Gent. l. 2. c. 8. he gave according to their proper abilities, sed non secundum proprium meritum, but not according to their proper merit. In the one, two, or five talents, we must understand the diversities of Gods gifts, which are not all conferred on any one man. See Ephes. 4. 11. 1 Cor. 12. 7. 11. 29. Rom. 12. 6. 1. Cor. 4. 2.

V. 16. traded with the same] Was laborious in his calling, according to his gifts.

made them other five talents] Encreased his gifts by using them to the benefit of others, and did twice so much good, as before his imployment. See 2 Tim 1. 6. the power and fruit of Gods graces in us, is in their use to his glory, and the gaining of souls to Christ: he shall be judged a faithfull servant, who so employeth them. See Rom. 15, 15, 16. such were the Prophets and Apostles.

V. 17. likewise he that had received two] He means those who are of meaner gifts and measures of grace, (as were, and are the succeeding ministers of Christ, not assisted, as the Apostles with infallibility of Spirit) who have not that admirable evidence of spirit, and largeness of heart, yet of a measure which God maketh sufficient to gain souls; these are also accepted of God as faithfull servants, if they do, as Peter said, as every one hath received the gifts, even so minister the same one to another, as good stewards of the manifold grace of God, 1 Peter 4. 10. if they who are of mean gifts, be faithfull and diligent, God accepteth their will and endeavour.

V. 18. digged in the earth] Importing those Ministers, who for shame, sloth, or fear, will not exercise the gifts they have: or any other, who receive Gods grace in vain: against which the Apostle exhorts, 2 Corinth. 6. 1. which concerneth both teachors, and hearers.

V. 19. a long time after] In the end Christ will come and call men to account; meaning in the general, from Christs ascension into heaven, unto his coming again to judge: this time hath already been more than 1614. years: in particular, the life of man, the remainder whereof is very uncertain.

cometh and reckoneth with them] Christ will certainly come again to judge every man: therefore it behoveth us to live, as every hour expecting him: he will call every one to a strict account, how we have imployed his gifts: how carefull ought we to be, how we use our time, health, strength, understanding, offices, or authority; these all are our masters talents, and he will once bring us to an account of their improvement.

V. 20. other five talents] See on verse 16. The Hebrew talent of the Sanctuary, conteined an hundred Hebrew pounds, whereof every one was sixty sicles or shekels: a shekel was about half an ounce in weight, and in value about four groates, or denarii, at which rate, it amounteth to 400. pound, but the common Hebrew talent was about half so much. Some say the talent of silver was 375. pound sterling, but the talent of gold 3750. pound, See notes on 1 King. 20. 39. 2 King. 23. 33.

V. 21. over a few things] In a smal charge, Luke 16. 18.

over many] I will prefer thee: as men do servants whom they have found faithfull. See on Chap. 24. 47.

into the joy of thy lord] Come and receive the fruit of my bounty, the reward of thy fidelity. See verse 34.

V. 24. which had received one talent] He is also called to account, as well as they that had received more talents, that no man may think to be excused from giving account by the meanneste of his place or partes.

that thou art an hard man] He would (as hypocrites, and evill servants use to do) transfuse the fault from himself to his master: one of Adams sons, Genes. 3. 12. but indeed, God is (as Augustine saith well Armentario, ep 45.) benignus exactor, non egenus: & qui non exigit ea reddidit, sed in se crescere facit reddituros: a bountiful exactor, not a needy: and who encreaseth not by things rendered to him, but who encreaseth the renderers in themselves.

V. 25. Lo thou hast that is thine] Chap. 20. 14.

V. 26. His lord answered] By this answer he signifieth that they have no excuse for their sloth, who suppresse Gods gifts and spend their time unprofitably, or that murmur, and lay their defects in duty on Gods providence; whereas it is most true which Prosper saith, de vocat. Gent. lib. 2. cap. 1. nec damnati justa querimonia, nec justificati veræ sit arrogantiæ si vel ille dicat non meruisse se pœnam, vel iste asserat meruisse se gratiam; neither is the complaint of the damned just, neither the arrogance of the justified veritable; if either he faith, he hath not deserved the punishment, or this affirm that he hath deserved grace.

thou wicked and slothful servant] By these sharp and yet well deserved reproofs, that appears, which Prosper faith, de vocat. Gent. lib. 2. cap. 8. that not onely, de non servato, sed de non auctio mutuo damnantur; for that men have not kept, but because they have not encreased the gift, they shall be condemned.

thou knewest] Were it as thou sayest; thou shouldst have been the more careful to please me: and art now the more unexcusable by thine own confession, chap. 12. 37. Luke 19. 22.

V. 27. to the exchangers] Such as kept banks, to take mens moneys, and make profit thereof for them: the meaning is, thou oughtest to have committed it to the hearers who bringing forth fruits, would have rendred me the interest of good works: so Jerom, Chrysostome, Hilary, Euthymius, and others, understand here by usury.

V. 28. take therefore the talent from him] God justly takes away his gifts, from those that abuse, or make no good use of them: understand this of those gifts or graces which are common to elect and reprobates; as gifts; or parts of nature, or art, office, charge, &c. for the gifts and graces of regeneration are ἀμεταμέλητα, Rom. 11. 29. such as God never repenteth of, or recalleth, see John 16. 22. God sometime taketh away that which therein men seem to have, Luke 8. 18. when by pulling of their vizards, he discovereth their hypocrisie; making it appear to the world, that their pretences to faith and good works, were but semblances and false shadows of things which had no being and give it unto him which hath ten] Not that the elect shall have or receive any good from the reprobate: but because their reward in heaven shall be to great; as if the happinesse which seemed due to all others, in mans judgement must accrew to them, and be put on their accompt.

V. 29. for unto every one] Chap. 13. 12. Mark 4. 25. Luke 8. 18.

V. 30. the unprofitable servant] He must be condemned though he did not waste his Masters goods, because he did not encrease them by his using them: see the reason hereof, 1 Cor. 12. 7.

into utter darknesse] See on Chap. 8. 12.

weeping and, &c.] See on Chap. 24. 51.

V. 31. when the son of man] Christ, God and man.

in his glory] Not in the form of a servant, as before, but as a judge, most glorious and dreadfull appearing with incomprehensible glory, see chap. 24. 30. Dan. 7. 9. 10. Mark 13. 26 Col. 3. 4.

and all the holy angels] An allusion to Zech 14. 5. now he hath a few poor men to attend him; then all the glorious angels that administer unto him, their Lord.

sit upon the throne] As a man on some visible throne: or he shall judge all, as they that sit on thrones.

V. 32. shall be gathered] Chap. 24. 31. before him, to be judged by him.

he shall seperate them] This separation of good from bad, is set out by a similitude of fanning, chap 3. 12. of the tares, chap. 13. 30. of the draw net, chap. 13 48 here by parting the sheep and goats, that signifieth the elect and reprobates; the flock of Christ, his Church (Luke 12. 32) in this life, is like the flock at Padan Aram, Genes. 30. 32. speckled and spotted (see Judg. 12 23.

12. 23. 2 Pet. 2. 13.) but in the life to come, they shall be as a flock of sheep which go up from the washing (Cant. 6. 6.) without spot or wrincle—holy and without blemish: Eph. 5. 27. here, tares and wheat grow up together. Matth. 13. 30. but in the worlds harvest, the day of judgement, they shall be parted.

one from another] Not one nation from another: but one man from another. See chap. 24. 31. 40. 41.

sheep from the goats] An allusion to Ezek. 34. 17.

V. 33. sheep on his right hand] Right hand and left imply good and bad, Eccles. 10. 2. or blessing and cursing as Genesim bare southward, which is on the right hand, when you look to the sunrising, (that was the mountain of blessing, Deut. 27. 12.) and Ebal on the north, (that was the mountain of cursing) verse 13 which is on the left hand.

V. 34 the king] Christ, Revel. 19. 16. King of kings and Lord of lords, Rev. 17. 14. 1 Tim. 6. 15. the king eternal, immortal, invisible, the only wise God, 1 Tim. 1. 17. 19.

come] Draw neer to me: be not afraid of my majesty. The word δεῦτε, come, is here a word of singular favour and love, gratiously inviting the elect to the full fruition of eternal blessednes, in their conjunction with Christ, and participation of his immence goodnesse, so Chap. 11. 28. δεῦτε πρός με, come unto me, such words Tobu once said to Jonadab, 2 King. 10. 15, 16. when he took him up to him into his charet, is thy heart right as my heart? δεῦτε μετ' ἐμοῦ come with me.

ye blessed of my father] Whom my Father loves: to whom my Father meaneth to give the kingdom of heaven and interminable blessednesse therein.

inherit] For heaven comes to no man by natural descent, but divine adoption: not by merit, but free gift, Rom. 6 23. it is an inheritance given to Gods children by adoption in Christ. See 1 Pet. 1 3 4. 1 Pet. 3. 9. Ephes. 2, 8.

the kingdom] Not an earthly; but such, as that in respect thereof all earthly kingdoms, are prisons and vasallages.

prepared] By God the Father, chap. 20. 23. 1 Cor. 2. 9. Heb. 11. 16.

for you] You onely, who are his elect. Luke 12. 32.

from the foundation of the world] Chap. 13. 15. Luke 11. 50 Rev. 13 8. Ephes. 1. 4. 1 Pet. 1. 20. 2 Tim 1. 9.

V. 35. for I was an hungred] Christ taketh that which is done for his poor servants, as done unto himself: and this reward of mercy, is not for their own sakes, or merit of the giver, but as they are members of Christ: and because Christ will justifie these by faith, which worketh by love and charity.

ye gave me meat] We need none other arguments to incite us to give to the poor saints, if we understood and firmly believed this one: he that giveth to an hungry soul (which is a servant of Christ) feeds; teedeth Christ in that alms.

V. 36. naked, and ye clothed me] In se assumit bonas operationes nostras, ad hoc, ut præstet nobis retributionem bonorum suorum, Irenæus. l. 4. cap. 34. he taketh on himself our good works, that he may yeild us a retribution of his goods: he accepteth what we do for the poor, as done to himself, not that he wants, but ad nobis propter nos fieri vult (saith the same) he will have us to do it for our own sakes: neither may we look hereon, as meritorious works of men. but as being the certain fruits and effects of true faith, apprehending his merits, by which we shall be saved: which being his gift, Ephes. 2. 8. he doth but crown his own gifts in us: so true is that of Bernard: meritum meum misericordia Domini est: my merit is Gods mercy: as likewise that which Prosper saith, de vocat. Gent. lib. 2. cap. 1. Neminem indebitè damnans, neminem debitè liberans; nostra plectens tam punit noxios, sua tribuens cum facit justos, condemning no man unduely, freeing or acquitting no man duely (or according to his desertes) punishing that which is ours, when he correcteth, giving that which is his own when he justifieth or maketh men righteous. Consider you oppressours, if they shall be damned, who fed not, and clothed not Christs poor, what hope of pardon have you, who take their bread from their mouths, and their clothes, and all temporall comforts from them: consider you merciful to your comfort, that whatsoever you have done for Christs poor, you have done for Christ, who is not unfaithful to forget the labour of your love.

V. 37. the righteous] These whom he called blessed, verse 34. now he calls righteous, for God will make all them righteous here, whom he intends to make blessed hereafter, Luke 14. 14. Revel. 20. 6.

when saw we thee, &c.] In thine own person: these answer as those, who se lest hand knew not what their right hand did, chap. 6. 3. the holy ever think humbly of their own works: and such shal be that bounty of Christs rewarding, that the receivers shall admire it as in. comparably more than due to them.

V. 40. unto one of the least &c.] Or, unto one of these my brethren, which are the least; that is, which are least fee by in the eyes of the world. It is a greater token of love, to do good to his, for his sake, when he is absent, than to do it to him, if he were present: and that which is done to a mean Christian for his sake, shall be rewarded as well, as that which was done to an Apostle, chap. 10. 41 42. for Christ here counteth the meanest Christian, as well as the most excellent, his brethren.

V. 41. Depart] Chap. 7. 23. Psalm 6. 8. to be deprived of Gods blessed presence, is a chief part of the misery of the damned. Depart, signifieth not an absolute going from Gods presence, for he is omnipresent, none can go from his presence, no, not when they go to the damned in hell. See Psalm 139. 7, 8, 9. Amos 9. 2, 3, 4. Hebr. 4. 13. but this is spoken in opposition to that, verse 34. come ye blessed; and to command them away to the place of execution of Gods just judgement.

from me] None unclean, and defiled with the guilt of uncleanfed sinne, shall enter into heaven, the presence of Christ. See 1 Cor. 6. 9, 10. Rev. 21. 27 the wicked shall not have any part of happinesse with him, but shall be turned into hell, Psal. 9. 17. to be punished in everlasting destruction with the devils, 2 Thes. 1. 9.

into everlasting fire] Incorruption, and immortality shal be even to the bodies of the wretched cast-awayes, so that nec ipsi æternam pœnam finiant, nec ipsos consumat immortalis pœna, sed punitat, Prosper de vit. contemplat. l. 3. neither shall they end their eternal punishment, neither shal immortal pain consume, but still torment them. See on verse 46.

V. 42. ye gave me no meat] They that feed not the poor shall go to hell; what torments shall be to them, who by fraud, violence, or any whatsoever pretence, take away from them, and undo, and beggar them and theirs?

V. 43. sick, and in prison, and ye visited me not] If they shall be damned (whatsoever an impious world think or say to the contrary) who neglected to comfort the sick, and the prisoners; how dreadful who neglected to comfort the sick, and the prisoners; how dreadful and heavy shall their judgement be, who afflict the servants of Christ, cast them into prison, or with heavy exactions take from them their means of comfort? there remaineth yet one way for them to escape the severe, and otherwise inevitable wrath of a just God; that is, by true and timely repentance; which is not onely in saying, God be merciful to me; but in restitution, and present repairing those whom they have injured or oppressed, after the example of Zacheus, Luke 19. 8, 9. and the converted jaylor, Acts 16. 30, 31, 33 34 who brought Paul and Silas out of the dungeon, and washing their stripes which he had given them, see meat before them, and wherein he could comforted them.

V. 44. When saw we thee, &c.] See on verse 37. The scope hereof is to shew, that what ever the damned shall plead in judgement for their justification or excuse before God nothing can hold: as they, they might possibly think and in mans judicature, it might have much availed to clear them in point of not relieving Christ, it being manifest, that they never saw him, neither lived neer that age of Christ on earth; but in Gods judgement it can nothing help them which have neglected to relcive the poor, for whom God offereth himself a surety, Prov. 19 17. and concerning whose relief he giveth many commands, Deut. 15. 7, 8. &c. See Psal. 41. 1. Isaiah 58. 7.

V. 45. to one of the least] Let all oppressours now take to heart these words, which, will they nill they, they shall hear in their judgement: the injuries which are done to the least, meanest, or poorest servant of Christ (however men despise, or judge them evil, it skilleth not) he taketh as done to his own sacred person, See Acts 9. 4. because then, the wisest of the sons of men are not able to determine, who are Christs: Gamaliels grave counsell, is most necessary for them Acts 5 38. Refrain from these men and let them alone, lest happily ye be found even to fight against God.

V. 46, These shall go away] See Dan 12 2. John 5. 29. Rev. 14. 11. & 20. 11. no appeal, traverse, or writ of error can be admitted in this Supreme Court of Gods justice, they shall go away not as men acquitted or enlarged, but as chained prisoners compelled. See chap. 13. 42. 50. they shall go away as Corah, Dathan and Abiram, and that which appertained to them, Numb. 16. 31. &c. hell opening her mouth and swallowing them up quick: in this dreadfull spectacle, the elect shall see the severity of God toward reprobates, and his clemency to themselves, Rom 11. 22. saying them, as a firebrand plucked out of the burning, Amos 4. 11.

into everlasting punishment] Which, verse 41. he calleth everlasting fire, in other places, hell, Gehenna, the worm which dyeth not, the lake burning with fire and brimstone, extream darkenesse, where shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth: certainly the most intense torments of body and soul, hopeless, helplesse endlesse: behold the end of sinne, specially oppression and cruelty.

but the righteous into life eternal] These shall go with Christ into heaven: in this life elect and reprobates are mixed together, like the tares and wheat, chap. 13. the separation shall be in the day of judgement; the reprobate shall live also, but to eternall punishment: to these (saith Augustine de spir & anim. cap. 56. mors est sine morte, finis sine fine) death is without death, and the end without end. (See on verse 41.) but the elect shall live in an endlesse, changeless, full, secure, and unspeakable happinesse, eternally filled with joy and glory.

CHAP.

CHAP. XXVI.

Verse 1. When Jesus had finished] All the forementioned speeches concerning the destruction of Jerusalem, and his glorious coming to judgement.

he said to his disciples] They only were now with him; to whom he would reveal the instancie of his passion, to enform them that he layed down his life for the elect, & foreknowing that which should befall him, he went willingly to jerusalem to do his Fathers will, concerning which he here enformeth them, to prevent the scandal, which might otherwise have dangerously shaken their faith, if they should have conceived his sufferings, fortuitous, compulsory, and involuntary. Which doctrine, though it was for the present, but like new-lowed seed under clods, no growth thereof yet appearing; it did, after the resurrection of Christ, spring up to maturity of faith and confidence in them, and those who since believe in that; there n appeareth the voluntary sacrifice for the remission of sins, and his admirable victory over death, which he so willingly encountered.

V. 2. You know] Mark 14. 1. Luke 22. 1. John 13. 1. for Christ had often foretold them of his death. See on chap. 17 22. The time and day when the Passover was to be kept, all the Jewes well knew, it being positively determined by the law of God. Exod. 12. 3. 6. &c. and they might have known that his passion prefigured (as in other passages foretold, is specially in the Paschal lamb. John 1. 29. 1 Cor. 5. 7. Heb. 13. 11, 12.) was near.

Passeover] It was requisite that Christ whom the Paschal Lamb represented should be offered up at that feast. See on Luke 22. 1. and undoubtedly, is was by the divine providence of God, that the sacrilegious priests and elders of the Jewes, who had so often sought occasions of putting Jesus to death should not, at any other time finde it, than at this solemnity of the Passeover: that he then suffering might actually shew, that he was indeed that Lamb of God, which taketh away the sins of world, John 1, 29. to the end, that now the legal shadowes might cease, in the exhibition of him, and the work by him to be performed for the accomplishment of our redemption, which had been long before promised and prefigured: so were the legal ceremonies fulfilled in their change; and so it appeareth that the Passeover was not only appointed to remember them of their deliverance from the Egyptian bondage; but to assure the faithful of a greater, and more happy one, from the spiritual Pharaoh, and his heavie-handed task-masters, sin, and death eternal.

V. 3. Then assembled] As John 11. 47. sheweth the cause of this their convention; because the people more and more flocked to him daily: and Caiphas counselled to destroy him, as if he could no otherwise be overcome than by death; in which was indeed the most glorious victory of Christ and the elect: the general advice was, not on the feast, lest the people should tumult; yet here it appeareth, that nothing was disposed by chance, but by the divine hand of God; no, not so much as the time of his passion: they who proposed only to kill Jesus, judged another time more seasonable, but God, who appointed hereby both to redeem his elect, and to strengthen their faith concerning the same, appointed this very time for Christs passion.

Caiphas] See on Luke 3. 2.

V. 4. by subtilty] They durst not take him by force for fear of the people. δόλῳ, by some treachery, not openly and by force of armes, but secretly, the people not knowing, nor Jesus (as they conceived) suspecting any such thing, they did not now consult and advise whether they should apprehend and kill him, but might do it so, as not to be seen by it.

and kill him] By the power and authority of the Roman President, which they thought their safest way, Acts 3. 16.

V. 5. Not on the feast day] That is, of the Passeover: for that must be spent in holy duties: after that the Galileans to whom he is so much known, will be gone home, againe: this resolution they changed, when Judas presented them a fooner opportunity, by his offering to deliver Christ unto them.

V. 6. Now, when Jesus] Mark 14. 3. John 11. 1. this story was before the assembly of the priests; for it was six dayes before the Passeover, John 12. 1. and the assembly was but two dayes before, verse 1. 3. but it is set after, because it was the occasion of Judas repairing unto the Priests.

of Simon the leper] Who had been a leper, if he had been so still, Christ would not have eaten with him, contrary to the law: it may be he had been healed by Christ, and now made him a feast, as John 12. 2. and as Matthew did after his calling to be an Apostle. Mark 2. 14, 15. Luke 5. 29. John nameth the woman who anointed our Saviours feet, which Matthew and Mark omit, and these mention the name of the man, which John omitteth; John saith she anointed his feet, Matthew and Mark say the head: both were anointed; for the ointment being so abundantly poured on his head, some ran down to his feet, when he stood up; or rose up from table, or she might successively anoint both his head and feet. See on John 12. 3. See Psal 133. 2.

V. 7. a woman] Mary, sister of Lazarus, John 12. 3. of divers who anointed Christ, see Ifc. Casaubon exerc. 14. n. 17. & lib. n. 26. an alabaster box] These boxes kept ointment without corruption, as some say. See hereof Plin. N. hist. lib. 36. 8. and lib. 13. 2.

of very precious ointment] μύρου βαρυτίμου, ointment of an heavie price, that is, πολυτίμου. So the Syriack נרד סגי sagei demio, of great price. See verse 9.

on his head] As they used to do to welcome their friends, and chief guests, Luke 7. 47. Psal. 23. 5. See on verse 5.

V. 8. his disciples] One of them, to wit, Judas who bare the bag, John 12. 4, 6. See like phrase, chap. 27. 41. with Luke 23. 39. or it may be others might second Judas in it.

this waste] Unnecessary spending of precious ointment.

V. 9. and given to the poor] Under a pretence of charity to the poor, he clokes his own covetous, and theevish affection, who would have been filching some part thereof, for his own private use, had such a summe come into his hands. See John 12. 6. though the other disciples, if they seconded him therein, might speak simply, and mean well to the poor.

V. 10 why trouble ye the woman] We ought not rashly to condemn all that we think not orderly or reasonably done, chap. 7. 1. she hath wrought a good work] Christ, the most absolute pattern of temperance, defendeth this expence, in respect of the circumstances, not to draw it into a common example of waste: doubtlesse Mary was moved to this extraordinary work, by a secret instinct of the Spirit of God, making her confident to perform this office: Christs testimony was a sufficient assurance to her, of Gods acceptance of her work, though the perverse condemned it: never any good wanted some adversary to calumniate it: let the impious world (which liketh nothing; but its own) use their liberty of rash judgment; it shall be happy for us, if God appear for us. See Isaiah 50. 7. 1 Cor. 4. 2. Rom. 8. 33.

V. 11. For ye have the poor] Deut. 15. 11. ye shall always have occasion to do good to the poor: but this is the least office of love and piety, wherein she can shew her gratitude to me; who shall very shortly be taken from you.

V. 12. for my burial] For a preparation to my burial. Mark faith, chap. 14. 8. she is come, aforehand, to anoint my body to the burying: for this respect Christ accepted it, that in this sign, they might, as in the figure, learn, that his sepulchre should breath out the sweet favour of life and salvation to the elect. See John 12. 7. also, anointing the dead (then in use. Mark 16. 1. John 19. 40.) was no idle ceremony, but a token of their hope and assurance of the resurrection from the dead.

V. 13. wheresoever this gospel] The Syriack hath, this my gospel: the gospel in general, not only this part thereof: thus he confirmed what he had said before: Mary was so far from being blameworthy; that the memory of this act of piety, shall live to all ages: this and happy applause, is not from men, who many times, mistake, but God who will see a just price on the saints works, whosoever men undervalue them. See Rom. 2. 29. 1 Cor. 4. 5. 2 Cor. 8. 18.

in the whole world] This made much for the consolation, and confirmation of the disciples (that Christ here, not obscurely intimateth their succesle in inventing the Gospel, not only in Judea, but all the knoven world) as also of us, whose calling and salvation Christ intended before, and in his passion.

there shall also this] He gently taxeth their rash censure of Maries fact; and for that they had not his future kingdom in a due esteem: as if he had fayed, you think it much which is thus bestowed on me; but my kingdom shall be glorious through the world (Isaiah 11. 10.) you censure her love and beneficence; but the odour thereof shall not only fill this house of Bethany, but the whole world, in which her memory shall be honoured.

for a memorial of her] The memory of ought done for Christ, or any of his, God will not suffer to perish, Psal. 112. 6. the memory of the just is blessed, Prov. 10 7.

V. 14. Then one of the twelve] Mark 14. 10. Luke 22. 3. What society of men shall we finde free from traytors, when the holy family of Jesus hath a Judas?

Judas Iscariot] See on chap. 10. 4. and on Luke 22. 3. and John 6. 71.

went to the chief Priests] He undertook the betraying of his Master, not solicited by them; but offering himself to this imployment. See Luke 22. 4. he knevv that they hated Christ, and would gladly destroy him, so that he should be surely welcome to them with this offer: so easily fall they into mutual complyance, who are led by one, and the same spirit: Satan was entred into Judas, John 13. 27, 30. the Pharisees were filled with the devillish spirit of envie and malice, James 3. 14, 15. Mat. 27. 18. to them therefore he goeth, confident of a market: of chief Priests, for Mark 14. 1. and chap. 27. 1.

V. 15. What will ye give me, &c.] So miserable a rook of evill, is covetousnesse (1 Tim. 6. 9, 10.) That it will carnally set Christ himselfe to sale. This unhappy wretch vvill make up his thievish hope of gain, vvhich he promised himself, or would have had for the precious ointment, out of the sale of his holy master: nor doth he see any definite price; but ask an indefinite one; as one willing at any rate to part with his interest, putteth the price to the buyers pleasure.

and I will deliver him] This vvas Satans master-piece on Judas, vvhom he had as his liege-man: to make the traytour hang himself, vvas much to perfvvade a self-loving caitif to, but the just judgement of God on the traytour: on Satans part principally evill, in that he did not sooner put him on to self-execution, vvhich at last must be so; on Judas part, in all this action the only appearance of good (there is nothing good in sin, but the just punishment thereof) but to make himself a brand of hell-fire, the most unhappy, and most damnable traytour that ever breathed Gods ayre, by selling an holy Jesus (the inestimable, matchlesse price of our redemption) at so poor a price, sets off to admiration, the malice of Satan, and the impudent presumption of the covetous traytour. The sale of Joseph but the sellers conscience, with sad remorse at last. (See Gen. 42. 21. and 44. 16.) God will certainly find out all unrepented wickednesse, especially Such: they sold a brother, not the Lords anoynted: Slaves are sold, not Lords. Remember Lots wife, faith our Saviour, Luke 17. 32. remember Judas, you that think it lawful gain by any sale; take heed of covetousnesse, it will make thee willing to betray Christ; and so not much more innocent, than if thou didst.

thirty pieces of silver] See chap. 17. 9. So much as a slave was valued at; Exod. 21. 32. See how mean accompt Judas makes of his Master.

V. 16. from that time] From the time that he had contracted with the high-priests for the treason.

he sought opportunity] Luke 22. 6. Expresseth it; that he was to deliver him ἄτερ ὄχλου, without the multitude, in their absence, or without stirring them, without tumult, when the multitude might not know of it, who were wont to follow him. Sometime when he was private, onely with his disciples: which as Origen notes, he did by finding opportunity of night, and his being with his disciples only in the garden at Gethsemane, without the city; he greedily longed to perform his wicked undertaking, that he might have his money, promised him, verse 15.

V. 17. the first day of the feast of unleavened bread] That is, of the Pascal solemnity, during which no leavened bread might be had, Exod. 12. 19, 20. to wit, on the fourteenth day of Nisan, on which, preparation was made, for the eating of the Pascal Lamb the night ensuing. Exod. 12. 6. 18.

V. 18. to such a man] They are taught how to find him, Mark 14. 13, 14. Luke 22 10, 11.

my time is at hand] The time of my death.

V. 20. When the even was come] Mark 14. 18. Luke 22. 14. John 13. 21. The Evangelist noteth the time prescribed by the law to eat the Passeover, Exod. 12. 6. Levit. 23. 5. Deut. 16. 6. thou shalt sacrifice the passeover עֶרֶב bahareb, 70. ἑσπέρας, in the evening, that is, between the two evenings, or before it was dark. עֶרֶב bareb, properly signifieth mixed; so here it may be spoken of the mixture of light and darknesse; the end of the day, and beginning of night, in a doubtful twilight, to shew us, how Christ our Passeover fulfilled the law.

he sate down with the twelve] ἀνέκειτο, it signified such a posture, as fitted that solemnity; so Æmelius Portus, the interpreter of Suidas giveth κεῖμαι, jaceo, or situs sum; so Thucidides faith, the city κεῖται καλῶς, to be well situate; so is ἀνάκειται used also; some interpret this ἀνέκειτο here, he supped or eat the Passeover, and the Syriack useth a word here כנש the same value with the Hebrew כנס, semath, which in the first signification importeth, imitavit sitit, he leaned, (as here in the first institution of the Passe which he was to have in his hand) and so also incubuit. But by the general consent of the learned in those rites, that posture mentioned Exod. 12. 11. as the sprinkling of the lintels and door-posts with the blood of the Lamb, appertained only to that one night, in which Israel was to come out of Egypt in haste; and was not to be continued after their setling in Canaan; so that there appeareth not any necessity to conclude, that Christ administred the Passeover standing, and afterwards sate down to the second course, or common supper, as if this ἀνέκειτο related onely to that posture; some learned Divines are here of one opinion, and some of another.

with the twelve] Here appeareth the admirable impudency of this blinde traytour; who after he had sold his Lord, cometh again to present his service, and to sit at table with him; possibly he hoped that Christ knew it not (though he had formerly seen so many experiments of Christs omniscience) or he might think, that for his admirable meeknesse, he would not revenge it; so presumptuous are wicked men; so merciful and long-suffering Christ, who well knowing Judas from the beginning, yet permitted him to communicate with him, and his holy Apostles: yea, saith Augustine ep. 163. Eleusio & Felici, he suffered his betrayer, (who had already received his price) to remain amongst the innocent, usque ad ultimum pacis osculum; which (had there been any prejudice to the holy, by his society,) he would never have permitted.

V. 21. one of you shall betray me] Seeing the impudency of Judas; who having conspired with his enemies, and contracted for the price of his blood, yet durst boldly present himself to this holy sacrament, he thought good to forewarne his disciples, by discovering the traytour; that by striking a terrour into his conscience, he might lead him to repentance, or leave him unexcusable to the severity of Gods justice; one of you my disciples; this was to render, and declare the treason the more detestable; he could have named him at the first; but thus he revealed the treason, and concealed the traytour, untill his incorrigible impudency enforced a detection of the person also.

V. 22. they were exceeding sorrowful] That he must die now, that by treason, that by one of them, none but Judas knowing who the traytour was.

every one of them to say] Or, said each one of them, verse 74.

is it I?] Every one fearing, that himself might be within the compasse of others suspicion: and desirous that Christ pronouncing for him, might before the rest of the disciples, acquit him of their jealousie.

V. 23 he that dippeth] Or hath dipped, Psalm 41. 9 one of them that now eateth with me, as Mark 14. 20. Luke 22. 21.

V. 24. The Son of man goeth] Out of this world, or he shall be put to death.

as it is written of him] His death with the remarkable circumstances thereof, and the means, by treason, was all foretold by the former Prophets, Luke 24. 26. 44. Isaiah 53. 4, 5, 7, 9. 12. Psal. 41. 9.

but woe unto that man] He cannot hurt me, but he will make himself eternally unhappy.

good for that man] God will glorifie his justice in punishing him, but it had been better for himself, that he had never had any being.

V. 25. which betrayed him] Judas who awhile after betrayed him, and was now plotting it, verse 16.

thou hast said] Thou hast said the truth: compare verse 64. with Mark 14. 62.

V. 26. as they were eating] Before they removed from the table: for it is not likely, that Christ would make the Lords Supper with the Passeover; and it is said Luke 22. 20. 1 Cor. 11. 25. of the cup, that he took it after supper, that is, after the Pascal supper.

Jesus took bread] 1 Cor. 11. 23, 24.

blessed it] Many Greek copies have εὐχαριστήσας, giving thanks. Christ minding forthwith to fulfill the promises of the Old Testament, instituteth a new covenant, with new signes; and consecrates them with prayer to God, consisting, partly of praise and thanksgiving to God his Father, verse 27. and partly of petition for a blessing upon the elements, as Luke 9. 16. and yet, the bread and wine are changed, not in nature, but in use: for they become undoubted tokens of Christs body and blood, by his own institution, that faith may find what to lay hold on, both in the words and in the elements.

this is my body] Either by a trope called Metonymia, one name is put for another; the bread is called Christs body, because it is a signe thereof: or by a figurative enunciation, the bread is said to be his body, because it representeth his body, truly and properly so termed; as the rock is said to have been Christ, because it represented Christ, 1 Cor. 10. 4. both in effect come to one, the phrase being Sacramental, and of common use in speech of signes and resemblances, either sacred, or other: Gen. 17. 10. and 40. 18. and 41. 26, 27. Exod. 12. 11. Matth. 13. 38. Revel. 17. 9. 12. 15. 18. See on Luke 22. 19.

V. 27. the cup] To wit, which the wine in it, verse 29.

gave thanks] As verse 26. the prayer which then he used, confirmed, as before, of two parts; it is called sometimes by the name of the one part, a thanksgiving; as here, sometimes by the name of the other part, a blessing, as 1 Cor. 10. 16.

drink ye all of it] They then which take away the Cup from the people, do not according to Christs institution of the sacrament, to be received of all in both kindes, which they then strictly observed.

V. 28. this is my blood] The wine in this cup is a seale of the covenant ratified in my blood, which shall be shed shortly, to procure new legacies for many. See Exod. 24. 8. See here verse 26.

of the new Testament] Whereby the inheritance of eternal life is given as a legacy to all true believers, or of the new covenant.

which is shed] That shall shortly be shed, for his blood was not yet shed. See the like phrase, chap. 3. 10. See on Luke 22. 20.

for many] Nor for you alone, but for many others. See John 17. 20.

for the remission of sins] To satisfy Gods justice for their sinnes, that in mercy, through the merits of Christ he may forgive them, who could make no satisfaction for themselves, Rom. 3. 25. 26. Ephes. 1. 7.

V. 29. I will not drink henceforth] This is the last solemne meal meal, or feast, that I shall make with you on earth: but I shall converse with you after my resurrection for a time, and to all eternity in a new spiritual way, in heaven.

till I drink it new] In a new kind, after my resurrection: the main thing here intended, is an expression of the heavenly joy.

V. 30. an hymne] Or Psalm: when they had made an end of their other solemn singing; which, some think, was of these six Psalms, Psalm 112. and 113. and 114. and 115. and 116. and 117. it may be, some other.

to the mount] Towards it; for Gethsemane lay between the brook Kidron, and mount Oliver.

V. 31. Then] About that time; for the words immediately following seem by Luke and John to be spoken in the house.

all ye] Mark 14. 27 John 16. 32. my disciples who hitherto, without scandal adhered to me, professed and preached the Gospel, as on occasion I commanded, doing great works in my name; yet now you will be offended because of me, and those things which you shall see me suffering: you will forsake me, and flye for fear, and diffidence in that I have told you concerning my resurrection from the dead.

shall be offended] See on chap. 11. 6.

for it is written] That shall not fail which is written of me: it was such a speech, as may be proverbially used: when the shepherd is smitten, the sheep are scattered.

I will smite the shepherd] Zech. 13. 7. Christ here (as John 10.) compareth himself to a shepherd, in whose passion the disciples should be scattered for fear.

V. 32. I will go before you] This he saith to comfort them; his smiting should be but for a short time? but he should quickly go before them again, like a shepherd before his flock, Mark 14. 28. and 16. 7.

V. 33. yet will I never be offended] Peter trusted overmuch in his own strength, which is a dangerous confidence.

V. 34. before the cock crow] John 13. 38. his morning crow to break of day, Mark 13. 35. or crow thrice, as Mark 14. 30. for Peter denied him once before the first cock-crowing, and thrice before the second, Mark 14. 68. 72.

thou shalt deny me] Thou that art now more forward in promising, than the rest, shalt yet not only be offended at me, but also utterly deny me, that ever thou knewest me.

V. 35. Though I should die with thee] Peter meant no lesse: but was not yet well acquainted with his own infirmity, Likewise also said all the disciples] Left they should seem inferiour to Peter in love and duty, in affection or fidelity: they equall him in words, though not altogether in their failing: they were all warned as well as Peter, in the general of their being scattered, yet were thus confident; therefore Christ leaveth them to the experience of their own disability.

V. 36. then cometh Jesus] Mark 14. 32. Luke 22. 39.

Gethsemane] The valley of fatnesse, neer mount Oliver; like that, by Lebanon, Isaiah 28. 1. 4. or an oyl-presse, as some interpret the name; or the pasture of butter, as others; howsoever the name seems to import a rich and fat soyl. See Genes. 27. 28, 29. Christ is not taken in the city, left the people should refuse him: nor in the day time; but in the night, and in a solitary place, to which he was retired.

sit ye here] See the like, Gen 22. 5.

V. 37. Peter and the two sons of Zebedee] who had been in private with him, to see his divine power and glory, (to arm them against any scandal to be taken at his sufferings) to vvit, at the raising of Iairus daughter from the dead, chap. 9. and in his transfiguration on the mount, chap. 17.

very heavy] This shevvs the truth of his humane nature; in that he feared death, and felt so much sorrovv at the approach thereof; but the reason chiefly vvas, because it brought with it a deep sense of his Fathers wrath, against sin, and sinners; for whom he was now to suffer, and become a ransome.

V. 38. My soule is exceeding sorrowful] Thus he expresseth the grievousnesse of his approaching passion for sinners, in whose place he stood a surety, that they might afterward resent his admirable love to the elect, and preach the same to the edifying of others: as also to stirre them up to an holy sympathy.

and watch with me] He saith not, watch and pray for me, as if he had need of their prayers, or meditation; but to expresse a common danger (whereof he had warned them verse 31) left themselves should enter into temptation, which he saw now imminent over them.

V. 39. fell on his face] Mark saith, he prostrateth himself, in effect it is the same; Luke saith, he kneeled on the earth, it may be so first, and after prostrated; all is to expresse a vehement and ardent humility in prayer; for which the most humble posture is best, as to acknowledge God, the Lord of body and soule; so to stir the more up to stirre up our selves and others to fervency of spirit, which is the life of prayer: Look on Jesus in this posture, you unreverend professors of faith in him; how wretched an impudencie do you expresse, while with unbended knees, and zealesse hearts, you petition him, now sitting at the right hand and glory of God the Father, carelesly sitting? The Lord Jesus in the dayes of his flesh kneeled, and prostrated himself on the earth, and are you too good to bend the knee to him in prayer, who defcended so low to save you?

let this cup passe from me] A kind of expression which the Hebrews used, to signifie Gods wrath, and manv afflictions in the execution thereof, under the similitude of a cup. See chap. 20. 22. See on Luke 22. 42. he saith, if it be possible; that is, as Augustine lib. 3. de Consens. Evang. c. 4. interpreteth; if it be thy holy will: the same epist. 121. Probe noteth; that God giveth to some in anger, and denieth others in mercy: he gave the Israelites quails, Numb. 11. he gave the devil that which he desired and begged, leave to enter into the swine (Luke 8. 32.) These things are written, left any should think highly of himself, that he is heard, in that which it had been good for him not to have obtained: and left any should deject himself, or despaire of Gods mercy, if he be not heard in something which he petitioneth for, quo acceptendo affligatur atrocius vel à prosperitate corruptus, penitùs everteretur. lib. c. 14. In receiving whereof he should be more heavily afflicted, or (corrupted by prosperity) quite overthrown: we know not what to pray as we ought. Rom. 8. 26. the safest way is to learn of our Saviour, not as I will, but as thou wilt: not what I would in my humane infirmity, but what thou wilt, and knowest best in thy divine will, and wisdom.

V. 40. findeth them asleep] Here is an example of mans infirmity, in duties most important; specially in sorrovv, or any other vehement perturbation of minde. See on Luke 22. 45.

and said unto Peter] Who had promised and protested so much before: with him he reproves the rest: to shevv the most confident, how unable they are, of themselves, to resist temptation; and consequently, what need they have to watch and pray.

one hour] If ye cannot watch with me one hour, how much lesse would you be able (as you a professed) to suffer death for, or with me?

V. 41. Watch and pray] See chap. 24. 42. This watchfulnesse is not so much from sleep, as carnal security, but now he bids them take heed of both these; neither is it enough to watch to discover the dangerous approaches of the enemy, but we must also implore the merciful assistance of the Lord, that we may be able to withstand.

that ye enter not into temptation] That ye be not tempted: because they were drowzie in his great conflict, he awakeneth them to a sense of their own hazard: as if he had said, except you watch and pray (however confident you are of your own strength) a fearful storm of temptations will endanger your faith: this is that he said to Peter, Satan hath desired to winnow you. Luke 22. 31. therefore Peter afterwards, thus endeavoured to strengthen his brethren: be sober and watch, &c. 1 Pet 5. 8. he saith not ye shall be overcome; but sheweth the means by them to be used, that they may not be overcome, which is not in their own strength, but Gods assistance.

the spirit indeed is willing] You have through Gods grace a good will; but the corruption of flesh and blood much hindreth by spirit, he meanath that affection which was guided by the holy Ghost, the regenerate part: by flesh, he meaneth the remainder of corrupted nature: he remembreth them of the one, left they should despaire, and of the other, left they should presume on their own ability, and so be overcome in their security; these two Paul expresseth. Rom. 7. 18. 23.

V. 42. If this cup] Since this cup may not be avoyded. See on verf. 39.

thy will be done] This is the voyce of one resting on Gods will. See chap. 6. 10. Acts 21. 14. Thus Christ taught us, both by precept and example, to submit our wills and desires, to Gods good pleasure: this he saith, not that his will differed, or was contrary to the will of his Father, for as Gregor. Nazianzen. faith - orat. 36. ὡς μία θεότης, ὕτω καὶ βλάβεια, as the God-head is one, so also is the vvill of God; but for that the vvill of the assumed nature was subject to humane infirmity, vvithout sin; vvhich therefore (even in that it vvould not have suffered, as man) yet submitted it self to the will of God, by that abundance of the spirit which dvvelt in him bodily. Colos. 2. 9. whereby he also obeyed to the death. Phil. 2. 8. willingly; for, as Prosper noteth (sententt. ex Augustino) nemo invitus bene facit, etiam si bonum est quod facit: no man unvvillingly doth vvell, though that be good vvhich he doth.

V. 43. and found them asleep again] Being oppressed with sorrow, as Luke expresseth it: this sheweth the necessity we have to watch and pray, seeing our very dangers make us dull and unmindful to call on God: so both in joy and sorrow, Satan layeth his snares: so frail are we after many vvarnings, in the midst of greatest hazards vve are apt to forget our slavery.

V. 44. prayed the third time] As 2 Cor. 12. 8. Leaving us an enfample of perfeverance in prayer.

saying the same words] Which yet, nothing detracted either from the substance, or efficacy of his prayer: this was no vain repetition (which he forbade, Chap. 6:7.) but an invincible, and unwearied fervency of spirit. See Luke 22. 44.

V. 45. Sleep on now] Infirm flesh and blood is still like it self, hardly amended by any admonitions: therefore he relleth them, ye may sleep now; or ye will have little list to sleep anon, whether I awake you or no, your enemies will awake you though my admonitions have not yet: this is Gods usual method, where words prevail not, afflictions must.

into the hands of sinners] To the power of the Roman soldiers. See Acts 2. 23. Gal. 2. 15. So God still afflicteth and correcteth his children by the wicked; yea, and by Satan himself. Rev. 2. 10.

V. 46 Rise, let us be gone] Let us go meet them: Christ offered himself willingly to be taken, that in suffering willingly, he might make satisfaction for the wilful fall of man: this sheweth the effect of his prayers, and a new supply of strength, and his victory over that fear and infirmity of flesh and blood, with which he had wrestled; he now willingly meeting with his enemies, and his passion, and offering up himself a voluntary oblation (as was prefigured. Exod. 35. 5. 21. 29.) so saith he, not let us flye, but let us go hence. John 14. 31. that is, to meet with the armed band, which he knew were then coming to take him.

V. 47. While he yet spake] Mark 14. 43. Luke 22, 47 John 18. 3.

Judas one of the twelve came] For he was their leader and captain, of those who came to take Christ. for he only of them all, knew the place which Jesus frequented, John 18. 1, 2. Luke 22. 47. he was awake to betray Christ, when the rest were asleep: let is the misery of secure flesh and blood; the righteous (too securely measuring others by the r own shadows, and confident in the goodneise of their cause) are not so vigilant for good, as the wicked are for evil: so good men sleep while theeves and murderers watch to pillage and destroy them: the willing spirit is infirm, while sleepleise malice is patient of any labour or hardship to accomplish its designe.

with him a great multitude] He had the place of an Apostle, to lead men to the faith of Christ, but he leadeth them to destroy Christ; what is, or eve: was vvorse, than the best things corrupted? you see vvhose disciples they are, vvho lead multitudes, against Christ and his truth.

with swords and staves] To take him by force, as they used to apprehend malefactours, verse 55. and to keep him from refcue.

V. 48. gave them a signe] Because many of them knew him not, and others might be mistaken in the night.

whomsoever I shall kisse] In effect he saith, whomsoever I shall familiarly salute: for in such salutes, they were wont to kiss: 1 Sam. 10. 1. & 20. 41. 2 Sam. 14. 33. & 15. 5. & 19. 39. Exod. 18 7. Acts 20. 37. 2 Sam 20. 9. Luke 7. 45. Rom. 16. 1 Cor. 16. 20. 1 Thes 5. 26. 1 Pet. 5. 14. So that Judas is not said to have named him, but to give a sign of friendship, that he might under that semblance play the traitour; how vainly impudent are sinners, hoping to impose on God? Jesus foresaw all this, and discovered it.

V. 49. haile Master] χαῖρε ῥαββί, it was an usual form of salutation which the Hebrews expressed by שלום לך shalom lecha, or שלום לך shalom lach. Jud. 6. 23. & 19 20. 1 Sam. 25. 6. 1 Chron. 12. 18. Exod. 18. 7. they asked each other לשלום to peace, or of peace, and each others welfare; the 70. give it καὶ ἠσπάσαντο ἀλλήλους; they saluted each other: the Greek, here translated to the letter, signifieth rejoyce; which the Latines interpret, salve, as we say, God save you; so this traytor, in words wisheth Christ's prosperity, joy, and safety, as in general, so possibly he would be understood concerning the present danger of his enemies; as if he had been none of their company: so imprudent is he, that he blusheth not to lie against so evident a truth, of him may be said that is written, Psal. 55. 21. The words of his mouth were smoother than butter, but war was in his heart ---and mouth were smoother than butter, but war was in his heart----and he calleth him Master, whose Magistery he not only acknowledgeth not, but openly contemneth, by leading up an armed company to apprehend him as a malefactor.

V. 50. Friend wherefore art thou come?] He upbraideth not his perfidiousnesse, but with all mildnesse inviteth him to repentance: thus stiling him, he saith not what he was, but what he should have been; or what he seemed, but was not: nor ascribeth he the cause of his coming, as not knowing it, for he had before detected him; but as openly reproving him: as if he had said, thou hast confederated with mine enemies to destroy me; thou hast forsaken my service, and the fellowship of thy dear Disciples; wherefore comest thou to us again? what hast thou to do here? by these like questions, he would recall the traytor to confer with his own conscience: I know thee well, and thy intention; consider, and be ashamed of thy treason. by so much more detestable, by how much more vailed with semblance of love.

laid hands on Jesus] God so permitting, that thereby the work of our redemption might be accomplished in his death and passion: he is taken, that we may be delivered.

V. 51. One of them] Namely Peter; and the servants name was Malchus, whose right ear was cut off. Joh 18. 10.

drew his sword] Misunderstanding Christs words. Luke 22. 36. 38.

V. 52. Put up again thy sword] Thou are no Magistrate to right me, nor am I to be defended by the sword, who could have obtained twelve legions, an army of Angels to fight for me and rescue me, verse 53. but he came into the world not to fight, but to dye for sinners, if Christ would not have Peter, being a private man, strike with a sword in defence of his own sacred perfon wronged and so highly injured, what do they who use the sword in unjust quarrels, and without just calling?

for all they] Gen. 9. 6 Rev. 13. 10. He meaneth all they who kill, being not called thereto by the ordinance of God, either by a general warrant, as the Magistrate; or some special command from God, as 2 Kings 9. 7. all shall perish who smite for private revenge: he speaketh not of the publike Magistrate, who beareth not the sword in vain; nor doth he so limit the punishment of murderers to the sword, as if none perished otherwise: the main is to shew, that God, who hath determined to maintain humane societies, will commonly make them exemplary in this life, who are destructive to others: rarely doth a murder go unpunished here. See Psal. 55. 23.

V. 53. Thinkest thou] This is the second reason wherevby Christ represseth Peters endeavour so to defend him: he had no need of mans defence, who was now to die for mans redemption: cannot I destroy my enemies by my word, which gave them life? have I I destroy my enemies by my word which gave them life? have I not innumerable companies of Angels ready to defend me, if I would give them commission so to do? See Augustin. Honorat. epist. 120 c. 11.

twelve legions] The Roman army consisted ordinarily of twelve legions: such an army of Angels could Christ have had: or it is a definite number for an indefinite; more than twelve, importeth an infinite number See Dan. 7. 10. 2 Kings 19. 35. Isa 37. 36. he here opposeth Angels, to men; many to few; heavenly to earthly; the invincible to the infirm; where these charge, an host is not able to invest one of them. See on Luke 8. 30.

V. 54. But how then] The reason why I do not now pray to God for Angels to defend me, is because the Scripture hath foretold my death for mans salvation; nor that I doubt of speeding, were it necessary, and according to my Fathers will.

Jare inobservant of this nothing] Seeing their Depositions insufficient, he endeavoureth to draw something from Christ himselfe.

that thus it must be] Isaiah 53. 10. As some say, necessitate consequentiæ, non consequentis. in necessity of consequence (in reason; because God is true) not of the consequent (in fact because God is just, and his presicence according to which he revealed this in Scripture, nihil ponit in esse: his foreseeing of sin, is no cause thereof) for the Jewes who thus apprehend, and crucifie Christ, are not hereby excused; which they must have been, had that they did been of simple, inevitable, necessity, not voluntary: there is no necessity to sin, nor sin where there is an absolute necessity: for God cannot be the authour of any sin: as there is no sin in him, so neither is there any of him. Fulgent. See Luke 24. 26. 44.

V. 55. Are ye come out] He expostulateth with them, who came with so much warlike provision against him; what need you arm so many against one unarmed man? wickednesse is ever covvardly and diffident.

as against a thief] See on verse 47. as if so be you were to apprehend a thief, or some desperate malefactour, who knowving his offence to be capital and unpardonable, would rather fight desperately, than yield himself to the hand of justice.

V. 56. That the Scriptures] Lam. 4. 20. And all the rest which foretold of Christs sufferings.

Then all his disciples forsook him] As he had foretold, verse 31.

V. 57. And they that] See on John 18. 2. Mark 14. 54.

to Caiaphas] After that he had been brought to Annas. See on John 18. 13. and on Luke 22. 60.

V. 58. But Peter followed him] This is set dovvn to make vvay to the story of Peters denying him. Here was fear so mixed vvith love, that follow he vvould, but not so near as to come into evident danger, if they should apprehend him also as one of Jesus disciples.

unto the high-priests palace] the high-priests houfe is also mentioned, as verse 3. to the evidence of the history. Palaces are houses of Princes; such vvere the high-priests for their authority and dignity among the people of Israel. How Peter was admitted into this place, we read John 18. 15. at first as a stranger there, he stood at the doore vvithout. untill the other disciple (not John the Evangelist, as some conjecture but some other believer and secret disciple of Christ, vvho not being knovvn to be such, might more safely be there) vvho vvas knovvn to the high-priest, spake to the keeper of the door, and brought in Peter.

sate with the servants] vvho vvaited there to attend their masters coming out of the invvard place, vvhere they vvere busie in examining Jesus; they had dismissed the Roman souldiers vvhen when they had brought Jesus bound to the High Priest, and now it seems their own servants waited on them in the night; Peter purreth himself into their company, that he might (as it is probable he hoped) without suspect hear and see the event, what they would do to Jesus; if he were put to death, that he might shift away; if he were onely scourged and to dismissed, then he would be ready at hand to attend him: or however, if Jesus by his Divine power should deliver himself, Peter might suppose, that he would also deliver him from danger. Now it is probable, that Peter did not thus far ingage himself out of any vain curiosity, but out of love and zeal to the person, and safety of his Master, yet was it inordinately done to put himself into the way of such dangerous temtation wherevf Christ had before warned him and the rest, verse 31 34. all ye shall be offended, because of me this night, &c. and to confident Peter he said, this night before the Cock crow, thou shalt deny me thrice.

V. 59. Sought false witness] They were all resolved to destroy Christ, and therefore regard neither equity nor truth; but lay hold of the most impious means to compass their design: what greater injustice, than for Judges to suborn false witnesses? malice is ever diligent, but commonly unjust.

V. 60. Yet found they none] That could accuse him of any evil; or whose witness agreed, Mark 14. 56. and therefore could they not legally condemn him. See Deut. 17. 6 Thus God did every way shew forth his Sons innocency; that it might appear, that he died not for himself, but us.

two false witnesses] For one would not serve. Deut. 19. 15. they, are called false witnesses, for depraving, and misreporting Christs words and meaning.

V. 61. This fellow] οὗτος; This man. See on Chapter. 12. 24.

I am able to destroy] Though that had been true if he had said it, it was false that he did say so; justly might he say, every day they wrest my words; all their thoughts are against me for evil, Psal. 56. 5. he spake concerning the Temple of his body, which when they should destroy, he would raise it up in three dayes John 2. 16. they to render him odious to the people, (overmuch addicted to, and trusting in the dignity of their Temple) testifie that he said, that he would raise up the material Temple in three dayes: we need not wonder that so many false, and injurious construction are made of our words; thus they used Christ who could not erre.

V. 62. Answerest thou nothing] Seeing their Depositions insufficient, he endeavoureth to draw something from Christ himselfe.

V. 63. But Jesus held his peace] Seeing it was to no end to speake, the Sentence being given, before any witnesse was examined.

I adjure thee] So 1 Kings, 22. 16. ἐξορκίζω; the meaning is, upon thy oath, and by the authority of a Judge; in the Name of God, I command thee: In the Primitive Church, they were called Exorcists, who having the gift of Miracles, cast out Devils, by calling on the Name of Christ. See on Acts 19. 13.

that thou tell us whether thou be the Christ] This he asketh not intending to believe the Truth, but to destroy Christ; thinking hereby to insnare him, if he confessed it, as a blasphemer; if he denyed it, as an Impostor, and deceiver of the people.

V. 64. Thou hast said] See on chap. 27 11. It is an ingenious confession of Truth, which Mark more expresly historifieth; he said I am.

nevertheleſſe] Or furthermore.

I say unto you] I tell you, though ye will not beleeve what I now say; but hereafter shall, when yee see it come to passe.

hereafter ye shall see] Chapter 16. 27. At my second coming; lest they should conclude, that Christ could not be the Sonne of God, whom they had convenced before them, and bound as a malefactor; he who could have convinced them by more evident arguments (the time of his birth; the Scepter departed from Judah, the place, Bethleem; the linage, of the seed of David, the manner, of a Virgin; by his Doctrine, which he preached to the poor; by his miracles, &c. would propose (for presents) two more obscure Arguments: one from his sitting at Gods right hand which they should once see: the other from his coming in the Clouds of heaven, to judgement: as if he said, you cannot deny him to be the Messias, and Sonne of the living God whom ye shall see coming to judge you, whom ye shall see sitting at Gods right hand: I tell you this now, to leave you unexcusable then, if you will not now beleeve.

at the right hand of power] In the highest honour with God. Luke 22. 69. of the power of God, that is, of the divine Majesty, Hebr. 1. 3. & 8 1. or of God Almighty, Mark 16. 19. Acts 7. 55. Rom. 8. 34. Ephes 1. 20. Colos 3. 1.

in the clouds of heaven] See on Chap. 24 30.

V. 65. The high preist rent his clothes] as if his heart were ready to break, for zeal to Gods Honour: so the Jews used to do at blasphemy. 2 Kings 18. 37. & 19. 1. So the ancient heathens also did in their mourning.

what further need have we of witnesses] To prove that this man ought to dy. He pretended that Christ blasphemed, in saying, that they should see him sitting on Gods right hand, and coming in the Clouds of Heaven; which because they all heard, he takes it for granted, that they needed no other witness to condemne him (as worthy by their Lavv to dy) but his ovvn publick confession, vvhich they judged blasphemy.

V. 66. What thinke ye?] What punishment doe you think him vvorthy of? he vvould have Jesus condemned by a common consent, and sentence of all: and asketh that vvhich he full vvell knevv; for they had already condemned him before his trial all, and resolved to destroy him, whatsoever he should or could alledge in his ovvn just defence. Sinners vvould have all share with them in their sinne, hoping to find some patronage in multitudes with them consenting in wickednesse.

V. 67. Then did they spit in his face] A token of contempt and abhorring, Numbers 12. 14. Isai. 50. 6. See also Deut. 25 9. Job 30. 10. Luke 18. 32.

and buffetted him] Isaia. 50. 6 palms of their hands] See Chap. 5. 39 Mark 14. 65. John 18. 22. and 19. 3. The word in the Greek, is, ῥαπίσμασιν, which signifieth to beat with rods, (as also doth ῥαβδίζω) with staffe or club, Acts 16 22. we in a more generall expression, give ῥαπίζειν, to beat or smite; as also doth the Syriac here מחין הוו machin havu leh, castebant eum, they beat or strook him: which Marke 14. 65. giveth by κολαφίζειν to buffet him; 'tis most likely they did both buffet and switch him, for Marke useth both these words.

V. 68. Prophesie unto us] This they required after they had covered his face, Mark 14 65. as if they had faid, by this we will try thee; if thou art so much as a Prophet, tell us now, who smote thee?
